"Christ saw them all," VanderJagt was telling me, "They are dimensions, places you can see on your way to death.- That's why they're called die-mentions. You must remember that Christ died and came back to tell us everything he saw while he was on his way to heaven. He was gone three days, but it was much longer than that where he was because time isn't the same in other dimensions. Purgatory is one other dimension. Hell is one. And there are lots of others in between. Oz is another dimension. The sky is not the limit to all the worlds out there wailing to be explored. You can travel in and out of ail these dimensions, learning the secrets of the universe. You have been chosen to explore these oilier worlds for the church. Listen in the stillness and you will hear his voice guiding you[3] on your missions. The rosy cross is like Dorothy's ruby slippers. Never take your rosy cross off, Cathy, when traveling other dimensions and you will always be able to return home."

Father Don joined VanderJagt in a ritual which bathed me in the blood of a slaughtered lamb, and subsequently, through this hideous blood trauma, locked their stated perceptions and a basis for mind-control programming deep in my mind. This basis for programming was anchored in the Vow of Silence which the Jesuit monks take "not only to keep secrets, but so they can still their mind and hear their inner guidance." Certain that the "Rite to Remain Silent" which they had performed would ensure that I keep their secret Father Don and Guy VanderJagt subjected me to their pedophile perversions. The two joked that I had become "a good Cathy-lick".

After the Rite to Remain Silent was installed, the voices of my multiple personalities that I had previously heard in my head ceased. In the silence of deliberately created memory compartments, I could only hear the voices of my abusers who created them... commanding my silence.

Silence for who and what I knew was involved in Project Monarch Mind Control.

My family routinely vacationed at Mackinac Island, Michigan which is a small island positioned in the Great Lakes close to the Canadian border Mackinac Island, with the Governor's Mansion and historical Grand Hotel, was a political playground where I was prostituted by my father to, among others,. pedophiles Jerry Ford, Guy VanderJagt, and later U.S. Senator Robert C. Byrd. The mind-controlled part of me that was prostituted there perceived Mackinac as another dimension, the timelessness of which was enhanced by the island's antiquated styling. Automobiles were forbidden on the tiny island, which relied on horse drawn buggies or bicycles for transportation. Once when Lee Iaccoca was attending a cocktail party at then Governor Romney's Mansion, I overheard him comment, "What better place for auto execs to get away from it all than on an island with no cars?"

Mackinac Island, due to its geographic location, provided an air of friendliness between the U.S. and Canada that formed my childish perception that our countries knew no boundaries. This political view was further enhanced by my father always taking the family to Niagra Falls where my mind was to be symbolically "washed of all memory" or what had occurred in Mackinac. Niagara Falls' numerous, powerful waterfalls were in reasonably close proximity to Mackinac Island, and shared the border between the U.S. and Canada.

When Pierre Trudeau was elected Prime Minister of Canada in 1968, I often heard it said, "Pierre Trudeau is one of Ours, you know." I first heard this phrase cryptically referring to Trudeau's loyalty to the Vatican when Father Don was discussing him with my famer one Sunday after mass. This fact circulated quickly among those I knew who were involved in the Catholic/Jesuit aspect of Project Monarch.

The summer after Trudeau was elected, my father took the family to Mackinac Island as usual. Climbing on a large statue on the grounds of the Governor's Mansion, I could see across the field to the Grand Hotel. I noticed Canadian flags flying amongst the American flags that lined the front of the old hotel. As I slid down off the statue, Guy VanderJagt approached with a drink and a cigarette in his hand. Palling my hair into place he said, "Straighten your shirt, I've got someone important for you to meet,"

"I knew someone important was here because of those flags," I said, tucking my shirt in my pink shorts.

"When I was at the Vatican," VanderJagt began, "I was told that Prime Minister Trudeau is a friend of the Pope. He thinks like one of us. A true Catholic. He likes Cathy-licks."

VanderJagt led me upstairs in the mansion, where Pierre Trudeau was lowering the window shades in a dimly lit bedroom crowded with antiques. VanderJagt closed the door behind me. Trudeau's tuxedo coat was neatly draped over a chair, which left him in his formal pants, while shirt, and a bright red cummerbund which caught my eye. "I like your sash," I said. "Hasn't anyone taught you Silence yet?" His somber, gruff attitude was softened by his smooth, silky voice.

Triggered into the part of me that endured the Rite to Remain Silent, 1 assumed Trudeau knew all about interdimensions according to my deliberately formed perceptions. I could not/did not understand that interdimensions actually equated to the inner-dimensions of my own compartmentalized mind. Likewise, I did not understand that "Keys to the Kingdom" referred to knowing the codes, keys, and triggers to my controlled mind. "Guy said you like Cathy-licks," I said, repeating what VanderJagt had told me. "Are you the Keeper of the Keys?"

Trudeau seemingly bore his cold, dark eyes right through me. "You can learn more from the school of thought than you can by asking precocious questions. Haven't you learned that children are to be seen and not heard?"

"Is that a precocious question?" I asked. "What is a precocious question?"

Trudeau sighed with impatience. "That is irrelevant. What matters is that you shut your mouth, still your mind, and enter the school of thought. Silence is a virtue. Listen to the silence in the stillness of your mind. Go deep inside your mind," he slowly led. "Deeper and deeper where it's quiet and still..."

Trudeau expertly manipulated my mind with sophisticated hypnotic language. Not only did he enlist my Silence for the pedophile perversions he indulged in, but he instructed my "school of thought" in a manner that equated to programming. He laid a foundation for Air-Water programs that is a mirror-dimensional theme often used by NASA and others involved in Project Monarch. Playing off his own name "Pee-Air," he added a perverse twist to the theme that he accessed each time 1 was prostituted to him.

Had I been capable of fear, I would have been afraid of Pierre Trudeau. Trudeau's slow, deliberate movements masked the brutal power of his body much the way his smooth, soft voice pierced my mind and intruded on my thoughts. The icey cold touch of his effeminate, manicured long fingers contrasted with the heat of his perversion... a perversion for which he blamed me and my "temptuous, contemptuous ways".

In my childish ignorance, I believed Trudeau's demeanor and forward combed hair were characteristic of his French descent. "I know all about the French," I had bragged to my new "Grandpa" Van while visiting his home in Milwaukee, Wisconsin,

My mother's father had died shortly before Kennedy was assassinated, and my Grandmother quickly latched onto a wealthy, highly political businessman from Milwaukee. She met Grandpa Van Vandenburg on the passenger/cargo ship that traveled the waters of the Great Lakes, the Milwaukee Clipper. The Clipper transported cargo including Cadillacs from Vandenburg Motors to Canada, as well as the drugs sanctioned by the local Coast Guard via the U.S. Government that my father distributed. Sometimes 1 accompanied my father to the docks in Muskegon to pick up the drag shipment, which usually involved prostitution. Jerry Ford and Guy VanderJagt combined business with pleasure in the ship's casinos on occasion, which is where the connection between my Grandma and Grandpa Van was reportedly made. Grandpa Van knew Jerry Ford, and subsequently was acquainted with Pierre Trudeau.

"What do you know about the French?" Grandpa Van asked me as I sat on his living room floor petting the dog he just brought home. Improperly cued and dumfounded by his question I remained silent. "I know you've met Pierre Trudeau," he prompted. "I also know you love doggies. So I bought this dog for your grandma now, so you could enjoy him, too. His name is Pepe. He's a French Poodle,"

"I know all about the French." I said, mentally comparing the large French Poodle in front of me to Trudeau. "They have pretty nails..." I stroked Pepe's painted toenails. "They have funny hair..." I petted Pepe's clipped fur. "And they pee a lot," I giggled.

"You'd better take him outside, then," Grandpa Van told me, attaching Pepe's leash. After walking the dog past what felt like every tree in the neighborhood, I announced that 1 would call him "Pee-pee".

Uncle Bob filmed Pepe and I pornographically on numerous occasions, producing bestiality films that I would later learn Pierre Trudeau was privy to. Pepe remained a part of my experience long after Grandpa Van divorced himself from my Grandma, and long after I developed beyond Trudeau's perversion for little children.

1 was slow to grow into adolescence. By the time I was thirteen years old, my breasts were tender and beginning to swell, which made me "too old" for VanderJagt's pedophile perversions. When my father brought me to Mackinac Island for routine prostitution at the Political Retreat, VanderJagt introduced me to a new friend he had made now that he was in Washington, D.C. as a U.S. Congressman-U.S. Senator Robert C. Byrd, Democrat from West Virginia. Byrd had been a U.S. Senator as long as I had been alive, serving as Senate Whip and later as President Pro Tempore of the Senate and as the all powerful Senate Appropriations leader. Byrd commanded attention and respect from all who came in contact with him, particularly from my father. When we were left alone in his room, he loomed over me in a threatening stance. His cold, blue slitty eyes locked onto mine. I undressed and climbed into his bed as ordered. I was momentarily relieved to find that his penis was abnormally tiny—so small it didn't even hurt! And I could breathe with it in my mouth! Then he began to indulge himself in his brutal perversions, talking on and on about how I was "made just for him" due to the vast amounts of pain I could withstand. The spankings and police handcuffs I had previously endured were child's play compared to Senator Byrd's near death tortures. The hundreds of scars on my body still show today. With VanderJagt, sex was a matter of "how much I could give," whereas with Byrd it was "how much I could take". And I was forced to take mote pain than any human could logically withstand. I was dedicated to Byrd at age thirteen which meant he would be directing my future in Project Monarch, and my father would raise me according to his specifications.

My MPD/DID existence became more regimented from that point on. I was kept physically worn down to the point of exhaustion in order that I be sufficiently receptive to my father's limited hypnotic programming capabilities to condition my mind for mind control. The pornography I was forced to anticipate in became much more violent immediately after Byrd, switching me from predominantly pedophile and bestiality themes to torturous versions of sadomasochism (S&M). My father and mother worked in tandem daily to "break my spirit," destroying any remnants left of my self-confidence, tearing down my self-esteem, and thus annihilating my free will urges. They conditioned/taught me my dreams were reality and my reality were dreams, that black is white and up is down. "Good night, sleep tight, dream about your mommy and daddy" is what I heard every night. This was intended to confuse my mind to believe incest in the middle of the night was "just a bad dream".

My television, books, and music became even more strictly controlled and monitored that before. This was not only to infringe on my last minuscule freedom of choice, but for total mind-control conditioning purposes.
For example, the annual televising of Judy Garland's Wizard Of Oz was celebrated as a grand holiday around my house. This was to prepare my mind for future base programming on the theme that I, like Dorothy, could "spin" into another dimension "Over the Rainbow". After all, "Birds (Byrds) fly over the Rainbow..." was a theme that became a part of my life.

My father insisted I watch the Walt Disney movie Cinderella with him, paralleling my existence to Cinderella's—"magically trance-forming from a dirty little slave to a beautiful Princess". In typical "reverse psychology" humor, he referred to pornographic photos when singing "Someday my Prince (prints) will come," or by placing literal sexual emphasis on "will come".

My brother, Bill, who was often featured in kiddie porn with me, was not a "chosen one" for Project Monarch (beyond supplying more children to be dedicated in later years). Yet my father figured that "what was good for me would be good for my brother". He took us to see Walt Disney's Pinocchio, explaining that my brother and I were his puppets still in the carving stage. The distortions of reality that these and other Disney theme movies provided when coupled with my father's government trained conscious and subconscious controlling influence, began to further erode our ability to discern fantasy from reality. My brother, now 37, remains psychologically locked into those traumatic childhood years and is obsessed with Disney themes and productions to this day. His house is decorated in Disney memorabilia, he wears Disney clothes, listens to my father's instructions on his Disney telephone, and maintains "When You Wish Upon a Star" as his favorite song, which has locked his children into the same theme.

My father also instructed me to watch Alfred Hitchcock's horrifying movie The Birds with him. This reinforced in my mind the movie's theme that there is "no place to hide from the birds/Byrd".

I was quickly beginning to lose all ability to question anything but my own judgment. It was easy to believe that there was indeed "no place to run, no place to hide," which is a necessary and primary psychological basis for government/military mind control. In later years, "who ya' gonna call?" and Ronald Reagan's quip "you can run, but you can't hide" echoed deep within my mind. After all, even if I could think to seek help, who would help me? The police? The church? My parents? Relative? Politicians? School? There was no one left that would help me, I sensed.

My television programming was then expanded to include the shows that every Project Monarch Mind-Control slave I knew had to watch: I Dream Of Jeannie, The Brady Bunch, Gumby And Pokey, and Bewitched. I could relate to the Genie pleasing her master, who was a Major for the Air Force in I Dream Of Jeannie. This served to confuse the reality of my own experiences with the fantasy of television production. I told all outsiders that my family was "just like the Bradys". Through Gumby And Pokey I was led to believe that I was as flexible as these animated clay performers. Therefore, I was capable of being physically maneuvered into any sexual position. The mirrors depicted a doorways to other dimensions and adventures interlocked with my Catholic conditioning and Alice In Wonderland and Wizard Of Oz theme programming. In Bewitched, it is the normal new door neighbor that is considered crazy rather than the witches. This is another reversal that was applied to my bizarre existence. I was one of the only kids in my school that listened to country music. But then, Senator Byrd fancied himself a country music fiddler and it was "my duty to love what he did", I was ordered to listen to country music or no music at all. Music was my psychological avenue for escape, a dissociative tool. But this, too, was used in setting the stage for my future as a Project Monarch "Presidential Model" mind-controlled slave.

As suggested, I read the Boxcar Children Series over and over again, I empathized with the trials, traumas, and tribulations the children endured while they fended for themselves from their boxcar home along the railroad tracks. My father often made train sounds at me in passing to subconsciously remind me that I was currently "in Train-ing" on the undeterable track of the "Freedom Train."[4] This term, taken from Harriet Tubman's underground railroad for slaves, reversed the meaning of the word "freedom" to confuse one's "one track mind" and instill the belief "I am free to be a slave". This also reinforced my training to stay on track-the plan (track) laid our for me. My father would often quip, "When God passed out brains, you thought he said 'trains' and got in the wrong line". Convicted (capital crime) career criminal, country music entertainer, and CIA operative Merle Haggard often used well documented cryptic language in his songs pertaining to government mind-control slave operations. He released songs including "Freedom Train" and "Over the-Rainbow". My father told me repeatedly that Merle Haggard was my "favorite" singer, and his songs reinforced my programming.

Of course, Senator Byrd remained my "favorite" fiddler as ordered. He played train songs like "Orange Blossom Special" while making train sounds on his fiddle. Sometimes I was his captive audience, bound and gagged, while he played his fiddle. Other times he instructed me to spin round and round like a music box dancer in order to add "new dimensions to our sex".. These new dimensions included more and more physical pain through "kinky" torture.

My father took advantage of his new political connections and advanced himself occupationally, manufacturing camshaft auto parts at a local factory. Soon he was promoted to a sales management position due to his connections within the Pentagon Procurement Office and General Services Administration, coupled with what he had learned about double bind hypnotic persuasion. He continued to supplement his income by sexually exploiting us children. This[1] now included brazenly prostituting me to Muskegon Coast Guard officials while on cocaine runs to and from the base. Meanwhile, my father took us all to church every Sunday, and my mother stayed busy having babies to raise in the Project. In true pedophile fashion, he surrounded himself with children by coaching little league sports, chaperoning school and Catechism activities, and becoming involved with the Boy Scouts. All of this made him appear to be a model citizen and "pillar of the community". The illusion was fonned. The parts of me that knew otherwise had no choice but to remain Silent.

---

[1] Project Monarch slaves were referred to as "Chosen Ones".

[2] Torture to the point just before death, such as with Death's Door programming, was jointly used by the Catholic Jesuits and the CIA in Project Monarch.

[3] It was the voices of my mind-control programmers and handlers that I later heard guiding me.

[4] "Freedom Train" is the internationally recognized cryptic code term for Project Monarch slave operations that I heard repeatedly throughout my victimization.

CHAPTER 3

MY FIRST PRESIDENT

Muskegon, Michigan is a coastal tourist attraction, and home of the annual Seaway and Coast Guard festivals which bring people to the town from all over Michigan. VanderJagt remained publicly visible through opportunities such as these. My father often could be seen with Vanderjagt and was photographed at his side white judging festival events like the kiddie parades, sand sculpturing contests, and so on—all of which I entered and won. In later years, my father polished and shined the red paint of his 1966 Ford convertible to chauffeur VanderJagt through the local parades. This only served to reinforce the illusion that my father was a "pillar of the community".

In 1973, Senator Byrd instructed my father to send me to Muskegon Catholic Central High School which was overseen by the director of St. Francis of Assisi Church, Father Lepre. The Catholic church, of course, has its own political structure, with the Pope presiding over all. The strong political ties between the Catholic church and the U.S. Government was overtly evidenced by the much publicized relationship between the President and the Pope during the Reagan Administration. Of course, I had been privy to this political relationship ever since my First Communion-a relationship that the Rite to Remain Silent was intended to cover. My experience with Catholic Central's direct involvement in Project Monarch's physical and psychological conditioning further confirmed the union between the U.S. Government and the Catholic church.

When Senator Byrd changed my school from public to Parochial, he also destroyed through dissociation my school personality. I no longer viewed school as my haven from abuse, as it was controlled by the church and, as I later learned, monitored by a corrupt segment of the C.I.A.

By the time I enrolled in Catholic Central, the cliques and groups had already been formed. 1 had a personality to fit in with the "good" kids and one that interfaced with the "bad". It did not take long for the "good" kids to notice 1 also got along with the "bad". I soon found the only kids that could relate to me were the other known Project victims. We clung together in a close knit group, herded around like the proverbial sheep by those in the school who knew we were MPD/DIDed and under mind control. We each switched personalities as circumstance demanded, most often in unison. We were ritually traumatized, constantly tranced, and then programmed during school hours. Since 1 no longer had my singular "school personality" and was constantly switching instead, the compartment of my brain that held school memory was no longer consciously retrievable. Therefore, I had no basis for continued learning aside from what I could photographically memorize from class. My grades appeared erratic, ranging from A's to failing. And some A's received I did not earn academically.

In my required religion class, Sister Ann Marie bad been leading us in study on the topic of Confession, This was to prepare us for the kind of Confessions we were to be giving Father Vesbit, who was also our school principal. The day Sister ordered us to Confession, I refused to go. I unconsciously feared 1 would be sexually assaulted again in the Confessional, this time while my teenage peers waited impatiently outside the door. Sister made an example out of me to the class, saying I was a "Satanist" and that I was "going to hell".

With seemingly no escape from the occultism that proliferated at the school, I could no longer differentiate between Catholicism and Satanism.

Whatever Senator Byrd's purposes in sending me to Catholic school, no one seemed to notice that I had no reason to religiously adhere to Catholic principles. Therefore, the applied reversal of Satanism held no "spiritual magic" to it either. The wedge of anti-superstition that the Catholic school was inadvertently driving into me only served to discount the occult principles and superstitious traumas that they were attempting to use to control me, Satanism is often used as an extreme pain/violence trauma base in Project Monarch Mind Control, reportedly due to the previous German Nazi Himmler Research. I did not adhere to the desired helplessness attitude that this was "spiritual warfare" and out of the realm of mankind's ability to stop. Regardless of my religious beliefs or disbeliefs, I experienced the "results" just the same. Being subjected to and witnessing trauma so horrible, while my body was raped, tortured, and ravaged by men literally drove me out of my mind.

Catholic Central did increase my endurance capabilities as planned, however. I signed up for the two-mile run in the girls' track team as ordered. Muskegon Catholic Central led the state of Michigan in high school athletics, using mind-control technique to "modify" their star athletes and cause them to excel beyond pre-established records. The school gained national recognition for its contribution to professional leagues with their manufactured programmed athletes. But, like Tommy LaSorda's Dodgers, Catholic Central's consistent victories began to raise suspicions and questions. This created a public scandal for the school that threatened to close its doors in 1975.

The girls' and guys' track teams converged after school for practice. I was among the few females singled out for coaching by Coach Cheverini and his hypnotic mind-control methodisms due to my Project Monarch victimization. I was instructed to run 13 miles per day (another corny satanic ploy) to get in shape for my two-mile race. I often ran with a male friend who was the record holder for the two-mile in guys' track. He and I were friends, sharing much due to our similar Project Monarch victimizations. Together we learned how to shut out pain and fatigue when we ran. We tranced into a fast pace set in our minds by Coach Cheverini with no comprehension of time or distance. We perceived the track as our "Yellow Brick Road" in accordance with the Oz theme programming. Senator Byrd's plan for building my physical endurance through Catholic Central's coaching methods proved successful for allowing me to survive his intensely torturous sexual perversions.

In addition to routine trips to Mackinac Island and Niagara Falls, my family often took camping trips to "get away from it all". In reality, I was taken to key places for ritual abuse, prostitution, and pornography. In the fall of 1974, my father announced we were going to go camping "back in time" to an old fashioned festival in the small remote town of Cedar Springs, Michigan for their annual Red Flannel Days celebration. My mother told me to pack my jeans and sweaters and my Catholic school uniform which she had washed and pressed for the occasion.

Cedar Springs was quiet, with the festival events including dilapidated amusement rides set up in a small parking lot, and contests where local farmers pitted their mules and horses against each other to see whose could pull the most weight. The main (and only) street of town was lined with the few local businesses, including the town's red flannel underwear "long Johns" factory. In the center of town, a mock, single, jail cell had been erected to hold any and all parade participants who failed to wear the required red flannel underwear. The jail was guarded by quasi Keystone Cops. I was amused when the townsfolk began lining up to march in the parade, with very few remaining to watch it, A mentally retarded man carried the baton to lead the parade, followed by kids on bicycles, hay-wagons of old folks, a grade school band and people walking-all in their red flannel underwear. The grand finale' of the parade, the town firetruck, was approaching, surrounded by numerous motorcycle police. I heard folks whispering "the President is coming". I assumed they meant the President of the underwear factory. I was wrong. I watched in horror as the firetruck rolled to a stop, and Secret Service helped then President Gerald Ford as he stepped down to the pavement.

My father was excitedly tugging on my arm, half dragging me through the wall of Secret Service agents, to talk with President Ford. I looked around nervously as my father made the necessary arrangements with Ford to prostitute me to him later that evening. VanderJagt, who never missed a parade it seemed, was signing autographs. As he smiled at me, someone roughly grabbed my arm. Nervous and startled, I screamed. The crowd laughed as a Keystone Cop threw me in the jail, scolding me for not wearing my red flannel underwear when I was talking to the President. I was trying to be inconspicuous in hopes no one would see me with the likes of Ford, but then, they did not know him as I did. The Keystone Cop rattled on and on about "how lucky" I was until my father paid my bail and I was released from the cell.

That night, I wore my Catholic uniform as instructed and went into a dissociative trance as my father drove me to the local National Guard Armory where I was prostituted to Ford. Ford took me into an empty room, pushed me down on the wooden floor as he unzipped his pants and said, "Pray on this". Then he brutally, sexually assaulted me. Afterward, my memory was compartmentalized through use of high voltage. I was then carried out to the car where I lay in the back seat, muscles contracted, stunned, in pain, and unable to move.

When we got back to Muskegon, my father sent me to the beach as always, to let the repetition of crashing waves against the beach "wash my mind free of memory" while I watched the sun set. I was totally locked into the belief that truly there was "no place to run," not even to the President of the United States.

I remember that the "sane" part of "me"-my innate personality-seemed to die after seeing Ford as President. I recall walking up the steps of Catholic Central High School one morning, reaching for the door, and crying uncontrollably. I cried myself into a heap at the top of the stairs. I did not even know why I was crying. As an MPD, I rarely cried at all. But I was still sobbing hours later when school let out. Someone found me, but I do not recall to this day ever leaving the school steps. I never really experienced "emotion" after that day until I was rescued, deprogrammed and reintegrated in 1988. Now all of my brain was functioning through a wide variety of memory compartments, also known as multiple personalities, with no part of me left "free" of abuse. Now it was as though I had "no place to run," not even in my brain. This drove me out of my mind which is exactly what my abusers needed for total control.

CHAPTER4

THE MOST DANGEROUS GAME

When I learned of a pending rendezvous with Senator Byrd in Traverse City, Michigan (VanderJagt's headquarters), I stole some candy at a local convenience market hoping to go to jail and escape my encounter with Byrd. I was caught, and the police were even called. But, of course, my poetically powerful abusers would not allow for me to have a police record. The entire matter was not-so-mysteriously and suddenly dropped. My only "punishment" was to have a conference with the school principal, Father Vesbit.

Father Vesbit knew I was part of Project Monarch, and handled the matter accordingly. He raped me in the school's private chapel after school while holding a Satanic ritual involving several of my project friends. Kids often attached nicknames to their teachers, and there were only a few of us who knew the reason why Father Vesbit was called Father "Fuzzbutt". His backside was covered with thick black hair. He "counseled" me on several occasions, once remarking, "I thought kids in your situation were all part of the Exchange Student program."

My Uncle Bob Tanis was visiting our house soon after that. He had flown in from what he claimed was a "black ops" Air Force Intelligence operation. I know now that in typical CIA mode of operations, he was relating a story of lies salted with some truth. His point was to inform me that the Catholic Church is "justified" in its involvement with our government due to the Priests' "hearing confessions from mobsters and spies". He also explained that Exchange Students were "spies in the making" that Priests found, through Confession, were problems. Thus they were considered expendable and transferred out of the country. He then suggested to my father that I see the school guidance counselor, CIA Operative Dennis DeLaney, immediately. My father enthusiastically told me that DeLaney was a long time friend of his from St. Francis who "knew how to handle kids like me". Arrangements were made for me to see him after school.

DeLaney began by informing me that he was "aware of everything" and that he knew just what I needed "to put me back on track". He said that my family needed to lake a trip to the Teton Mountains of Wyoming. He even provided maps and information in an envelope for my father. He turned off the lights in his office, and turned on a slide projector. He showed me scenes of the numerous waterfalls of the Tetons, all of which were to "wash my brain" of the reality that I was performing oral sex on him as ordered while the slides ran. Then he scheduled a follow up appointment for further "counseling".

This trip to the Tetons would provide a change of scenery tram the usual Mackinac/Niagara Falls trip, but I could no longer hope for a change in the direction life was leading me. I was told my life was "predestined," and all I had to do was follow the road stretched out before me, i.e., the "Yellow Brick Road". I was destined for Wyoming, but would not know why until I arrived.

I confirmed the family trip to the Tetons when 1 saw DeLaney for my follow up "counseling". He informed me that he had already talked to my father about the trip, as well as our upcoming trip to Disney World in Florida. I was not surprised to learn of an additional trip. Nor did I have the capacity to become excited, suspicious, or apprehensive. I was aware that DeLaney was heavily involved in Project Monarch, not only because he was accessing my sexual personalities again, but because he was helping to pave the way toward my destiny of total mind control.

During Christmas vacation of 1974, my father flew us all to Disney World by route of Tampa, Florida. Ignorant of geography, it did not occur to me that Tampa was out of the way to Disney World until my father drove the rented van to the gates of MacDill Air Force Base. Military personnel met me there and escorted me into the base TOP SECRET high tech mind-control conditioning facility for "behavioral modification" programming. This was the first in what became a routine series of mind-control testing and/or programming sessions on government installations that I would endure throughout my Project Monarch victimization.

Whether I was in a military, NASA, or government building, the procedure for maintaining me under total mind control remained consistent with Project Monarch requirements. This included prior physical and/or psychological trauma; sleep, food, and water deprivation; high voltage electric shock; and hypnotic and/or harmonic programming of specific memory compartments/ personalities. The high tech equipment and methodisms I endured from that time on gave the U.S. government absolute control of my mind and life. I had been literally driven out of my conscious mind and existed only through my programmed subconscious. I lost my free will, ability to reason, and could not think to question anything that was happening to me. I could only do as I was told.

After the MacDill Air Force Base experience, my home life worsened. The controls and conditioning that my father and mother executed on me tightened even more. I was no longer permitted to have any contact with my own brothers and sister (I only had one younger sister at that time). This stopped me in my subconscious efforts to protect them from my father's abuse, and left me with a desperate, empty aching for the loving relationships I previously shared with them. Of course, I never was able to protect them any more than I could defend myself or later protect my own daughter. However, until government programming began, 1 had routinely "baby sat" them every evening and took them for long walks that lasted for hours in my feeble attempt to keep them out of my parents' range. Subconsciously I believed I was making a difference. The day my youngest brother told my mother he much preferred my company over hers was the day I could no longer be near him or my other brothers and sister. Apparently I was making enough of a difference that my parents were compelled to separate me from them. I was ordered to my closet-sized bedroom in the garage as soon as I got home from school or work. I could not speak to, look at, or hug my brothers and sister. I was not permitted to eat dinner with my family, although they let me out of my room to set the table, wash dishes, and do other chores. If I ventured from my bedroom to use the bathroom and was caught by my mother, she said, "nobody rattled your cage" and ordered me back to my room in the garage.

In the summer of 1975, my family drove all the way from Michigan to the Teton Mountains of Wyoming. I was ordered to ride in the back storage area of the family Chevy Suburban since 1 was forbidden to associate or communicate with my brothers and sister. So I dissociated into books, or into the metaphorical, hypnotic suggestions from my father and tranced deeper as I watched the prairies seemingly endless sea of "amber waves of grain" streak past my window. Once when we stopped at a gas station, my father took me inside to show me a stuffed "jackalope" mounted on the wall. Due to my tranced, dissociative state and high suggestibility level, I believed it was indeed a cross between a jack rabbit and antelope. It was 100+ degrees in the Badlands when it cooled down at night. The intense heat of the day accentuated my ever increasing thirst. My father was physically preparing me though water deprivation for the intense tortures and programming I would endure in Wyoming, Dick Cheney, then White House Chief of Staff to president Ford, later Secretary of Defense to President George Bush, documented member of the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), and Presidential hopeful for 1996, was originally Wyoming's only Congressman. Dick Cheney was the reason my family had traveled to Wyoming where I endured yet another form of brutality—his version of "A Most Dangerous Game," or human hunting.

It is my understanding now that A Most Dangerous Game was devised to condition military personnel in survival and combat maneuvers. Yet it was used on me and other slaves known to me as a means of further conditioning the mind to the realization there was "no place to hide," as well as traumatize the victim for ensuing programming. It was my experience over the years that A Most Dangerous Game had numerous variations on the primary theme of being stripped naked and turned loose in the wilderness while being hunted by men and dogs. In reality, all "wilderness" areas were enclosed in secure military fencing whereby it was only a matter of time until I was caught, repeatedly raped, and tortured.

Dick Cheney had an apparent addiction to the "thrill of the sport". He appeared obsessed with playing A Most Dangerous Game as a means of traumatizing mind-control victims, as well as to satisfy his own perverse sexual kinks. My introduction to the game occurred upon arrival at the hunting lodge near Greybull, Wyoming, and it physically and psychologically devastated me. I was sufficiently traumatized for Cheney's programming as I stood naked in his hunting lodge office after being hunted down and caught. Cheney was talking as he paced around me, "I could stuff you and mount you like a jackalope and call you a two legged dear. Or I could stuff you with this (he unzipped his pants to reveal his oversized penis) right down your throat, and then mount you. Which do you prefer?

Blood and sweat became mixed with the dirt on my body and slid like mud down my legs and shoulder. I throbbed with exhaustion and pain as I stood unable to think to answer such a question. "Make up your mind," Cheney coaxed. Unable to speak, I remained silent. "You don't get a choice, anyway, I make up your mind for you. That's why you're here. For me to make you a' mind, and make you mine/mind. You lost your mind a long time ago. Now I'm going to give you one. Just like the Wizard (of Oz) gave Scarecrow a brain, the Yellow Brick Road led you here to me. You've 'come such a long, long way' for your brain, and I will give you one,"

The blood reached my shoes and caught my attention. Had I been further along in my programming, 1 perhaps would never have noticed such a thing or had the capability to think to wipe it away. But so far, I had only been to MacDill and Disney World for government/military programming. At last, when I could speak, I begged, "If you don't mind, can I please use your bathroom?"

Cheney's face turned red with rage. He was on me in an instant, slamming my back into the wall with one arm across my chest and his hand on my throat, choking me while applying pressure to the carotid artery in my neck with his thumb. His eyes bulged and he spit as he growled, "If you don't mind me, I will kill you. I could kill you—Kill you—with my bare hands. You're not the first and you won't be the last. I'll kill you any time I goddamn well please," He flung me on the cot-type bed that was behind me. There he finished taking his rage out on me sexually.

On the Long trip back to Michigan, I lay in a heap behind the scats of the Suburban, nauseated and hurting from Cheney's brutality and high voltage tortures, plus the whole Wyoming experience. My father stopped by the waterfalls flowing through the Tetons to "wash my brain" of the memory of Cheney, I could barely walk through the woods to the falls for the process as instructed, despite having learned my lessons well from Cheney on following orders.

The next year when our "annual" trip to Disney World rolled around, my father drove, pulling his new Holiday Rambler Royale International trailer. (I slept outside in a tent because I was not permitted inside it since "I wasn't family".) My father dropped me off en route at the Kennedy Space Center in Titusville, Florida where I was subjected to my first NASA programming. From then on, I was "obsessed" with following the "Yellow Brick Road" to Nashville, Tennessee. Moving to Nashville was all I could talk about. If anyone asked me the question I could not think to ask myself "Why?", I would respond by reiterating it was something "I had to do".

I had gone through the motions of my senior year in a dissociative trance. I became further distanced from religious values by my religion class teacher. Brother Emmett. This was due to his promotion of cannibalism via Pier Paul Reed's book Alive, and by his teachings at a religious 'corseal' retreat I attended that included occult ritual at ST. Francis Church. I graduated from Muskegon Catholic Central High School in our bicentennial year of 1976. I was led by Senator Byrd to revise my plan to attend Hope College like I had promised VanderJagt as a child. This new plan was for me to temporarily attend Muskegon Community College, because my "real education" was to come through mind-control programming-not school. In order to be exhausted, as was necessary for my "real education," I worked three menial jobs in addition to attending college.

During my first semester of college in 1976, I made plans to take a trip to Nashville with my Project Monarch friend from Catholic Central. (She remains an expendable victim to date, and therefore her identity must be protected from public release for her safety.) My father explained that I was to stay at the Fiddler's Inn in Nashville, see the World Famous Printer's Alley row of sleazy country music nightclubs, and attend the Grand Ole Opry on Friday night, as ticket arrangements had been made through a "friend," in spite of their scarcity during the Thanksgiving holiday.

I never thought to associate Fiddler's Inn with Senator Byrd's fiddle playing when my friend and I arrived in Music City, U.S.A. Nor did 1 find it odd when a country music "star" entertaining at the Black Poodle nightclub in Printer's Alley began directing my activities. My friend and 1 were provided with free passes to the Black Poodle to encourage us to return each night where entertainer and CIA operative Jack Greene and his Desperado band were playing. During breaks between sets, Greene and his band would sit with my friend and me to manipulate our suggestible minds. I was told it was "my destiny" to have met band member, Wayne Cox, who had been trained for paramilitary mercenary operations under Louisiana's U.S. Senator J, Bennett Johnston, I soon learned that everyone associated with Greene was involved in his CIA "Freedom Train" operations. When I told Greene that my friend and I would not be returning on Friday night due to attending the Grand Ole Opry, he told us that he would be working the Opry that night. He made arrangements for us to come back stage and see him immediately following his segment. He explained that the "security" guard at the Opry, Nashville Metro Police Lt. Bob Ezell, was a good friend of his and would let us in.

At the Opry, my friend and I sat in the audience watching as Jack Greene introduced his "special guest," U.S. Senator Robert C. Byrd. At the sight of Byrd, I went into a pre-conditioned deep trance and robotically went through the motions of following Greene's instructions. Once backstage, Greene pointed out his dressing room, which he was sharing with Senator Byrd, and ordered me in. The personality that had been sitting in the audience had perceived Byrd as an entertainer and could not, or would not, think further. But as I walked into the dressing room and saw Byrd perched on the edge of the mirrored vanity in his boxer shorts, I switched into the child personality that had known him as a U.S. Senator on Mackinac Island since age 13, and responded sexually. Afterward, Byrd was claiming me as "his," excitedly telling me that he had "always wanted his own little witch". I soon learned the enormity of this statement.

Jack Greene's band member, Wayne Cox, later told me that playing music behind Senator Byrd at the Opry was not the only way he "backed him". He also backed him politically and in Freedom Train operations. Cox then made arrangements for my friend and me to stay the remainder of our trip at his trailer in Hendersonville, Tennessee. There was no choice but to comply. The following night, after Jack Greene completed his show at the Black Poodle, he drove my friend and me to a nearby participating after-hours club, the Demon's Den. There, Cox was to pick us up and take us to Hendersonville. Instead, we were slipped a drug and taken "on a tour" of Union Station, Nashville's then abandoned train station, where supposedly the only train still running through there was the Freedom Train.

Senator Byrd's attempted cultivation of superstition through my Catholic schooling should have maximized the impact of the occult ritual I was subjected to in the tower of the old stone and slate turn-of-the-century train depot. But the pain and horror was sufficiently effective in itself—even without my adhering to superstition-to produce the intended mind shattering results. Cox took my friend and me on a "flashlight tour" through the rubble of Union Station, until we came to a homeless man sleeping on the ground. Cox ordered me to "kiss the railroad bum good-bye," then shot him between the eyes while I was still only inches away[1]. He then used a machete to chop off the man's hands, which he put in a zip-lock bag. He then led us up the rickety stairs into the lower of the old depot. There Jack Greene, his band members, and others dressed in black robes were gathered around a black leather alter in a room lit by candles and draped in red velvet. In total shock, I was laid on the alter and subjected to rape and torture while the participants indulged in sex, blood, and cannibalism ritual.

The next day I woke up on Cox's couch, vaguely aware that I had suffered a "bad nightmare". When I stood up, I passed out from blood loss. I was bleeding profusely from the vagina. It was all I could do to prepare to drive back to Michigan, and my friend was certainly not in a stable frame of mind to help. I did not know what happened to me, nor was I able to question it. I had a new "obsession" on my mind. I had been programmed at the ritual to move to Nashville and marry Cox, as ordered by Senator Byrd.

Back in Michigan, I made the announcement to my parents that I was moving to Nashville to marry Cox, as it was "predestination". What they would not tell me was that my father had just literally SOLD me to Senator Byrd in exchange for lucrative military contracts that made him a millionaire overnight—a millionaire on a sixth grade education—a perverse, child exploiting criminal, immune from prosecution, working as a CIA operative for the U.S, government! That mind shattering occult ritual I endured in Nashville marked a new life of wealth and prestige for my father white thrusting me into a new phase of my torturous existence-and I had no choice in any of it!

---

[1] Nashville Metropolitan Police Lieutenant Bob Ezell, who also acted in the capacity of Grand Ol' Opry security guard, covered up the murder.

CHAPTER 5

TINKERING WITH THE MIND

It was 1977. I was a 19-year-old mind-controlled programmed slave in the CIA/DIA Project Monarch Freedom Train operation, literally owned by U.S. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, who was then a 20-year incumbent and on the Senate Appropriations Committee, As Byrd's "own little witch" (sex slave), I would also become involved in covert government operations. I now understand that this required more memory compartments/personalities than I had developed. Hence one more reason for the mind shattering occult ritual, and my "predestined" marriage to Cox. In typical Project Monarch structure, Byrd was my "owner" and in control of my life, while Cox became my primary "handler" and followed Byrd's orders to ensure that 1 was at key locations and events at appointed times and to maintain me under mind control. Cox reportedly was not paid cash for his role like my father was. Instead, he either followed orders or would be prosecuted for distributing drugs and being the occult serial killer that he was and is to date. Cox's primary role was to shatter my mind further through repealed occult trauma as well as father my daughter, Kelly, to be raised in the genetic mind-control studies of Project Monarch.

I moved to Nashville, as ordered, to marry Cox, who took me to the backwoods of his hometown swamp in Chatham, Louisiana for months at a time for occult traumatization. Cox had been brought up in witchcraft by his mother, and admittedly longed for her sexually and ritually. Together they subjected me to their beliefs, which included what equates to a weakened version of mind control used by witches for centuries, anchored in superstition rather than scientific fact. These superstitious beliefs seemingly conflicted with Cox's mercenary training to the point that his killing raged out of control. For example, Cox would murder a human through repeated stabbing with a knife, believing that the "departing spirit" and splattered blood gave him power to control my mind. In truth, it was my aversion and subsequent traumatization by the event that caused me to dissociate and trance, leaving my subconscious open to his suggestions and those of others. During the three years I was with Cox, he ritually impregnated and aborted me six times, consuming several of his own offspring and preserving the others shaped in ceramic for sale in his interstate occult body parts business. Cox's M.O. for murdering always included removing the hands with a machete, as the "Hands of Glory" he kiln-dried in the ceramic shop of his and his mother's house were in demand and thus distributed throughout the occult underground supply network. Cox's protected cocaine and body parts distribution routes included Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Florida.

Cox and I traveled to Florida on several occasions as his mother's parents lived in Mims, which is only minutes away from the NASA Kennedy Space Center in Titusville. Cox, like my father, made sure I was there for mind-control testing and programming as ordered. Cox perceived me as a "Chosen One," and often used this CIA Project Monarch term when referring to me and for proudly "justifying" his leaving me at the NASA installation.

Cox had a variety of belief systems that he applied to various situations, all of which were superstition based. He believed in spirit communication or "divine guidance" through nature spirits and demons, that Satan must be appeased, that Jesus is an alien, that the Bermuda Triangle is a door to another dimension, and that the end of the world is near. He 'religiously' carried a Bible with him everywhere-including to occult rituals-quoting scripture like a theologian. He justified "eating the body and drinking the blood," "being washed in the blood," and even "murdering children" according to the story of God testing Abraham by ordering him to murder his son, Isaac, by knife on an alter. Jim Jones was one of Cox's idols, as was Charlie Manson, and he touted the Jonestown massacre as a prime example of the "power of (CIA) mind control".

Cox demanded I become a Mormon in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This was to "prove" that Satan was everywhere-particularly in the Monroe, Louisiana Mormon church where he led occult ritual, and in the Hendersonville, Tennessee church that the so-called Freedom Train rolled through.[1]

Cox's determination to instill his religious superstitious beliefs in me was side-tracked by J. Bennett Johnston in his Shreveport, Louisiana office early in the summer of 1978.

Cox's mother, Mary, had driven us to Johnston's office near Barksdale Air Force Base as ordered. As she knocked boldly on the obscure metal door, 1 read the attached metal sign: "General Dynamics Research and Development". A smaller sign near the doorknob read; "Unlawful to enter premises without prior authorization. All violators will be prosecuted under penalty of federal law."

Johnston, wearing a light blue, leisure suit and smelling strongly of body odor, opened the door. "Well, hey Senator," Mary drawled in her backwoods Louisiana dialect, "I brought the children to see you like you said."

Johnston looked at her with annoyed disgust. "I see that," he said matter-of-factly. He then proceeded to instruct Mary to wait outside a moment while he talked with Cox, then to take him on to her home in Monroe where I could be picked up at the Airport a few days later.

Cox and I were ushered into Johnston's barren military-style furnished office. Several Presidential and military photographs hung on the wall and served as the only decor. Johnston sat on the front of his military issue desk and talked to Cox's subconscious mind using cryptic, hypnotic Disney Peter Pan theme language,[3] as he apparently had done in the past when Cox had a mind left to control.

"As long as your ticker's running, chat crock-a-dial you've been feeding over the years will be running right behind you. (Peter) Pan knew how to stay a step ahead of the game and stop the inevitable process of becoming gator bait himself by offering to give him a hand now and then."

Cox dismembered his murdered victims and distributed the "Hands of Glory" to fellow Satanists and occult traumatized/ Peter Pan theme programmed mercenaries, while feeding "left over" body parts to an alligator that lived in the Swamp behind his house. This was indicative of Cox's twisted, murderous response to Johnston's traumatic Peter Pan theme programming... a programming that I was about to experience "first hand". Cryptically instructing Cox on Senator Byrd's orders, Johnston continued, "I've got to hand it to that Pan. His livelihood of creating hookers for the Captain (Hook) was indeed lucrative. And speaking of creating hookers, a little Byrd told me that a shift from routine hand-ling to a theme that is alien could prove lucrative to you." Revealing his intent to ensure my military mind-control programming, Johnston told him, "I'll lay a little groundwork and set the patten for countdown. Then I'll send her out to launch for you, and it's your job to man the craft from there..."

Cox was ordered out of Johnston's office, and he turned his full attention to me. When alone with the Senator, Johnston manipulated my mind, and ultimately my beliefs and perceptions, for future programming. He referred to a picture of himself shaking hands with unknown Navy brass as he dramatically told me, "I was there that fateful day in 1943 when a hole was ripped in the fabric of time through what later became known as the Philadelphia Experiment. All those fine boys vanished along with their ship in a bizarre twist of events that parallels the Atlantis disappearances. A vortex was created in an effort to slip dimensions and become invisible to the enemy. It was a success beyond the highest expectations and launched us all into universal travel. It is no wonder at all that we have had a man on the moon. Traveling to distant planets and galaxies is Mickey Mouse stuff in comparison to the high tech wizardry of trans-dimensional travel. Trans-dimensional travel circumvents all measures of time, including distance and speed. When the fabric of time was torn, we opened ourselves up to intergalactic travel—both in and out of this dimension - and in and out of the future, as well as the past. We can alter the course of history by traveling back in time to alter events, or we can blast off into the future and gain wisdom and knowledge of events yet to come. We can control the future by controlling the past. At present, this is a relatively easy task according to the theory of relativity and abilities gained through the Philadelphia Experiment. I came back an ET (extraterrestrial) myself. And our ship relumed to this Earth as a spaceship.[3] I gained the keys to the universe on that fateful day, and I carry them with me now, sharing only a Key or two at a time with those who are Chosen. You are a Chosen One (Johnston was deliberately interfacing with Rite to Remain Silent conditioning), and therefore must learn the ins and outs of interplanetary travel. Your mission is trans-dimensional. You can span infinite dimensions by learning from me. Take it from me, you're going places, kid. And I'll teach you to get there by riding the light. I'll teach you the groundwork, and you do the light work. The key to the universe lies in the speed of light. The only way to travel is by beam of light. You will learn to go to the light... Your mission is to learn how to Tinker with time. I'm going to take you on that journey myself. Come with me now. It's time we were leaving this plane and boarding another."

Johnston took me the short distance from his General Dynamics Corporation provided office to the Barksdale Air Force Base airfield. He was apparently well known at Barksdale, and a small cargo plane was ready to lake us to our destination-Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma.

Once we were airborne, Johnston accessed my sex programmed personalities for his own aggressive perversion. His use of cocaine further accentuated his hyperactive demeanor as he brutally slung me around the back of the small plane while he had sex with me. At one point the pilot hollered from the cockpit "Hey, you're creating turbulence. Knock it off, will you."

Johnston laughed and responded, "What the fuck do you think I'm doing?" By the time we arrived at Tinker A.F.B., my arm was beginning to show a dark bruise that extended from my shoulder to my elbow. A uniformed man greeted us as we walked across the airfield. Johnston apparently knew him quite well, and referred to him as "Cap'n" (which tied in with the Peter Pan theme programming I was about to endure). When he noticed my arm, Cap'n reminded him, "Hey, that's not necessary, you know."

"Yeah, I know. Take care of it for me. Here..." Johnston took the straps of my tank top and pulled them down around my forearms (which still could not cover the bruise.) "There, that just about covers it." He smiled and continued, "You look like a Southern belle that way rather than a damned ol' Yankee anyway,"

Cap'n said, "She'll be a Tinker-belle by the time we're through here today." Then, referring to Johnston's primary purpose in actually escorting me to Tinker he asked, "How are your South American operations progressing?"

"I've got to talk to you about that," Johnston answered. The two talked as though they had worked in tandem on given mercenary operations/assignments in the past. "I may need a few of your boys to back me on something."

"Back you, or cover you?" the Cap'n retorted.

Johnston laughed, "Both if you'll front the operation."

Johnston had previously "justified" his use of Tinker (Peter Pan theme) programmed mind-controlled mercenaries to me by saying, "Mercenaries are missionaries who follow their inner guidance system rather than their old Uncle Sam. Politics hinder the route to freedom, and these boys slip under international laws, undetected, to carry out the work the military boys only dream of doing.."

I was escorted away from the two by a nurse, who purported to be tending to my injured arm. In fact, she was preparing me for the "Tinker-belle cage"[4]—an electrified metal cage with an electrified grid bottom. Locked inside, I was subjected to high, direct current voltage to compartmentalize the Peter Pan theme mind-control programming that I endured. Like Peter Pan's Tinkerbelle, I learned to "ride the light" as a means of travel.[5] Additionally, my instilled Tinker-belle theme mind manipulation included a sense of Never-Never-land timelessness that was rooted to my "natural" inability to comprehend time due to my MPD/D1D.

Back in Louisiana, Cox and I shared a subconscious understanding of Peter Pan themes and "riding the light". The difference between us was that Cox consciously activated Tinker Air Force Base programming within Johnston's band of mercenaries, while my trance was perpetual whereby I could "Never-Never-Land."[6]

I was with Cox on numerous occasions when he was running guns and/or cocaine, and activating specified mercenaries for operations as instructed by Johnston, In the course of these travels I saw numerous underground arsenals and stockpiled weapons that were known to Senator Johnston, but were not on. military installations. I was also privy to government sanctioned cocaine operations.

On one such cocaine run in 1979, I traveled with Cox to a remote area in the Ouachita National Forest near Hot Springs, Arkansas to "watch for fairies like Tinker-belle" and "ride the light".

We sat in the brush near a railroad track until we saw a light approaching from the Eastern sky. At the time I thought I would be "riding the light" as I was led to believe, but in retrospect I recall my personalities being deliberately switched and a helicopter landing in a nearby clearing. Cox and I unloaded approximately 200-400 pounds of cocaine from the van he had driven, and stacked it in the helicopter. We were then flown to a small airport that appeared to be no more than a dark, fenced-in clearing where I saw a row of metal buildings that looked like mini-warehouses. While the cocaine was unloaded into a warehouse, Cox and I were taken by car to a nearby grey stone hold. The driver led us upstairs, and knocked on the Penthouse door.

"Yeah," a voice answered,

"I got a Tinker-belle and a Peter Pan here to see you, Sir," the driver called.

"Send 'em in." Cox and I walked into the suite where then Governor of Arkansas Bill Clint cm was shuffling through a briefcase. Clinton and Johnston were cohorts in illegal covert operations that emanated from Tinker Air Force Base.

Cox spoke up. "Senator Johnston said a little (Senator) Byrd told him that you are one of Ours.'"

"So what does that make you?" Clinton asked impatiently.

"A Chosen One," Cox nodded his head toward me.

Clinton asked me, "Chosen by whose order?"

I cryptically delivered the proper coded response, which cued Clinton to proceed. "What brings you here?" he demanded.

Interpreting his question literally as is "natural" for programmed MPD/DID slaves, I answered, "I rode the light, Sir."

Clinton rolled his eyes, and looked back over at Cox who was nervously rocking back and forth as he so often did. "State your business," Clinton ordered.

"Uh," Cox cleared his throat, habitually picked his nose as he rocked back and forth and said, "Well, uh..." Clinton looked disgusted.

"Get him the fuck out of here!" he ordered the driver. Cox was immediately escorted out,

"That's better," Clinton said. Using standard Jesuit hand signals and cryptic language, he triggered/switched me and accessed a previously programmed message.

"Senator Johnston sent me to give this to you." I handed Clinton a thin, large brown envelope, "And I have some fairy dust guaranteed to make you fly high." I took the personal stash of cocaine that Johnston was sharing with Clinton from my pocket.

Clinton snorted two lines of the coke immediately. He smiled. "Tell Ben I'm impressed." He showed me to the door.

The severe torture and mind-control programming that I was enduring at Tinker Air Force Base had prepared me for this simple "mission" and many others. Although Cox's out-of-control occult serial killings polyfragmented my multiple personalities as intended by Byrd, it was Johnston's alien theme mind conditioning that locked me into absolute robotic helplessness. After all, had I been capable of rationalizing, I would nave found that the thought of interdimensional travel and aliens was no more bizarre to me that Cox's murderous actions or having found out pornography king Jerry Ford held the office of President.

When my daughter, Kelly, was born in February of 1980, Cox's former employer. Jack Greene, traveled to Louisiana to meet with me in keeping with his role as Nashville's CIA Freedom Train "conductor". He took me aside and explained that since Cox had fulfilled his (genetic) role in producing Kelly, Senator Byrd had ordered me back to Nashville. Greene talked at length, hypnotically reviving my original programmed "obsession" to move to Nashville. He told me that Cox had proven too insane to follow orders anymore as was evidenced by my extremely poor health (much of my hair bad fallen out) and by the stench of decaying human flesh that permeated the area surrounding his remote Chatham, Louisiana swamp house.

If I had had a mind of my own, I know in retrospect I would have felt as though 1 had been released from a prison dungeon. But I could only respond by telling Cox matter-of-factly that I had received "divine guidance" to move to Nashville at once to a home that awaited me. Cox had no choice but to comply with Byrd's orders. Kelly and I moved to Tennessee when she was only three months old, and Cox temporarily moved with us in order to apprise our new handler of the latest details of our victimization. Within weeks, Cox moved back to Chatham, Louisiana to live with his mother (even to this date). Now he reportedly raises goats for sacrifice and carries on his occult serial killing activities unhindered due to his immunity from prosecution because of whom and what he and his mother know.

---

[1] Substantial information regarding the saturation of occultism in the Mormon church is a published fact, circulated among the Bishopric, then released by Bishop Pace in on effort to restore morality and freedom of thought to church members.

[2] Senator Johnston's dual and triple cryptic language perplexed me at the time. In retrospect, I understand how this component of mind control allowed for undetected proliferation of criminal covert activity, even when overheard by strangers, to the extent that I believed it must be occurring in "another dimension" as I was told.

[3] Johnston "validated" his ploy in my mind by arranging for me to see his "space-ship"-a then TOP SECRET experimental aircraft which would eventually be known as a Stealth fighter-at a military installation near Baton Rouge. The classified triangular Stealth was so alien to me at the time that it looked more like a spaceship than the U.S. fighter plane it actually is. This, in combination with his inhumane demeanor and my previously instilled belief in trans-dimensional travel, convinced me he was the "ET" he purported to be.

[4] I understand this is referred to as a Woodpecker grid.

[5] "Riding the Light" scrambled my future experience of being transported by military helicopter or airplane to robotically carry out some program for the government. This "trance-dimeasional" travel caused my earthly experiences to be perceived as having occurred in another dimension.

[6] I remained in a Post Traumatic Stress Disordered (PTSD) trance.

[7] Same Jesuit reference used to describe Pierre Trudeau.

CHAPTER 6

UNITED STATES MILITARY & NASA MIND-CONTROL TRAINING

Soon after moving to Tennessee, I learned that Senator Byrd had simply exchanged one living hell for another for me. My new mind-control handler, CIA operative and country music ventriloquist/ stage hypnotist Alex Houston, seemed only to pick up where Cox had left off. As "destined," Kelly and I moved into a run-down old trailer on Houston's property, which adjoined Jack Greene's farm in Goodletsville, Tennessee. I was subjected to further occult ritual on Greene's farm, and was ritually impregnated and aborted again, this time by Houston. A difference between Cox and Houston was the superstition factor; Houston knew exactly what he was doing and why he was doing it, in accordance with tried and proven scientific U.S. Government mind-control research and development. I gleaned this knowledge from conversations I overheard between him and "those in the know".

Alex Houston was 26 years older than I, and claimed to have gained his knowledge of stage hypnosis and government mind-control methods from the military while entertaining overseas in Bob Hope's USO tours. After the tour, Houston reportedly moved to Washington, D.C. where he and his alter-ego dummy, Elemer, were regulars on the Jimmy Dean television show in the '60s.[1] According to Houston, he was regularly booked to entertain in officers" clubs on military bases due to his involvement in covert government operations. During the brief interim period that Cox resided on Houston's farm with us, he played music behind government mind-controlled slave Louise Mandrell and her husband/handler, R.C. Bannon. Cox had previously worked with Louise's sister, Barbara Mandrell, at the onset of her government sponsored career in the 1960s, traveling overseas with her in the same U.S,O. tours that launched Houston's career. Irby Mandrell, the Mandrells' father and manager, reportedly sexually abused all three of his daughters and eagerly thrust them into their mind-controlled existence much the same way my father had sold me. His daughters, too, were owned by U.S. Senator Robert C. Byrd.

Cox was soon fired from his position with Louise due to his insanity. Once when Houston was traveling with the Mandrells as he so often did throughout the years, Irby Mandrell relayed the events that prompted his firing of Cox. He told Houston and I that Cox had become an embarrassment to him while traveling.

"I knew he was weird," Irby Mandrell said. "That's OK. I can live with that. But when he pitched a tent behind the hotel so he could hear the trumpets sound, signaling him to march to Missouri,[2] I said, 'Start marching, son. You're done. You're through in Nashville. Don't ever come back.' That's it, he was done."

Houston reminisced with Mandrell about the U.S.O. days, and inquired as to how he had tolerated Cox back when he played music behind Barbara.

"Oh, yeah. I remember he (Cox) had somewhat of a brain back then." Irby Mandrell continued, "Barbara was just a kid back then with the talent of a full blown star. I thought she had what it takes to make it in the industry. Then the Byrd came along and introduced us to the latest in technology."

Houston interrupted, "Are you talking about (music) equipment or the kind they've got in Huntsviile (Alabama's NASA mind-control training center)?"

"Both," Mandrell replied. "But it was Huntsville that launched her to the stars. The doors opened wide after that. Byrd took a lot of pride in Barbara, and the doors just kept opening. With my baby's talent and the Byrd's influence on her mind and career, there was no way we could lose."

When Houston became my appointed mind-control handler in 1980, Byrd's influence on my mind boosted Houston's "entertainment" career. His travels had expanded to accommodate covert drug and money laundering operations across the U.S., in Mexico, in Canada, and throughout the Caribbean.

Houston had, and has, a great deal of "no show" money, but I was never permitted access to it. Poverty was one more means of control I endured, as slaves like myself were not afforded the freedoms that having money allows. When I was working three menial jobs during college, all of my money was taken from me by my parents. All money earned by Cox's cocaine and body parts enterprises was reinvested in the coven and drugs, leaving us dependent on charities for our basic necessities. With Houston, 1 had to "earn" every penny I spent on groceries and necessities over and over again, which made "earning my keep" a deliberately impossible cycle. This kept me financially dependent and further hindered my ability to escape, even if I had known enough to attempt it.

My innate protective maternal instincts as a mother may have been accentuated due to my past unsuccessful attempts to protect my brothers and sisters (I now had two sisters). It was my desperate need to keep Kelly safe that drove me to the point of "fight or flight" when I was transferred to Houston. I had long ago lost my ability to "fight," but my new maternal instincts compelled me to "flight". I did all I could to save Kelly and myself from Houston and her fate in Project Monarch. Since I had no ability to reason and was amnesic, I "fled" to my parents' new house in affluent Grand Haven, Michigan, I had no concept of what I was running from or to. I arrived with my baby daughter in my arms, the tattered clothes on our backs, and what few donated belongings I had acquired for Kelly. Within a few days, my parents received and followed Senator Byrd's instructions, and turned me back over to Houston—who, in turn, sent me back to Louisiana for further conditioning.

After three more months of intense, nonstop tortures by Cox, 1 could not think to follow maternal instincts and barely knew my own name. I had no idea how old I was, where I was, how long I had been there, and what had happened to Kelly during that time, Kelly's own testimony and current programmed poly fragmented Multiple Personality/Dissociative Identity Disorder reflects the high tech, sophisticated conditioning and torturous trauma she endured during this and numerous ensuing times that we were separated. When 1 was returned to Houston as orchestrated by Byrd, my brain contained a series of new compartments ready to be programmed and led.

Intensive mind-control behavior programming began at once, and Houston ensured that I was taken to my appointed destinations under the guise of his travels in the country music industry. In the early 1980s, my base programming was instilled at Fort Campbell, Kentucky by U.S. Army Lt. Colonel Michael Aquino. Aquino holds a TOP SECRET clearance in the Defense Intelligence Agency's Psychological Warfare Division (Psy Ops). He is a professed Neo-Nazi, the founder of the Himmler inspired satanic Temple of Set, and has been charged with child ritual and sexual abuse at the Presidio Day Care in San Francisco, California. But like my father and Cox, Aquino remains "above the law" while he continues to traumatize and program CIA destined young minds in a quest to reportedly create the "superior race" of Project Monarch Mind-Controlled slaves. I quickly teamed that Aquino did not adhere to his profoundly professed occult superstition any more than I did. His "satanic power" was in the form of numerous variations of high voltage stun guns,[5] which he used on me regularly. Although Aquino used occultism (blood trauma) as a trauma base, his programming was high tech and "clean"—not muddled in a proverbial witches' brew of ignorance. He quickly dispelled the Cox influence, and began programming me according to Byrd's specifications as his "own little witch" for sadistic sex, covert CIA drug muling, black mail, and prostitution operations.

During the three months I was back with Cox, a muscle in my upper vaginal wall was cut and dropped in preparation for Houston to flesh carve a hideous witch's face[4] for Senator Byrd's perversion. Aquino provided the ancient instructions on how to mutilate me, and Houston used silver nitrate and hot exacto knives to carve the details of the face without any form of anesthesia. By flexing the muscle downward, the face protruded out of my vagina. Not only did this surgery give Byrd a vagina suited to his minute, underdeveloped penis, it also provided an equitable "curiosity" to be displayed over and over again in both commercial and non-commercial pornography and prostitution.

On the 1981 anniversary of John F. Kennedy's assassination, I was forced to "marry" Alex Houston for appearance sake. Earlier that month when I had been taken to Washington, D.C for prostitution purposes, Byrd informed me that I would actually be "marrying" him when I "pledged my vows" to Houston.

"It is a covenant between the two of us," Byrd had said, "It is me that you will honor and obey 'til death do us part," Byrd then instructed me to pick up my wedding dress from a nearby D.C. store. Throughout the years, Houston often joked about the significance of my Washington, D.C. wedding dress—which was depicted in pornographic photos and a commercial video to "commemorate our wedding night",

Alex Houston's "best man," Jimmy Walker, was also a photographer for Larry Flynt's sexually graphic commercial pornography magazine, Hustler. When I met Byrd after the ceremony at Nashville's Opryland Hotel as ordered, he presented me with a "wedding gift"—a rose patterned crystal crucifix deliberately designed to anchor "our wedding" in my Catholic/Vatican instilled beliefs. The Larry Flynt photos depicting me in my wedding dress with the crystal crucifix to "commemorate our wedding night," was standard lock-in procedure for all mind-controlled slaves I knew who were forced to "marry" their handlers/owners.

Houston's booking agent, Reggie Mac (MacLaughlin), of United Talent and later of MacFadden Agency in Nashville, Tennessee, had been booking CIA involved country music acts into key locations to aid the execution of covert government operations. For example, Houston's ventriloquist act "Alex and Elemer" would be scheduled to perform at a county or state fair near Washington, D.C., where I would be picked up by car or helicopter and escorted to the White House or the Pentagon. The ensuing activities would be compartmentalized in my memory in a manner that caused me to believe 1 had simply been traveling in the country music industry, and no one "back home" would be suspect of my absence. Another example would be that Houston "entertained" at Byrd's West Virginia State Fair every year, which gave a legitimate appearance to my presence there, when in fact I was being prostituted to the Senator I had "married."

During the early '80s, Reggie MacLaughlin primarily booked Houston into areas that were conducive to my mind-control programming with Aquino. I was first subjected to Aquino's tortures and programming in Fort Campbell, Kentucky; Fort McClellen in Anniston, Alabama; and most frequently, at Redstone Arsenal and Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Alabama. Military mind-control was fast, effective, and highly technological, but it was the NASA programming that launched me as a "Presidential Model", Even though Aquino instilled my programming on both military and NASA installations, he had access to the latest technological advancements and techniques through NASA. These included mind foolers such as sensory deprivation tanks, virtual reality, flight simulators, and harmonics. By the age of two, Kelly had already been subjected to Aquino and his programming through these latest technological advancements, which shattered her fragile young mind before her base personality had a chance to form. Rather than use occultism on Kelly, Aquino traumatized her through sexual assault and high voltage tortures of the mind and body. She, like I, to this day carries numerous scars from this "non satanic" abuse base. I know, from years of research, NASA technology and Aquino's programming, combined with the Project Monarch standard sleep, food, and water deprivation and high voltage, made Kelly a subject of state of the art genetically multigenerational MPD/D1D psychological mind-control engineering.

In 1981, Byrd personally joined Aquino in Huntsville, Alabama during one of our programming sessions. NASA cooperated fully with Byrd on any and everything, since it was Byrd's Senate Appropriations Committee that determined how much and/or whether NASA received government funding. I lay naked on the cold metal table, tranced and photographically recording every word and detail of my programming and every word that Byrd and Aquino not so privately discussed. Byrd was providing Aquino with specific details of certain perversions he wanted me equipped to fulfill or perform. Additionally, they talked about scrambling my immediate memory with two private porn films they were arranging to have produced locally. These were titled How To Divide a Personality and How To Create a Sex Slave. These films are the kind NASA became involved in producing for the dual purpose of "scrambling" memory and documenting their mind-controJ procedures. The resident Huntsville, Alabama pornographers were two local cops, one of which was (and is) a Sergeant.[5] This served NASA and the CIA well when cover-up was necessary.

The How To Create a Sex Slave film depicts the common "spin" programming, which in essence is the combination to unlocking or accessing a specific programmed act. For example, the compartment of the mind that holds memory of incest is stimulated to open when the original abuse is eminent. Seeing my father's penis would "trigger" a specific response, supposedly opening the neuron pathways of my brain to allow the part of my brain that dealt with his actions before to deal with them again. With "spin" programming, the trigger of seeing my father's penis is replaced with a combination of specific verbal commands and a specific number of physical spins so that anyone with tbe "combination" could access that particular part of my brain. The part of my mind containing "knowledge" of the original abuse by my father learned to "like" painful, sadistic sex. Senator Byrd wanted me programmed in such a way that he could decide if he wanted me to scream and cry when he whipped me, or if he wanted me to become sexually aroused and "beg" for more. After programming, when I met with Byrd, I would "dance" like a music box dancer, twirling round and round until Byrd's fiddle music stopped. My mind precisely calculated how many revolutions I had made whether I was capable of conscious counting or not (much like a normal person wakes up at a particular time without an alarm clock), and the desired results were produced as accessed.

This is but one simplified example of sex programming, and I was programmed for more than sex. But this particular incident of programming at the U.S. Army Redstone Arsenal would change my existence entirely and set the stage for my role in covert government black, budget-type operations as a "Presidential Model".

Seeing and/or knowing that Kelly was being tortured and programmed proved to be a detriment to my own mind-control programming, such that the common "cross-programming" of mother and daughter was rarely viable. In the fall of 1982, Houston was scheduled to perform at the State Fair in Senator Byrd's home state of West Virginia, Byrd arrived at our hotel with LT. COL. Aquino, who took Kelly with him, supposedly for programming purposes, I was left alone in the hotel room with Byrd, whose KKK affiliation fueled his rage over my having been recently prostituted to black entertainer and CIA operative Charlie Pride. Although I had had no control over the situation to begin with, Byrd expended his fury on me rather than on Houston who was ultimately responsible for the incident. He took out his whip and began beating me as he had so many times before. Only this time it seemed to last forever,

Byrd was still whipping me when Aquino returned with my tranced and traumatized daughter. I regained consciousness enough to pull myself up off the floor when 1 heard Kelly's hysterical cries. Byrd ordered me to the bathroom for a cold shower to stop the bleeding. My body could not carry out his orders, and I collapsed again in the bathroom, smearing blood all over the floor. Kelly's cries again revived me, and I crawled to the door to find Byrd sexually assaulting her and Aquino disrobing to join them. One small window in the bathroom appeared to be a possible means of escape to obtain help, but Byrd caught me and knocked me to the floor. The whole bathroom was smeared in blood by the time he threw me into the shower and turned the cold water on to slow the bleeding.

Later that afternoon, Kelly and I stood hand in hand in the afternoon sun at the State Fair where Senator Byrd was about to make a speech to his. constituents. My blouse stuck to my freshly whipped skin as Byrd walked onto the stage, and the crowd cheered. Although Byrd periodically sexually abused Kelly throughout her Project Monarch victimization, the horrific incident in-West Virginia was the last time 1 was able to instinctively think to respond at all. Aquino's mind-control programming further insured it, as did Byrd's access to high tech mind-control equipment via West Virginia's Jesuit College, where he claimed the role of "Head Friar".[6]

Kelly has reported enduring much sexual abuse by both Byrd and Aquino. Aquino apparently incorporated sexual abuse with his mind-control programming and sex training of her, and shared more such events with Byrd. It was also my experience that Byrd's sexual perversions were heightened when Aquino shared in the assault. Traumatic events such as this one in West Virginia reinforced my own programming through conditioning, and further locked me in to Byrd's seemingly inescapable control.

The majority of my programming, as well as a large part of Kelly's, was again Oz theme based. This means the combination of codes, keys and triggers to access me were related to L. Frank Baum's story, The Wizard Of Oz. Whether or not it was Baum's intention (or for that matter Walt Disney's, Lewis Carroll's, etc.), it is evident that his psychologically intense story was used for manipulating minds. Much of The Wizard Of Oz lends itself to themes commonly used by perpetrators. For example, nearly all MPD/DIDs have suffered the loss of pets during ritualized torture. And all of Baum's primary character Dorothy's nightmarish experiences "over the rainbow in Oz" stemmed from her desire to risk her own life to protect her threatened pet. Abusers use this lesson to condition the victim to drop all resistance and cooperate or "I'll get you, my pretty, and your little dog (or child) too." The "over the rainbow" scramble of dreams vs. reality provides abusers a theme by which to manipulate an MPD's subconscious perception of switching personalities. Oftentimes this theme is transdimensional as is Oz, or that which was just experienced was "just a bad dream" like Dorothy was told upon her awakening in her own bed back in Kansas.

CIA cryptic language is manipulation of the English language such that words have a double meaning (aka 'double binds' in mental health terminology.) It works much the way as communication through "inside jokes", among people familiar with each other. Perhaps this is a reason for the government's use of professional comedians as slave handlers. Since mind-controlled slaves' minds function consciously through their subconscious, which has no way of discerning fantasy from reality or intended meaning from literal meaning, cryptic dual level language is especially effective. Many CIA covert operations I was involved in occurred in public. Anyone who overheard the conversation would have discerned something very different from what actually "trance-spired". For example, one of my Washington, D.C. Secret Service escorts linked arms with me like Dorothy did wiih her companions when walking the Yellow Brick Road. This would have appeared to be normal behavior, or even romantic, to outsiders. But to me it was a signal to "stay the course" (Bush's quote) and follow directions. Arm in arm we walked through the crowded Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian to the nearby NASA headquarters. There he read the "Service Entrance" sign on the door accentuating syllables ever so slightly so that I heard him cryptically command, "Serve-us, En-Trance".

[1] Jimmy Dean is knowledgeable of, and a willing participant in criminal covert activity including the use of mind-controlled slaves.

[2] "Marching to Missouri" is a Mormon based belief that interfaced with the CIA'S FACTION OF THE COUNTRY MUSIC industry being transferred to Branson, Missouri in the mid 1980s.

[3] 120,000-volt stun guns leave two indented prod marks or moles two inches apart, while the cylindrical stun gun USED primarily in the vagina and rectum leaves prod marks/moles 3/4 of an inch apart.. A look into trash-magazine publisher Larry Flint's Hustler will show prod marks on the mind-controlled slaves he photographs, particularly on the throat, near the lips. and on the back.

[4] The "witch's face" has also been referred to as that of a baphomet and Jesuit monk.

[5] I photo identified the Sergeant and his (jailer) officer in 1990, and Mark's and my lives were threatened through then-District Attorney, now U.S. Representative, Bud Cramer (D. Huntsville, Alabama) of the Congressional Permanent Intelligence Committee as a result of this revelation!

[6] To a literal mind-controlled MPD/DID slave, the term "Head Priar" equates to "head frier", meaning high voltage to the brain.

CHAPTER 7

CHARM SCHOOL

After Aquino instilled my base sex programming, I was often taken by Houston to Youngstown, Ohio to attend the sex slave training camp hell hole referred to as "Charm School". Houston often performed in the Youngstown area at county fairs, Fraternal Order of Police shows, or any little country music entertainment gigs that would bring us in the proximity of the dreaded Charm School. On occasion, Kelly would go through the torture process with me. But usually Houston delivered me to the door for training with other CIA and Mafia slaves my age, and then left taking Kelly with him. When Charm School was in session, there were several girls being tortured and trained at once. 1 have seen and known numerous girls to go through Charm School, but, understandably, few are reported to have survived or recovered their minds enough to talk about it.

Charm School was reportedly operated by an identified member of the. Mellon Banking family (Byrd's Endowment for the Arts' largest contributor). The operator took the name and role of "Governor" from the movie My Fair Lady, in an attempt to confuse my torturous reality with movie fantasy. In the movie, Governor is the cockney title given the professor who transformed a female street urchin into a functioning high society lady. Additionally, Mellon's use of the title, Governor, was intended to create scramble for the real Governor who frequented the school as though it were only a whore house. I am referring to then Governor of Pennsylvania (and later U.S. Attorney General, now secretary for the United Nations) Dick Thornburgh.[1] Aquino provided some of the programming at Charm School and everyone I knew in government operations was at least aware of it. Then Youngstown Sheriff, now U.S. Representative Jim Traficant, was usually present. He capitalized on his ability to portray himself as "Lurch" by slowly opening the door and saying, "Walk this way - To a literal slave in training, this means walk like he is walking-like Lurch, Egor, a street whore, Scarecrow, and so on.

Once the door closed behind me. Charm School meant I would be charmed, mesmerized (hypnotized), and programmed to be a high class prostitute for select politicians. I did learn their way to walk, I learned when to talk, how to dress, how to sit, stand, and all the rest. Table manners were not taught as they were not needed since slaves endured food and water deprivation when working. Above all, we were taught how to gratify any sexual perversion. Just as Traficant opened the door to Charm School for slaves, he oftentimes was the one to "test" their newly learned sexual skills to determine when or if slaves could leave.

A typical three-day course at Charm School included the usual factors of, sleep, food, and water deprivation; trauma; high voltage; and programming. Often times experimental or tried and proven CIA manufactured "designer" drugs were administered which produced specific brain wave activity to maximize and/or compartmentalize programs. I usually spent the first day hanging in the dungeon. Charm School is housed in an identified stone historical railroad barren's former residence, and the basement was in fact a wine cellar dungeon. It was dark, damp, and musty and was decorated in classic torture chamber fashion. It was complete with various hanging chains, a stretching rack, whips, and altars including one specially designed for bestiality sex. As I hung by my wrists, I could hear and smell the animals in the next cells—a black Nubian goat called Satan, a small donkey named Nester, sometimes a small white pony referred to as Trigger, and various dogs, cats, snakes, and others. All Charm School animals were trained to sexually respond to the smell of urine. When someone, such as Dick Thornburgh who particularly enjoyed this kind of kink, entered my cell and urinated on me, I knew I would soon be released from my chains and led to the animal altar for bestiality lessons, pornography, or to please a perverse onlooker. I was hung by my ankles, stretched on a rack, burned, and tortured repeatedly. My feet and hands were chained to a wall for what was termed "off the wall sex." I was taught "Silence" in Oz fashion since screaming did not produce results anyway unless they wanted it for pornography. This was implemented with an electronic canine bark collar normally used to train a dog not to bark.

I was repeatedly filmed pornographically, and always taken upstairs to the "Master's Chambers" for prostitution to participants, including the real "Governor" of Charm School, then Pennsylvania Governor Dick Thomburgh, Congressman Jim Traficant,[2] Lt. Col. Michael Aquino, and others. When Kelly was with me, she endured the same and we were forced to see each other physically tortured as further psychological trauma. This was to ensure I could never remember the who, what, when, or where of our bizarre enslavement. This is what is sometimes referred to as cross-programming.

In spite of the deliberately created amnesic blocks, I developed a sub-conscious sympathetic understanding for other Charm School slaves that extended outside the walls of this man-made hell. This understanding emanated from the depths of my being, creating a compassion for other mind-control victims that compels me to give voice to their silent pleas for help to this day.

I became close friends with one such victim, who must remain anonymous in order to survive to eventually recover. This beautiful blonde and I had numerous opportunities to be together throughout the years, as Houston's government sponsored travels routinely took him into her home state of Pennsylvania while Dick Thomburgh was Governor.

My friend and I were photographed together for Larry Flynt's commercial pornography publications, and featured in the illicit films that contributed to funding CIA covert operations. In addition to this, she and I were able to spend two weeks together when her husband/handler traveled to Houston's farm in Tennessee for instructions on handling his new "bride".

I was "made of honor" for my friend's "wedding," which was no more a marriage than mine to Houston. As was customary with Project Monarch slaves, her marriage to her handler equated to marriage to her mind-control owner, U.S. Senator Arlen Spector.

The "wedding" I was forced to participate in was for pornography purposes only, and it took place in Arlen Spector's Conneaut Lake house in Pennsylvania.

Spector's stone house was located in a wooded, remote setting and was masculine in decor. Side rooms were either designated for perverse sex or were furnished with antiquated NASA virtual reality and programming equipment. The musty smell of Spector's playhouse was overpowered by the scent of roses, which he symbolically presented to his slave on their "wedding" day.

My friend's "wedding" photos included Catholic themes, and the crucifix featured was rose cut crystal similar to the one I received from Byrd, Regardless of how this girl was depicted, her innate morality was apparent to me. She and I were referred to as "minor/mere cats," due to the similarity of our victimizations. Like me, she was controlled through manipulation of her religious beliefs and maternal instincts. The delicate rose tattooed on her left wrist signifying her role in government operations did not detract from her high class projection any more than Spector's immorality could mar her innate goodness. Once Arlen Spector officially became this slave's owner, her Charm School status rose to "Presidential Model".

In addition to Charm School, 1 endured extensive programming to prepare me for future operations. Houston was often booked into Oklahoma fairs, Masonic Lodges, F.O.P. Conventions, and so on, in order that 1 be back in the vicinity of Tinker Air Force Base for further programming. My Tinker-Belle conditioning further enhanced my photographic memory through direct control for receiving and delivering government messages which amounted to a computerized compartmentalization of my brain, so to speak. I was also trained in covert criminal operations, such as international drug mule transactions for funding the Pentagon's and CIA's Black Ops Budgets, Houston's CIA orchestrated travels in the country music industry led me to a TOP SECRET military/NASA installation at Offit Air Force Base in Nebraska. The "you can run, but you can't hide"[3] conditioning was deeply ingrained in my mind there through a technique that was later used on Kelly, as well as on other mind-control slaves, I was taken underground to a so-called 'secret' circular room where the walls were covered with numerous screens showing satellite pictures from around the world. These satellites are referred to as the "Eye in the Sky". An Air Force official explained to me that my every move "could be monitored via satellite". On a separate four-screen viewer, he demonstrated what in retrospect was a contrived pre-recorded slide show, with the scenes changing as rapidly as he spoke and typed it into the computer.

"Where will you run?" he asked me. "To the Arctic? The Antarctic? Brazil? The mountains? The desert? The prairies? The hills of Afghanistan? The city of Kabul? Devil's Tower (Wyoming)? Would you try to run to Cuba and live among our enemies? We can find you there. There is truly no place to run and no place to hide. The U.S. Senate (the picture was of Byrd)? The White House? Or to your own backyard? (My father was depicted waving from his front door, cupping his hands over his mouth saying, "come back" just like Aunt Em in The Wizard Of Oz.) "The moon? We got you covered. You can run, but you can't hide." This had been sufficient to convince me in my suggestible stale that my every move could be monitored.

During the course of my training/conditioning, I was routinely prostituted to Senator Byrd in Washington, D.C., at the West Virginia State Fair, NASA in Huntsville, Alabama, and at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, Tennessee. One such night when 1 was to be prostituted to Byrd at Opryland Hotel, Lt. Colonel Aquino was scheduled to join him in perversely assaulting me. Much to my horror, Aquino arrived early, in full army dress uniform, backstage at the Grand Ol' Opry. When I saw Aquino talking with the Vatican based Project Monarch slave runner, Kris Kristopherson,[4] whom I had known since 1979, my personality programmed for Opry events "short circuited". Under circumstances such as this, a multiple without programming would have switched personalities autogenically, whereas I could only switch upon command, I backed away, dazed, right into a soft drink machine. Kristopherson saw me as 1 backed further between the wall and the machine.

"What are you doing in there, little lady?" Kristopherson asked. The Colonel wants to see you,"

Aquino had walked over and sarcastically asked, "What are you doing in those machine wires? That could very well be a shocking experience for you." All experiences with Aquino or Kristopherson resulted in high voltage electric shock torture, and apparently neither had any regard for human life.[5] Aquino used the opportunity to reinforce his belief that I "had no where to run, no where to hide" from his "power"- his stun gun.

While I untangled myself from the wires, Kristopherson and Aquino continued their banter at my expense, Kristopherson held up his key ring and jingled it, catching my undivided attention as conditioned, while he told Aquino, "You're gonna need the Keys to the Kingdom to work with this one right here."

"Keys to the Kingdom," of course, referred to my previously instilled (Enter/Inter)"Inner-dimensional" Catholic programmed personalities. Since Aquino was my primary mind-control programmer at the time, Kristopherson was informing Aquino of programs previously instilled in childhood via the "Rite to Remain Silent". By jingling the keys, he was demonstrating his control over me and his momentary edge on Aquino.

"I got 'em," Kristopherson was saying as he jingled the keys. "She's mine unless you wanna play ball. Besides, you have to. The Byrd sent me."

"I've been expecting you," Aquino said with a smile. Events later that night proved that Aquino had been supplied the keys to my previously established Jesuit based programming, which he and Byrd used and altered to suit their own perversions.

Byrd monitored all of my programming "progress," and often tortured me with his whip and pocketknife. He picked up where my mother left off, to destroy any self-esteem I might have inadvertently developed. He said, "There is no place for you to turn because if you could think to talk no one would ever believe I would have anything to do with the likes of you." He often threatened me that I was considered "disposable" because, after all, "The first Presidential Model, Marilyn Monroe, was killed right in front of the public eye and no one knew what happened."

Byrd's threats and cruelty were unnecessary as I could no longer think to seek help anyway, but he loved to hear himself talk and would often drone on and on and on in his infamous long-winded recitations, while I was photographically recording every word he said. He detailed the inner operational structure of the world domination effort, including psychological warfare strategies, and explained how he had and would utilize his "expert" knowledge of the Constitution to manipulate it and the so-called U.S. Justice System, and more. His loose lips provided me yet another means of surviving and staying a step ahead of "the game" once Kelly and I were rescued from our mind-con trolled existence.

Senator Byrd revealed his "justifications" for criminal activity to me as well. He used me as a sounding board even though he knew 1 was incapable of input or response. He rehearsed in keeping with his motto "The only way we can fail, is to fail to think of an excuse."

Byrd "justified" mind-control atrocities as a means of thrusting mankind into accelerated evolution, according to the Neo-Nazi principles to which he adhered. He "justified" manipulating mankind's religion to bring about the prophesied biblical "world peace" through the "only means available"—total mind control in the New World Order "After all," he proclaimed, "even the Pope and Mormon Prophet know this is the only way to peace and they cooperate fully with The Project."

Byrd also "justified" my victimization by saying, "You lost your mind anyway, and at least you have destiny and purpose now that it's mine." Our country's involvement in drug distribution, pornography, and white slavery was justified" as a means of "gaining control of all illegal activities world wide" to fund Black Budget covert activity that would "bring about world peace through world dominance and total control". He adhered to the belief that "95% of the (world's) people WANT to be led by the 5%", and claimed this can be proven because "the 95% DO NOT WANT TO KNOW what really goes on in government". Byrd believed that in order for this world to survive, mankind must take a "giant step in evolution through creating a superior race". To create this "superior race," Byrd believed in the Nazi and KKK principles of "annihilation of underprivileged races and cultures" through genocide, to alter genetics and breed "the more gifted-the blondes of this world".

As Byrd's captive audience (literally), I absorbed information that the other so-called masterminds behind the New World Order would never have revealed for security reasons. But Byrd regarded me as "his" object, a game-piece that he could strategically move through life as though he were playing a chess game. He perceived me as totally under his control with no possibility of my ever being rescued, surviving, and recovering my mind and memory. Byrd likely would have talked to a post, and I filled the role as his silent sounding board.

My CIA Operative mind-control handler, Alex Houston was often scheduled to perform at the Swiss Villa Amphitheatre in Lampe, Missouri, which is yet another installation where 1 was programmed. Swiss Villa was a cover for a CIA Near Death Trauma Center of which there are several across the country. It is a remote, high security resort, enclosed with military barbed wire fences, that swings its guarded gate open to the local public for country music concerts. The small Amphitheatre covers the covert activities occurring inside, which includes U.S. Government CIA cocaine and heroin distribution operations and mind-control projects.

Swiss Villa, like the Mount Shasta, California compound, was also used as a training and operations camp for the Shadow Government's paramilitary projects referred to by Senator Tnouye (D. HI). I learned that this not-so-secret military buildup, sanctioned by corrupt members of our government, consisted of special forces trained robotic soldiers, numerous black unmarked helicopters, and the highest technological advancements in TOP SECRET weaponry and "Star Wars" electro magnetic mind-control equipment. These paramilitary compounds were intended for global policing of the New World Order through the Multi-Jurisdictional Police Force.

"A Most Dangerous Game" was often played at Swiss Villa and involved CIA agents, politicians, and others who would attend the resort just for the sport of hunting humans. Kelly and I both were hunted at Swiss Villa. The tortures and rape after being caught were extensive and sufficiently traumatized our minds for ensuing programming, as well as for creating memory compartmentalization for the high level operations we witnessed behind the villa's patrolled fences. It was at Swiss Villa that I was taught "THE Most Dangerous Game" was one where a slave tried to escape and reveal what he or she had learned. If the hunters could not catch and stop the slave, then the black helicopters patrolling the area would. And if all else failed, the "Eye in the Sky" would locate him or her, and a torturous death was supposedly imminent.

According to my abusers, my deprograminer and primary advocate Mark Phillips and I have embarked on "THE Most Dangerous Game" through efforts such as releasing this book and turning a spotlight on the Shadow Government to reveal its members' identities and their crimes against humanity, Mark Phillips and I are determined to beat them at their own "game" by arming the "95%" with the truth that perpetrators "don't want them to know!"

---

[1] Dick Thomburgh is listed in Houston's CIA memo book which is now in my (and others') possession.

[2] Please note that, while still Sheriff of Youngstown, Ohio, Traficant wis investigated and subsequently indicted for federal racketeering, drug distribution, and Mafia connections. However, he was acquitted through careful CIA jury manipulation and he went on to become the U.S. Representative he is to this date.

[3] Once gaining "eyes to see and ears to hear," this "you can run, but you can't hide" theme is so widely used it is visible from Hallmark greeting cards to Interstate overpasses to the lock-in song by the rock group, Police's "I'll Be Watching You".

[4] A good friend of mine who remains a victim to date was "married" to Kristopherson on the night she wed her mind-control handler-much the way I had "married" Byrd when I wed Houston. The crucifix used to her Larry Flynt "wedding night" porn photos was mirrored rather than crystal.

[5] Kristopherson nearly strangled me to death with his penis, which had further sexually excited him, late in the summer of 1987 during another incident related to Byrd.

CHAPTER 8

CIA'S WAR ON DRUGS OPERATION: ELIMINATING COMPETITION

I no longer had any mind of my own. I was absolutely void of free will and was now totally robotic. So was Kelly, We wore our Charm School smile at all times, and did exactly what we were told to do. The only characteristic noticeably out of place was Kelly's age-inappropriate programmed vocabulary and mannerisms. Outsiders attributed this to her traveling within the country music industry. My public image was a programmed personality that always smiled, looked and talked like the proverbial "air-head" blonde that kept outsiders away by socializing only within my controlled environment. This lifestyle appeared quite normal for my role as Houston's much younger "wife" in the country music industry.

When we were not traveling, I began each day at 4:00 A.M. with a minimum of 2 hours aerobic exercise. Afterward, I tended farm animals and did other chores, then cooked Houston a large country breakfast which neither Kelly or I were permitted to share. Houston would then order me to work to exhaustion on his 100-acre farm while he watched. These chores included hauling, stacking, and feeding out hundreds of bales of hay to our livestock each year; maintaining miles of electric fencing; cutting acres of grass with a push mower an average of twice weekly; busting concrete with a sledge hammer and mixing and pouring new cement; digging by hand and maintaining a two acre vegetable garden for canning; cutting, hauling, and slacking firewood for Houston, his neighbors, and friends; shoveling pick-up truck loads of creek gravel to fill in enormous potholes in the gravel road leading to 11 rural residences including Jack Greene's; and anything else Houston could think of that would wear me down. Houston's exhaustive, slave-driving work orders made my father's seem benevolent in comparison. The "best" of days were rough.

I ate "like a bird (Byrd)," following Byrd's orders of 300 calories per day-with no sugar or caffeine. My metabolism was low. I was trained to compute calories like a machine, eating more like a rabbit than a "bird", I had to count every calorie, from a simple taste of what I had to cook for Houston to semen. Houston ensured thai Kelly and I never got more than two consecutive hours of deep per night. He accomplished this through automatic mental "alarm clocks" that woke us up at two- hour intervals-Kelly with asthma, and me with panic. These tactics contributed to Kelly's and my total inability to resist mind control. Traveling in the country music industry was no easier than existing on Houston's farm in Tennessee. It certainly lacked the glamour that outsiders usually associate with entertainment industries. CIA covert drug operations had permeated the industry. Entertainers were used to buy, sell, and distribute cocaine brought into this country by the U.S. government for the purpose of funding the Pentagon's and CIA's Black Budgets. Nashville's local government, from my perspective, was totally corrupted by these criminal covert operations. Cover-up, murder, drugs, and white slavery prevailed. Entertainers usually made n big only when they participated in CIA operations and/or were slaves themselves. I know of numerous entertainers in need of rescue and deprogramming from their mind-controlled existence, because it was discovered that voices could be harmonically tuned through mind control to captivate audiences. To quote my father, "Spies, like singers and actors, are made, not born". These entertainers have endured much of the same programming as I to permit them to carry out government operations in the course of their travels.

Norwegian Caribbean Lines (NCL) cruise ships depart regularly from Miami, Florida and travel throughout the Caribbean and Mexico. NCL provides pleasure cruises to the public complete with "entertainment" like that of Alex Houston while carrying out CIA operations. Sue Carper, former director of entertainment procurement for all NCL cruise ships, would ensure that government covert activities staging were properly orchestrated. She rotated entertainers like Houston from ship to ship in order to avoid the scrutiny of clean U.S. Customs and Immigrations inspectors. I routinely took cruises with Houston, muling cocaine and/or heroin out of Haiti, the Bahamas, Mexico, the Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico to fund covert operations. While I was robotically carrying out transactions as ordered, I was also prostituted to South and Central American drug lords and politicians, as well as filmed pornographically. Houston made sure I was in the right place at the right time and switched me into the proper mode for each activity I was forced to carry out. In the early 1980s, this included passing messages to and from Senator Byrd, Baby Doc Duvalier, my Cuban contact, Puerto Rican drug lord Jose Busto, and others.

In keeping with NCL's Caribbean operations, Byrd adjusted his use of programming themes to include the mirror-reversal, interdimensional, Air-Water mind-control theme used on me by NASA and the Jesuits. I often saw dolphins playing in the ocean while being transported from port to port via the Cruise ships, but the popular "whales and dolphins" mind-control theme was avoided in favor of a theme more suitable to my experience-that of the Sea-Bird-Robert C. (Sea) Byrd. He told me, "Atlantis[1] has long been the epicenter of alien activity. The path is so well warn that there are holes in the fabric of time and space whereby airplanes and ships, even people, timelessly seemingly disappear, transformed into another dimension alien to this world. Likewise, we (aliens) came in, entering through the mirror reflection of the hole in the fabric of space, the deep blue sea. Some of us entered Earth's plane as whales and dolphins. And when we emerged from the sea, some of us came flying out. Or is that in? At any rate, we are here. Watch for the flying fish when you are out to see/sea. When you see one, you will know it is kin to me. A flying fish by any other name is a C. Byrd. A sea bird. Robert C. Byrd."

The drug business was booming for the CIA, and the only "War on Drugs" I witnessed was that launched by the CIA against its competition. As quickly as 1 brought the NCL suitcases of drugs into the Port of Miami, they were usually transferred to Houston's factory custom-built Holiday Rambler motor home. Concealed compartments were built into the walls for hiding the illegal drugs. If I drove the drug-filled motor home on to Nashville rather than deposit the drugs en route at Warner-Robbins Air Force Base in Macon, Georgia, the bulk was stored in the Hendersonvilie Mormon "food storage" Bishop's Warehouse. Some cocaine was delivered to a music distributor in Nashville, Tennessee, where it was carefully packaged in participating entertainers' cassettes, for delivery along their carefully scheduled travel routes. Houston always kept a large amount of the cocaine for his own use and distribution. Oftentimes he ordered that I deliver the drugs to specific entertainers at the Grand Ole Opry and/or at the local shopping mail when we were not traveling. Most often, however, the larger loads of drugs remained concealed in the motor home for distribution to CIA drug drops while we traveled the country music industry. These CIA drug drops included an abandoned amusement park near Youngstown, Ohio; Diamond Caverns[2] campground in Park City, Kentucky; and Swiss Villa Amphitheatre in Lampe, Missouri. I was aware that tons of drugs were being handled via our military, but the hundreds of pounds I muled were targeted for exclusive private distribution.

An example of a typical Caribbean drug operation centered around the NCL port of call. Key West, Florida. Houston took Kelly and me to a nearby tennis court under the guise of playing tennis. In reality, I was to meet with CIA Operative Jimmy Buffett, who devoted more time to the proliferation of CIA criminal covert activity than he did to his music career cover. Buffett was playing tennis. Referring to him as though he were to be my tennis instructor, Houston said, "There's your instructor. As soon as he gathers the balls, he should be over here to meet you."

Noticing us, Buffett strode over and shook hands with Houston. "Hi, Jimmy/ Houston said as though they were old buddies.

"Hi, Alex and Elemer," Buffett responded, sarcastically using Houston's stage name.

"Oh," Houston said. Never one to know an insult when he heard it, he continued, "What do your friends call you?"

"What does it malter to you?" Buffett asked. "Uncle calls me Jim. I take it you're not the contact,"

Houston pointed to me, "She is".

"That's more like it," Buffett smiled. "A little Byrd told me I'd be meeting with a Diamond in the Rough."[3]

"I prefer a Diamond in the Buff," he said, "I've got a studio across the street."

As we walked toward his studio, I was oblivious to the meaning behind his conversation. with Houston and commented, "I understand you're an instructor. I wish I had brought my racquet."

"I'm not that kind of an instructor," Buffett explained, "I'm a point man for Uncle. And you've got an appointment with me. I have some instructions to give you." As we entered his studio, he said, "Welcome to paradise," and gestured me in. We went into the small living quarters, which may have appeared even smaller due to the electronic equipment, acoustic guitars, and furniture that filled the room. A black mirrored coffee table, atypical of cocaine users I'd known, was the clearest spot in the room, A gold razor blade, cocaine residue, an ashtray full of marijuana roaches, and a fanned deck of card with the queen of hearts on top lay on the table. Tropical plants further cluttered the room. Standing between a perched, stuffed parrot and a banana tree, Buffett was saying, "Key West is a key place to be. It's the key to the Caribbean - Cuba, Panama - anyplace that means anything to Uncle these days, I hold the keys. I'm keeper of the keys and I hold a few of yours." Looking at his parrot, he continued, "The bird/Byrd says you respond to pair-o-dice, look deep into the parrot eyes."

I did as instructed, and Buffett popped out the bird's ruby red eyes, which actually were dice, into his hand. "Roll your eyes high while I roll my pair-o-dice," he ordered as he rolled the dice across the table. Stopping at the deck of cards, he picked up the jack of diamonds. "I am a jack of all trades," he cryptically continued. "And I trade in whatever Uncle orders. An order has been placed. You must follow orders and go to that place. Go to the White House Inn at the pier. Carry your laundry bag (full of cash) with you, and see the man in black. (My Cuban contact almost always wore a conspicuous black trench coat.) There is a launderman on the dock itself. They do all my laundering for me, and will be expecting you. Watch for the sea-man with the duffel bag. When you see the military green duffel bag, approach the desk. When he says, "I need this laundered, but I do not have the time," you say, "Welcome to Paradise. I will make sure it is cleaned and delivered on time." Then give him your duffel bag of 'laundry' and say, "This has been properly laundered for you". Take the duffel bag. It will be light as a feather. Return to the Inn and enjoy the buffet."

Changing modes, Buffett unzipped his shorts as he asked, "Do you like a buffet? I have a Buffett buffet for you now. And if is Paradise!"

I carried out the drug transaction as ordered, the whole ordeal lasting a matter of minutes. A buffet was spread in the courtyard of the White House Inn at 4:00 PM just as Buffett said it would be. But due to the food and water deprivation necessary to maintaining my mind-controlled trance, Houston forbid me from carrying out this last part of Buffett's instructions,

Alex Houston Enterprises was another side business that Houston used to cover for his CIA criminal covert activities. It included the relabelling of G.E, capacitors for the "energy savings" companies, Queen Electric and Phase Liner, he shared with his former wife and first CIA mind-controlled slave. She was a Catholic processed Puerto Rican blonde beauty. These G.E. capacitor banks were sold internationally as energy saving devices, when in fact they provided one more means of transporting drugs from the U.S. around the world.

It was Houston's G.E. capacitor scam that provided me insight into the elaborate Long Island docks drug network run by U.S. Congressman Gary Ackerman (D. NY).[4] I first met Ackerman in 1981 when Houston was booked into the Woodberry Music Festival with known CIA mind-control victim Loretta Lynn.[5] Lorctta's road manager, Neo-Nazi pedophile Ken Riley, who was also Alex Houston's best friend, often assisted Houston in handling me. Riley in turn handed my Charm School programmed keys, codes, and triggers to Congressman Ackerman, who skillfully accessed my Alice In Wonderland mirror theme programming. After snorting a couple of lines of coke, he stepped into the center of a three way mirror where he positioned me and proceeded to sexually gratify himself in my throat. Ken Riley, and other involved members of Loretta's band, all laughed as Ackerman stumbled around the room while pulling his pants up from around his ankles and complaining that he "couldn't stand for sex like that". The term "Ackerman syndrome" was coined after that in reference to sex that drained a man of his energy, and circulated among "those who know" for years.

[1] NCL cruise ships routinely pass through the so-called "Bermuda Triangle," and Byrd did not miss this opportunity to tap into old programming base installed by Senator L. Bennet Johnston.

[2] When Mark and 1 turned in detailed information on this drug drop to law enforcement, our lives were endangered to the point that a foreign Intelligence officer intervened and subsequently saved our lives through a timely tip-off.

[3] "Diamond in the Rough" was a term used to describe an MPD/DID slave actively engaged in programming via torture conditioning.

[4] Congressman Ackerman's Caribbean cocaine and Asian heroin operations have not hindered his position on the Congressional Post Office and Civil Service Committees, nor the Asian and Pacific Affairs Committee. It is important to note that, as a matter of Congressional record, Ackerman openly opposed compulsory drug tests for all federal employees.

[5] Senator Byrd proudly claimed Loretta as his mind-controlled slave and told me, "I literally made Loretta what she is today, and she is maid to order". Loretta's son and secondary mind-control handler, Ernest Ray, told me, "I know what the Byrd did to my mother. I can get away with murder... All I gotta do is call him and I'm free as a bird/Byrd."

CHAPTER 9

RONALD REAGAN'S AMERICAN DREAM: A PANDORA'S BOX OF NIGHTMARES

My mind-controlled existence became more complicated after Senator Byrd introduced me to then President Ronald Reagan in the fall of 1982[1] at a White House political party. Byrd told me, "When you meet the Chief, imagine him with his pants down. He's most comfortable knowing you are imagining him with his pants down. He doesn't want formality." Former president Ford had conditioned me to dread the Office of President, and I mechanically went through the motions of meeting Reagan, Reagan admittedly had seen the How To Divide a Personality and How so Create a Sex Slave videos made in Huntsville, Alabama. He acted very pleased with me as though I had participated in them willingly. Within the first few minutes of meeting Reagan, he was giving me acting tips to utilize in government operations and pornography!! "When you become your part, your performance increases, which in turn increases your ability to do your part—for your country. 'Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask what you can do for your country'-your part," he instructed. Somehow, Reagan's reminder of Ford's and VanderJagt's conditioning to Kennedy's quote seemed more patriotically significant than "simply" sexually entertaining politicians by waving a flag in my bottom. After gazing deep into his self-professed "kaleidoscope eyes," each metaphorical phrase he spoke became life and breath to me.

Reagan explained to me that the illegal CIA covert activities I was forced to participate in were "justified" as they funded covert activities in Afghanistan and Nicaragua. He explained, "America's Freedom Train is spanning the globe and sex is but a sidetrack to the ultimate course of freedom. Our job of procuring and transporting arms is the most difficult part of all. But it can and must be done. How can a man with no arms fight? These operations are necessary as American people raise too much hell about violence already, and it is better they're not informed of our supporting wars they cannot understand the significance of."

I realize now that Reagan twisted reality to fit his personal perceptions rather than to adhere to Byrd's philosophy of providing "excuses" for what he deemed "the order of things". In typical Reagan fashion, he did not perceive mind control as slavery, but as "an opportunity for those who otherwise would have nothing in life". He claimed that multigenerational incestuously abused children like myself, or "previously impoverished baseball players from third world countries and slums, are provided an opportunity to 'be all they can be' through making a 'contra-bution' to society, our nation, and the world, by utilizing their talents to maximum potential." With this altitude, Reagan displayed pride in the sick role he played as The Wizard Of Oz, directing Project Monarch slaves like myself.

That night. Senator Byrd acted in the capacity of a pimp and prostituted me to Reagan. Referring to me as though I were a machine, Reagan asked Byrd, "Does she run on chemicals?" meaning specific CIA drugs.

Byrd answered, "She takes it in spurts". 1 noticed that Reagan's eyes lit up with perversion and understanding of Byrd's statement, which meant that I "shared" whatever drugs were in his system through his urine. Reagan later told me he preferred sex slaves equipped for this task since he, as President, should not have to get up in the night to urinate,

"Well," Reagan said, holding up his glass, "All I've had to fuel her with is alcohol. That's not much of a jolt from a "whiz of a Wiz(ard)." Byrd chuckled at Reagan's Oz cryptic joke and removed his gold cocaine vial from the inner pocket of his suit. He and Reagan discretely turned their backs to the party while Byrd "spoon fed" Reagan the drug up his nose.

Before I left with Reagan, Byrd informed me that "Uncle Ronnie doesn't sleep with his mommy (Nancy)," and that he preferred snuggling into his LL Bean, light blue flannel sheets in his nightshirt and ridiculous nightcap because "they're warmer, softer, more comfortable, and don't snore".

Later, in his bedroom, Reagan accessed my sexual programming, and I became "my part" as a prostitute to "Uncle Ronnie". Reagan did not move during sex. After all, that was "my duty". And my duty was to please him, whatever it took, and it took more time than anything. Reagan never hurt me (he always made sure someone else did that) and used this as a "bond" to the little child ("Kitten") personality he always accessed for sex. Reagan's most apparent personality kink was his love for bestiality pornography.[2] According to my handlers, his passion for pornography escalated its manufacture and distribution during his Administration. He wholeheartedly approved and encouraged the porn industry for funding covert activity.

Many commercial and instructional (private) pornography films I and others participated in, referred to as "Uncle Ronnie's Bedtime Stories," were manufactured solely for his pleasure-oftentimes according to his instruction, using Freedom Train slaves. After my initial meeting with Reagan, I was used in numerous films that were produced predominantly at Youngstown Charm School and/or by his "Chief Pornographer"[3] Michael Dante, specifically to satisfy his perversions. These included a wide range of cryptic themes, but were mostly bestiality. Reagan often watched the videos while I was prostituted to him, requiring me to re-enact the porn however possible.

I first met Reagan's Chief Pornographer Michael Dante, AKA Michael Viti, at an elite Nashville hotel where he was attending "charity" Golf Tournament festivities. Like CIA Operative Charlie Pride's Pro-Am Golf Tournamenl in Albuquerque, New Mexico, this "charity" tournament provided a cover for the cocaine and white slavery operations that dominated the event. Houston and I often attended such "charity" events, as did Dante, but it was only after having met Reagan that Dante's and my paths crossed as arranged.

Dante took me to his hotel room after our initial introduction. He snorted a few lines of coke, looked me over as though 1 were merchandise, and accessed my sex programming. He then arrogantly asked me if I knew who he was. He told me he lived in Beverly Hills, California and made movies. I thought he was referring to his box office flop, Winterhawk, until he said, "Uncle Ronnie sent me. He wants me to make movies with you as your 'contra-bution.' We're gonna have a good time, then he's gonna have a good time, and everybody's happy. You'll like that, won't you Baby? Get dressed. We're going back downstairs and make arrangements."

Dante telephoned me often, professing "our love" through command reinforcements and making arrangements to meet me in specific places for producing Uncle Ronnie's Bedtime Stories and commercial porn. These locations included, among others, Tennessee, Florida, the Caribbean, and California. He often talked of owning me in the future, painting a picture of what life would be like living with him. His attitude toward women was atypical of slave owners and handlers, and he often quoted scripture to justify his dominance. "No arguments," "speak only when spoken to," "take a good beating now and then just to keep you in line," "see to all my comforts and housework," and "be on call 24 hours a day when I need a good whore". He gave me a slave bracelet—a trademark of his porn—and said, "A woman needs a chain. It's a public reminder of total commitment and devotion. A reminder of the chain-of-command. A woman is tied to her man. No man should be tied to a woman."

Dante's Connecticut Italian roots are in the Mafia, and it was a well-established fact that organized crime and government had a close working relationship where criminal covert activities were concerned, I met many of Dante's associates, and we already shared a few common contacts who were conduits between the Mafia and CIA. These included Congressman Guy VanderJagt, former President Gerald Ford, then Governor of Pennsylvania Dick Thornburgh, Congressman Jim Traficant, Congressman Gary Ackerman, and Ronald Reagan.

Dame related to me, "When Reagan was Governor (of California), we went to Dodger (baseball) games together and sat in the Press Box. I got to know him real well and we got along. So, he and Tommy (LaSorda, Dodger manager and their mutual friend) and I would continue partying after the game. I brought him a few girls (slaves) and we did business. Really. Tommy LaSorda brought us together-you'll like him. I'll take you to meet him. We'll go to games together all the time, every chance we get. You'll love that, won't you, Baby? You like a Press Box, Baby? Dick says you do." I wasn't surprised that Dick Thornburgh had talked about his previous, perverse sexual activity with me at a baseball game back East any more than I was surprised to learn that Dante knew Thornburgh through their mutual political and baseball ties.

Dick Thomburgh was Governor of Pennsylvania during my tenure as a Presidential Model mind-controlled slave. He used his influence to bring Houston into Pennsylvania state and county fairs year after year for the purposes of cocaine and pornography distribution, as well as for prostitution of me to him on a regular basis. Thornburgh was a heavy cocaine user, and was deeply involved in CIA covert activities-particularly Project Monarch. He was a firm believer in mind control, not only for sex training and government operations, but for sports. An avid baseball fan, Thornburgh had much to share with Reagan, Dante and LaSorda,

I had been giving Handwriting Analysis lectures on NCL's Norway cruise ship (my cover for covert operation) in 1987, and Thornburgh and his friend Chicago Cubs Baseball Scout Jim Zerilla were in attendance. Afterward, Zerilla offered me a job with the Baseball Commission analyzing handwriting of their "million dollar babies" baseball players before they were signed up. Thomburgh explained that the job may not fit into my schedule. Nevertheless, we met on several occasions during the course of the cruise, always for sex, but business was discussed as well.

My programmed mind contained a "baseball computer" that was created for Reagan, and used by many including Thornburgh. LaSorda, Dante", and Zerilla. It was packed with the binds of statistics in which they were interested; the codes, keys, triggers and hand signals of certain mind-controlled baseball players. Zerilla and Thomburgh were cruising en route to the Dominican Republic to the CIA baseball mind-control farm to scout out new slaves. They talked excitedly about the prospect of winning large sums of money through gambling on rigged games. I had been aware for years that many pro players, particularly LaSorda's Dodgers, were mind-controlled and triggered to win or lose according to their owners' bets and favors. The Dodgers, Reagan's "favorite American pastime" ball team continuously won, including the World Series during his Administration. The Mafia was in on the bet rigging, and information was passed to certain ones through Thornburgh and others as gleaned from my "baseball computer" programming.[4]

To this day I am not certain who instigated the plastic surgery to which I was forcibly subjected, but soon after meeting Reagan and Dante I was scheduled for breast implants. Perhaps it was done for pornography. Perhaps it was Reagan's preference. I tend to believe it was a combination of the two and ordered since my breasts were no longer lactating. In the first commercial porn film Reagan had directed Dante to produce in St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands my breasts were still tender and swollen from silicone implant surgery.

My appearance was not the only "make over" I endured after meeting Reagan. Aquino and I were called to Washington, D.C. to revise my base core programming to override Senator Byrd's control for security reasons. Since Reagan had been shot, he took extra precautions to ensure his safety which included directing Aquino as to how he wanted rne programmed. Much to Aquino's dismay and embarrassment, Reagan admired the occult role that this Army Lt. Colonel played for mind-control traumatization purposes, as it fit in with the public promotion of religion Reagan had launched. Reagan claimed to believe that the masses were easiest to manipulate through their religion, as were mind-controlled slaves like myself.

While Reagan had Aquino in D.C., he demanded that he wear his black ritual robes to a White House party to reinforce the controlling superstitions of a few South/Central American diplomats. Aquino appeared foolish in the eyes of his peers. They knew Aquino's image was only a guise for Psychological Warfare, but his appearance at the White House in costume made Aquino look like he believed his own facade. Aquino got even with Reagan. Minutes before I was prostituted to Reagan that evening, Aquino ordered me into a closed side room where he very quickly had intercourse with me. When he finished ejaculating, he slapped me on the behind and disrespectfully said, "Take that to the Chief.

Earlier that day, Reagan instructed Aquino how to program me in keeping with "spin" programming depicted in the "How to" videos. "Program it," Reagan said, referring to me as though I were an object, "under number one. I like the number one. It's the first, the best, and it promotes confidence—like 'I've won'," I observed Aquino giving him the intellectually disgusted look he reserved for anyone with the fortitude to make a suggestion to him, but tempered his reaction by giving some thought to the request. Since the "How to" videos showed the 6th revolution to "ignite the heat of hell" for sex, no one would suspect I had sex programming under the first revolution. It would take some modification of my initial programming, but Aquino was sold on the idea. By programming me according to Reagan's instruction, Aquino would be able to provide added protection for Reagan whereby any program I was under at the time would immediately become replaced by Reagan's number one as quickly as I saw him. This effective safety measure infuriated Byrd the first time he saw me instantaneously switch out of his control in Reagan's presence.

Additionally, Reagan discussed how Aquino could use me on various military and government installations to provide "Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations" of the "latest advancements in training" by displaying the diversity of my "Presidential Model" programming. Reagan said the Hands On Demonstrations could "educate our boys in the military to the wonders of the mind-control phenomena." "Hands On" meant my sex programming would be used to "peak their interests and lock (bond) them in." After all, "entertaining the troops is a long time American tradition." Aquino did the programming, and Reagan began making arrangements for the demonstrations—which brought me back around to Dick Cheney. Cheney would be acting in the capacity of my "Commander" for the Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations and other covert operations from then on.

---

[1] Since I had no concept of time under mind control, the '80s seemed like one long day to me, whereby discerning exact dates is extremely difficult. Furthermore, I was programmed to believe that every encounter with certain individuals was "the first time". I do know that I had been conditioned and programmed in preparation for Reagan since 1978 ai NASA's Cape Canavaral in Titusville, Florida.

[2] Reagan preferred illicit pornography videos such as bestiality, while his favorite pornographic magazine was Larry Flynt's Hustler.

[3] Although Hollywood's Dante rivaled Larry Flynt for the title of "Chief Pornographer" producing video versions of Hustler's stills, Flynt was unequivocally the official White House Pornographer. Dante's covert filming of political perversion for blackmail purposes failed to gain him the international notoriety Flynt maintained through his New World Order collogues such as Presidents Reagan, Bush, and Ford; CIA Director Bill Casey; U.N. Amhossador Madeleine Albright; Senators Byrd and Specter; Congressmen Trafficant and VanderJagt; Governors Thornburgh, Blanchard and Alexander; and various World Leaders such as Prime Minister of Canada Mulroney, President of Mexico de la Madrid, and Saudi Arabian King Fahd...to name a few...

[4] Having been out of circulation since my rescue did not preclude my ability to "predict" winners according to political favors: from George Bush, Jr'S Texas Rangers to the Toronto Blue Jays' victory during the Canadian political heal of NAFTA.

CHAPTER 10

"COMMANDER" DICK CHENEY & REAGAN'S "HANDS ON MIND-CONTROL DEMONSTRATIONS"

Please note: In order to maintain the integrity of documenting my experiences using precise and photographic detail, I have recorded events and quotes as they occurred in reality. Please excuse any offensive and foul language, but this is the way Cheney presented himself,

1 was attending another White House cocktail party where, as usual, I was taken aside for a meeting and escorted to a large office. There, Reagan and Cheney were having their "before cocktail party" cognacs, and Reagan's cheeks were already flushed. He was in a hurry and quickly explained the purpose of the meeting,

"You're the kind of girl who could hold a man in line. (He was cryptically referring to the lines of military personnel I was forced to have sex with.) That's why I've selected you to tour a few Air Force Bases with the Colonel (Aquino) and demonstrate for our boys in the service what a Presidential Model is trained for, a kind of 'hands on' demonstration. But you'll have to audition for the role." Reagan drained his glass and gestured toward Cheney as he strode for the door, adding, "Do what he says. He's your commander."

It had been eight years since I had been hunted and brutalized by Cheney in Wyoming, and apparently he wanted to see how my programming had progressed before agreeing to use me in Reagan's "Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations". He grabbed me roughly by the hair and slung me onto a black leather chair, tipping my head backwards over the high studded arm. "Audition here," he snarled. Since I last saw him, 1 had undergone Wizard Of Oz Tin Man programming, which he accessed to accommodate his large, thick penis. He placed his hands on my jaw while he said, "Soon we'll have you purring like a wetl oiled machine. All of your moving parts are pivotal and gliding with ease. Melt into my hands. I'll hold your jaw to keep it from slipping while you slip through a window in lime." He then jerked my jaw out of joint, and roughly gratified himself in my throat.[1]

As he lit his cigarette, I slowly regained focus enough to realize I was in pain. The back of my head hurt from being thrust into the studs on the chair, and I slowly lifted my head. My owner, Senator Byrd, had just walked in and realized Cheney had already completed the "audition". Referring to compartmentalizing my memory via stun gun high voltage, Byrd asked, "Did you fry her?"

Cheney, 'cocksure' of himself as always, answered. "She can't have fucked all of Washington" (indicating that no one would believe me anyway, even if I did reach this point and talk). Cheney put out his cigarette and said as he went out the door, "She'll work. Tell Ronnie she'll work."

When Byrd saw that my lips were bleeding, he called Cheney a "son of a bitch" under his breath, as this damage would prevent my fulfilling other assignments that were planned for me. Byrd touched his finger to my swollen lips and tasted the blood (and Cheney) several times. Then he slapped me hard across the face, which re-aligned my jaw but caused more blood to flow down my chin. He took a box of tissues from the desk and threw it at me, the corner hitting me in the forehead. "Wipe yourself up. You're just getting started. I'll see to it you get what you've got coming to you."

Fortunately for me, Byrd had cause to return to the formal cocktail party and did not have time to brutalize me further. My face was battered, mouth torn, and my throat felt torn and stretched. I had difficulty swallowing for some time, and could not speak. I certainly was in no condition to return to the cocktail party, and was escorted out by agents/guards.

Before I could leave Washington, Byrd made good on his threat and arranged for me to meet with Cheney in a blue bedroom in a part of the White House so remote that "no one could hear my screams and moans". But Cheney implemented Oz theme "Silence" conditioning anyway as he proceeded to brutally sexually assault me.

"Byrd tells me you need a good whipping. But I'm not certain which instrument you prefer, so I brought them all." Cheney had a riding crop, a whip, and a cat-o-nine-tails laid out on the bed. He beat me quick and hard as though he were releasing his tensions rather than savoring my pain like Byrd did. I regained consciousness when Cheney slid a pillow under my neck, steered me by the hair, and bent my head back. Survival instinct kicked in when he positioned himself above my head, I hoped to satisfy him before he became deadly brutal again. But he quickly pulled out his liquid cocaine sprayer, sprayed my throat, then proceeded to get rough. At one point he yanked my head aside and asked, "Was that a tooth?" and grinned. It was imperative that 1 kept my teeth off him because, according to Aquino's programming instruction, I was subject to death if a tooth was ever felt by anyone. Cheney knew this was my programming and manipulated me with it often. I resumed "satisfying him as though my life depended upon it, because, of course, it did." This is another Aquino programming line Cheney knew and used. When he was gratified, he flopped over and slept. I had been instructed to leave immediately because Cheney absolutely did not want me near him when he slept (some insiders say he is paranoid), and I began dressing. I was escorted out.

In preparation for "running bases" for Reagan's Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations, I underwent a great deal of programming by both Aquino and Cheney. Cheney laid the ground rules while Aquino carried out Uie programming derail and performed the demonstration with me on various military and NASA installations.

Reagan wanted the demonstrations to include all programming depicted in the "How to" films, additional programming instilled since the videos were made, delivery of drugs when applicable, and sex according to Aquino's instruction with whomever/however many were present at the lecture. Cheney's personal "touch" to the demonstrations was to have me programmed to vaginally internally electric prod myself with a high voltage cylindrical cattle prod-truly an example of total mind control.

I was routinely escorted arm-in-arm "Oz style" by two agents to Cheney's downstairs office in the Pentagon. Sometimes Byrd took me in. Other times Cheney walked me through the building, particularly if we were going to his "Bunkhouse" personal quarters. Cheney's office was equipped with black leather furniture, a huge messy brown desk, massive book shelves, and an hour glass that he always used in keeping with Oz programming, to assure me that my life was on the line under his command. As a programmed MPD, I had no concept of time. The hour glass was a visible way for me to see "my time. runing out" and actually grasp the concept.

The first time I reported in, Cheney shuffled through the clutter on his desk, picked up a paper and began reading:

"Number one. I am NOT your friend, and I don't want to see you unless I order you to report in. Number two. Follow the Colonel's (Aquino) orders, as it is the chain of command. What he orders you to do, is a command from me, follow it to the letter, as though your life depends upon it, because (he looked up and grinned wickedly) of course, it does." His cold eyes bore into mine as he walked around to the front of his desk, "Any questions?"

I knew he "was NOT my friend," but he already "saw me" sexually on other occasions. I was perplexed and hesitated. Even though I remained silent, Cheney sensed my hesitation and became enraged. He got up in my face, poked my breast bone with his finger and roared, "Don't even THINK to question anything I say! There is no question as to what I do, what I think, or what I say, because 1 am absolutely above questions-especially YOURS!! Your orders are clear. Now get out of here! I have work to do!"

Throughout the next three years, U.S. Army Lt. Colonel Aquino used me in the Hands On Demonstrations on numerous Army, Navy, Air Force, and NASA installations across the U.S. according to Reagan's plan and Cheney's orders. The Top Brass privy to the demonstrations ranged from three at a time to roughly twenty. In closing, Aquino always "persuaded" them to line up while I was forced to perform sexually on command with each one. The larger groups were physically painful, while the smaller groups often involved unapproved variance from the routine, such as revealing Reagan's bestiality perversions. The wide array of "switching" my personalities that Aquino incorporated into the demonstrations, and the vast amount of high voltage and torture to which I was subjected, left me exhausted and physically devastated for days after each one of Reagan's Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations.

[1] My jaw is permanently damaged From Cheney. I have chronic TMJ.

CHAPTER 11

"POPPA" PHTLIP HABIB

My (CIA operative) handler, Alex Houston was scheduled to perform with country music entertainer Loretta Lynn at the Playboy Club in Atlantic City, New Jersey in the spring of 1985, and he admittedly did not want me there for the performance. He explained that after his show, he intended to "dress up like a carrot as lunch for the Bunnies" and I would only be in his way. But 1 had White House business to attend with a different land of "rabbit". Reagan had arranged for me to meet with his personal attache", Philip Habib (now deceased), who always played the cryptic rote of the Alice In Wonderland White Rabbit to mind-controlled slaves. Houston had no choice but to take me along once the orders came down.

CIA operative Ken Riley, the Neo-Nazi pedophile who functioned in the capacity of Loretta Lynn's road manager and Project Monarch Mind-Control handler, was Alex Houston's closest friend. Riley often made arrangements through Loretta's and Houston's shared talent agent, Reggie Maclaughlin, for all of us to travel together—particularly when it involved government covert operations such as this Playboy Club gig did. Loretta's singing career and political ties into CIA covert operations have always been synonymous. Riley escorted her in and out of the White House on numerous occasions during the Reagan Administration, By natural attrition, this put Riley in a secondary role as a "backup" handler for me as he often returned from D.C. with orders for and/or concerning me. Houston and Riley shared much: CIA covert operations, country music interests, Neo-Nazi and U.S. Government mind control, Project Monarch methodologies, slave running[1], pornography, cocaine, and pedophile activities. Kelly and Riley's young daughter were often filmed pornographically together, and endured the sexual assaults of Houston and Riley[2] together on numerous occasions.

This trip to Atlantic City provided me an opportunity to talk with Loretta while her husband, Mooney, Riley and Houston met for business. Loretta and I had so much in common that our time together had been restricted from the time we met in Minneapolis, Minnesota in 1981 and discussed our victimizations.[3] While alone in Loretta's dressing room at the Playboy Club, we discussed a wide range of topics from motherhood to the White House. We talked about Reagan in terms of his role as The Wizard Of Oz, but mostly we recited the general praises we were trained to say. We talked about Reagan's "favorite" music by Air Supply, which he had supplied to us both via Riley. Air Supply's cryptic NASA/Project Monarch theme recordings became "life and breath" to us both according to Reagan's intention, which locked in our programmed devotion for him. We discussed the recent Inauguration party Loretta had attended at the White House. (I was aware she had entertained there as Houston relayed information to Riley pertaining to his recent trip to Panama to meet with Panamanian Dictator and CIA operative Manuel Noriega in order that Riley deliver the information to Reagan during the Inauguration party.)

Loretta and I switched personalities spontaneously as we inadvertently triggered each other with the shared cryptic language to which we were accustomed. We discussed forbidden subjects including Noriega and Byrd until Riley and Houston caught us and separated us as though we were a couple of naughty kids. I learned more than I was supposed to about Loretta while in Atlantic City, but was never permitted another opportunity to speak with her so freely.

This trip to Atlantic City was multi-purpose, which was not unusual for government operations in which I was forced to participate. I had a major cocaine transaction involving Noriega to attend at the airport; a message to deliver to Philip Habib pertaining to the Contras, and another programmed in by Habib in answer to Reagan; country music "entertainment" aspects; and prostitution to Habib according to Reagan's instruction.[4]

As the sun was setting over Atlantic City, Houston activated the Project Monarch Oz programming that was used for high level covert operations, and had me dress accordingly. I wore real and faux diamonds to signify my "Presidential Model" business role, rubies to signify my Oz programmed prostitution personality, and emeralds to signify my Oz programmed drug business. This physically indicated to my contact(s) which mode of operation 1 was under at the rime. Rarely did I wear all three indicators at once, but they certainly applied in this operation with Habib. Houston led me down the waterfront boardwalk toward the hotel casino where I was to meet Habib, walking like the Oz Scarecrow and singing, "Follow the Yellow Brick Road",

Houston led me up the elaborate escalators of the hotel to a high stakes gambling area where Habib was playing cards. The guard at the door did not let Houston through, and I was sent to Habib's table on my own. When I approached, Habib leaned back in his chair to hear while I quietly recited in Oz cryptic, "I've come such a long, long way to see you, Uncle Ronnie sent you something."

"What would that be?" he asked loudly as he leered at me and chuckled. I could not respond because 1 was under heavy program. He handed me his room key and pulled me close as he hypnotically whispered, "Use the key. Put it in the lock. Turn. Open the door, and step through a window in time." The other gamblers at Habib's table were getting impatient, and I quickly exited the gambling room.

When I arrived in Habib's room, two of his bodyguards accessed my programming. "Chiefly speaking," I began reciting Reagan's message. Arrangements were made for the two guards to pick up a fair sized shipment of cocaine the next morning that was arriving on a small military "brass" airplane. Houston and I would then board the plane and fly to D.C. where 1 would complete my part of this operation;

When Habib arrived, he ushered me into the bedroom part of the suite and began disrobing, down to his boxer shorts and gartered socks. Referring to a recent Dante porn film I was used in, he said, "1 liked your ruffled tennis panties..." then threw me a pink teddy and ruffled panties resembling the tennis outfit commanding, "Put it on." I complied. He threw me a stuffed toy cat on the pillows and explained, "That kitten is going to keep this Kitten (pointing to me) from screaming. We're going to play Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum." (S&M games) Habib physically resembled the violent Alice In Wonderland characters, especially in his boxer shorts. The hysterical controlled laughter that rose in my throat would only have intensified his abuse and was (fortunately) choked back by terror as he begun attaching heavy rope ties to the four posters of the bed. On command, I crawled onto the bed and lay on my stomach while he tied me so tightly I was stretched. He shoved the stuffed cat under my mouth, then entered me roughly from behind and said, "Come to Poppa". The intense pain as he brutally sodomized me was outweighed by a high voltage stun gun as he jolted me repeatedly to create the perverse jerking movements and rectal muscle constrictions he desired. I soon passed out from the blinding high voltage of his stun gun. It was nearly 3:00 AM when I stumbled out the door with the stuffed cat in my hands, nauseated, disoriented, and in extreme pain. The cool, ocean breeze helped revive me as Houston marched me back to the Playboy Club.

Houston knew I had been programmed with a message for Reagan that I would deliver the next morning in D.C. As usual, he began to access it immediately. His quick timing somehow permitted him to penetrate the electricity and programmed codes (designed to keep the information repressed) and accessed the information. Houston kept a written record of any messages he was able to access (along with photos and ledgers) for his personal profit and future blackmailing purposes, should he need to protect himself. In this case, I surmise from Houston's Panama activities, conversations I overheard between him and Riley, and my recollection of the messages he accessed, that his purpose in extracting this information was for his personal profit in backdoor dealings with Noriega. I understood it was these kinds of dealings that eventually contributed to Noriega's downfall with the CIA.

Morning arrived before I was allowed to sleep, and I felt exhausted and "spacey" as I waited by the curb for Habib's bodyguards to pick Houston and me up and take us to the airport, A small military airplane was parked in a restricted fenced in area as we arrived at the airport. The two bodyguards conducted their business and quickly loaded the trunk with the bundles of cocaine as planned. Houston and I boarded the airplane and flew to Washington, D.C. where I delivered Habib's message to Reagan. The bank transaction numbers later checked out to be a Cayman Island account number.

Philip Habib was directly involved in various DIA/CIA Operations I was forced to participate in throughout the Reagan/Bush Administrations, Although Dick Cheney maintained his role as my Commander for these Operations, Habib directed my actions where International "Diplomatic Relations" were concerned, Cheney orchestrated events from behind his desk, whereas Habib was active in the field as Reagan's attache'.

The following Operations, documented in their entirety from my experience perspective only, most likely involve other aspects to which I am not privy. In typical DIA/CIA manner, scam "need to know' information resulted in the "left hand not knowing what the right hand was doing." Nevertheless, the overall criminal purpose of Operation Carrier Pigeon and Operation Shell Game, documented herein, does not change.

[1] Riley, over time, owned several slaves.

[2] Riley, like my father, Wayne Cox, and other, remains apparently immune from prosecution for his crimes against children and humanity, as it is considered a matter of '"National Security" under the 1984 Reagan Amendment to the National Security Act.

[3] I still have the handwritten note from Loretta that prompted out forbidden conversation and I hope that someday Loretta will gain the piece/peace-of-mind that comes with rehabilitation.

[4] In the course of deprogramming, I found retrieval of this information much quicker than it would have been had Houston not accessed it previously, against government policy, and for his own personal gain.

CHAPTER 12

OPERATION CARRIER PIGEON

The term "Pigeon" is one with which I have been familiar since the early 1980s when I first began delivering messages between my "owner" Senator Byrd and Puerto Rican drug lord and CIA operative, Jose Busto. Houston had simply explained to me then, as we fed the flock of pigeons roosting at the Old San Juan Cathedral, that Pigeons were used as messengers. The DIA's U.S. Army Lt. Colonel Michael Aquino often activated my Pigeon programming during the Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations.

Dick Cheney further defined the term "Pigeon" when I learned of Operation Carrier Pigeon in the mid '80s. He said, "You have been selected from the flock (of programmed slaves) for the Carrier Pigeon Operation for the purpose of carrying messages from point A to point B as ordered. Pigeons, once they fly the coop, find no freedom in flight, but carry out their task of delivering their message from point A to point B by the shortest possible route—a direct route. I will direct your route and you will deliver messages as ordered."

But no one defined my role as a Pigeon more eloquently that President Reagan during the course of Operation Carrier Pigeon.

The cryptic "pigeon language" utilized by all participants in the operation was intermixed with The Wizard Of Oz, Alice In Wonderland, and "Genie in the Bottle" cryptic programming themes. While Pigeon meant messenger, "Carrier Pigeon" referred to the U.S. Air Force aircraft that actually transported the arms and drugs. "Pigeon Droppings" included the sometimes multi-national dispersal of the arms and drugs after they reached their destination. "Pigeon Holing" meant covering up the criminal activity. These definitions, as I understood them then and understand them now, may well include deeper, more diverse meanings than I have perceived.

Habib's favorite programming theme was Alice In Wonderland, Through The Looking Glass due to its international recognition and relation to the ultra-effective NASA mirror, time, and infinity space programs for instantly dissociating programmed participants. He habitually spoke in Alice In Wonderland cryptic language, and even used it for sex as was evidenced by his Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum brutal games of perversion. Due to Habib's orchestration of Operation Carrier Pigeon, this CIA covert operation was littered with Wonderland mirror themes from beginning to end.

My CIA handler, Alex Houston had just returned from a brief solo trip "to Florida" with an elaborately wrapped box. "it's from a friend of yours," he told me as he handed me the box. "Let's go into the bedroom so you can unwrap it and see it through the "Looking Class'." Cryptically triggered, I mechanically walked to the bedroom as ordered.

I removed the silver metallic bow and wrappings from the box and Found an expensive, elegant dress made of an unusual shimmery silver fabric. A sheet of plain white stationary written in Philip Habib's recognizable shaded blue script lay on top of the dress. It read:

The heat you radiated when we last met melted my mirror.
I had it made into a dress just for you,
cut to accentuate your figure so that when you melt into it,

You lose yourself into the pool of liquid mirror.
Step into the Looking Glass
Sink deep within its pool and straddle dimensions in time.
I'll see you there...
along with my friends.

It was signed: "Passionately, Phil Habib," with his name written upside down under a line as though it were a mirror reflection.

Houston knew there would be a note, and ordered "Let me see your note," snatching it from my hands. He gestured toward the dress. "Go ahead and try it on while I read this note. Now let's see, what does it say? 'Come to Poppa'?"

I took the dress from the box. It did not feel like anything I'd ever felt before. It was cold like satin, but thin like silk. I started crying quietly, afraid that Habib would somehow show up if I had it on.

"Put it on and I'll zip you in," Houston said as he took another note from his wallet and read it as I undressed:

There's a pair of magic shoes to wear with your dress,
Something in-lightening,
to transport you faster than the ol' ruby slippers (Oz)
The shoes, like the dress, are made just for you, and when you wear them you'll be fit for a King,
I'll send them for you at the appropriate lime.

Houston tucked the note back in his wallet, "See. You're not going anywhere now. You'll meet him at the White House when you have shoes to wear with it. Just slip it on."

I did. Houston accessed Habib's Wonderland brutal sex programming for his own gratification. Afterwards I hung the dress in Kelly's closet with my other trigger-significant clothes; out of sight, out of mind. Until the shoes arrived...

Habib "sent the shoes for me" soon afterward. They were shiny black with what appeared to be silver lightening bolts down the high heels and sides. In place of dinner thai night, Houston gave me a "Wonderland Wafer" (MDHMA-XTC CIA designer drug "Ecstasy"). The wafer, like all those supplied by Habib, bore his trademark that read "Eat me". I began to prepare for the night out as instructed. Houston zipped me into the dress, and turned me to face the mirror. As I slipped into the shoes, Houston took another note from Habib out of his pocket and read:

Something in-lightening to tranceport you faster than the ol' ruby slippers.
Click your heels together (I obeyed) and be there in a snap.
Electrifying-with the rumble of thunder.
Boiling through time
So you won't be late for a very important date.

Houston hit me with his stun gun and I passed out. He then drove me to the Nashville airport where I boarded a small plane to Washington, D.C.

I found myself at the White House with Byrd, attending another small cocktail party of about 20-30 people. After we spoke with Reagan, Byrd pointed me in the direction of Philip Habib and sent me over to him. My eyes were locked on Habib's as he hypnotically said:

Melt into your melted mirror for an electrifying ride.
Look deep into the black of my melting mirror eyes,
See you reflecting me, reflecting you, reflecting me--you-me--you-me until we melt together and sink deep into the other side.

Habib took me to a quieter spot in an adjoining room and held up another wonderland Wafer as he said in Alice In Wonderland cryptic, "Welcome to Wonderland, Kitten. This is a very important date. I haven't time to explain.? He gave me the wafer and continued, "Eat it, and I'll take you through the door."

Habib took me by the hand and led me to the doorway of another room. It was a dining room of sorts where an informal array of guests was gathered. As soon as Habib appeared in the doorway, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia quickly excused himself from the table and approached. He was wearing a multicolored robe and headwear with a black-brown rope band. I was instantly repulsed by his "wicked" lecherous gaze, I stepped back into the other room in fear. Habib introduced him. "This is one of 'my friends' I mentioned in my letter." I robotically responded, "It's a pleasure to meet you" and extended my hand as taught in Charm School. Fahd bent over to kiss my hand. As he did, his evil black eyes bore into mine as he softly said, "Your beauty warms my embers. See them glowing deep within the darkness of my eyes-igniting into flame-black flame." He laughed wickedly at the effect of his use of NASA hypnotic conditioning,

Habib slapped him on the shoulder as though they knew each other well and there were no formalities between them and asked, "Am I right? Is that fit for a King?'"

The three of us went into another room that appeared to be a guest bedroom that Habib was occupying. He closed the door and told me, "Diplomatic relations are very important. You know the old saying 'when in Rome do as Romans do'. Well, he's a King. Get on your knees. His wish is your command. Satisfy his deepest wishes. It's your turn for a magic carpet ride, so turn your Genie free."

Fahd was sitting in a chair by a coffee table. As I knelt on the carpel in front off him, his piercing black eyes seemed to stab into my brain like swords. I could not turn away. He stroked my neck with his index finger, activating oral sex programming. "I have heard about you and am in-tent on having you." Somehow he found the slit in his robes and parted it as he continued, "Come into my tent- A feast has been spread for you." He spread his legs and exposed his penis—one of the nastiest I had ever seen—like a black nightcrawler worm that smelled and tasted strongly of spice. Habib watched as I carried out my orders, much to the pleasure of Fahd,

Then Habib went to the chest of drawers and began pulling out his electric prod and bondage equipment as he explained. "Now let me introduce you to my other 'friend'. I need to bottle up a message with your Genie and send it out to sea. You know what to do. Begin undressing now."

I did as I was told and lay on my stomach on the bed while Habib sodomized me. He used his electric prod equipment and programmed me with a message to deliver to General Manuel Noriega while on an upcoming NCL cruise.

I was at sea on board an NCL cruise ship bound for their private island in the Bahamas, Stirrup Cay, which was to be my rendezvous point with Noriega, "Bottled up" in my mind through the recent 'Genie in the Bottle' programming, was a cryptic message from King Fahd to Noriega. It was a moonless night whereby the Caribbean waters appeared as black as the night. I could not distinguish the sky from the sea in accordance with NASA hypnotic conditioning. T gazed, totally entranced, from the rear of the cruise ship. Houston used the opportunity to hypnotically enhance Habib's previous programming, while traumatizing me with the threat of being thrown overboard. The thought of "treacling water in the inky blackness while the lights of the ship fade further-and further--away-until all is black and I sink-to the depths of the sea" did not seem so horrible in tight of the fact that I was to be the bearer of bad news to Noriega in the morning.

Upon arrival to NCL's Stirrup Cay, Houston and I began our usual walking trek to the farthest end of the island where the CIA operations radio station and equipment were located. In a hidden cove on the island's back side was a smaller island of sufficient size to conceal Noriega's personal yacht, anchored behind it. As Houston and I made our way along the cove's beach, we came upon an old wooden boat half buried in the sand and a man sitting beside it. Because I was in a different personality, I did not recognize the man as my contact who ran the Stirrup Cay control lower for drug trafficking and covert activity. 1 asked him how he got there. He began his charade, which, due to the depths of my trance, I believed in its literal text, while Houston heard quite a different story:

"I shipwrecked." John (the name I called him) pointed to the boat half buried in the sand, "That's all that is left of my boat."

I asked, "Why haven't you been rescued?"

He cryptically replied, "I sent a message in a bottle and I expect a response real soon. Good thing I had these coconuts (he was carving one) and all that 'sugar' in the hull to sustain me."

Houston laughed, immediately realizing that 'sugar' meant cocaine and said, surprised, "In the hull?" as he bent down to look inside the wreck. I looked, too. There was more white cocaine and (dark) cocaine paste than I could mule (carry) in one walking haul, even wilh both of my tote bags full. But I could not comprehend reality in the midst of this charade, and therefore commented that he was fortunate that both the "white and brown sugar" had made it through. the wreck.

Houston said, "So, they cast you away, huh?"

My contact laughed and sniffed, "Yeah, cast me away with all that 'sugar'— that's nothing to sniff at." He looked up as Houston informed him a speedboat was approaching, 1 looked out across the cove beyond the little island and finally noticed Noriega's yacht. A "black mirror" finish speed boat, which matched the upper smoke glass windows of Noriega's yacht, was approaching. John told me, "Probably has something to do wilh that message I sent. Help me wave him in." I did. He handed me a coconut and, using it as a scramble and excuse for me to join him on Noriega's yacht, persuaded me to board the speed boat with him. Houston stayed behind to guard the cocaine that had obviously already been delivered from Noriega's yacht.

When we pulled up to the rear of the yacht, I was helped on board by Noriega's armed guards. I noticed there did not seem to be any big parties going on as was customary, and Noriega seemed unusually abrupt and businesslike. He was not drunk this time. Upon command from John, I delivered Fahd's message:

"1 am under command to deliver a message from King Fahd. The Caribbean is becoming volatile. Trouble in Jamaica, Trouble in Cuba, Even trouble in Panama. Dominican Republic must be launching point for missiles and artillery that are being channeled though Cuba. Concluding arms deal, Carrier Pigeon must be detained until all transactions are cleared. Banco de Panama to receive Contra Aid after all steps leading to me have been swept away by the shifting sands (of Lime), and all pigeon droppings pigeon holed. Our business is concluded. Let us part on friendly terms,"

My personal perceptions of history as it happened in reality remains somewhat distorted, as I had no access to "news" outside of my mind-comrolled environment. In order to keep my memory retrieval free of contamination, I completed the deprogramming process before "educating" myself through books And news. I have since learned that what was reported as news was often distorted propaganda, and many events were never reported at all. Therefore, I do not know of the "troubles in Jamaica and Cuba" to which King Fahd referred. I was aware, however, that due to outside scrutiny, Houston had recently met with Jamaican officials in Kingston pertaining to ceasing the long standing criminal covert operations. As for Cuba, 1 only knew that I was no longer meeting with my Cuban contact. In Panama, I knew Noriega himself was the object of controversy. The "arms deal" was the final stage of Operation Carrier Pigeon where the planes were to wait in Saudi Arabia until all bank transactions were cleared and the load was ready for disbursement. Saudi Arabian King Fahd would then fund the Contras via Noriega for Reagan after all evidences had been properly covered up—just as he had done in Afghanistan. After the shipment, there would be no further deals through Noriega involving Fahd, because Noriega could no longer be trusted. Besides, Fahd had increased diplomatic relations with Mexico for covert operations, and Iran-Contra was just beginning to heat up.

Noriega did not seem to be upset by the news of losing Saudi Arabian business, although he was somber and took some time to respond. His translator was working over some complex computer equipment after I delivered the message. I left Noriega's yacht with John and a brief message for Dick Cheney at the Pentagon.

Back on Stirrup Cay, Houston was anxiously waiting to begin transporting the cocaine back to the party area of the island. There, NCL workers were cleaning up from the cruise ship's beach party cookout, which was NCL's excuse to stop the ship. After I muled the first heavy load of cocaine in my tote sacks, Houston approached one worker familiar with the drug operation and informed him we had a heavier load than usual and needed to make another trip. The worker directed us to a huge empty food container used for transporting cook out supplies from the ship, and gave us the key. We locked the first load in the container, and I took my empty tote sacks, plus another straw bag back. for another haul. With the second load, Houston even carried some cocaine: himself. We had to run quite a distance through the island woods in an attempt to make it back to the ship's shuttle before scheduled departure time. When we arrived, the beach was nearly deserted, as all the passengers had been taken back to the ship. All that remained was the food container and the NCL worker who was hurrying us onto the shuttle and on board the ship, which was waiting for us.

When the cruise ship docked at the Port of Miami, Puerto Rican drug lord and CIA operative Jose Busto was acting as a U.S. Immigrations officer (commissioned by the Drug Enforcement Agency through the CIA), which he often did for NCL. Busto helped us clear ship undetected with the large load of cocaine. The drugs were packed into suitcases, then loaded into Houston's specially made motor home which was parked in NCL's guarded, restricted parking lot. Most of the cocaine was dropped off as usual at Warner Robbins Air Force Base in Macon, Georgia, to be distributed to destinations unknown to me. The money generated by the sale of cocaine was supposedly used to fund a major arms shipment into Saudi Arabia. These weapons were reportedly distributed among several neighboring countries. The profits were then relayed into Reagan's Contra Cause.

A large quantity of cocaine was retained by Houston for his own use and delivery for personal profit through his country music industry contacts. Some of the cocaine would be delivered by me to Saudi Arabian Ambassador, Prince Bandar Bin Sultan, Fahd's own "Homing Pigeon".

I carried a message from Warner Robbins Air Force Base in addition to the message from Noriega agreeing to Fahd's terms back to Dick Cheney at the Pentagon. Cheney then prepared me for the final phase of the operation. This was a meeting with Prince Bandar (who Cheney, Houston, and others referred to as Sultan) in Nashville, Tennessee where he often visited corrupt friends. There, I would relay a message of agreement to Fahd's terms between Noriega and the U.S., as well as confirm all Air Force flights (Carrier Pigeons) and bank transactions. In turn, Fahd's "Homing Pigeon" would relay the messages to Fahd so that the seemingly long running drugs for arms deals would draw to a successful conclusion.

Dick Cheney cautioned me, "Sultan will be in Nashville having dinner with friends at the Stockyard." (The Stockyard was a popular country music dinner club known for its CIA criminal covert activity involvement.) Cheney glanced at the list on his desk and continued, "Among others, those friends would be (Mayor) Fulton[1] and (Sheriff) Thomas.[2] They are considered a threat to the operation. They're not discrete. Thomas in particular is not to be trusted--he's an ass and too crooked. So, Sultan must leave the table before the message is delivered. Any questions? Good."

I certainly had no questions this time. I did not need him to caution me about Nashville's Mayor Richard Fulton whom Houston had prostituted me to, and Sheriff Fate Thomas. I had known the pair for years, had been cautioned about them before, and had no respect for them at all. Together Thomas and Fulton had indiscreetly perpetuated the total corruption that had permeated Nashville's $2.8 billion country music industry, which ran the city of Nashville. They ran the city's business from a bar—the Stockyard-while they drank and openly used cocaine. If I had had the capacity to wonder, I would have wondered what a "Homing Pigeon" so critical to the conclusion of this international criminal covert operation was doing with such low level sleaze. As it was, I could only sense relief at not having to deal with them, too.

Prince Bandar Bin Sultan's reputation for sex and drugs was widely known in Nashville. But much of my information pertaining to his activities came from one of my closest Project Monarch friends. She is an entertainer's daughter who was prostituted regularly to Sultan when he was in town, which was often.

When Cheney was through with me, Byrd escorted me to the White House to see Reagan, who also cautioned me about the Prince. Reagan was aware of Habib's having activated me sexually with King Fahd, and made it clear that my scheduled rendezvous with Prince Bandar would not include the usual sex.

Reagan joked in Byrd's presence, "Birds (Byrds) may well be eaten by a Kitten. (Reagan's pet name for me), but not Homing Pigeons. Homing Pigeons taste foul." Byrd laughed. Reagan continued, "Homing Pigeons have one purpose. Passing messages. Throughout history world leaders have passed messages to and from each other by way of pigeons. Messages that have set the course of events that have altered the course of history. Homing Pigeons are loyal and dedicated to their task, flying over seas, yet never pausing long enough to even quench their thirst-giving no thought to their own needs. When a pigeon is released, he takes a direct course to his destination. Dedicated to delivering the very messages on which history was founded. Why, even Noah relied on a pigeon to traverse the seas to bring back a message of hope. It is your duty to attach an added message to the Horning Pigeon-one of peace, from our homeland lo his: One from the President of the United States to King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, ... (Omitted due to international ramification.)"

Byrd was visibly inspired by the speech. I was literally saved by the bell from another boring, long winded recitation that Reagan had just inspired in Byrd when Cheney telephoned me back to his office. It was still morning and Cheney had appeared very busy, hurried, and irritable when I had seen him just a short time earlier. My heart was heavy in expectant anticipation of the physical and sexual brutality Cheney's moods normally incited. Yet I was relieved to escape the torturous "picture painting" competition that experience had taught me Byrd and Reagan were about to embark on. My heart lightened when my escort left me at Cheney's office and I noticed his foul mood had changed dramatically.

"I understand you ordered me to report in, Sir." Cheney looked up from his desk where he was shuffling through papers and tying up loose ends before leaving his office.

"Sit down." he ordered, "I just got word that the Genie in the Bottle 'Cast-away' Operation is complete and I intend to pop a cork or two of my own in celebration of its successful conclusion. I have time on my hands and want you to join me. The bunkhouse is being prepared..." Cheney apparently thought of something, went to the door and told the guy who had escorted me, "Make sure there's some Wonderland Wafers in the bunkhouse," He walked to his desk, picked up the phone and said, "I'm outta here" into it and slammed it down. I followed Cheney out the door, and we turned to the right rather than the left outside his office and walked to his personal quarters referred to as the bunkhouse. It was decorated in Cheney's western style in browns and tans, with leather furniture. There was no food (maybe some nuts stashed somewhere), but plenty of bottles of alcohol.

I was swollen and bleeding vaginally, the bottom of my shirt was soaked in blood, and my belly hurt deep inside when my escort finally came for me early the next morning. Staying around Cheney while he slept was as deadly a mistake as removing his clothes or questioning him-it was forbidden. This time he broke his own rule, and did not even punish me for it when morning arrived. He had spent so many hours drinking alcohol and using his enormous penis as an assault weapon that he passed out shortly before my escort arrived. As I walked into the hall, I doubled over from pain. My escort turned to Cheney and remarked, "Christ, Cheney".

Cheney lifted his head and proudly slurred, "Now you know why they call it 'Dick'".

Back in Tennessee, my CIA-paid gynecologist, who knew I was under mind control, covered for my abusers as usual and wrote me a prescription for swelling and pain, I was still in pain and ill from my exposure to Dick Cheney and his high voltage torture and brutal sex when Houston drove me to Nashville's Stockyard Nightclub for my rendezvous with Prince Bandar Bin Sultan.

A waitress led me to the Saudi Arabian Ambassador's table where he was drinking with Mayor Fulton, Sheriff Thomas, and Metro Police Chief Joe Casey.[3] I approached him and said, "If you please, Sir (Oz), I am under command to deliver a message to you from the Pentagon. There is to be no horse play (sex games). We must get down to business." There was laughter from everyone at the table. I continued. "My message is brief and I only need a moment of your time away from your dinner."

The Prince's face grew more serious and we left the table. He touched the waitress" arm and she pointed to a door across the hall that ted to an empty room. We stood just inside the room, and I quickly delivered ray Pigeon cryptic message:

"The Carrier Pigeon (Air Force airplane) will take flight... and will keep its promise (the agreed load) while all transactions (both bank and distribution) are procured through the designated diplomatic channels (Habib.) Your bonus, one crystal, three cuts await you. The President of the United States gives his word to King Fahd: ..."

He told me his driver would meet me out from of the Stockyard and instructed me to put the cocaine in the back, I left the building to rejoin Houston at the car in order that the cocaine could be delivered. A white stretch limousine was pulled up in front of the Stockyard; Chief Casey's assigned Metro Police Officers guarded the area, and the cocaine was transferred into the back seat of the Prince's limo. Houston and I immediately left the area. My part in Operation Carrier Pigeon was concluded.

---

[1] Richard Fulton and his bank were under Federal investigation as of 1991.

[2] Fate Thomas is currently serving time in a Federal penitentiary for bribery and extortion.

[3] Recently under Federal investigation for corruption.

CHAPTER 13

OPERATION SHELL GAME

Sometime prior to the death of CIA Chief William Casey, I was in Washington, D.C. for a briefing on Operation Shell Game. Iran-Contra was politically explosive at this time, and U.S. Senator Allen Simpson (R.Wyoming) had a plan to set Panamanian General Manuel Noriega up to take the fall for cocaine aspects of the investigation. Noriega had become yet another source of embarrassment to the Reagan-Bush Administration. The need to convince him to he discrete about his involvement in U.S. criminal covert activities had reached alarming proportions. Noriega had been an intricate part of arming the Nicaraguan Contras for Reagan, as well as an international hub in the cocaine operations that funded the black budgets for ultra secret projects such as Project Monarch. My CIA operative handler, Alex Houston's shadowy back door drug dealings with Panama further exemplified the kind of "honor among thieves" rules that Noriega routinely and openly violated. My role, my "Contra-bution," was but a small part of the over all picture. Nevertheless, Operation Shell Game was one of the more significant and informative covert operations in which J had been forced lo participate.

My role began one cold, rainy day when Houston dropped me off at the Washington Monument where I was met by two agents, who triggered me to go with them by flashing their IDs. They escorted me 10 the large White House uffice where T had first met Cheney to "audition" for the Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations some years before. As usual, Cheney and Reagan were drinking, this time to excess for so early in the day. Reagan's cheeks were flushed and his voice slurred as he greeted me, "Well, hello, Kitten. Dick and I were just discussing the plight of the Contras since this Ollie North thing broke out." Cheney's alcoholic foul mood was immediately apparent. He was agitated as usual at Reagan's informality in my presence. Apparently I had come in during a serious discussion about tran-Contra as Reagan's mood was more somber than I had ever seen it. He took a drink and looked out the window. "Americans believe in their country-baseball, hot dogs, and Ollie North." Cheney snorted a laugh at what seemed to be an ongoing joke between them about "hot dogs and Ollie North". Reagan continued, "And I believe in the Contra cause and all that we have accomplished. And I'm damn proud of it! It's not 'Law and Order'. No, it's Order and then Law. Order must come first because without it, law would be ineffective. Sometimes we must rise above and beyond the law to establish that order (he glanced seriously at Cheney)—or a new (world) order. As President, that is my responsibility. Establish order through democracy by spreading democracy throughout the world. With order, there is peace. Right now in Nicaragua the people are crying out for democracy, for peace, and I cannot turn a deaf ear to them. Not even in view of Ollie North's troubles. True Americans know he is a hero. That's why we must rise above the law to establish order by fulfilling the wishes, the hopes, the dreams of those brave men fighting for freedom by doing our part in spreading democracy." Reagan was gesturing into the air, apparently lost in the poetry of his own ranting.

Cheney lost patience and jumped from his chair to sneer at me and poke his finger in my chest while he said, "Order is all that matters, and you're going to follow mine."

Reagan turned back to us. "I'm glad you brought that up, pick. Kitten, you have a role in establishing this order With the same patriotic passion that burned in your bosom for the freedom fighters of Afghanistan, you will carry out your orders for the Contras. Dick will define your role and provide you with all you need and all you need to know from the ol' Wizard's bag in the basement (Oz programming in Cheney's Pentagon office). So, you run along now and do as he commands."

Senator Allen Simpson was in Cheney's office when we arrived. Cheney flipped over the hour glass to let me know my life was on the line according to Oz programming. Cheney gestured to Simpson and began, "Operation Shell Game is Simpson's brain child, so he's master of the game and he's going to teach you the rules. The objective of the game is to see 'who's left holding the goods". Pointing to Simpson, he commanded, "Listen to 'im",

Simpson stood up and began cryptically talking. "You are going on a 'Princes' Cruise' (Noriega's Yacht). The Baby's Ear Shell is your pass key. I will provide you with yours at the appropriate time." He took the "shell" out of his wallet. It was approximately 1 1/2 inches long and was translucent pink, shaped and detailed exactly like a baby's car. Simpson noticed the relief cross my face as I realized it was not a real baby's ear. He smiled. "These are but empty shells of the life they once possessed. Like you are-empty and void of life. A shell. In one ear and out the other. I have your ear now LISTEN, If they hold the pass key, you listen. When you hold the pass key, you speak. In one ear and out the other-never again to be retrieved,"

He returned the shell to his wallet and continued, "Listen. Follow orders. The Colonel (Aquino) will be there and you will follow his orders and provide a demonstration Hands On style for the General (Noriega). It will be different, yet the same, so follow the Colonel's orders closely."

Cheney roughly grabbed my hair and pulled my head back, got right in my face and said, "Or, I'll get her, my pretty, your little girl. Follow orders as though her life depends upon it because it does. Or the next baby's ear will be taken from Kelly. So listen. When you see the baby's ear, you will listen," He spun my head in the direction of the hourglass as he released my hair. He was sneering and Simpson looked as though he thought Cheney overdid it. I was relieved it would not be my job to "soothe Cheney's savage beast" sexually that day.

Cheney look me back to the White Rouse office where we had started. He and Reagan shared another drink. Reagan patted my hair back in place where Cheney had pulled it, which made me feel safe somehow since I could not comprehend that he was behind my ordeal with Cheney. Reagan switched my personality to where I no longer regarded him as "Chief," but instead as "Uncle Ronnie", He did this by reaching into his Jelly Belly jar and giving me one. Certain colors and flavors triggered certain programmed responses. Uncle Ronnie must have had other "Kittens" conditioned to the military green watermelon ones because he kept an excess amount of these in his numerous jars.

Cheney said, "How in the hell you drink cognac and eat those goddamn jelly beans is beyond me.

Reagan responded, "Well, Dick, you don't have to have a Jelly Belly if you don't want to. I was just giving one to Kitten, here."

"Damn right I don't have to have a Jelly Belly, but you're going to have a jelly belly if you keep that shit up." Cheney finished his drink.

Reagan chuckled, "Now, you know I watch my figure.."

"Figure this," Cheney interrupted. "What are you going to do with the Contras?" Cheney slammed down his drink and headed for the door,

"Exactly what I've been doing." Reagan turned to me, "C'mon, Kitten, Let's take a walk, I need my evening constitutional,"

Reagan was in no mood for sex, and it was a relief to be away from Cheney, He took me outside for a walk in his "Secret Garden," where he said he goes to "think and solve the world's problems". We walked down a cement path he referred to as a "Yellow Brick Road". After sitting quietly on a cement bench for awhile, he said, "If you follow the Yellow Brick Road, it leads right to the Wizard's lair-the Oval Office, How would you like to see where Uncle Ronnie really solves the world's problems?" I felt like a little girl with her daddy going to see where he works with no real concept of the experience. The guard at the Oval Office door ensured I was returned to my escorts when Reagan was through "sneaking me in" to his office. I was then taken back to Washington Monument where Houston was waiting in the car as though T had never been gone at all.

Operation Shell Game brought me back in touch with former President Herald Ford early one misty fall morning. Ford's continued relationships with my abusers had given me cause to remain in touch with him throughout the years; particularly since he and my father were still jointly active in the Michigan organized crime drugs and pornography operation that had launched me into Project Monarch so many years before.

Ford was about to embark on a game of golf with my father on the otherwise "Closed for the Season" golf course next to my father's expensive house in affluent Grand Haven, Michigan. My brother, Mike, was with my father and me as we rendezvoused at the Club House with Ford and the Secret Service personnel assigned to him. Ford told my father he would "catch up with him and Mike at the third hole" and to "leave us to our business". I was maintained in "Silence" until Ford and I were out of range of the Secret Service men, and I recited a message from Reagan instilled prior to the Shell Game,

"If you please, Sir," I began in Oz cryptic, "I have a message for you from Uncle Ronnie. It's a 'humming telegram' (oral sex game) to see if you agree that our National Anthem should be changed to America the Beautiful," (Reagan was actually serious about changing our National Anthem.)

Ford responded, "We may have to see about that later. First, we've got some other 'holes' to attend before the sun gets up any higher,"

As he teed up his golf ball I asked, "Do you still golf a lot now that you're no longer President?"

Re said very seriously, "I golfed a lot when I was President. But now, I just keep up with events from the golf course. I've earned the privilege of monitoring the progress of America's Freedom Train at my leisure." He turned to face me, "Do you play golf yet?"

"Very well, Sir, when permitted." (Houston always ensured he won.) Ford was openly amused by my answer and handed me his club. "Give it your best shot." I outshot him the first stroke and his amusement vanished. I gave him back his golf club as ordered.

At the end of the second hole, Ford said, "I'd like to have a word with you," He took me over to some trees off the fairway and turned to me with his arms crossed over his bulging chest, raised himself up taller, and bore his shark-like eyes into mine. "Lend me your ear", I had the Baby's Ear Shell with me as ordered, took it out of my back pocket and handed it to Ford. He began talking as though I were a machine and he was dictating a message. "Take this message to Dick Cheney, Pentagon. The Mob has agreed to transfer the $2.3 million (porn profits) to the Bank of Credit and Commerce International. Let's pool our money now and we'll be swimming in it. This operation has been an enterprising success. Let's keep it that way. Cease agreement with Panama. All Mexican channels are implemented (cocaine and heroin). Hail to the Chief." He took a step away and added, "And you (he poked my chest like Cheney) lake care of my friend, Dick. Here..." he handed me the Baby's Ear. For meanness he added "over and out," and did the sign of the (satanic) horns at my eyes which deepened my trance significantly since 1 had been conditioned so heavily to this by Byrd.

After he hit the golf ball, he asked, "How's my friend, Allen Simpson, these days?"

"Very well, Sir." I noticed he bristled as be missed another shot. His temper was rising. When he wanted to add more to his message, he took out his frustration on me,

"Gimme that fucking shell." He wiggled his fingers at me. That wasn't the pass phrase and I did not trigger. He grew louder and more agitated, "Where's that Baby's Ear." I still could not respond. "Lend me your goddamn ear!!" he roared at me. Close enough.

"Yes, Sir," I responded meekly as I dropped it in his hand.

He proceeded. "Tell Simpson to take care of my friend Dick Thomburgh. Get back to me on it." He returned the ear. We could see my father waiting at the next hole and Ford said he might "bean him one" with his next stroke. He swung, but missed my father.

When we met up with my father at the third hole. Ford set up his ball first, of course, and waving his club at me said, "Get out of here before I get teed off," My father pointed the way with a thumb over his shoulder and let out a shrill whistle. My brother, Mike, walked me through the bushes and back to my father's house.

My sister, Kelli Jo, was waiting tearfully for my return. She was MPDed and horrified of Ford. She and my little sister, Kimmy, and I had all been forced to sexually gratify Ford just prior to a special ordered porn film titled Three Little Kittens whereby his semen was filmed "anonymously". I was aware that Ford had initiated both of my sisters the way he had me in Cedar Springs, and they, too, dreaded his brutal and degrading sexuality. I hurried past my sister to make sure my daughter, Kelly, was OK. Cheney's threat to her life was ringing loud in my ear.

I did not see the Baby's Ear shell spirt until Kelly and I arrived in Bradenton Beach, Florida. I drove the motor home into Florida with Houston and Kelly along, and dropped Houston off at the Tampa airport, since he did not have a role in Operation Shell Game. He "had business at Boys Town in Omaha, Nebraska" where the wayward boys were being traumatized and sexually abused in accordance with the Catholic involvement in Project Monarch. Survivor Paul Bonacci of the infamous Franklin Cover-up case has named Alex Houston as one of his abusers there in Boys Town. Houston often went to Boys Town or other similar "vacation resorts" while I was on covert government business. Kelly and I drove on to Bradenton, where we checked into a participating campground on the bay across from "MacDill Air Force Base. It, too, was "Closed for the Season".

The recreation room of the campground was actually a harmonics programming operation, and the offices were filled with elaborate computers consistent with high-level CIA operations. The day Kelly and I met with Senator Simpson, I had been instructed by campground workers to drive to nearby Santa Maria Island where we were to collect unusual shells. Kelly and I were on the "wild side" of the island hunting sand dollars because they had "BIRDS" in them. As we walked through the shallow water, Kelly scared up a Stingray, which sent us screaming for the shore. Simpson was on the beach laughing, looking out of place in his cagney hat and grey suit with legs rolled up and polished shoes in hand. He seemed familiar with the beach. When we reached the shore, he struck up a conversation about shells. It wasn't until he told us about the Baby's Ear Shell and opened his wallet to retrieve it that I triggered and knew who he was. As he look it out, he also flashed his ID signalling us to go with him. Considering Kelly, he had slipped a shell into the sand for her to find that looked like an eye in a spiral, He used this as a hypnotic induction to control her, comparing it to Bush's Eye in the- Sky.

Simpson showed me the shell in his hand and began, "You. You alone will take the shuttle boat to your Princes' cruise. It will leave the dock from your own backyard (Oz) at 7:30 pm. Dress appropriately (Houston had ensured the proper attire had been packed). You will be escorted to the conference room and on into the lop deck. You will see as you approach the ship (Noriega's yacht) the top deck is surrounded in black mirrors. Look deep into the mirrors; that is where you will be. And where I will be when next we meet," We walked a little further up the beach to where the motor home was parked and, referring to the Baby's Ear, Simpson said, "They're very rare indeed. This one is the right ear. You must go to the other side of the island, out Long Boat Key, to find its match. The Colonel (Aquino) has the baby's left ear and will meet you at the Pier at 4 pm. Stop at the little market on the corner and call. Then it's just down the street a little ways."

I followed instructions robotically. Kelly and I watched from the pier as four big, armed (with machine guns) emotionless (programmed?) guards scanned the area as Aquino emerged from a car. Kelly said, "Mom, let's go". I remembered Cheney's threat and assured her I would protect her, though I could not comprehend from what.

When Aquino approached with two Dobermans on leashes, I told him Simpson had sent me there looking for the left baby's ear. He opened his hand to reveal "all that was left-the baby's ear-the dogs had devoured and consumed the rest of the baby." It was bloody, ragged, and bluish rather than pink. Whether or not this was an actual baby's ear, the impact was the same. I put Kelly further behind me away from the dogs. I stood traumatized and entranced, ready for command. Aquino instructed me in full detail on the night's activities, and that I was to leave Kelly with campground personnel until my return.

That evening I was taken lo Noriega's yacht in the bay via a small motorboat. I triggered and tranced further as I approached the familiar "black mirrored" yacht according to plan. I was helped onto the back of the yacht by Panamanian "palace" guards who kept me there at gunpoint until 1 was cleared and my Baby's Ear pass key accepted. I was escorted past the Air Force Base officials, their wives, drug people, and the vast amounts of cocaine laid out for them. I recognized several of the guests, including Oliver North and Puerto Rican drug lord Jose Busto. I was led up the stairs to the conference room where Aquino, Noriega, and Simpson were waiting. Simpson! I realized I must "be on the other side of the black mirror" and I gazed out into the darkness.

Simpson spoke softly, "You're on the other side of the black mirror now (NASA programming), peering though the blackness out to sea. Sea of black. Riding on a sea of black, drifting, drifting from the winds. Deep into the blackness. Drifting through the sands of time. Black sands, yielding shells—such as this Baby's Ear." He pressed it into my hand signaling it was time for me to speak, I addressed Noriega,

"If you please, Sir, I have a message from the President of the United Stales of America: The successes we have enjoyed in our shared endeavors are now history in the making, whose course cannot be altered-regardless of the imminent lifting of the veil by well intentioned do-gooders. As this veil is lifted, it may shed light on you. So you must have your house in order, as does Ollie North, and cease any and all detectable activity I will do my best to keep you under shield and out of view if you comply with these orders and cease all detectable activity at once."

Noriega reacted as anticipated, obviously insulted by me message. In the ensuing moment of chaos, Aquino hypnotically waved his hands in front of Noriega and dramatically spread out his satanic black cape (worn for impact on Noriega's superstitions) which appeared to fill the room. Noriega all but bowed to him as Aquino's control over him was complete.

Aquino's manner was side-show-style rather than the usual somber tones used on Military bases for the Hands On demonstrations. "General, for vour entertainment and in respect and appreciation of your successful enterprising 'Contra-bution', the Chief has sent his Presidential Model to demonstrate the latest technology in mind-control advancements. With the flip of a switch, this Pigeon becomes a Kitten (I began undressing). Quite a different animal."

Because of Noriega's superstitious beliefs, the whole idea of switching personalities apparently frightened him. I know Noriega believed whole heartedly in mind control, but could not grasp the concept of multiple personalities (which I now believe he perceived as demonic possession). Therefore, he did not adhere to the idea of one slave being trained for both business and pleasure. Aquino, whom Noriega already perceived as a "devil" working for Reagan, was manipulating his beliefs masterfully. The impact of this demonstration and Operation would prove to be Psychological Warfare of the highest order.

Aquino ordered me to lie on the bed and invited Noriega to look closer at what the "Wizard"-"his Chief (Reagan) - could create. Noriega stepped closer to see what Aquino was pointing out to him between my breasts. A large, carved baphomet appeared. Aquino had hypnotically regressed me to the time of its making which caused it to seemingly "suddenly appear" right before Noriega's eyes. Noriega jumped back, ignorantly terrified of this scientific phenomena. I believe Noriega stayed in the room for the rest of the demonstration simply because he was frozen in fear. Aquino hit me with a cat-o-nine-tails and I shrieked in pain. Noriega jumped, Aquino hit me with it again, this time activating me to respond sexually as though pain were pleasure-a mind-control concept that Noriega more readily grasped. Then Aquino pointed out that the baphomet had disappeared. While Noriega looked, Aquino used Byrd's Hypnotic induction as he cut me "between the breasts with a knife saying, "In like a knife sharp and clean, I'll carve out what I want." My trance had been deepened to the extert that my circulatory system was slowed. Therefore I did not bleed until Aquino hypnotically changed my trance level. He then told Noriega that the baphomet carving had "retreated to the depths of my body and soul, possessing me and inciting the heal of hell." He commanded me to show any "face", the vaginal mutilation carving of the baphomet face. As I did, Aquino offered Noriega my sex. As predicted, Noriega's eyes bulged in terror and revulsion. While Aquino told him his "rejection of me had killed me," I ceased breathing and moving as conditioned. Noriega was dumfounded as Aquino laughed wickedly and threatened, "Even death will not permit her-or you-escape from the Wizard's power." He explained that I was the "Wizard's own" and "under his spell" and could therefore "re-energize myself and come back to life." He put a vaginal prod in my hand and ordered me to masturbate myself with it, pushing the button to electrically jolt myself internally upon command. Noriega's eyes were enormous. He paled to a sickly grey, his mouth fell open and he ran out the door while Aquino assured him that he had "NO where to run, no where to hide from Reagan's powers."

Noriega predictably interpreted the demonstration as a threat from the depths of HELL, which should have been enough to heed Reagan's commands to break the drug trafficking ties immediately. (Apparently this is not the case as is evidenced by Noriega's continued Florida incarceration.) Aquino and Simpson doubled over with laughter as they congratulated themselves on a job well done. Simpson finally ordered me to dress and escorted me to the back of the yacht to ensure the guards put me on the shuttle boat rather than kill me because of Noriega's horror.

As I approached the dock of the campground, the boat driver told me I would find Kelly asleep in the 'recreation' room. 1 ran to her, and, fearful of Cheney's threat, made sure her ears were still intact. I was immensely relieved to find them still there and to know she was "OK" (I could not think to wonder what she had endured in my absence.) I illogically felt like a "good mom" for "doing my part right so Kelly could live." Never before had I experienced such a sense of danger to us both and my relief was proportionate. I lovingly held her in my arms the rest of the night.

CHAPTER 14

CLINTON COKE LINES

I met up with Bill Clinton again in 1982 at a county fair in Berryville, Arkansas. Alex Houston was "entertaining" there due to the close proximity of the CIA Near Death Trauma Center (aka slave conditioning and programming camp) and drug distribution point at Swiss Villa in Lampe. Missouri. I had just endured intense physical and psychological trauma and programming, Clinlon was campaigning for Governor and was backstage with Hillary and Chelsea while waiting to make a speech. Clinton stook in the afternoon sun with his arms crossed, talking to Houston about him and "his people" (CIA Operatives) being looked into specific areas for the dual purpose of entertaining and carrying our specific covert drug operations.

From my perspective, those who were actively laying the groundwork for implementing the New World Order through mind conditioning of the masses made no distinction between Democratic and Republican Parties. Their aspirations were international in proportion, not American. Members were often drawn from, among other elitist groups, the Council on Foreign Relations. Like George Bush, Bill Clinton was an active member of the CFR, Bilderbergers, and Tri-Lateral Commission. Based on numerous conversations I overheard. Clinlon was being groomed and prepared to fill the role of President under the guise of Democrat in the event that the American people became discouraged with Republican leaders. This was further evidenced by the extent of Clinton's New World Order knowledge and professed loyalties.

Clinlon understood that I had just been through "hell" in Lampe, and took it all in stride as he focused on his speech. He not only was well aware of the mfnd-control tortures and criminal covert activities proliferating in Arkansas and the neighboring state of Missouri, but he condoned them! Just as there are no partisan preferences in this world dominance effort, neither are there any strong individual state considerations or boundaries, either. I knew from experience that Clinton's Arkansas criminal covert operations meshed with the Lampe. Missouri center where he routinely tended business and claimed to "vacation." staying in the compound's resort villas.

In 1983, Houston took me to Lampe for routine trauma and programming while he was scheduled to "entertain" at the amphitheatre. Also scheduled to perform were Bill Clinton's and George Bush's friends Lee Greenwood and CIA operative, slave runner, and country music singer Tommy Overstreet Greenwood and Overstreet were active in both the Lampe, Missouri and Lake/Mount Shasta, California CIA compounds. Clinton was flown in from Berryville, Arkansas by helicopter for the shows as well as for a business meeting.

Before Clinton arrived. Greenwood and Houston were in the backstage dressing rooms snorting fine after fine of cocaine, Houston, always eager to make an extra penny to pinch, attempted to prostitute me to Greenwood, "She's the real performer," Houston said. "She performs all kinds of sex acts upon command. For a small price, she's yours."

Greenwood laughed, and referring to my Huntsville. Alabama NASA programming said, "I've spent more time in Huntsville than she has, and I know full well who and what she is-a 'space cadet' programmed for sex. She's a modified version of Marilyn Monroe."

Tommy Overstreet had waited in and heard what Greenwood said. "How much time have you spent in Shasta?"

"Shasta?" Greenwood looked arrogantly at Overstreet and smiled knowingly as he said, "You don't 'spend time' in Shasta, you maintain the concept if you can. I haven't lost any time there, either, if that's your next question. I go there quite a bit Enough really to override Houston's suggestion with ease and take what I want, when I want, and how 1 want it."

Greenwood began expertly accessing my sex programming and told the others in the room, "You all can come and go as you please, but I've been made an offer that I am going to use." He ordered me to undress and bend over the desk where he roughly sodomized me as he said, "You're going to think it's daddy all over again".

When Greenwood was through with me, I was ordered out into the amphitheatre concert area. During intermission, I met up with Swiss Villa manager Hal Meadows, Tommy Overstreet, and Governor Clinton in the hall. Clinton was wearing a cap that read "Diesel Trainer" which I was told to equate literally as "these-will-train-her". Puzzled, 1 looked at his cap and asked, "Are you a conductor?"

Clinton smiled and said, "Of electricity". Overstreet laughed as he continued, "Actually it means I check cabooses. How's yours?" I squirmed. Apparently Greenwood had bragged about sodomizing me. They laughed even harder as Clinton said, "Still running, I'm sure".

Houston stepped out of the dressing room to greet Clinton, "Hi, bud." Houston extended his hand. "I hear you made Governor."

"I hear you deliver a hell of a one liner," Clinton replied, cryptically referring to cocaine and NOT Houston's so-called comedy routine. "I'm always aspiring to achieve new heights."

"Well, come on in," Houston invited. "I have enough (cocaine) to put us all into orbit." I walked into the dressing room with them as Houston was saying to Clinton, "I suppose there are no limits for you since you're across the (stale) line."

"What line?" Clinton feigned surprise and ignorance. He looked at Hal Meadows as he continued, "You mean I've left that state of mine? In the state of mind I'm in, there are no boundaries anyway." He walked over to the table and snorted a line of cocaine. "I come here to get away from it all. This kind of business is pleasure."

"So where's that young wife of yours?" Houston asked, referring to Hillary.

"She's with friends." Clinton sniffed the coke further up his nose. "She's minding her own business. I'm just here to unwind, see the show, maybe do a little hunting (referring to A Most Dangerous Game). I've got a bird (helicopter) ready to fly me back when I'm through. Hey, speaking of 'Byrd' (he gestured my way) I hear she's moved up to the big house (White House)." Referring to his friend and mentor Senator Byrd he asked, "So what's his position now?"

"The same." Houston answered. "Probably like this..." Houston pantomimed a lewd sodomy pose while everyone laughed. "He still runs the show."

Clinton kept his eyes fixed on Houston's "caboose" and said, "Why don't you show her (referring to me) me way out and show me that again?" If 1 could have thought at that moment, I would have realized Bill Clinton was/is bisexual. My personal sexual experience with Clinton was limited, but I had witnessed him engaged in homosexual activity during an orgy at Swiss Villa.

Immediately following the Swiss Villa incident, Houston was scheduled as usual to perform at the county fair in Benyville, Arkansas. There, Houston and I had been visiting with long time Clinton Mend and supporter, H.B. Gibson, when we parted company to attend a private meeting at the mansion of Clinton's bisexual friend and supporter Bill Hall, Hall had reportedly made his fortune in the pre-fabricated log home business, and the Clintons were slaying in a guest villa patterned after those at Swiss Villa. Hillary had taken toddler Chelsea to the villa while Clinton and his aide/bodyguard attended the meeting. Tommy Overstreet was also in attendance as this directly coincided with the recent Lampe meeting. We all sat in Hall's sunken living room on two couches facing each other with a black mirror coffee table between us. Hall had cut numerous lines of cocaine on the table, and everyone present—including Bill Clinton—was inhaling it through $50 bills rolled into straws. The conversation ranged from CIA, drugs, and politics to the Swiss Villa Amphitheatre and country music. At that time, a major effort was underway to move Nashville, Tennessee's country music industry to the Lampe area (it has since literally moved to nearby Branson), in closer proximity to the CIA cocaine operations that leached the industry.

Tommy Overstreet was attempting to convince Hall, who was obviously no stranger to the drug (cocaine) business, to join the high level CIA cocaine operation that was funding covert activity. They discussed the possibility of Hall transporting cocaine from Berryville, Arkansas to Nashville, Tennessee to be in on the ground level of what would soon be one of the largest and most prolific CIA cocaine operations—the Branson, Missouri country music industry. By enlisting now, the contacts and customers that Hall would procure could "politically and financially bolster him for life". Additionally, Overstreet discussed the viability of using Hall's own company trucks to transport the drug throughout Atlanta, Georgia; Louisville, Kentucky; and Jacksonville, Florida as well as Nashville, Tennessee and Lampe, Missouri. These key CIA cocaine routes coincided with Hall's established truck routes, according to the insiders present at the meeting. Hall was being offered the "opportunity of a lifetime" as his role would also include laundering money through his business to fund the black budget covert operations. Hall appeared nervous and skeptical, and Clinton and Overstreet attempted to maintain a "light" atmosphere by joking that Hall could change the name of his trucking line to "CLINTON COKE LINES".

Hall was not convinced and began to raise questions as to the longevity of the operation and how he was going to protect himself. Although Hall was very adept at the cocaine business, he voiced concern that he found it easier to trust those who were not with the CIA operations lhan he did U.S. government protected participants. Clinton reassured him that it was "Reagan's operation," but Hall was concerned that some faction of the government would "shut it down like a sting operation" without warning and leave him literally holding the bag, Houston laughed and explained that "no one was going to cut it (the drug business) off." He assured them it was far too lucrative and that there would "always be a market" for drugs-a market controlled by those criminals implementing their New World Order.

Clinton added to what Houston "said, talking in local colloquialisms. "Bottom line is, we've got control of the (drug) industry, therefore we've got control of them (suppliers and buyers). You control the guy underneath ya' and Uncle (Sam) has ya' covered. What have ya' got to lose? No risk. No one's gonna hang ya' out to dry. And whatever spills off the truck as it passes through (he laughed and snorted another line of coke) you get to clean up."

Hall smiled at his friend, which was apparently interpreted as consent. Clinton motioned for his aide to get his ledger. Overstreet began pulling out his paperwork, and Hall neatly cleared the table of the remaining coke lines.

Clinton gestured to me and told Houston, "Get her out of here".

Houston didn't move and laughed. "She's a Presidential Model. She's kept secrets bigger than yours."

Clinton responded, "I don't care. Get her the fuck out of here,"

Hall's wife led me away and locked me in a back bedroom. After an indeterminate period of time, I heard her telephone Hillary at the guest villa. She then drove me up the mountain through the dark to meet with Hillary. Although I had previously met Hillary we had very little to say to each other-particulariy since I was still dazed and tranced from the tortures I had endured at the CIA Near Death Trauma Center in Lampe. Hillary knew I was a mind-controlled slave, and, like Bill Clinton, just took it in stride as a "normal" part of life in politics,

Hillary was fully clothed and stretched out on the bed sleeping when Hall's wife and I arrived. "Hillary, I brought you something you'll really enjoy. Kind of an unexpected surprise. Bill ordered her out of the meeting and I look her to my bedroom and made an interesting discovery. She is literally a two-faced (referring to my vaginal mutilation carving) bitch,"

"Hmm?" Hillary opened her eyes and sleepily roused herself "Show me." Hall's wife ordered me to take my clothes off while Hillary watched. "Is she clean?" Hillary asked, meaning disease free.

"Of course, she's Byrd's," she responded, continuing the conversation as though I were not there, "Plus, I heard Houston say something about her being a Presidential Model, whatever the hell that's supposed to mean."

"It means she's clean," Hillary said matter-of-factly as she stood up. I was not capable of giving thought to such things back then, but I am aware in retrospect that all Presidential Model slaves I knew seemed to have an immunity to social diseases. It was a well known fact in the circles I was sexually passed around in that government level mind-controlled sex slaves were "clean" to the degree that none of my abusers took precautions such as wearing condoms.

Hall's wife patted the bed and instructed me to display the mutilation. Hillary exclaimed, "God!" and immediately began performing oral sex on me. Apparently aroused by the carving in my vagina,[2] Hillary stood up and quickly peeled out of her matronly nylon panties and pantyhose. Uninhibited despite a long day in the hot sun, she gasped, "Eat me, oh, god, eat me now". I had no choice but to comply with her orders, and Bill Hall's wife made no move to join me in my distasteful task. Hillary had resumed examining my hideous mutilation and performing oral sex on me when Bill Clinton walked in. Hillary lifted her head to ask, "How'd it go?"

Clinton appeared totally unaffected by what he walked into, tossed his jacket on a chair and said, "It's official. I'm exhausted. I'm going to bed."

I put my clothes on as ordered, and Hall's wife drove me back down to the mansion where Houston was waiting for me. The meeting apparently had been a success. I heard discussions throughout the remaining years between Houston, his agent Reggie MacLaughlin, and Loretta Lynn's handler, Ken Riley pertaining to Hall's successful branch of the CIA cocaine operation emanating from Arkansas, No discussions were as poignant and revealing as those between Alex Houston and CIA operative country music entertainer Boxcar Willie.

Boxcar Willie burst onto the country music scene after an ad campaign of high tech hypnotically persuasive produced television commercials that strategically made him an overnight, sensation and "star". The country music industry's Freedom Train needed a conductor to lead the industry and fans to Branson, Missouri, and Boxcar Willie was placed in the driver's seat. Like the Pied Piper of Hamlin, Boxcar Willie succeeded in his role of trance-ferring the industry in close proximity to the Lampe CIA cocaine operations.

Boxcar Willie was one of the primary ground level contacts that Bill Hall made after Clinton convinced him to cash in on the cocaine benefits of the country music industry transfer. Houston and Boxcar Willie discussed Hall's lucrative dealings throughout the years in my presence while traveling the country together, billed on the same shows, including performances at the Swiss Villa Amphitheatre, I had much contact with Boxcar Willie personally since my government sponsored cocaine runs often coincided and intermeshed with his. But 1 never knew Boxcar Willie as well as my daughter, Kelly, knew him. Kelly has named Boxcar Willie as one of her primary sexual abusers in three different mental institutions, and has voiced frustration at the lack of justice. "Why am I the one locked up while my abusers remain free?" she constantly pleads. I assure her I am doing all I can to blow the whistle on Boxcar Willie for hex, and expose his role in transferring the country music industry to close proximity of the Lampe, Missouri CIA cocaine operation as outlined by Bill Clinton.

---

[1] Loyalty to the sovereign of our country is non existent under New World Orders. "President" Clinton poses no more leadership or loyalty to our country than Ronald Reagan did since both follow(ed) New World Order directives from former U.N. Ambassador and CIA DIRECTor George Bush,

[2] Hillary Clinton is the only female to become sexually aroused at the sight of my mutilated vagina.

CHAPTER 15

NO MORE BEATING AROUND THE BUSH

It was a sunny, fall day in 1983 when U.S. Congressman Guy VanderJagt met with my CIA operative mind-control handler, Alex Houston, my then 3 1/2 year old daughter, Kelly, and me on the steps of the U.S. Senate in Washington, D.C. Kelly appeared familiar with Vanderjagt, although I had never previously remembered seeing her in his company. Even so, I could not think to realize he was, in fact, sexually abusing her just as he had me when I was a child. VanderJagt knelt on one knee in front of her to talk with her, assuring her that "today was a special day" because she would "see Uncle George (Bush) while mommy sees Uncle Ronnie (Reagan)". He stood up and took her by the hand, saying in Alice In Wonderland cryptic language, "Let's go on an Adventure together" and led her quietly and robotically away.

I met up with Kelly again that afternoon at the White House, both of us literally "on our toes" and standing at attention in Reagan's office. In retrospect, I wonder at the measures of control inflicted on my 3 1/2-year old child to cause her to perform so robotically and behave "so well" as she silently stood with the plastic smile and unblinking eyes, in the presence of President Reagan, Vice President Bush, and (later Defense Secretary) Dick Cheney. Reagan appeared to gaze at Kelly, with her long blonde hair cascading down the back of her blue pinafore dress, completing her Alice In Wonderland Appearance. Reagan seemed to pose no direct threat to her sexually as he said, "She is adorable, a model child",

Reagan then gestured towards Bush and said, "This is my Vice President George Bush. People don't usually know what the role of the Vice President is because he's always behind the scenes making sure everything that the President wants done happens the way it's supposed to." He looked at me and said matter-of-factly, "I catch the public's attention (he made a gesture in the air that was eye catching) while the Vice President carries out orders."

Bush's close friend, Dick Cheney, said, "And gives them".

"Right," Reagan said. "An order from him is like an order from me."

Bush was wearing canvas boat shoes and a cardigan sweater as he knelt on one knee in front of Kelly in order to talk to her on her level. Bush used the children's television program Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood to scramble/confuse young victims' (like Kelly's) memory of contact with him and his sexual abuse. His physical resemblance to TV's Fred Rogers was deliberately exaggerated by his choice of clothes and mannerisms, and is further compounded by his developed vocal impersonation. Using his best Mr. Rogers voice he said, "Come here, Little One. I want to ask you something. Do you watch Mr, Rogers' Neighborhood?"

"Yes, Sir," Kelly responded.

Bush told Kelly, "Well, I'm kind of like Mr. Rogers when he makes his puppets move and talk—like your daddy (Houston, ventriloquist) does with Elemer (his dummy). Only I'm like Mr. Rogers because I have lots of puppets--only mine are people. I even have a King (Fahd) just like Mr. Rogers.[1] I pull the strings (he pantomimed marionette hand movements) and I talk through them. They say my words and we create all kinds of exciting Adventures. Right now I'm building a new Neighborhood (the New World Order). The stage is set, and I have hold of everyone's strings. I need you to help me—together we can pull your mother's strings. She's in my Neighborhood. That means you're in my Neighborhood, too."

It seems obvious to me now that Bush was referring to those actively engaged in implementing the New World Order through chaos and mass mind control (aka media conditioning) as "The Neighborhood". Of course I was unable to consider disputing Bush's statement, and Kelly was certainly not of a mind to see beyond Bush's twist on her favorite television program. Kelly's big blue eyes grew even wider as she responded, "I am?"

Bush stood up and took her hand, "C'mon. Let me show you my Neighborhood," He led her out the door.

Kelly became violently physically ill after her induction into George Bush's "Neighborhood." and from every sexual encounter she had with him thereafter. She ran 104-6 degree temperatures, vomited and endured immobilizing headaches for an average of three days (as is consistent with high voltage trauma). These were the only tell-tale evidences aside from the scarring burns left on her skin. Houston forbade me to call a doctor, and Kelly forbade me to comfort her, pitifully complaining that her head "hurt too bad to even move". And she did not move for hours on end. Kelly often complained of severe kidney pain, and her rectum usually bled for a day or two after Bush sexually abused her. My own mind-control victimization rendered me unable to help or protect her. Seeing my child in such horrible condition drove my own wedge of insanity in deeper, perpetuating my total inability to affect her needs until our rescue by Mark Phillips in 1988.

Kelly's bleeding rectum was but one of many physical indicators of George Bosh's pedophile perversions, I have overheard him speak blatantly of his sexual abuse of her on many occasions. He used this and threats to her life to "pull my strings" and control me. The psychological ramifications of being raped by a pedophile President arc mind-shattering enough, but reportedly Bush further reinforced his traumas to Kelly's mind with sophisticated NASA electronic and drug mind-control devices. Bush also instilled the "Who ya gonna call?" and "I'll be watching you" binds on Kelly, further reinforcing her sense of helplessness. The systematic tonures and traumas I endured as a child now seem trite in comparison to the brutal physical and psychological devastation that George Bush inflicted on my daughter.

As soon as the door closed behind Bush and Kelly, Dick Cheney reached over to Reagan's desk from his seat and flipped over the hourglass. (Oz) "Her (Kelly's) time is running out. You'd better pay attention and follow orders as though her life depends on it, because from now on (heh heh) it always does! If you make one mistake—one—then I'll get her, my pretty."

Reagan said, "George is like a director. He makes sure the stage is set to implement the New World Order as I envision it. Then he makes sure everyone has a script and knows their pan. He tells them how to speak and when to speak it. How to dress and (patting my head) how to wear their hair. He gets everything and everyone in place and hollers, 'Action!'" Reagan shouted through his hand as though it were a megaphone and rambled on, "All the world's a stage. I'm the Wizard. But he is directing the show so you better pay attention and learn your part well from him."

Cheney interrupted, "George and I will be working closely on a few projects together, and when you see him, you'll see me. When you're given orders from him, you're given orders from me."

"She knows the chain of command, Dick," Reagan injected, referring to his perception of who was in charge, and in what order. President, Vice President, Habib, Cheney, Byrd, etc. may have been the chain of command in Reagan's mind, but Cheney's definition was necessary to my understanding. From my perspective, the chain of command was clearly Bush, Cheney, Habib, Reagan, Aquino and lastly, on a par with my handler, Houston, Byrd, all of which was subjet to change at any given moment. Cheney just rolled his eyes at Reagan's comment and never slowed down as he continued, "Right now a stage is being set and you will be directed by the Vice President on just how he wants you to do your part in setting the stage for Mexico's role in the New World Order."

Reagan jumped in again, "With the world in order, there will be world peace. By strategically placing an American Patriot dedicated to the cause of spreading democracy in all parts of the world, we can influence the thinking of every nation's leader and paint for them a picture of freedom and American values that they'll never forget. They'll spread it to the people and the whole planet will be of one mind—one purpose-one cause. Freedom. You'll be talking with some of these friends and leaders from time to lime on my behalf."

Bush slipped back into the meeting, without Kelly. Cheney continued, "Taking orders from me and your new director-the Vice President. Lesson number one. You know what Miami Vice is. Undercover drug agents taking control of the drug industry. A Vice President is just that-an undercover drug agent taking control of the drug industry-for the President."

Bush spoke up. "Mexico is a problem. They've got lots of drugs, but not the brains nor lhe means to sell it outside their own country. So how can we take control of their (growing) drug industry when we can't even get our hands on it? It's your duty as an American citizen to open the routes and initiate freedom from poverty throughout their nation by offering them cash as a means of enticing their drug industry right into our grasp by bringing it right up to our doorsteps."

"Operation Greenbacks for Wetbacks," Cheney said, laughing. Bush laughed with him.

Bush regained his composure to conclude, "Your assignment begins in Miami with NCL (Norwegian Caribbean Lines) and ends when you return from Mexico with word of success."

Cheney caught my eye with a hand gesture that directed my gaze from Bush to the hourglass, which was running out fast. By then I was deeply tranced and lost touch with my surroundings all together while my trance was timelessly deepened for further programming, I left the White House with a message for the Vice President of Mexico, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, from the Vice President of the U.S., and with one very sick child.

---

[1] Mr Roger projects through puppets on his show, and one of his key characters from the Land of Make-Believe is King Friday the 13th.

CHAPTER 16

OPERATION GREENBACKS FOR WETBACKS

My CIA mind-control handler, Alex Houston and I boarded the Norwegian Caribbean Lines ship bound for Cozumel, Mexico, with a large, black, soft side suitcase packed full of cash and a proposal of "prosperity" from the U.S. This proposal, programmed in me by Vice President Bush, was supposedly initial diplomatic groundwork for the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

It was my understanding then that the North American Free Trade Agreement was considered a significant step in implementing the New World Order through mind manipulation of the masses. According to Byrd, propaganda disguising the true purpose of NAFTA included the concept of "free trade" which the U.S. and Mexican governments had long since shared. "Free trade" of child and adult mind-controlled slaves, cocaine, heroin and businesses has been not-so-secretly proliferating for years. My own father joined the "run for the border" via U.S. State Department and Mexican subsidized business incentives and opened yet another branch of his U.S. Department of Defense-given-business in Mexico. This was part of the "free trade" agreement that I know personally has been operating smoothly from at least 1984. In an effort to maintain the illusion that the agreement would not create a negative economic imbalance between Mexico and the U.S., tourist areas of Mexico were deliberately built up, enhanced and Americanized with U.S. dollars. These funds were provided through CIA covert Black Budget operations of drug and slave trading, as well as directly through the Senate Appropriations Committee of which Senator Robert C. Byrd is chairman as of this writing.

I certainly do not purport to understand international business, nor have I attempted to "educate" myself through what 1 know to be propaganda slanted and filtered periodicals. How money interfaces in world markets has been well documented. For example, who supports whom in which financial endeavors is apparently far too complex for even BCCI attorneys and investigators to sort through. My personal perspective on Mexican, U.S., and Saudi Arabian buildup of Mexico's economy is limited to my own experiences. My understanding is further affected by deliberate misinformation from the criminal perspectives of those who were in control of my mind's knowledge base and actions. From time to time, Senator Byrd used me as a robotic sounding board. He told me what he wanted me to hear, and this was structured more toward stroking his own enormous, warped ego than it was to educate me in world finance.

Senator Byrd claimed "the money game is simply a game of control," and lives by his adopted Golden Rule of "He who holds the gold makes the rules," He told me in so many words that "by appropriating funds to all (viable) projects ushering in the free trade agreement, and allocating lesser amounts to U.S. social systems such as our 'criminal' justice system, I control our country and our place in world markets. All the world is a stage, and I own the theater!...you can bank on it!"

Senator Byrd's twisted reality echoed in my mind when America was bought (stolen) and sold by Presidents Bush and Clinton in the recent passage of NAFTA. "I would never run for President—Oh, I'd win if I did," Byrd bragged. "But why should I run for an office that is beneath me? I can make a President look good, or I can make him look bad by strategically appropriating funds." Byrd and others I knew boasted that he was one of those (corrupt power brokers) responsible for Bill Clinton's being "chosen" and elected to the office of Presidency. And the last minute bids and dealings with those Congressmen holding NAFTA's deciding votes proved "strategic appropriations" indeed made Clinton "look good" in his NAFTA "victory".

At the La Celiba Hotel in Cozumel, Houston maintained my food and water depravation for mind-control purposes, even during our dinner meeting in the hotel's restaurant later that evening. Although the restaurant was "officially" closed due to the late hour, a mariachi band, one waiter, four stationed armed guards, my Mexican dignitary contact, his two assistants, and handler, Houston and I were present. During the meeting, arrangements were made to meet with Mexico's then Vice President Salinas the next afternoon at a nearby military installation. I would also deliver a message as usual from Senator Byrd at the nearby Consulate's office pertaining to U.S. financial support for creating propaganda to insure the illusion of economic equality in Mexican tourist areas. These funds were simply to further the ongoing shared goal of easing into New World Order domination through carefully contrived smoke and mirror tactics.

The next afternoon, Houston escorted me to the high security fenced government installation for my meeting with Salinas. According to Bush, Salinas was regarded by the Reagan-Bush Administration as superior in power to Miguel de la Madrid who was officially President of Mexico at that time. The upcoming Mexican "election," which was no more an election than Reagan's second term, was to place Salinas in the office of President to coincide with Bush's destined Presidency. To insure that this "strategically placed American Patriot" would be voted into position, Reagan informed me that the U.S. would "guard the integrity" of "elections" by covertly "overseeing" them, among other strategies. Salinas was to be President at all costs.

Although President de la Madrid was considered by Bush to be the stepping stone to the ultimate reign of Salinas/Bush's (already established) diplomatic relations, he was regarded with all due respect in a manner conducive to "no margins for error". His full cooperation was tantamount to establishing Bush's and Salinas[1] goals via free flowing drug markets and Mexico's cooperation in subversively funding and supplying Reagan's Nicaraguan Contras. De la Madrid worked in close association with Salinas so that a smooth transition of power would maintain U.S.-Mexican relations and efforts already in place.

"A message to Salinas is a message to the President," Cheney had explained. Not only would the message be relayed to de Ja Madrid, but for the most part Salinas was the one responsible for working with George Bush since they would both come into power during the most critical point in the promotion of NAFTA—passing it by the American people and into law. President Reagan, Mexican President de la Madrid, Vice President Bush, and Mexican Vice President Salinas were all "of one mind—one effort" toward economic expansion and growth for our southern "neighbors in the New World Order" through what I experienced was based on "free trade" of drugs, children, and pornography. Vice President Bush told me that this (criminal) activity was regarded as Mexico's "only means of rapid economic advancement and freedom from poverty since the people were slaves to their own inability to advance in world markets."

When I arrived at the military installation with the aforementioned suitcase of cash in hand, I was taken to Salinas' "office" through a series of electronic gates guarded by officers in white uniforms. Salinas sal at his desk, which was small and functional (i.e., military issue), set on a highly polished wooden floor in a vast room virtually void of decor and personal effects. This created an air of military practicality. I set the suitcase in front of Salinas and began relaying the message I had been programmed to deliver

"I have a message from the Vice President of the United State of America to our neighbors in Mexico. America is willing to share its wealth through a trade agreement with Mexico. We'll trade our cash for control over Mexico's cocaine and heroin production. By controlling your drug industry, we can open the border between our countries to allow a free flow of cocaine and heroin into the U.S., bought and paid for in American dollars to build Mexico, Eventually this could dissolve the border between our countries altogether as Mexico's economy grows to match ours. If we begin today, this dream could be realized by the turn of the century-sharing the same continent, sharing the same wealth. Why? The drug industry already dictates what the Mexican government can or cannot do. By giving the U.S. control of your drug industry, Mexico regains control over her government. Re-established power backed by U.S. dollars will bring Mexico on an economic par with America. We can begin by spreading the word through the (drug) cartels that the U.S. is covertly willing to open the borders to free drug trade by making agents available to show you the passage and routes through which the drugs are to be delivered. Only U.S. agents can bring Mexican heroin and (South American) cocaine across the border, and likewise they will bring the cash in. Explain to those select few who control the drug empires that the cruise line (NCL) agreement is going into mass expansion, tearing down the border between our countries enough to allow for as many drugs to come in as Mexico can deal out. When do we begin? Immediately. The cash is at hand. (I gestured toward the suitcase which Salinas unzipped to find full of cash.) Deliver whatever amount of brown heroin you have at hand as a means of confirmation to the agreement. Keep the change as a token of the change and good fortune that has befallen Mexico from its neighboring nation."

As I finished Bush's message, Salinas immediately took a note pad from the desk and scrawled a quick note. He passed it to a guard who was stationed at the door. He stood up, smiled, and leaned over his desk as he extended his hand in a warm handshake. I was escorted out. Houston found me on the front steps of the installation and together we were escorted through the barbed wire fences and back onto the streets of Cancun,

I waited in a small clearing nearby for an indeterminate length of time, playing with a large iguana. Finally, a taxi cab driver pulled up and honked his horn three times, signaling me to pick up a fist-sized ball of Mexican brown heroin. The heroin was crudely wrapped in brown paper, tied with twine, and measured approximately the size of a baseball. As quickly as the cab driver left, Houston, who was standing some distance away with two uniformed men, signaled me to join him. We were then driven to the airport where we boarded a U.S. Air Force aircraft to Washington, D.C.

Immediately upon arrival at Andrews Air Force Base just outside of Washington, D.C, I was taken to Senator Byrd who then escorted me to Dick Cheney's Pentagon office for a meeting with Vice President Bush, 1 was ill and vomiting from the high voltage administered in Mexico to compartmentalize my memory. I was allowed to use Byrd's magnetic pass key card to unlock the maze of doors that led to the Ladies' Room. I was still wearing my inappropriate-for-D.C. cruise clothes and carrying the heroin in my tote bag when I met with Bush to confirm Mexico's agreement to his proposal. Bush took the heroin for himself, obviously pleased with the quality of the product. Cheney laughed and told Bush he needed to "confiscate the Contra-band".

Bush replied, "Over my dead body" as he laughed at Cheney's Contra joke.

"If you don't share some of it, that could be the case," Cheney said. "Pitch it here."

Bush struck a pitch pose, wound up, made a fake out pitch, and joked in baseball banter, "It's a 'high fly' ball. You're going to have to steal." He tossed the heroin in the air, caught it, and strode for the door, Cheney got out of his chair, pointed to the door, and ordered me "Out".

Houston and I were flown in to Montego Bay, Jamaica and transported to Ocho Rios to board our next NCL cruise ship.

CHAPTER 17

ABOUT FACES

Soon after Kelly was inducted into George Bush's "Neighborhood" through horrific sexual abuse, Bush enforced his controls on me. Our mind-control handler, Alex Houston, had taken Kelly and me to Washington, D.C. for separately scheduled meetings with Bush. Kelly had already been escorted by agents to her rendezvous with him that morning, during which Lime I had been ordered to one of U.S, Senator Robert C. Byrd's offices located in the nearby FBI Hoover Building. There, Byrd reinforced his holds on me by claiming control of the Justice Department and "proving" once again that I had "no where to run and no where to hide". My horror reaction was compounded when Byrd looked at his pocket watch and notified me in Alice in Wonderland cryptic language, "You're late, you're late for a very important date," referring to my meeting with Bush.

I sprinted from the Hoover Building, encountering Houston who waited just outside. Houston hurried me to the Smithsonian where I waited for my escorts as instructed at the "Face Changing" exhibit. This computerized exhibit illustrates how an individual's face can take on a radically different appearance by slightly altering any single feature.

The exhibit fascinated me as a programmed MPD since multiples often experience the unnerving phenomena of routinely not recognizing themselves in a mirror due to switching personalities. A multiple's face often changes slightly with each switch, which "validates" the religious communities' perceptions of so-called "demonic possession" in occultism. Logic quickly dispels this belief when it is realized that everyone's expression changes according to emotion, by skin color and tones, blood pressure, and by tightening or relaxing specific micro muscles. An MPD's face changes are more exaggerated when these natural conditions are combined with the results of sophisticated programming/ "Charm School" teaches subconscious control over these natural phenomena as a ready-made disguise on government slaves such as myself, as welt as to enhance sex slaves' "beauty" to their maximum potential. I was incapable of thinking or logically understanding my fascination with the display, as I stood totally enthralled, waiting for my escorts as ordered.

As the escorts approached, I was relieved to see Kelly with them. Though she was visibly tranced and traumatized, the fact that she was alive was all I was capable of grasping. When she saw the "Face Changing" exhibit, she excitedly exclaimed, "Uncle George just read me a book about this!" Before I could hear anymore, I was led away, leaving Kelly with our handler, Houston.

I was then quickly taken to Bush's Residence Office, which here-to-fore was unfamiliar to me. Although it had slate blue, plush carpets and fine furnishings like the White House office, lattice work and smaller rooms provided a different air. I sat in a hard-back wooden chair as ordered, while Bush carefully positioned himself in front of me on a little wooden footstool. This allowed me clear visibility of the large book that he held in his lap. All illustrations faced me, while all text except the last page was printed in the holder's direction. This book was a unique, high tech piece of art specifically designed to enforce Bush's favorite method of programming, "You Are What You Read". The juvenile face depicted on the front of this hardcover book gave it the appearance of a children's storybook. It was entitled About Faces.

Bush explained the dynamics of "changing faces" and "becoming what I read". Although I had been conditioned to this idea all of my life through Disney stories, The Wizard Of Oz, Alice In Wonderland, etc., I was not prepared for Bush's version of "You Are What You Read" programming explanations. The illustrations themselves were elaborate, consisting of mirrors and hypnotic depictions. He seemingly made the book come alive in my mind as he read page after poetic page of hypnotic, metaphorical language, all the while creating powerful illusions. His impersonations of the characters further enhanced the desired affect of fantasy becoming reality. This extraordinary effort to scramble reality would have worked-perfectly-had it not been for another victim and myself discussing it only a few days later. The purpose of Bush's book was dearly explained within the first few pages, which included the following passage:

1 am the Vice President when circumstance demands,
And I am your Commander, you'll follow my commands.
The first command's important - It is one you will heed,
When I send you a book, you are what you read.

Throughout my tenure as a Presidential Model mind-controlled slave, I was provided specific books according to Bush's program. These books, delivered through pre-established channels such as Ken Riley, Alex Houston, and even Ronald Reagan, came complete with specific commands on how they were to be interpreted and used. Some books were used to instruct me on operations; some were an attempt to scramble my memory with fantasy; others were used to load my mind with pertinent data such as bank account passbook numbers, and so on.

I was provided a paperback book entitled Afghanistan, from which I absorbed history, current political events, and the strength of the Afghany Freedom Fighters. I have since learned that the book I read was never publicly released in the text it was provided me. According to instruction, the book was delivered back to Bush as quickly as I finished memorizing it, I wonder in retrospect if any part of it contained fact beyond how I was supposed to perceive it.

I read stories of espionage, including Robert Ludlum's Bourne Identity, and William Diehl's Chameleon. Mostly I was provided steamy sex novels for further training as well as scrambles. Kelly was conditioned to fairy tales, Steven Speilberg's ET, NASA NSA operative George Lucas' Star Wars, and the nightmarish Never Ending Story. Steinbeck's classic Of Mice and Men caused Kelly constantly to quote the dependant character of Lenny for years saying, "Tell me what to do, George". She still does this each and every time I am allowed to visit with her in the mental institution. The attending therapist overseeing the visit has yet to pick up on this programming cue, and I am forbidden by Juvenile Court order not to discuss Kelly's past or therapy.

Bush's most effective example of "You Are What You Read" in his book About Faces occurred during his reading of the page depicting lizard-like "aliens" from a "far-off, deep space place", Claiming to me to be an alien himself, Bush apparently activated a hologram of the lizard-like "alien" which provided the illusion of Bush transforming like a chameleon before my eyes. In retrospect, I understand that Bush had been painstakingly careful in positioning our seats in order that the hologram's effectiveness be maximized.

U.S. Army Lt. Col. Aquino's occultism provided trauma sufficient to maintain my Project Monarch Mind-Controlled existence despite his inability to affect my core spirituality. Therefore, I was not routinely subjected to the other favorite "trauma of choice"-alien themes-lite many slaves (including Kelly) I knew had been. The effect of Bush's illusion hologram on such victims is binding and strong. Even Aquino envied the mind shattering effects of Bush's alien theme visual traumas to the extent that he wrote and published his own comic book sequel to Lucas' Star Wars. While occultism is easily dispelled with reason and fact, Bush's alien theme continues to be reinforced through NASA's involvement in mind-control atrocities. Additionally, California's 24-year incumbent Senator Alan Cranston of the Select Committee on Intelligence has perpetuated this trauma base for decades, as have others. Despite my having escaped routine "alien" theme traumas, Bush's "You Are What You Read" hologram proved devastatingly sufficient for him to gain total control of my robotic mind from that moment on untii my rescue in 1988.

By the time Bush reached the last page of his About Faces book, I was so traumatized I instantly "became what I read" when I read the last verse aloud as ordered:

I am a True Patriot living an American Dream,
I will become my role when you pull my string.
I will become my part, so I can 'be all I can be'
'Cause just like the Vice President, I am what I read.

CHAPTER 18

IN THE MEANTIME

My life seemed to lead me at an accelerated pace after being subjected to Reagan and Bush. My handler, Alex Houston egotistically claimed it was his and Elemer's (his alter-ego dummy) popularity that kept us traveling so extensively within the country music circuit. When we weren't traveling the Caribbean and Mexico via NCL ships, or driving his cocaine loaded motor home to strategically booked shows across the U.S., we were routinely moving in and out of Washington, D.C. All along the way, my daughter and I were either prostituted, used in commercial pornography, or filmed in Michael Dante's "Chief" bestiality pornography as ordered by Uncle Ronnie Reagan.

Occasionally our travels would take us to Michigan, where Houston made certain we stayed with my family. Trips to my father's house were devastating but informative. My mother had developed deep, psychological scars above and beyond her own MPD condition and became an insomniac. My father by this time was routinely traveling to London, Germany, and Mexico, and taking the family to Florida's Disney World and Washington, D.C. My older brother, Hill, still worked for and with my father, traveled with him annually to "hunt" In Cheney's Greybull, Wyoming lodge, and maintained his wife and three children under trauma-base mind control according to my father's instructions. My brother, Mike, ran a video store to front some of my father's and Uncle Bob Tanis' lucrative porn video business. My sister, Kelli Jo, became a belly dancing contortionist excelling in "gymnastics" since she became "as flexible as Gumby" according to her prostitution programming. She worked her way through school in children's day-care centers, admittedly spotting, for my father, abused children for potential "chosen ones" candidates. In 1990 she graduated to open a licensed day-care, "Little Learners" in Grand Haven, Michigan for my father. My brother, Tom (Beaver), is a Compu-Kids (CIA Project) programmed computer genius. My brother Tim broke his leg (in the same place my mother had broken his leg years before) due to following my father's sports programming above and beyond human capability. And my youngest sister, Kimmy, became hysterically obsessed with "Mr. Rogers," expressed immense fear of her huge "electric" doll house that lit up at night to look like the White House, and was under a doctor's care for anorexia by age seven, I look forward to the day I can help them all, and justice is served on my father.

Since I was using parts of my brain I would not have used under normal circumstances, I developed the ability to read backwards as naturally as I could red forwards. Houston tapped into this typically occult-based phenomenon as a means of "scrambling" road signs to promote amnesia of where we were traveling. He further compounded his effort by conditioning me to read phonetically and literally, and alternated his "scrambling" methods. "Zoo" became "ooz" and "ooz" translated to "oz". Arkansas read "Our Kansas", and Missouri became (and was!) "Misery". East became West, and highway 66 became 99. When 1 traveled, I "literally" did not consciously know if I were coming or going. If an outsider happened to ask me about where I'd traveled, I mechanically replied, "The towns all run together and look alike after awhile."

Commands delivered in the same language twisting manner were natural for me to follow. "Role with it" was easier for me to become according to Reagan's acting definition than it was to go with the flow by "rolling with it". Phrases like Wyoming Senator Alan Simpson's "In a switch of an "I" (personality)/ "eye"(hypnotic blink)/ "i"(the letter), complaint becomes compliant. The parts of my brain I was forced to function with were not conducive to "normal" thinking.

Nor could 1 have appeared "normal" to outsiders had they cared to see beyond my superficial programmed cover personality, I did have occasion to mix with "outsiders" at the local library where I took Kelly for her books on days when we were not traveling. By age 6, she tested at the 7th grade reading level. I also emerged from my closed environment to tend to Kelly's schooling. She maintained straight As, but her poor attendance record threatened to violate state requirements. Once when the librarian asked where Kelly would be traveling to waive library book due dates, or the teacher inquired as to Kelly's absences, I gave the usual response of, "the towns all run together and look alike after awhile." If they pressed for specifics, I ran through a series of religious phrases such as "praise the Lord", to compensate for my lack of answers. People tended to overlook and accept "religious fanaticism" personality peculiarities, which combined with my "role" traveling the country music industry, kept outsiders at a distance for years.

My "religious fanatic" cover personality was cultivated at the Brentwood, Tennessee Lord's Chapel "nondenominational" (Pentecostal) church, through the CIA Operative preacher -Reverend" Billy Roy Moore (who has since fled to Arkansas due to a local murder scandal), Moore transported cocaine from the Caribbean for the CIA, at least during the Reagan Administration, under the guise of so-called "missions,"[1] i.e., Christian ministries. It most likely was not the intent of the Christians dedicated to their Caribbean ministries to be used by the CIA and Moore to inadvertently mule drugs into our country. Even CIA agents operating under "need to know" partial information were denied the full scope of what they were actually participating in. Many seemingly willing participants were manipulated, provided "justification," and deliberately misled to believe they were serving their country, rather than destroying it from the inside out.

"Pastor" Moore combined his knowledge of Kelly's and my programming keys, codes, and triggers with his use of metaphorical language to maintain and/or direct our mode of operation. Moore's "following" consisted primarily of government mind-controlled slaves and handlers, including the Mandrells. Jack Greene and his slave, the Oak Ridge Boys, and others. He instructed us on how to vote, which political issues lo support, and to follow other "religious" political leaders such as his and Manuel Noriega's friend, evangelist Jimmy Swaggart. "Religious counseling" from Moore equaled to maintaining mind-control programming through "God's Orders", And "God's Orders" often came by telephone,

Houston constantly prostituted Kelly to anyone "in the loop" who was willing to pay. When she wasn't being prostituted, she was being filmed pornographically. By 1984, Michael Dante routinely filmed Kelly in pornography, since kiddie porn was as lucrative as bestiality. He filmed Kelly and me in Las Vegas, Nevada and various other locations throughout the Caribbean, California, Florida, Tennessee, and in my home state of Michigan.

This created professional conflict with long lime kiddie pornographers formerly associated with Houston. Houston's close friend in Waycross, Georgia, pedophile Jimmy Walker, managed the Okefenokee Swamp Park and had participated in black budget funding operations for years on both the cocaine and pornography levels. His counterpart, Dick Flood, refused to participate to any more pornography after Dante came on the scene. Even the Huntsville, Alabama NASA/DIA/CIA-appointed "law enforcement" officers could rarely succeed in their bidding for Kelly's video taped performances unless directly ordered by Senator Byrd. Dante considered himself her future owner as well as mine, and maintained control of our porn "business" ventures through serious U.S. Government and international Mafia methodisms/ connections.

Jimmy Walker, the same photographer who had taken pornographic "wedding night" pictures for Larry Flynt, recently had other photographs of me published in Hustler. When Dante found out, he was furious. Larry Flynt and Dante both worked for the CIA, had Vatican and Mafia connections, and deliberately appealed to Reagan's perversions using project Monarch Mind-Controlled slaves. What Flynt could not "legally" publish, Dante ran through the underground. Flynt and Dante lived on oposite coasts, which, despite their similarities, still was not far enough apart to sooth their differences. Waving his hands in dramatic Italian gestures. Dante furiously spouted a string of obscenities over Flynt's publishing photos of what he deemed "his property", Accusing Flynt of going to extremes to gain favor/protection from the government, Dante shouted, "He's a bigger whore than the girls he promotes!"

Michael Dante's pornographic filming abilities served several purposes. Aside from producing porn according to Reagan's own (well known) perversions and instructions, Dante was present during many key international government "gatherings". Oftentimes when I and others were prostituted to various government (New World Order) leaders, Dante had hidden cameras filming perverse sexual acts apparently for future blackmail leverage. These videos were scandalous in proportion and were usually ordered by Reagan. Dante turned the videos over to Reagan, and covertly kept copies to protect himself. Dante converted a small room of his Beverly Hills mansion into a security vault, where he kept his personal copies of the international blackmail porn tapes there.

Among these internationally scandalous tapes are numerous videos covertly produced at the supposedly secure political sex playground in northern California, Bohemian Grove. According to Houston, Dante's high tech undetectable cameras used fiber optics, and fish-eye lens were in each of the elite club's numerous sexual perversion theme rooms. My knowledge of these cameras was due to the strategically compromising positions of the political perpetrators I was prostituted to in the various kinky theme rooms.

I was programmed and equipped to function in all rooms at Bohemian Grove in order to compromise specific government targets according to their personal perversions. "Anything, anytime, anywhere with anyone" was my mode of operation at the Grove. I do not purport to understand the full function of this political cesspool playground as my perception was limited to my own realm of experience. My perception is that Bohemian Grove serves those ushering in the New World Order through mind control, and consists primarily of the highest Mafia and U.S. Government officials. I do not use the term "highest" loosely, as copious quantities of drugs were consumed there. Project Monarch Mind-

Control slaves were routinely abused there to fulfill the primary purpose of the club: purveying perversion.

Bohemian Grove is reportedly intended to be used recreationally, providing a supposedly secure environment for politically affluent individuals to "party" without restraint. The only business conducted there pertained to implementing the New World Order, through the proliferation of mind-control atrocities, giving the place an air of "Masonic Secrecy". The only room where business discussions were permitted was the small, dark lounge affectionately and appropriately referred to as the Underground.[2]

Sex slaves were not routinely permitted in the Underground for security reasons, leaving the lounge's small stage as the only source of "entertainment". This entertainment ranged from would-be talents such as Lee Atwater, Bill Clinton, and George Bush to CIA Operative entertainers such as Boxcar Willie and Lee Greenwood, On one occasion I was instructed to meet with former President Gerald Ford in the Underground where Lee Atwater was picking and singing. As I waited through the smoke-filled room to Ford's table, Atwater interrupted his song to cryptically acknowledge my unwelcome presence by singing choruses of "Over the Rainbow" and Byrd's song for me "Country Roads" while emphasizing the lines of "Almost heaven, West Virginia".

My purpose at the Grove was sexual in nature, and therefore my perceptions were limited to a sex slave's viewpoint. As an effective means of control to ensure undetected proliferation of their perverse indulgences, slaves such as myself were subjected to ritualistic trauma. I knew each breath I took could be my last, as the threat of death lurked in every shadow. Slaves of advancing age or with failing programming were sacrificially murdered "at random" in the wooded grounds of Bohemian Grave, and I fell it was "simply a matter of time until it would be me". Rituals were held at a giant, concrete owl monument on the banks of, ironically enough, the Russian (rushin') River. These occultish sex rituals stemmed from the scientific belief that mind-controlled slaves required severe trauma to ensure compartmentalization of the memory, and not from any spiritual motivation.

My own threat of death was instilled when I witnessed the sacrificial death of a young, dark-haired victim at which time I was instructed to perform sexually "as though my life depended upon it". I was told, "...the next sacrifice victim could be you. Anytime when you least expect it, the owl will consume you. Prepare yourself, and stay prepared." Being "prepared" equated to being totally suggestible, i.e., "on my toes" awaiting their command.

After returning to Tennessee, Houston attempted to distort my Bohemian Grove experience by instructing me to "prepare myself for imminent death". He ordered me into a bathtub of cold water, placed ice cubes in my vagina, then transferred me to his bed. There he tied a coroner's type tag on my toe, and hypnotically deepened my trance to the point where my heart and breathing were nearly stopped. Then he gratified himself on my cold, still body through faux necrophilia—reportedly one of his favorite perversions. Houston had "perfected" his perversion to the extent that he handed the keys to my death-state programming to Lt. Col. Michael Aquino for use in Reagan's Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstrations. My death-state also further equipped me in my role of "anything, anytime, anywhere with anyone" to be accessed at Bohemian Grove.

The club offered a "Necrophilia" theme room to its members. I was so heavily drugged and programmed when used in the "necrophilia" room, that the threat of actually "slipping through death's door" and being sacrificed "before I knew it" did not affect me. My whole existence was balanced precariously on the edge of death as a matter of routine anyway. My robotic state did not permit me the "luxury" of self-preservation, and I could only do exactly what I was told to do. My necrophilia room experience was only for the purpose of providing Dante a compromising film of a targeted member anyway.

Other perversion theme rooms at the Bohemian Club included what I heard Ford refer to as the "Dark Room". When he not so cleverly said, "Let's go to the Dark Room and see what develops," I understood from experience that he was interested in indulging in his perverse obsession for pornography. In the Dark Room, members had sex with the same mind-controlled slave they were viewing in porn on a big screen television.

There was a triangular glass display centered in a main through way where I was locked in with various trained animals, including snakes. Members walking by watched elicit sex acts of bestiality, women with women, mothers with daughters, kids with kids, or any other unlimited perverse visual display.

I was once brutally assaulted by Dick Cheney in the Leather Room, which was designed tike a dark, black leather-lined train berth. As 1 crawled through the leather flaps covering the narrow entrance, 1 heard Cheney play on the word "berth/birth" as the soft blackness engulfed me. With the small opening covered, the blinding darkness enhanced the sense of touch and provided an option of anonymity. Cheney jokingly claimed that I "blew his cover" when I recognized his all-too-familiar voice and abnormally large penis size.

There was a room of shackles and tortures, black lights and strobes, an opium den, ritualistic sex altars, a chapel, group orgy rooms including poster beds, water beds, and "kitten" houses. I was used as a "rag doll" in the "toy store," and as a urinal in the "golden arches" room.

From the owl's roost to the necrophilia room, no memory of sexual abuse is as horrifying as the conversations overheard in the Underground pertaining to implementing the New World Order. I learned that perpetrators believed that controlling the masses through propaganda mind manipulation did not guarantee there would be a world left to dominate due to environmental and overpopulation problems. The solution being debated was not pollution/population control, but mass genocide of "selected undesirables."

[1] Moore often operated under the cloak of World Vision.

[2] The wooden sign was carved to read: U.N.DERGROUND

CHAPTER 19

E.T. PHONE ROME

Anyone attending the Bohemian Grove on a regular basis was referred to by those in the know as a "Grover". One such Grover was Ronald Reagan's then-Secretary of Education, Bill Bennett, Bill Bennett, who later became "Drug Czar" during the Bush Administration, wrote the so-called Book of Virtues and was/is? vying for the office of President. Bennett is apparently very close to his brother and fellow Grover, Bob Bennett. Although Bob Bennett holds the position of Legal Counsel to President Clinton, it is apparent that the brothers recognize no party lines.

It was clear to me that there were no partisan differences amongst those ushering in the New World Order, any more than there was loyalty to our Constitution. The close relationship I witnessed between the Bennett brothers, like the marriage between Clinton's and Bush's 1992 campaign managers James Carville and Mary Matlin, should raise questions as to their agenda,

When Bill and Bob Bennett together sexually assaulted my daughter, Kelly, and me at the Bohemian Grove in 1986, I had already known Bill Bennett as a mind-control programmer for some time. Bennett anchored his Jesuit/Vatican based programming of me in my Catholic conditioning initially instilled via the Rite to Remain Silent. Through further manipulation of my "inner-dimensional" perceptions, Bennett believed he had forever compartmentalized his personal secrets of perverse sex with his brother, Bob, and my then six-year-old daughter. Bennett also had manipulated my mind in accordance with Vatican "Orders" via Byrd's Jesuit College programming center in West Virginia. He used his role as Jesuit programmer for the purposes of carrying out his efforts as Education Secretary to implement Education 2000.[1]

In order to program my mind for my role in bringing Education 2000 into the "Volunteer State" of Tennessee's school system, Bennett used sophisticated mind manipulation to set the stage—the same kind of mind manipulation propaganda executed on national and international scale, Bennett's penchant for manipulating minds is apparently rooted in his knowledge of Catholic/Jesuit mind-control techniques.

When I met Bennett at a White House cocktail party in 1984, I was wearing the rosy cross necklace that Guy VanderJagt and Father Don had presented to me during my first communion, to signify the mode of program I was operating under at the time. Byrd had ordered that I wear it for the occasion.

Byrd was already talking with Bennett when a White House butler led me in to see Byrd.[2] Byrd was saying, "I was just talking about you with my friend, Secretary of Education[3] William Bennett."

"Bill," Bennett corrected, sweeping his lecherous gaze over me as though I were merchandise. "How do you do?"

"'As I am told, thank you," I said as I extended my hand as trained.

Bennett clumsily fingered the rosy cross necklace, blowing his alcoholic breath in my face as he said, "Your necklace is as beautiful as you are, and no doubt, as significant in purpose. Where did this come from and what does it mean to you?"

"From my first communion," I responded. "Guy (Byrd interrupted to clarify 'VanderJagt') gave it to me to consummate my holy communion."

Byrd corrected me, "Commemorate your holy communion." "She doesn't need a translator, Bobby," Bennett laughed, "I'm hearing her loud and clear."

Byrd left me with Bennett, who went into a long winded recitation on an interpretation of the Bible deliberately intended to further distort my Catholic instilled perceptions. "Christ was an alien in this land," he was saying in accordance with his learned Jesuit mind manipulation techniques. "Once he landed in Earth's plane, it was plain to see he was a leader in interdimensional travel, We (Jesuits/aliens) followed his lead since he was the first to slip into Earth's dimension. In Christ's transformation from porpoise[4] to purpose, he lost his will to Earth's demands. He lost his porpoise, so to speak." Totally "trance-fixed," I listened as Bennett rallied on and on. "When Christ emerged from the deep to inhale of Earth's atmosphere, time began ticking. It was not recognized or acknowledged until Christ's passing, however. We began marking time with his death. BC-AD-or is that AC-DC?" Referring to high voltage used to compartmentalize memory, he continued, 'No, AC in DC stops time. At any rate, we followed his lead, He referred to you as sheep. He knew you needed to be led. He led us. He led you. He led us to you. We're here to lead you. The transformation is perfected now, updated with the latest in alien technologies whereby we no longer have to follow Christ's course to the grave. We can transcend dimensions free of the confines of Earth's gravitational pull. The time is now, and we are here to lead you. We know your mind. That's how we make you mind. Make you mine. Make you a mind. Make you mine. Journey with me now..."

Bennett manipulated my perceptions until, at last, he informed me, "You and 1 will be working closely together on a global education project." Sweeping his hand around the crowded room, he continued, "This atmosphere is not conductive to the kind of work we need to be doing. Something else just came up that demands immediate attention. Let's complete tonight's business with pleasure, beat it out of this dimension, suspend your suspended animation, and get with the program."

In one of many White House bedrooms available for such purposes, Bennett led me into bed. I told you we were going to beat it out of this dimension, and that's exactly what I intend to do. A little Byrd told me you like a whip. Since I am not the Senate kind, I'll just represent the majority by giving you what you need most."

Bennett apparently found perverse pleasure in whipping me. With my wrists bruised and my body slinging with pain, Bennett lit up a cigarette and cryptically asked, "Was that your first cum-union with an alien?" He threw me my clothes, and ordered, "Make yourself presentable. Make sure your wrists are covered. I'm not waiting around for you, I'll see you in THE morning."

Bennett left. After awhile I was escorted back to Byrd, with whom I spent a brutal, short night. On the way to his room, Byrd told me, "You've got work to do come morning with Mr. Bennett. Working for him is like working for me. We are working in conjunction with the state Governors in an effort to implement the global 2000 education formula for the future. I am excited at the prospect of meddling in the future through what I accomplish today. Since I hold this country's purse strings, it is up to me to delegate as much funding as is neccessary to implement the educational program. I've withheld funding and withheld funding to the point where the individual states must rely on federal funding to get them out of hot water financially. I am ready to do just that so long as they follow my guidelines. Mr. Bennett is working out the details of this plan, and will be sharing much of that with you. I need you to do what you do best by enlisting the full cooperation of state government at the upcoming Governor's Convention. I have never demanded Conventional sex of you before, but this time is different. Persuade these Governors at their weakest moment—bring them to their knees while you are on yours, and convince them that global education is the gateway to the future if there is to be any future at all."

Early the next morning, deep underground in the NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center mind-control lab near D.C., Bill Bennett began preparing me for the program. NASA uses various "CIA designer drugs" to chemically alter the brain and create exactly the mind set required at the time, Huntsville, Alabama's NASA drug of choice, "Train-quility," created a feeling of absolute, peaceful compliance and a sensation of walking on air. The drug administered this time was sufficiently similar to Tranquility to create total compliance. The bearing I had endured the night before had rendered me helpless, anyway, and I could barely crawl up onto the cold, metal lab table as the drug took effect.

In the darkness surrounding me, I could hear Bill Bennett talking, "This is my brother, Bob. He and I work as one unit. We are alien to this dimension-two beings from another plane."

The high-tech light display swirling around me convinced me I was transforming dimensions with them, A laser of light hit the black wall in front of me, which seemed to explode into a panoramic view of a White House cocktail party-as though I had transformed dimensions and stood amongst them. Not recognizing anyone, I frantically asked, "Who are these people?" .

"They're not people, and this isn't a spaceship/ Bennett said. As he spoke, the holographic scene changed ever so slightly until the people appeared to be lizard-like aliens. "Welcome to the second level of the underground. This level is a mere/(mirror) reflection of the first, an alien dimension. We are from a transdirnensional plane that spans and encompasses all dimensions."

"Infinite dimensions," Bob injected, "Infinite dimensions spanned simultaneously-"

Bill said, "No limitations".

Bob softly sang, "Let freedom ring".

"There truly is no where to run and no where to hide from us. We're who is looking from behind the Eye in the Sky," Bill continued,

"We're watching you," Bob said. He sang a line from the popular rock song "I'll Be Watching You".

"I have taken you through my dimension as a means of establishing stronger holds on your mind than the Earth's plane permits," Bill Bennett was saying. "Being alien, I simply make my thoughts your thoughts by projecting them into your mind. My thoughts are your thoughts."[5]

The brief message Bennett programmed me with pertaining to Education 2000 was to be directed to state Governors at the upcoming convention while delivering a packet of information:

The children. We must consider the children. Think for a moment beyond tomorrow. Our children are the future. Their future lies in education. We can control the future today by regulating education. Our thoughts and plans for the future-put in their text. A text they can understand. Children's textbooks. The highest levels of government, the most brilliant minds on the face of this Earth would like input into the future by way of the children. You, as Governor, are in a position to provide that link. Global Education 2000 is ready for implementation. Look into it. Look into it and see the future."

---

[1] Education 2000 was designed to increase our children's learning capacity while destroying their ability to critically think for themselves. You can learn more about Education 2000, also referred to as America 2000 and Glohal 2000, through reading: Educating for the New World Order by B.K. Eakman, published by Halcyon House ISBN # 0-89420-278-2-3441000, and A Critique of America 2000: An Educational Strategy by Kathi Simonds, published by Citizens for Excellence in Education,

[2] Anytime I was taken to "see Byrd," I was deliberately reminded of his name, (Robert) C. Byrd and "its alien mirror reversal," Sea-Byrd as a triple bind lock in.

[3] Bill Bennett, who was still acting as Chairman of the National Endowment of the Humanities in 1984, was designated (tapped) to became U.S. Secretary of Education through his allegiances to George Bush and the New World Order. In 1985, Reagan (Bush) officially appointed Bennett as Secretary of Education. Apparently Byrd considered my "Neeed to Know* Bennett as Secretary of Education pertinent to my role in the Global Education project.

[4] Jesuit/NASA based whale and dolphin programming suggests that water is a mirror to other dimensions and is the means by which aliens have mixed with our population.

[5] If this were so, why did he have to audibly tell me?

CHAPTER 20

NEW WORLD ORDER OF THE ROSE

Still feeling drugged from the programming session instilled in me by Bill Bennett at the nearby Goddard Space Flight Center, I attended a White House cocktail party later that night as instructed.

Dressed "to Order," I wore a slinky, black dress that gathered at one hip decorated in rubies, with a red rose barrette in my hair. "The Chief called for her," my Secret Service escort told the butler as he left me at the door. The lights were dim and the air was formal as the butler led me through the unusually large crowd of people. He released my elbow, aiming me in the direction of then President Ronald Reagan,

As I walked through the crowd toward Reagan, I saw familiar faces associated with the "Order of the Rose.[1]" Across the room, Bill and Bob Bennett were laughing with Dick Cheney. Then-Governor of Pennsylvania Dick Thornburgh was engaged in conversation with Senator Arlen Spector. Within the farthest reaches of my expanded peripheral vision, I saw George Bush talking with his U.N. confidant Madeleine Albright[2], Knowing I could see him as though I had eyes in the back of my head, Bush subtly signaled me to join them.

"You know Madeleine Albright," Bush began, Expertly using terminology from previously instilled Catholic Jesuit beliefs, he continued, "She's the reverend mother of all sisters (slaves). She's so close to God that an order from her is an order from Him." Albright snickered, apparently impressed with Bush's "witty" manipulation of program verbiage. "She rose in the U.N. through me to implement the New World peace process."

Albright said to me, "I hear you're a world (whirled?) piece".

"Who told you that?" Bush demanded.

"Larry Flynt, for her stint in Jamaica[3]," she quickly explained.

Bush threw up his hand in apparent disgust at the idea of sex relating to someone with two digits in their age. "Spare me," he said.

"That's my job," Albright said matter-of-factly with a smile of pride. She shooed me away while condescendingly saying, I'll see you tomorrow at the OAS (Organization of American States) office. Now, you run along and go play." Noting that her nonspecific orders left me unable to determine which way to turn, literally, she aimed me back in the direction of Reagan.

Reagan was dressed in a dark, navy blue suit and red silk tie. His red rosebud[4] boutonniere instantly triggered me into a Jesuit "Order of the Rose" sex slave mode. "Well, hello, Kitten," Reagan said, blowing his cognac breath in my face as he bent over to kiss my hand.

"Uncle Ronnie..." I said, sexually responding as conditioned.

Reagan turned to the man beside him and said, "Brian, this is one more of those benefits of the New World Order I was telling you about. Kitten, this is Brian Mulroney, Prime Minister of Canada."

The connotations of my childhood experience with the former Prime Minister" of Canada, Pierre Trudeau, suggested that Mulroney was Jesuit—as did the mode I was operating in. He, too, was wearing a red rose boutonniere signifying his involvement and commitment to the Order of the Rose.

"It's a pleasure to meet you, Sir," I said as I extended my hand.

"The pleasure is mine," Mulroney said as he kissed my hand, "Please, call me Brian."

"Yes, Sir, Brian," I responded, my brain still whirling with the NASA designer drugs.

Chuckling but insisient, Mulroney reiterated, "I am not a Sir".

Reagan jumped in, "He is a Prime Minister, which means he is more important than your average Minister, and certainly more important than any Sir. Brian is my friend."

"Oh, Brian," I said, finally understanding,

"O'Brien is her father's name," Reagan told Mulroney, "She is of Irish descent and hails from Michigan."

Brian turned to me, "I've been in your neck of the woods here recently-in one of my favorite get-aways-on Mackinac Island,"

"Mackinac Island was her launch point into the project," Reagan explained in terms used by those familiar with mind-control operations. Mulroney apparently was aware of my mind-controlled state and leered at me as though I were merchandise, Reagan noticed his interest and proceeded to function in the capacity of a pimp. "I highly recommend you take her along with the rest. She is an excellent game piece for you to use in any position. And there's security. Her head is in the ethers and come tomorrow, she wouldn't knew you from the man in the moon. I'll give you the keys later."

Expertly using Order of the Rose signals and triggers, Mulroney said, "Just give me the key to her heart, and she's mine."

"You are wise in the ways of the world," Reagan commented.

"I have to be on top of things. It's a New World Order," Mulroney said matter-of-factly.

As a guard led me away, I heard Reagan tell Mulroney, "You will be on top of the world soon".

I was searched by uniformed Canadian bodyguards and pointed in the direction of one of the White House's many bedroom suites. When I opened the door, I saw three blonde sex slaves undressing and preparing the bed—one of whom was my close friend and Senator Arlen Spector's slave.

I excitedly called my friend's name. "What are you doing here?" I asked as we hugged each other.

"Small world," she said, as she always did when we were thrust together in various places for prostitution and/or pornography. This universal term was often used among those familiar with the Small, Small World Disney-developed mind-control program.

I hugged my friend again, "Wow, it is a small world. I'm so glad you're here." I had no comprehension of our predicament and could not see beyond the moment

"Hell girls! It is a small world!" Mulroney entered and strode across the room, tossing his coat on a chair and loosening his tie. "Watch it get smaller and smaller as we rocket further and further away." He slipped out of his shoes, suspenders, and pants while he continued his hypnotic metaphors. "Soaring through the sea of black space. As the world gets smaller and smaller and smaller, then sinks into the black sea of space." Removing his boxer shorts, he announced, "I brought you here for a purpose..." and proceeded to access our sex programming.

In retrospect I know it was no coincidence that my friend and I were brought together to satisfy Brian Mulroney's perversion for mind-controlled slaves. Identically mirror programmed, we operated in unison. The delicate red rose tatoo on my friend's left wrist signified her enslavement to the (New World) Order of the Rose to which Mulroney belonged.

My friend and her young daughter reportedly were often transported across the U.S.-Canadian border at Niagara Falls for prostitution to Mulroney. The sexual abuse of her precious child was used as a trauma base to maintain control of her mind just as Kelly's abuse traumatized me, Mulroney had previously accessed sex programming at Niagara Falls in my friend and me-along with our daughters-to satisfy his sanctioned perversions as though it were "business as usual". Had I been capable of connecting events, I would have felt enormous relief that our daughters were not forced to participate in his sexuaJ assault this time.

"Mission" complete, I slipped on my dress and prepared to leave, Mulroney pointed to me and cryptically said, "I'll be seeing you around. Maybe I'll see you in Mackinac. May be. somewhere in time." In three lines, Mulroney expertly tied the immediate moment to childhood cues and current Mexican NAFTA operations, as well as prepared me for my next encounter with him on Mackinac Island,

---

[1] "The Order of the Rose" was an emblem of those ushering in the New World Order. "Orders from the Rose" were orders From George Bush.

[2] Reagan first introduced me to U.N. Ambassador Madeleine Albrighi as "my mentor" in Jesuit operations in the Caribbean "Madeleine Albright is a Saint," Reagan told me, forming my perception of her "The Mother Teresa of the Caribbean.'

[3] While I was in Jamaica under Albright's (via Bush's) instruction, Larry Flynt photographers took advantage of my being there to use the picturesque Dunns River Falls as a backdrop for pornographic photos to be used in Hustler.

[4] Reagan's red rose triggered a sexual mode usually used to compromise/blackmail dignitaries and lock them into loyalty to the Order of the Rose.

CHAPTER 21

GLOBAL EDUCATION 2000

My programmed role toward implementing Education 2000 according to the plans of those ushering in the New World Order brought me back in contact with former Governor of Tennessee, Lamar Alexander, and eventually Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney,

I had met Lamar Alexander in 1973, at a satanic ritual I was subjected to in an affluent neighborhood of Nashville, Tennessee. Lamar Alexander presided over this sex-oriented occult ritual with full understanding of my Project Monarch Mind-Control victimization and the impact his actions were having on my mind. It was my experience then, and intermittently throughout the years, that Lamar Alexander's sexual perversion was to bring his victim to the point of death through oral suffocation.

During the course of publicly exposing Tennessee's need for education reform as instructed, I was in contact with Commissioners, Superintendents, Mayors, and Lamar Alexander. Lamar Alexander, who followed Bennett as Bush's Secretary of Education, worked in close association with Bill Bennett to manipulate the minds of the masses to accept Education 2000 as the ONLY means of education reform. When Ned McWherter was moved into the office of Governor to rubber stamp federal projects, Lamar Alexander maintained influence over state politics. At the same time, he maintained influence over national politics through his role as chairman of the National Governor's Association in 1986.

As the J984 Governor's Convention drew near, I met with Lamar Alexander at the Stockyard nightclub where he was drinking with his long time associate and partner-in-crime, Nashville's Mayor Richard Fulton. In the basement bar of this old, converted stockyard was a modified antique "Shoe Shine" booth, where the term took on new meaning. A key to a private shoeshine booth could be obtained by those in the know through Stockyard owner, Buddy Killen. This closet-sized booth was lined in mirrors and had a small bench where Lamar Alexander sat after our business was concluded. I knelt at his feet as ordered to perform oral sex. Programmed sex slaves such as myself were trained to go long periods of time without drawing a breath, and users such as Alexander stretched this time to the maximum.[1]

On this occasion, Alexander apparently exceeded the maximum. 1 do not recall completion of my programmed task. It was afterhours when my mind-control handler, Alex Houston, dragged my limp body from the booth, roused me, and ordered me out of the building. Buddy Killen opened a back door that once was a cattle run, and Houston half-dragged me out the back exit unseen.

The night of the Convention, Alex Houston's youngest daughter, Bonnie,[2] was to join me. Bonnie and E were close to the same age, and together we dressed for the occasion. As a prostitute, Bonnie was familiar with Lamar Alexander and his perversions but nevertheless was excited at the prospect of seeing "old friends" at the Convention via Louise Mandrell,[3] who would be entertaining there. The comradery between Alex Houston and trby Mandrell that developed during Bob Hope's U.S.O. tours in the 1960s lasted for decades due to their shared involvement in running mind-controlled slaves for Byrd.

Bonnie shared in this friendship with the Mandrells and was looking forward to seeing her "friends" in the band.

I, too, was looking forward to talking with Louise Mandrell, but for a very different reason. Barbara had just endured her near-fatal car crash, and I was deeply concerned for her welfare. Throughout the 1980s while traveling under the guise of the Country Music Industry, Alex Houston toured with Barbara and/or Louise Mandrell on a regular basis. Occasionally Barbara and I saw each other in "church," the Hendersonville Lord's Chapel. This church was an offshoot of Billy Roy Moore's Lord's Chapel, and was pastored by his mind-controlled slave, Mike Nelson, who became close friends with Barbara.[4] Alex Houston and I were present when Mike Nelson broke program, and attempted to flee for his Life with Barbara Mandrell. The pastor was subdued with a stun gun and immediately relieved of his position, while Barbara frantically sought answers to the questions the two of them had managed to raise.

Alex Houston was touring with Louise Mandrel] in 1984 when Louise had a "premonition" of Barbara's imminent demise—much the same way Loretta Lynn "psychicly predicted" her son's murder. Like the murders of Loretta's son and Country Music entertainer Keith Whitley, I was aware of Barbara's planned accident before it occurred due to Alex Houston's direct involvement. These traumas were also used as a means of locking in my mind-controlled belief that I had "no where to run and no where to hide". Worst of all, I could not think to speak of what I knew due to my own absolute mind control. While Barbara physically survived her ordeal, her voice was silenced as planned.

When Bonnie and I arrived at Opryland Hotel, we hurried to the ballroom where Louise Mandrell would be performing. My concern for Barbara detracted me from my appointment with Lamar Alexander until one of Louise's dancers who knew of my role put me "back on track".

"What are you doing here?" he demanded. "You're supposed to be at Rhett Butler's restaurant NOW."

I hurried to the restaurant where Lamar Alexander was having dinner with Senator Byrd and several governors. Byrd was participating in the function for reasons unknown to me, but 1 was aware that he had fiddled at the Opry. Byrd stopped eating just long enough to acknowledge my presence, "Where have you been?"

"I was checking on Barbara over at the show," 1 replied as Lamar Alexander excused himself and walked over.

Putting an arm around me and turning me away from the table, he whispered, "You could wind up just like her if you don't get with the program. You've got programs to hand out. But right now, you're interrupting my dinner. Have you had anything to drink?".

"No, Sir," I replied, traumatized at the magnitude of his threat.

Lamar Alexander instructed me to leave immediately, order a grasshopper from the conservatory bar, and wait for further instructions.

It was a matter of routine for me to order a "grasshopper" from Opryland Hotel's conservatory. The ice cream "drink" was specially made—always with a hypnotic drug in it. As sometimes happened, the waitress was unfamiliar with the process, and conservatory harp player and CIA operative Lloyd Lindroth interceded. The drug had the same effect as that administered at the D.C. NASA programming center by Bennett, and my mode was robotic compliance.

After the drug kicked in, Lloyd Lindroth instructed me to proceed to the main ballroom of the Hotel, where Lamar Alexander would be meeting me.

The outer lobby of the ballroom was decorated in wall-size murals that extended to the top of the gothic ceiling. A life-size steam engine depicted on the far wall appeared to be racing toward the grand staircase. I had seen the murals numerous times before, but never had they seemed so real as they did to me that night on the NASA drug. The heavy double doors leading to the ballroom caused me to feel very small as I pulled with all my strength to open it. Inside, the room was a sea of black suits and ties, and I was relieved when Lamar Alexander ushered me back out into the lobby.

Alexander positioned me near the train mural as a cryptic indicator to those in the know ihat I was a "trained" mind-controlled slave. I was provided a box of brown envelopes packed with the Education 2000 information I was to hand out to the governors. Alexander instructed me on exactly what I was to say in conjunction with the message Bennett had programmed me with in D.C. Then he returned to the ballroom, where he apparently acted in the capacity of a pimp.

"Are you waiting on the train?" a paunchy governor asked,

"No, Sir," I answered. Then, as instructed, I said, "But 1 do have a packet of information with your name on it. Shall 1 take it to your room for you?"

"Oh? And what is my name?" he asked.

"Governor," I responded. There actually were no names on the envelopes.

"Astute," he responded. "And what is it you have for me?"

"This packet," I answered, handing it to him. "And anything else you want compliments of Lamar Alexander and (tapped) Secretary of Education, Bill Bennett."

According to some of the men, Alexander had cued them as to my position. Others, such as then Governor of Pennsylvania, Dick Thornburgh and Ohio Governor Dick Celeste already knew me,

"I've got a packet of information with your name on it.. "I was saying as I bent over to lift one from the box.

"I don't think so," Governor Blanchard of Michigan interrupted. "Bill (Bennett) wouldn't stoop so low as to insult me that way. I'm doing the same thing here you are, but from a very different approach. The figures I offer reflect the success of Education 2000 in the Michigan school system."

I recognized Governor Blanchard, and was well aware of Michigan's ranking first in the nation in education. "Speaking of which," he continued, "I believe I see your mother more often than you do these days since she is working in the schools. That little sister of yours (Kimmy) is a prime example of what proper instruction can produce. Your little sister is coming to Mackinac to further her skills. Your whole family is a prime example of how good Education 2000 works."

I finally met up with Bonnie again in Lamar Alexander's room as the night came to a close. "Bonnie, how's that snake of yours?" he asked. Bonnie, who had been filmed pornographically by CIA commercial photographer Jimmy Walker with Dick Flood's snakes, had a pel boa consticter,

"Great!" Bonnie laughed. "How's yours?"

" Constricted," he replied,

Bonnie unzipped his pants as she admittedly had done numerous times in the past, playfully sayings "Let it loose!"

Lamar Alexander began removing his pants. Referring to me in Project Monarch terms he said, "When 1 first saw you, you were a worm with no hint of being a butterfly."

"Daddy (Alex Houston) said she was a diamond in the rough," Bonnie volunteered,

"She shines now". Turning to me he said, "I know you are a shoe shiner, and mine need a shine."

Bonnie, also familiar with the Stockyard booth and Lamar Alexander's meaning, laughed when he said, "Why don't you both take a foot."

Task complete, I went to Byrd's nearby room as instructed. He was in the bathroom preparing himself for bed, "Louise had her feathers fuffled over Barbara's collision with destiny and 1 had to smooth them down a bit," Drying his dough grey hands on a towel, he turned to me and said, "Looks lite you've had your wings spread a bit tonight."

"I wore a path up and down the stairs," I stated.

Much to my relief he said, "I'm not going to fiddle with you farther. I just wanted to give you something to remember me by--Bye." He compartmentalized my memory with his stun gun.

Soon thereafter, Kelly and I were transported to Mackinac Island. Michigan to meet with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney at then-Governor James Blanchard's mansion.

Houston led Kelly and me to a horse drawn carriage as quickly as we stepped off the ferryboat onto the timeless, antiquated island, I noticed that the Canadian flags were again flying at the Grand Hotel, but was of no mind to question, Kelly sat quietly beside me, apparently drugged as our carriage took us through the woods to the Governor's mansion.

The guests in the mansion were reminiscent of the recent Tennessee Governor's convention: Michigan Governor Blanchard, Ohio Governor Dick Celeste, and Pennsylvania Governor Dick Thornburgh. Guy VanderJagt and Jerry Ford were also present. Mulroney appeared to be the guest of "honor".

He reached out his hands and greeted me, "I told you I would see you somewhere in time! I slipped time, space, and distance to be here this evening. You and I have some ground to cover."

"Yes, Sir. President Reagan's Global Education Secretary Bill Bennett has sent me to deliver this education packet directly to you." I was to deliver a large, brown envelope of documents similar to those handed out at the Governor's Convention.

Blanchard excused himself. "I've already heard the schpiel," he said as he turned to his other guests, leaving Mulroney and me alone,

"Global Education is the wave of the future," I recited as programmed. As the world gets smaller and smaller due to higher technology spanning the globe, our children must be educated in the ways of the world. Education as it is, barely equips them for life in their own backyard. We need to become involved in our children's education for the sake of their future and our legacy. Global education is the way. The only way, Look into it..." I handed him the envelope. "...Peer into the future."

Mulroney uncrossed his arms long enough to accept the envelope, which he casually tossed on a chair. "I am interested in the children, the legacy we leave them, and how we shape their future by the way we record our history in their test." Using Order of the Rose cues, he signalled me to photographically record his words for future delivery. "Tell Mr. Bennett(sss)," he hissed, cryptically revealing his knowledge that Bill and Bob Bennett worked together using reptilian-alien themes, "implementation is high. I'm already sold on Global 2000 and have additional points I would like for them to consider. Headsets at every computer station for openers. Double the impact with dual learning. We're being thrust forward at warp speed, and the generations of the future may need an added booster to bring them up to speed. A united global effort using your education package as a basis is destined to bring the future into a clear and present reality."

Business complete, Mulroney triggered my sex programming and led me upstairs to the bedrooms where Kelly was robotically waiting, entranced under Orders of the Rose,

---

[1] I have witnessed girls die of suffocation from this practice oven though 3 to 5 minutes without breathing is common.

[2] While Bonnie was not raised in Project Monarch, Houston's pedophilia and stage hypnosis techniques rendered Bonnie unable to control her own actions. Bonnie is a multiple with a record of prostitution in need of therapy and care.

[3] Irby Mandrell openly discussed Senator Byrd's direct involvement in the Project Monarch government mind-controlled victimizations of his incestuously abused daughters with Houston. "Having babies can be a lucrative way to feather your nest-that's what the Byrd taught me." Mandrel! continued, "Louise was a little withdrawn, and she needed to come out of her cocoon and spread her wings. I ran the idea by Byrd, and he said 'If she doesn't have a talent, let's make her one. What is a band without a fiddle?' And viola, there she is. Another star on the rise launched from NASA City, USA (Huntsville, Alabama)."

[4] Friendships between mind-controlled slaves are usually forbidden, and conversations are kept to a minimum lest cross-programing triggering occurs. Throughout the years, my own relationship with the Mandrells was limited to a superficial basis, whereas Irby Mandrell employed Houston's hypnotic abilities to maintain mind control over his daughters while touring.

CHAPTER 22

MY CONTRA-BUTION

U.S. and Mexican relations were flourishing in the successes of NAFTA's groundwork, while polictical differences pertaining to Nicaragua remained a minor point of contention. Since the Catholic Vatican's Intelligence arm of Jesuits were working closely wilh U.S. Intelligence to usher in the New World Order, they used their established influence in Mexico and Nicaragua to provide a common ground for "diplomatic relations". My dual mind-control victimazation by the ClA and the Jesuits since childhood, and my previous "diplomatic relations" in Mexico thrust me into the role of messenger and prostitute to Nicaragua's Daniel Oriega.

Were President Reagan's Nicaraguan Freedom Fighters fighters OF freedom or FOR freedom? My mind-controlled existence rendered me incapable of pondering such questions. Nevertheless, I had a programmed "passion burning in my bosom" for the Contras as was patriotically instilled through torture, when I embarked on my "peacekeeping mission" to Nicaragua for Reagan tale in the summer of 1985,

I boarded NCL as usual to reach my appointed destination. Since Nicaragua was not a port of call for NCL, I flew from the Yukatan of Mexico to a remote military airstrip in Managua. It was in this small mountain top clearing that I met with Commandant Daniel Ortega, as had been arranged through the Vatican.

I was dressed seasonably in shorts, with my long blond hair lucked hack in a French braid. Onega's attire, too, was reflective of the casual air to meeting. His tan, military uniform had worn thin, and was free of any protocol insignias. The dark, rose-colored sunglasses he peered through apparently had not changes his somber view of the "noble cause" he claimed to represent. A man of few words, he greeted me with an order, "Come with me." I rode wilh him in silence as he drove a jeep the short distance across the airstrip to a small, near, two story, white, frame house.

As we came to a stop in front of the house, Ortega said In a sad, slow voice. "I have needs like any man. But I feel like a whore myself for accepting your President's offer."

His bedroom was clean and functional, with numerous assault weapons scattered around, I did not see any modern conveniences or personal effects, but Ortega seemed to be at home in his surroundings.

Ortega's demeanor was that of a man who bad abstained from sex longer than most in bis politcal position. As he slowly unbuttoned his shirt, I noticed a Catholic medallion with the secret Jesuit ascension/descesion symbol on it, a common accessory among Jesuit spooks. He sat in wicker chair as 1 followed his silent lead in gratifying him orally.

While he chain smoked cigarettes, I sat in front of him on the floor, and relayed Reagan's message to him as programmed. I began. "President Reagan has sent me as a messenger of peace."

He casually interrupted. slowly looking me up and down. "I'd like to have a piece in a few more minutes."

I continued, "Your people have endured many hardships Throughout their existence. He (Reagan) only wants to help. The American people want to see peace and freedom in your land. Mexican and U.S. relations are growing stronger by the day, and it is imperative that we resolve your conflict in order to resolve our own with the Mexican government We have come to the agreement with Mexico that the Nicaraguan conflict must be resolved for the sake of your people as well as our own, I am here on a peacekeeping mission representative of Vatican-based common ground shared by both Mexican and American governments, to enlighten you to our peaceful intentions. The unified effort of Mexican-American Catholic missions is to promote peace in your region, while only enhancing your culture. The world is rapidly turning toward world peace, and Nicaragua is way behind the times—from technology and education to government ideals and religious convictions. Pope John Paul is praying diligently for peace in your region, and has joined forces with President Reagan, Mexico, and even the Soviet Union to ensure that peace. He (the Pope) knows your goals, he knows your motives (I leaned forward, almost whispering from my own instilled belief), he knows your soul. We can all work in tandem to achieve that peace. Nicaragua, small though it may be in relation to the rest of the world, is a significant stepping stone toward unifying world powers. It can no longer be a source of contention and disagreement. Your people must be free. Free to worship God through your holy Catholic church. That is first and foremost on President Reagan's agenda, as well as the Pope's and President de la Madrid's. A New World Order is coming into being with or without you; it is an inevitable process that cannot be stopped. A whole new world of peace awaits us all. I can see you are a peace-loving man. It emanates from your being. Blood has flowed across your land so heavily that your people are drowning in it. Together we can cauterize that wound. Replace blood flow with cash flow. Americanization can upgrade your technology at a rapid rate. Your people could compete in world markets by the turn of the century. Your future global position has already been determined by geography alone. Flow with it. Lead your people out of poverty. Educate them in a manner conducive to their destined position in world markets. Free them from their struggles that have held them captive for so long. Allow the church bells to ring with good news of peace, prosperity and freedom. You can achieve all of your goals for your country's advancement with our help."

Ortega thoughtfully finished smoking a cigarette, and lit up another as he confidently replied, "Tell your President that I have seen his freedom, and listened to" his words projected through yet another example of it. He paints a beautiful picture suspended within his framework. A picture can appear serene to its beholder while it is being gazed upon. I cannot worship a graven image, and the picture he paints is just that. We have fought too hard and too long, spilling sweat and blood across this land in our determined effort to maintain human values instilled in us by our forefathers, who gained their profound wisdom from the original Catholic missionaries. These values are the same as those portrayed in President Reagan's painted picture-only ours are real. His have only surface value, like any other painting. If I were to concede, I would only be framed within me picture he paints, hung on his wall like a trophy. I will not mislead my people, in spite of his offers of wealth and position, I am true to my convictions, and when he is true to his, then we will meet on common ground and have something of substance to discuss. For now, words are only a waste of our time."

Ortega put out his cigarette, and pulled back the covers on his bed. "I'll lake you somewhere pleasant." He took a well-used opium pipe/bong off his dresser and handed me a nozzle, I had been trained to accept any drug given to me with the only exception being the strictly forbidden marijuana. I hesitated until Ortega assured me it was opium. As the drug took affect he said, "This could be the way to world peace." Sex with Ortega was at very least free of pain and perversion. Unlike most I was forced to have "diplomatic relations" with for the Reagan Administration, he fell asleep when he was through due to the difference between opium and cocaine.

The honk of a jeep's horn outside awoke him. As I prepared to leave, he said, "Wait". He took a small, 1/4 inch or so ball of black opium from his personal stash, wrapped it in the cellophane from his cigarette package wrapper, and said, "Give this to your President and tell him that you and I found more peace with this substance than he'll ever impart on the surface of his painted globe," As he closed the door quietly behind me he said, "Come back and see me when you have more to offer. "

I was immediately returned by plane to Washington, D.C. where my "mission" had originated. This time I was taken directly to Bush's office, where I delivered Ortega's message verbatim. Eliminating most of the dialogue, Bush instructed me to deliver a partial message to Reagan. Unable to perceive message content and people beyond my "Need to Know" mind-controlled limited view, I had no concept that Ortega's message would have a negative impact. It never occurred to me that Ortega had proven himself to be as much a hypocrite as he purported Reagan to be by using me as a prostitute and messenger of bad news knowing full well that I had no free will with which to make the message more palatable. Bush's revision of Ortega's message added fuei to a proverbial fire that I didn't even know was burning when I delivered the message to Reagan.

Bush was with Reagan and me in Reagan's secondary office (to the Oval office) of the White House as I relayed the message as instructed, "Daniel Ortega is a peace loving man, who seeks the same resolutions that we do. But he told me to tell you-(I dug in my purse for the opium) that he and I found more peace in this substance-(I handed the opium to Reagan) than you'll ever impart on the surface of your painted globe."

Bush smiled as Reagan's face instantly turned beet red with rage. Bush then reacted and spun up out of his chair, look the opium for himself, and told Reagan, "Settle down. There's more. It seems the only peace she spread was between her legs." He headed for the door, saying, "I would reconsider my position if 1 were in your shoes—considering what's filling hers." Bush dropped his gaze down the back of my legs to my shoes as he continued, "It's running down both sides of her legs."

Obviously I wouldn't be subjected to sex with Reagan that day. I was quickly excused and flown back to Mexico, where I resumed my NCL cruise. With my memory of the event compartmentalized through high voltage, 1 believed at the time that I had never been gone at all.

CHAPTER 23

WHIRLED VISION

In the fall of 1985, the same part of me that met with Ortega was walking with (Reagan appointed) CIA Director William "Bill" Casey through the arboured rose garden of his Long Island estate. Casey began by manipulating my Jesuit/Vatican programming base personality with the expertise indicative of the current union between Catholic and CIA operations. Casey, whom Reagan referred to as a "man of Vision," was forming my Jesuit mind-control programmed "understanding". "I have a World Vision,[1] one of peace. By removing the more violent factions of societies world wide and replacing them with faithful leaders of one world government, and the one world church, global unification is eminent. It is a beautiful vision, and it came to me in my dreams. God has moved me to move men. I've moved them here and I've moved them there—now it's time to remove them. My World Vision encompasses the globe and puts to rest any and all tensions, strife, overpopulation, and starvation. My vision is a World Vision, and the churches see it my way as evidenced by their support of the cause."[2]

Referring to my mind-controlled involvement in Haitian operations via NCL, Casey further defined 'the cause,' "Your heartfelt mission in Haiti has helped in my World Vision quest for her people to abandon hedonistic voodoo and turn their eyes to God and Godly ways. By their own design, they have created an atmosphere of evil whereby a plague will be visited on their land. The Lord has so moved me to move men who share our goals into place, and re-move those who stand in the way of peace. It is for this reason that your mission in Haiti must be brought to a close. Baby Doc, in his tireless devotion to saving the demonically possessed cannot bear the burden of watching his people die the wretched death unleashed upon those doomed for hell. We are left with no alternative but to heed the word of God and spare him from annihilation. For this reason, we will send in the missionaries (Jesuit Mercenaries) to inoculate the population with a vaccine that will spare only the good of heart by virtue of its design. All attempts to maintain Haiti within the loop of financial gain will cease. Tourism must be stopped for the sake of the innocents visiting a plagued land. Despite our differences, Baby Doc has complied with the Vatican's orders to the test of his abilities in his demon-infesled land, and must resign his post. We owe it to him to transport him to safety. It is our duty as Americans and followers of God to obey the commands of our Lord and Master and enforce the World Vision. It is your duty as an American and follower of God to instill the understanding that God has spoken, and a plague is imminent. Baby Doc is being prepared for transition and awaits word of direction. You will provide him with that word."

With my perceptions distorted and Catholic Jesuit programmed "understanding" instilled, I was prepared to "religiously accept" any and all I was told. I believed that the revolution in Haiti was a holy war, never capable of realizing it was a test run battle for the minds in this 4th world country.

The devotion I felt toward the Haitian people was more than a religious understanding of these alternately Catholic-Santeria[3] voodoo worshippers. I was actually subconsciously recognizing other tortured mind-controlled slaves in this human created hell called Haiti. Consciously, I now know it was due in part to the visible stun gun/prod marks, plastic ever-present smiles that never quite reach their dead appearing eyes. The children clung to their wide-eyed mothers, as they performed their tasks in robotic servitude. I had recognized these characteristics in other slaves throughout the years, but never had I seen a whole country entranced. My compassion for the Haitian people penetrated into the realm of the spiritual, into a part of me that mind control and manipulation of religion could never touch, Casey and I had been walking through the garden, guarded by more armed men than the President, It wasn't that I was a threat, 1 couldn't even think to save myself. It was that Casey and his World Vision were a threat to humanity that so many guards were needed. The men appeared to be U.S. Secret Service officers according to their attire, weapons, and earphone headsets. One guard conspicuously placed his hand to his headset, listening as though it were remote control. He walked briskly over to Casey, who signaled me to leave with an escort who instantly arrived at my side awaiting instruction.

"Take her to my chambers," Casey told him, "Clear her mind. I have something I need to instill," Robotically I followed my escort into Casey's office library. The room was barren, dark, and hot-just as described in a book I had been given to read in keeping with You Are What You Read programming. It produced a sensation of having somehow stepped into the novel Chameleon by insider William Diehl. The mind scramble of the book and reality instantly commenced,

"It's warm in here," the agent said, unbuttoning my while eyelet blouse. "Bill (Casey) likes to keep it this way in case-he (Casey) gets a chill and his blood runs cold. Chameleons[4] are naturally cold blooded. Make yourself comfortable white I turn up the heat. Mr, Casey doesn't want to hear a peep out of you, so I'll warn you now-be Silent." He deliberately triggered and activated the Jesuit programmed part of me that believed in my Vow of Silence.[5] The walls have ears and the plants have eyes, so your silence is tantamount to success. I'm going to leave you to reflect in Silence, Bill will be along any minute."

Had I been capable of "reflecting," I would have questioned the validity of Casey's dramatic position of "religious overtones" on Haitian policy. Like Reagan's, Casey's sincerity did not ring true considering the fruits of his labor, But then, 1 could not consider any more than I could reflect, and 1 sat in a state of what felt like suspended animation awaiting my instructions. I could not anticipate nor dread what was about to happen as futuristic thinking was left in the hands of my controllers. Had I realized the scramble of reality with William Diehl's book, I could have "psychicly" predicted what happened when Bill Casey strolled in.

Casey walked over to his highly polished, dark wood desk and opened the top drawer. Casey's desk was one of the few furnishings in the large, airy room. The dark, polished, reddish-wood paneling seemed even darker with the midnight blue carpeting curving slightly up the wall. Heavy, gothic maroon velvet drapes blacked out the sun from the windows behind his desk, "I can see quite clearly that you have taken a Vow of Silence, Maintain it. Maintain it and Lisssten," Casey hissed, using preset triggers. He reached into the drawer and took out a foot-long, maroon box with a diamond embossed on the top.

"1 received a box, quite anonymously as I do from time to time," Casey said in keeping with the book scramble. "The box has your name on it. I expected to open it and find the usual pierced chameleon and found, instead, a weapon intended for one."

He opened the box in front of me. Inside, laying on a bed of cotton, was an elaborate dagger with a handle of the same rose crystal from which the crucifix Byrd had presented me on "our wedding night" was made. My first personal meeting with Casey promised to be torturous as I recognized Byrd's participation in the grisly ordeal.

1 listened, deeply tranced, as Casey said, "Is it a knife or a crucifix? I can't tell. Both symbolize martyrdom as far as I'm concerned. Note the rose pattern cut into the crystal. Now, I wonder who would have sent me this to give to you."

Even under mind control I knew, as I was supposed to, that Byrd had provided him with the knife. My worst fears were confirmed when Casey began using Byrd's hypnotic induction, "In like a knife, sharp and clean, I'll carve out what I want." Casey sliced through the front of my bra, exposing the area between my breasts where Byrd routinely cut me with his pocketknife. He pierced into my breastbone deeply so that I believed I would split, and indeed did split off a personality fragment compartmentalizing this event. Using standard Jesuit-based infinity program, Casey instructed me and programmed me with messages that I would deliver as though my life depended on it.

"You must go to the Citadel and warn our Dominican brothers of impending doom to their neighbors in Haiti. From the Dominican side (of the Haitian island) you will be flown to Port Au Prince where you will meet with Baby Doc (Duvalier) at his Palace. He is already receptive to your word, and knows that my words are your words and your word is Silence. You must tell General Cedras his Order is from The Rose." Casey touched the white rose in his lapel, signaling me to photographically record his words verbatim.

When he was through programming me with his message, Casey told me, "As quickly as you complete this mission, you must depart Haiti, never to return again." Casey used excessive high voltage to compartmentalize my memory. I recall being nauseated and ill from his stun gun as I departed his Long Island compound/home via ferry programmed with messages to Cedras and Babv Doc.

Haiti had recently been dropped from the NCL itinerary as a Port of Call, but the Dominican Republic side of the island remained open to tourism. When Houston and I debarked the NCL ship in Puerta Plata, we walked past a World Vision cargo ship that was being unloaded at the dock. I recall that a soft ocean breeze gently lifted the hem of my white, gauzy dress as I weaved my way through the dockload of World Vision freight to a waiting automobile.

Religion and politics apparently mix in the Dominican Republic as evidenced by the inseparable mixture of Catholic Missions, old forts, statues of Christopher Columbus, and Catholic Shrines. As we drove past the mountain tramway that takes tourists up and down to the rustic Citadel and Catholic Shrine at the top, Houston perpetuated the "Chameleon" book scramble. Dually referring to Cedras and the short donkey ride from the tram to the Citadel depicted in Diehl's book, Houston threatened to put me on the rickety tram saying, "Some Jackass will see you at the top."

In an area reserved for covert activities, out of view of tourists, I met with General Cedras in his Citadel office. Dressed in the eerie, Jesuit, dark, hooded robe, Cedras completed Casey's "Chameleon" book scramble scenario as we walked through the ancient structure to his office. Cedras' demeanor made him appear more as a militant than a "spook," despite the corny monk's attire. With his hood down his back, Cedras' sharp, craggy features and darting steel blue eyes kept my full attention. I had seen him at a monastery in Santo Domingo as ordered before,[6] when Haiti was still being used by the CIA for Operation Watchtower to transport cocaine and Contra weapons from Cuba.

Alone with Cedras and properly signaled, I began photographically reciting Casey's message, "I have word of warning from the Vatican by way of the honorable and faithful William Casey. He sends word of impending doom that is to befall your neighbors on the darkside in Haiti. Voodoo manifest itself in mysterious ways while the way of the Lord is clear. Evil must be stopped at all costs. The cost shall be in terms of human casualty, as a plague is being visited upon the land. Those who fornicate with devils shall be infested with the plague. Woo unto them who have stood in the path of World Peace. By God's design the New World Order shall come into being with or without the Haitians. All American operations in Haiti are now destined for your ports. Your people (the CIA-UN operated Dominicans) will flourish in peace and prosperity while the dark side (Haitians) drown in the blood of this holy war that they have brought upon themselves. Close your borders swiftly and maintain guardians at the gate lest the Haitians infest your land with their evil plague. Inoculation of the masses shall be masked in the body and the blood shall carry the doom. As more and more Haitians turn to God in their final hour, the communion they partake will be Satan's own. With their God as the scapegoat, your Island in the Son (sun) will be freed of the vile and wicked. I have seen a vision, a World Vision, and it is through communion with the ancients that we have been granted the Keys to the Kingdom[7] to unlock the gates of hell. The holy water sent herein has the blessings of the Vatican and must be sprinkled like rain upon the Haitians. Our God reigns, and he rains rivers of blood upon the Haitian masses, and he reigns supreme upon your mission. Your mission is clear. You serve communion and let God son them out. Those who serve the body of Christ are covered by the Vatican, those who serve voodoo evil shall be covered in the blood of their own. It is clear our God reigns. Lei the games begin."

Combining the cryptic language of Cedras' CIA and Jesuit operations, Casey had weaved numerous cryptic commands into his message. Had I been inadvertently accessed, the instructions would make little sense to those not cued to the language. Cedras was listening religiously, fully grasping the magnitude of Casey's instructions. I concluded the message, "The holy water with the Vatican's blessings will arrive at 1 PM today by way of World Vision, The blood shall host the plague."[8]

I was relieved to depart Cedras' presence without being subjected to his usual perverse sexual brutality. This would be someone else's job this time, as my programmed trance was maintained until I delivered Casey's message to Baby Doc Duvalier on the "dark side" of the "Island in the Son".

Houston took me to the small CIA-operated airport at the foot of the mountain where I boarded a small, white airplane destined for Port Au Prince, Haiti. When we landed, the pilot walked me over to Baby Doc's Tonton guards, and ordered that I be taken to the Palace. He spoke in rapid Haitian French, and lifted my symbolic, rosy cross necklace for emphasis to the guards. Reinforcing my instilled belief that the Catholic emblem would protect me, the guards treated me with the respect that apparently was reserved for identified Jesuit spooks. I was driven by white Mercedes to the Haitian Presidential Palace. Looking even more conspicuously out of place in contrast to stark poverty than his fleet of Mercedes, Baby Doc's Palace was decadent. I stood reverently in. the foyer waiting for my arranged meeting to begin, unable to question Baby Doc's luxurious surroundings in view of the despair and starvation around him.

I had met with Baby Doc throughout the early '80s in the capacity of a Project Monarch prostitute. All Haitian-based U.S. covert operations were run by a bed-ridden old man referred to as "Ol' Charlie," who resided at the El Presidente Hotel until his death in the mid '80s. During my tenure as a mind-controlled messenger and prostitute in Haiti, I had been forced to attend a voodoo ceremony for my (and others') traumatization purposes. I was ordered to perform oral sex on Baby Doc as his dark-windowed Mercedes slowly proceeded through the crowds of Haitians on their way to the ritual. With my Haitian missions previously established with Ol' Charlie for business and Baby Doc for prostitution, my meeting Baby Doc for business was unprecedented.

"What brings you here?" Baby Doc spit the words at me in English. I had been led into his library by three armed guards, "I have no need of a Catholic whore,"

Baby Doc's applicable knowledge of the English language was limited by his intellect whereby an aide filled the need for an interpreter as 1 delivered Casey's message.

"I come in the name of peace. I have a message for you from William Casey, sanctioned by the Vatican, The Pope is in agreement with U.S. policy in Haiti. He has seen a vision, a sign from God. The vision is a World Vision, whose people are reaching out to yours with charily in abundance. The goods and services provided require only that the people of Haiti anoint the sick, feed the hungry, and clothe the poor through his servants of World Vision. Their mission will separate good seed from bad and restore peace in your region. The peace that shall be visited upon your land amongst your people is imminent, but not before the rivers run red with the blood of the wicked. The vision is plague, and your people will fall in the streets pleading for mercy, and you will not be here to hear it. The lime has come for you to leave. It is God's will that you escape the plague with blessings from the Vatican, never to return to your homeland. Prepare for your exodus today for tomorrow holds a promise of doom. Using your prophetic wisdom, warn the masses of impending doom and arm them with World Vision. The vision is one of peace' for those who flock to the tents and churches for salvation. Your destiny is clear, and the Vatican has cleared the way for your departure."

With Casey's message delivered, Baby Doc's Tontons returned me to the same airplane I had left a short time before. I flew in silence, unable to think to comprehend the magnitude of what had just transpired. Events to a mind-controlled slave are all perceived as first and last times. Therefore, Casey's instructions that I would "depart Haiti, never to return again" seemed business as usual to me. Flying over the mountains that separate Haiti from the Dominican Republic, I noticed the gentle people below bathing in the waterfalls, toilessly washing their bright clothes on the rocks, and primitively hauling goods in the baskets balanced on their heads. An occasional goat ran across the barren land, and the children, bellies swollen from starvation, played with slicks and vines. With my mind-controlled and spinning with misperceptions, my whirled vision, like Ortega's rose colored glasses, prevented me from seeing the reality of New World Orders.

[1] World Vision was/is a Jesuit controlled organization that led churches to give them money under the guise of spreading world peace. What they were not saying was what the money was actually funding-a world peace plan under mind control.

[2] Perceptual distortions of the virtues that good people hold most dear is one reason for the proliferation of criminal activity within such organizations as World Vision. There are those within affected factions of such organizations, the Catholic church, and even the U.S. Government that operate under distorted perceptions referred to by the CIA as a "Need to Know" basis--and they "Need to Know" that their minds, religion, and/or perceptions are being deliberately manipulated.

[3] Since the Catholics had joined forces with the United Nations to overtake the world through mass mind control, the Jesuit influence on Haiti was complete. By maintaining much of the ceremony, placing literal interpretation on "eating the body and drinking the blood," and providing a mirror reversal of good and evil, Catholicism and voodoo, like Catholicism and the United nations, became one in the same.

[4] The term "Chameleon" is a term used to describe spies who are expertly trained to blend into any environment at any time unnoticed-just as an MPD mirrors the one they're with.

[5] The Jesuit Vow of Silence was installed through the Rite to Remain Silent of my childhood. Now I know, like so many others in Intelligence, that "Silence Equals Death". Knowledge is our ONLY defense against mind control.

[6] Byrd had told me that Cedras was "a strategically placed chess piece that the CIA, Jesuits and U.N. moved around" to usher in their New World Order,

[7] "Keys to the Kingdom" was defined by Bill Bennett in accordance with Jesuit programming as follows: "At the onset of Christianity, the Apostles compiled all the information that they had obtained from Christ and built the Holy Catholic Apostolic Church. Christ intended it to be the one world church then—the truth, the light, and the way. The secrets were kept in the ark of the covenant, and passed down generation after generation. And generation after generation Christ caused for more to be written-the fruits of his labors expounding on the truth. Now the ark has become archives—a wealth of information. This information is accessible to very few— the very few who hold the Keys to the Kingdom".

[8] Interpretation of the final message is left to the minds of the masses who can still discern truth. My conclusions are "clear", bused on conversations overheard and my experience as a White House sex slave. Although Byrd and Reagan, among others, had prostituted me to officials in AIDS-infected countries, they used no protection against "the plague" when having sex with me.

[9] There can be no world peace without peace-of-mind, and there is no peace-of-mind under mind control. Haiti, once a prototype of New World Order controls has now been used up and discarded by the CIA and Jesuits. U.N. "peacekeeping forces" have created a smoke and mirrors illusion of "peace" by keeping it FROM the Haitian people.

CHAPTER 24

A-HUNTING WE WILL GO

On December 4, 1986, I turned 29 years old. Usually mind-controlled slaves were discarded, "thrown from the Freedom train," at 30; but I argued with Houston when he told me my government abusers only had one year left to "use me up". I had had no conscious awareness of the passing of time, and believed I was still only 24. Regardless of what I believed, my abusers did their best to "use me up" physically and psychologically before even a month had passed.

I was in Washington, D.C. on a routine trip, which included being prostituted to President Reagan. "Uncle Ronnie's" cheeks were flushed from excitement and cognac as he told me, "I always take two weeks off for Christmas to go back to California." Reagan interrupted himself to break into an old Hollywood style song and dance, "California here 1 come..." The While House, he claimed, had always been confining to him, and he appeared genuinely excited about his upcoming trip. "I look forward lo this trip every year because I get to see old friends. Oh, I still work while I'm there-the President's work is never done-but at least I'm there. It's about time you see where I call home." Then, quoting the Wizard of Oz, he said, "'There's no place like home.' And you're about to see why. Say it with me, "There's no place like home. There's no place like home'." Then he instructed me in Oz cryptic, "Click your heels. There's no place like home."

Blue-white light seemingly exploded in my brain, like being hit with deadly low voltage AC electrical current. Reagan was "setting the stage" for an attempted mind scrambling time slip, to be reactivated at an upcoming meeting I would have with him in Bel Air, California.

The motor home was packed to the walls, and the walls were packed with cocaine as Houston, Kelly, and I departed on our long drive to California. Houston had planned several "tourist stops" along the way that proved as" nightmarish as the California ordeal itself.

In Las Vegas, Nevada, Houston kept Kelly and me busy prostituting us to everyone he knew "in the know" and in attendance at the Country Music Association's annual convention. Weary of being sent from room to room, 1 was back in the lobby literally trying to catch my breath when I saw Michael Dante. He was dressed in an expensive, light grey silk suit and dark glasses, looking more like a Fed than a mobster, leaning on a post, waiting for met "Our love" he professed over the phone for mind conditioning purposes was certainly not apparent now. "You're late," he growled as he looked at his watch. He ordered me into the Ladies' Room to activate programming by having me "lose myself in the infinity mirrors that lined the walls. With my mind set like he wanted, he then used and directed me in commercial pornography. Later, he did the same with Kelly.

At the Grand Canyon, Houston traumatized Kelly and me in preparation for. the upcoming events in California. While hiking down the canyon, Houston attempted to anchor hypnotically all of the trip's events behind the death and insanity programming to which he was subjecting us. When we stopped for a late afternoon lunch in the Canyon, Kelly collapsed in a state of shock, unable to eat. Houston was pleased because he "got to eat it all himself". I was, as usual, undergoing the food and water deprivation. I was so thirsty, I could not think to eat. Kelly's condition magnified my own terrified state, and I did all I could to keep Houston from supposedly pushing her over the edge. I carried her for hours all the way out of the canyon, without pausing to rest. In my own mind I wanted to believe I was actually able to protect her. The fact was, Houston was wearing me down physically to ensure that I could not protect her at our next destination: Lake/Mount Shasta, California.

George Bush was highly active in both the Lampe, Missouri and Shasta, California retreat compounds. Just like Lampe, Shasta's cover was country music. According to everyone 1 knew, singer and songwriter Merle Haggard supposedly ran the show at Lake Shasta, diverting any and all attention from the nearby Mount Shasta compound. Shasta was the largest, covert mind-control slave camp of which I am aware. Hidden in the wooded hills, military fencing corrals an enormous fleet of unmarked, black helicopters and more mind-controlled, military robots than I saw in all of Haiti. This covert military operation served its own agenda, not America's. I was told and overheard that it was a base for the future Multi-Jurisdictional Police Force; for enforcing order and law in the New World Order. In the center of the high security compound, was another well-guarded military-fenced area that was regarded as a "Camp David" of sorts for those running our country. George Bush and Dick Cheney shared an office there, and claimed the outer perimeter woods as their own hunting ground where they played "A Most Dangerous Game". Predicated on conversations I overheard between the two, it was this world police military background that earned Dick Cheney his cabinet appointment as Secretary of Defense[1] with the Bush Administration.

Houston stayed at Haggard's Lake Shasta resort while Kelly and 1 were helicoptered to Mount Shasta for our scheduled meeting with Bush and Cheney. The helicopter pilot directed our attention to the military fencing surrounding the outer perimeter of the compound. Rarely did pilots ever speak to either of us, but this one smiled wickedly as he told us we would need to know the outer limits for A Most Dangerous Game.

As soon as we arrived at Bush and Cheney's inner sanctum, I noticed George Bush, Jr. was with them. It was my experience that Jr. stood by his father and covered his backside whenever Bush would become incapacitated from drugs or required criminal backup. It appeared that Jr. was there to serve both purposes while his father and Cheney enjoyed their work-vacation.

Hyper from drugs, Cheney and Bush were eager to hunt their human prey in "A Most Dangerous Game". They greeted me with the rules of the game, ordered me to strip naked despite the cold December winds, and told me in Oz cryptic to "beware of the lions and tigers and bears". Kelly's life became the stakes, as usual, which resurrected my natural and exaggerated programmed maternal instincts. Tears silently ran down my cheeks as Bush told me, "If we catch you, Kelly's mine. So run, run as fast as you can. I'll get you and your little girl, too, because I can, I can, I can. And I will."

Cheney, daring me to respond, asked, "Any questions?"

I said, "There's no place to run because there's a fence—the kind I can't get over. I saw it"

Rather than physically assault me. Cheney laughed at my sense of "no where to run, no where to hide and explained that a bear had torn a hole in the fence somewhere, and all I had to do is find it. He lowered his rifle to my head and said, "Let the games begin. Go."

Wearing only my tennis shoes, I ran through the trees as fast and as far as I could, which wasn't very far at all. Bush was using his bird dog to track me, the same one that had recently been used with me in bestiality filming as a "Byrd-dog" joke on my owner, Robert C. Byrd. When caught, Cheney held his gun to my head again as he stood over me, looking warm in his sheepskin coat. Bush ordered me to take his dog sexually while they watched, then he and Cheney ushered me back to their cabin.

I pulled on my clothes and sat in the office part of the cabin awaiting instructions. I had no idea where Kelly was, nor do I in retrospect. Bush and Cheney were still in their hunting clothes when the programming session began. Bush said, "You and I are about to embark on A Most Dangerous Game of diplomatic relations. This is my game. You will follow my rules. 1 will have the distinct advantage of hunting you with my Eye in the Sky (satellite). I'll watch every move you make. As long as you play the game by my rules and make no mistakes, you live. One mistake and I'll get you, my pretty, and your little girl, too. You die, and Kelly will have to play with me. I prefer it that way. Then it will be her Most Dangerous Game. The cards are stacked in my favor because, well, it is my game! Are you game?"

There was no choice. I responded as conditioned, "Yes, Sir! I'm game." The parallels to The Most Dangerous Game that had just occurred in the woods were deliberate and intended to make retrieval of memory "impossible" due to cryptoamnesia scrambling.

"Good. Then let the games begin. Listen carefully to your instructions. You have no room for error." Cheney flipped his "game timer"—an hourglass. Bush continued, "This game is called the King and Eye, and here's the deal. You will be establishing stronger diplomatic relations according to order between Mexico, the U.S., and the Middle East. Your role will require a change of face at each new place. I'll chart your course, define your role, and pull your strings. You'll speak my words when I pull your strings. There is no room for error,"

Cheney was half lying across the plain, military issue style desk in an apparent drug stupor as Bush talked. Still wearing his hunting coat and hat, Cheney aimed his rifle at me from the desk and threatened, "Or a-hunting we will go." Bush finished Cheney's threat by singing, "We'll catch a fox and put her in a box and lower her in a hole."

Bush looked at Cheney and burst out laughing. The sight of him dressed in his hunting clothes with a huge bore, double-barreled shotgun to his shoulder inspired Bush to tell him he "looked tike Elmer Fudd".

Cheney, imitating the cartoon character, said, "Where is that waskily wabbit?"

Operation The King and Eye would involve Reagan's #1 envoy Philip Habib (who cryptically played the Alice In Wonderland role of the White Rabbit with slaves such as myself) and Saudi Arabian King Fahd. So when Bush referred to the two as "Elmer Fahd and the Waskily Wabbit," he and Cheney laughed until they cried. Since both were already high from drugs anyway, they had a great deal of difficulty maintaining composure long enough to complete my programming.

---

[1] Dick Cheney has no official U.S. military history to justify his position as our nation's former Defense Secretary under President George Bush.

CHAPTER 25

BUSH BABY

It was late evening when Bush and Cheney finished programming me with numerous messages pertaining to the immediate opening of the Juarez, Mexican border to free (drug and slave) trade. They then took me downstairs to the living quarters of the western cedar and redwood structure where Kelly soon joined us. George Bush, Jr. deposited my obviously traumatized and withdrawn child at the door. Referring to The Most Dangerous Game she told me in a quiet, defeated and sad voice, "I was caught same as you".

In retrospect, I do not know if she was actually hunted (I can only hope she was not). Regardless, this reinforced the fact that 1 had been caught and therefore was "responsible" (when in fact I was not) for everything that happened to Kelly from that point on.

The decor of the residence area reflected Cheney's primitive, rustic, western preference. Like his "ultra secret" Pentagon Bunkhouse, use of leather was in abundance. The main room was small, but appeared larger due to an infinity mirror on one wall. The room was decorated in mirror fashion with one side looking like the other. Centered between two facing black leather sofas was a coffee table littered with drugs and paraphernalia. Bush and Cheney were sitting in matching black leather recliners angled towards the large stone fireplace where a fire was blazing, illuminating and heating the room.

Heroin, Bush's drug of choice, was in abundance and Cheney joined him in using it. The smorgasbord of drugs laid out supposedly included opium, cocaine, and Wonderland Wafers (MDMHA-XTC aka ecstasy), which indicated to me they intended to celebrate their vacation with abandon. 1 had seen Cheney stumbling drunk before, but this was the only time I saw him use heroin and give it to me. Kelly, too, was subjected to the drugs.

Bush attempted to sell Cheney on the idea of pedophilia through graphic descriptions of having sex with Kelly. Both were already sexually aroused from drugs and anticipation. Cheney demonstrated to Bush why he did not have sex with kids by exposing himself to Kelly and saying, "Come here". Upon seeing Cheney's unusually large penis, Kelly reeled back in horror and cried, "No!" which made them both laugh. Bush asked Cheney for his liquid cocaine atomizer as he got up to take Kelly to the bedroom. When Cheney remarked how benevolent it was of Bush to numb her with it before sex, Bush replied, "The hell it is. It's for me." He described his excited state in typical vulgar terms and explained that he wanted it to spray cocaine on his penis to last longer.

Cheney said, "I thought it was for the kid."

Bush explained, "Half the fun is having them squirm." He took Kelly's hand and led her off to the bedroom.

Cheney told me that since I was "responsible" for Bush's assault on my daughter by being caught in A Most Dangerous Game, I would "burn" (in hell). He burned my inner thigh with the fireplace poker, and threatened to throw Kelly in the fire. He hypnotically enhanced his description of her burning to traumatize me deeply. As he sexually brutalized me, I heard Kelly's whimpers coming from the bedroom. As her cries grew louder, Cheney turned on classical music to drown out her cries for help.

At 4:00 am, as ordered, Bush Jr. (and his helicopter pilot) came to retrieve Kelly and me. We were flown (by helicopter) back to the Lake Shasta area where Houston and the motor home awaited us. Bush's assault of Kelly proved to be a mind shattering experience for me, and physically devastating to Kelly. She was in dire need of medical attention and was unable even to move. Houston threatened to stop the motor home in the Yosemite area and throw me from a steep cliff if I didn't settle down. His threats and commands could not control my hysteria, as much of his control programming had inadvertently shattered. Fearful he would lose both his "money-makers," Houston permitted me to telephone Kelly's doctor and begin administering medicines. As for me, he arranged for assistance in picking up the pieces in order that I complete my primary purpose in traveling to California, i.e., meet with Mexican President Miguel de Ja Madrid and finalize plans Co open the Juarez border.

CHAPTER 26

NEW WORLD ORDERS

There was "no time to lose" in bringing me back around to a functioning level. I knew I had work to do. Although I was to be "used up" by my 30th birthday, I do not believe it was Bush and Cheney's intention to expedite the process so quickly. Apparently it was their incompetence due to over-indulgence of drugs and subsequent abuse of Kelly in my presence that destroyed parts of my maternal-based programming. Regardless of their "excuse," Houston drove us to San Francisco, California where Temple of Set (Satan) founder U.S. Army Lt. Col. Aquino made some emergency "repairs".

I was not taken to a hospital or a mental institution, but to a brain/mind research and development lab on the U.S. Army Reservation at Presidio. There are many facilities such as this one across the country at various CIA, military, and NASA compounds where hyper-advanced government knowledge is put to the test, developed and modified. Those I met who had expertly learned the scientific mechanics of the brain in conjunction with the ins and outs of the mind used their gained secret knowledge to manipulate and/or control others. The only thing Mark Phillips, Byrd, and Aquino had in common was the belief that "secret knowledge equals power".[1] Byrd explained to me that New World Order "powers were strengthened" by allowing the mental health community only partial and/or deliberate misinformation through their organization lobby, The American Psychiatric Association (APA), concerning treatment modalities for severe dissociative disorders being created through mind control! Perpetrators believed that withholding knowledge and the proliferation of deliberate misinformation allowed them control over their secrets, and subsequently over humanity. They may be correct if no one can or will react to the information presented in this book.

Intended or not, I overheard a conversation pertaining to death and the mind between Aquino and a lab assistant as I lay on a cold, metal table in a deep hypnotic state, Aquino was saying that 1 had come close to death numerous limes which "increased my ability to enter other (mind) dimensions en route to death". I had listened to Aquino talk at length about such concepts before, as though he were trying to convince himself of some interdimensional time travel theory. "Whether in principle or in theory, the results are the same," he claimed. "The concept of time is abstract in itself." Hypnotic talk of past-present-future set my mind in a spin that, when combined with Alice In Wonderland/NASA mirror world concepts, created an illusion of timeless dimensions. I now know that the only "dimensions' I experienced were elaborate memory compartmentalizations of real, earthly events by real, earthly criminals, and certainly not by aliens, Satan, or demons.

After moving me from the table to an elaborate box, Aquino then shifted my mind to another area of my brain, claiming to have taken me into another dimension by way of "death's door". This was accomplished while I was subjected to sensory deprivation combined with hypnotic and harmonic re-programming. The seemingly coffin-like structure was transformed in my mind to a crematorium, where 1 endured the sense of increasing heat while "I slowly burned" through hypnotic suggestion. Aquino then "pulled me through death's door" and into another dimension, "void of time". Parts of my programming were "recreated for the recreation of world leaders," i.e., U.S. President Reagan, Mexican President de la Madrid, and Saudi Arabian King Fahd.

In my next recollection of awareness, Houston, Kelly, and I were in Hollywood, where Houston claimed the motor home "broke down"—an over used attempted memory scramble. He sent me down the street to telephone Michael Dante, who lived nearby in Beverly Hills. Dante was expecting Kelly and me to join him in his Beverly Hills mansion for several days as bad been previously arranged by our handler, Alex Houston. Kelly and I waited at the phone booth as instructed until Dante arrived to pick us up in his midnight blue Ferrari. As soon as I sat down, Dante said, "I got something for you, Baby, Give me your arm." Heroin was a common "vice" he shared with Bush, and he shot me up with the drug right in front of Kelly.

Later that evening at his house, Dante told me that he refused to "handle damaged goods," and that he would not be my next handler as previously planned. Not only was I "not fit to live with" him, but I was not "fit to live" at all. I am not certain what he meant to accomplish by these threats, but I know in retrospect that this was not his decision to make. Besides, 1 never perceived existence with him and his professed "love" as a "future" anyway- Instead, he said he would go along with the original plan long enough to acquire Kelly".

The next day, hours before I was to meet with de la Madrid, L.A, Dodgers baseball team manager Tommy LaSorda, George Bush, Jr., and star pitcher of Jr.'s Texas Rangers, Nolan Ryan (who was also a banker) were at Dante's house working out the details of money laundering and bank transactions for the imminent opening of the Juarez border cocaine, heroin, and white slavery route. The common bond of covert criminal activity overrode any professional baseball conflicts between them. All three were in town to be in attendance at various gatherings and parties of Reagan's, who would be arriving in a matter of days. And all three appeared to have an understanding of my function as Reagan's "Presidential Model" mind-control sex slave.

Dante was gathering the necessary clothes and props for the evening rendezvous with de la Madrid. LaSorda, Nolan Ryan, and Jr. were standing in the entrance way of Dante's house attempting to activate my "Baseball Mind Computer" programmed personality fragment that had inadvertently been shattered by Bush and Cheney's traumas at Shasta. Dante told them, "She knows more about baseball than you and Tommy (LaSorda) put together. Go ahead and ask her something. Anything."

Much to LaSorda's amusement, Nolan Ryan asked, "How many times does Fernando Valenzuela (Dodger pitcher) touch his hat if he's going to throw a srewgy (screw ball)?" I could not respond, although I had once known more statistical data than would ever be in print,

Jr. hollered, "Hey, Dante". What's with your baseball computer here, huh? Are we supposed to say a magic word?"

"I don't know," Dante responded. "Could be drugs. Her sex is working fine, though. Give it a whirl."

Jr. declined, saying, "No thanks. The Baseball Computer sucks enough. Listen, we'll see you later." Jr. had never shown any interest in me sexually. Like his father, he had only shown sexual interest in Kelly, who had been away with him most of the day. As he turned to leave, he stroked me under the chin and cryptically said, "Have a Ball tonight".

LaSorda, who had not been on his Ultra Slim Fast-sponsored diet yet, said, "Speaking of balls, mine could use a little attention here." He unzipped his pants.

Dante told me, "We gotta get dressed. Three minutes." Three minutes was a trigger for me to perform a specific, oral sex act. I knelt on the floor and pushed up LaSorda's enormous belly, resting it on my head as I groped for his penis as ordered. Dante's two Great Danes came in as Jr. and Nolan Ryan left I had been forced to participate in a bestiality film with these sex-trained dogs earlier that day, and I had to fight them off as I sexually gratified LaSorda before getting ready for "the Ball".

---

[1] Mark Phillips explained to me that, by revealing their "secrets" their power would diminish. "Good always prevails through positive application, whereas the bad guys are hindered and slowed in their criminal endeavors through having to cover-up their negative actions with lies to support lies. This inevitably allows the truth to emerge," Mark said.

CHAPTER 27

HOTEL CALIFORNIA

Dante threw me a short, red, slinky dress with rhinestone straps and a pair of "glass slippers" to wear to "Cinderella's Ball", The shoes, like Oz ruby, slippers and Philip Habib's "magic lightening boll" shoes, were to trance-form me into the personality fragmenl ihat had been pre-programmed for the event, Dante escorted me to the party/"Ball" where I was to meet with Mexican President de la Madrid. Dante had been bragging about his "second home in Malibu" ever since I first met him, and the place was opulence personified. I do not know who actually owned "his" second home in Malibu, California, but Reagan's influence was evident in the decor. From the front, the white stucco house gave the illusion of being two-story. The view overlooked a secluded Pacific bay, and revealed three levels built into a cliff. Through the smoked glass wall panels that spanned the back, the three stories, lavishly carpeted in red, white, and blue provided a patriotic view. All levels had a beige-white interior decorated in gold and crystal. An enormous chandelier hung from the "cathedral ceiling, illuminating all three levels at once from the greatroom which overlooked the bay.

I was told that Uncle Ronnie (Reagan) would be arriving the next day. It was my "patriotic duty" to attend de la Madrid's welcome party and "wear down any resistance he may have" in order that Reagan's business meeting with him would "go smoothly". This was not the first time I heard this excuse for being politically prostituted, nor would it be the last. In reality, I was to do the initial dirty work, delivering messages, and encourage de la Madrid lo use drugs and party with abandon. The diplomatic relations between the U.S. and Mexico were already strong, but this phase of the operation requited total commitment from de la Madrid.

Dante and I waited at the top of the staircase as de la Madrid, accompanied by two bodyguards, climbed to the red level of the house. I greeted de la Madrid, "Welcome to the U.S. and (seductively) welcome to the Hotel California." His deep-throated laugh indicated he had been cued to the ramifications of my cryptic statement. "Hotel California," taken from a popular song by the Eagles, stated "you can check out anytime you like, but you can never leave." To de la Madrid this confirmed the permanency of his involvement in the criminal, covert operations in which he was conspiring. Blackmail was openly initiated to ensure that each criminal participant understood that if one fell, they all fell. Maintaining "dirt" on each other through this Mafia-style method was seemingly the only way these criminals implementing the New World Order kept each other "honest."

De la Madrid and I went into a nearby bedroom, followed by Dante and the bodyguards. Dante then activated the programmed message instilled at the Shasta resort from Bush to de la Madrid. I recited, "If you please, Sir, I have a message to deliver to you from the Vice President of the United States. Welcome to our Neighborhood. As you know, Salinas and 1 have worked out the details towards implementing our plan to open the Juarez border tomorrow. In preparation and celebration of this accomplishment, this little party tonight will bring you face to face with a trusted few who are integral parts of this endeavor, and give you the latitude to see firsthand the friendship and honor among the (government-involved Mafioso) family members, I regret that I could not be here in person to greet you, but Ron (Reagan) can show you the ins and outs of the organization better than I. The transaction numbers have been recorded, and are available to you for cross reference purposes and to uphold the integrity of the players involved on your end of the Juarez border. Your commitment today ensures you of a higher economic standard of living for your people, increased relations with the U.S., an influx of American industry, and a position of high esteem in the New World Order, With your 'Seal of Approval' we can dissolve the Juarez border and make way for a future of prosperity for Mexico. For now, relax and enjoy your stay."

One of de la Madrid's guards was shuffling through some papers from a briefcase, and he told Dante he would like the bank transaction numbers. Dante switched me to "You Are What You Read" Passbook programming, and I delivered the numbers intended for the border guards to de la Madrid as ordered. A computer of sorts was used to calculate and confirm the numbers. Aware that the meeting was being filmed by one of Dante's high tech "hidden" cameras, de la Madrid held up a paper-wrapped ball of Mexican heroin. Speaking directly at the camera, he cleverly said, "A token of appreciation, Mr. Bush, Something for your private stock. The finest heroin available. Enjoy."

Dante strode across the room and said, "I'll take that and see to it that he gets it myself."

"I'm sure you will," de la Madrid laughed. He then put all but one paper back in the briefcase. I was instructed to present the elaborately embossed Mexican Presidential Seal (of Approval) to pre-appointed Juarez border guards as proof of de la Madrid's commitment, then deliver it directly to Bush for his file on the future NAFTA agreement.

Prepared to present a modified Hands-On Mind-Control Demonstration to de la Madrid, Dante said, "You've heard from a Carrier Pigeon (messenger). You've seen her in a mode to accept program. And now I will demonstrate some of her sexual modes."

"That will not be necessary," de la Madrid told him. "I have been given a handful of keys that I would like to use on my own, including the one to destroy all memory. Not that it matters when we are monitored (he gestured toward the camera), but nevertheless I was instructed to do it." Dante did not seem to know this was not the first time I was sexually prostituted to the Mexican President.

"She rides a horse well," Dante said, referring to both the rare practice of heroin to supposedly block my memory of this event, and a Reagan-inspired sex act. Dante stuck a needle in my arm. "May I recommend a ride for you?"

"I am on one now that I would like to maintain," de la Madrid answered, referring to cocaine use and his running nose. Dante laid out several generous lines of the white drug on a black mirror. He stroked me under my chin triggering Reagan's sex Kitten personality, picked up Bush's heroin, and ushered the two guards out the door.

De la Madrid, fully aware of my pornography exposure, said, "You like cameras? Let's give them something to watch." He snorted two more lines of coke, undressed, and further activated my sex programming with the verbal and physical keys and triggers Reagan had previously provided him. At one point he enthusiastically commented that "if I have my way, the Free Trade Agreement will include a few top of the tine (he snorted another line of coke for emphasis) "models" (vaginally) carved and trained like you." De la Madrid had long been obsessively fascinated with my vaginal mutilation carving. He was perversely excited at the prospect of the Juarez border joint venture drug deal including protected "free trade" of mind-controlled slaves. He reiterated his desire the next day during a meeting with Reagan.

CHAPTER 28

"FREE TRADE" OF DRUGS AND SLAVES AT THE JUAREZ BORDER

The next day. Dante drove me to a Bel Aire mansion high on a hill where another party was underway. As I joined those who had gathered on the manicured lawn, I recognized many of the same Mafia people who had been at the Malibu retreat aka "Hotel California". This was a welcome party for President Reagan who had just arrived. He was walking across the yard toward me with his friend. Jack Valenti, who was the president of the powerful Motion Picture Association of America. Reagan looked his role amongst his mobster friends, his beige coal with fur collar draped over his shoulders revealing a dark grey, pinstripe suit underneath. In retrospect I remember him as dressed like the one mobster I did not have to meet, John Gotti. As soon as my eyes met his, 1 was knocked to the ground by a familiar blue-white blast (high voltage) like the one I had recently experienced in D.C.

When I came back around and my eyes refocused, Dante was holding me up. Reagan said, "Well, hello Kitten".

"Uncle Ronnie, how'd you get here?" I asked in child-like innocence.

"The rainbow, Kitten, the rainbow," he answered in Oz cryptic, "I told you I was coming home. There's no place like home, and you said it with me. So, here we are. I keep a little piece of the rainbow in my pocket so I can get back over it (to D.C.) anytime I want to. I make a wish, and click my heels, and I'm gone."

For the moment, Reagan succeeded in confusing my mind with Oz cryptic metaphors, reconfirming to my child personality that he was indeed the powerful Wizard. As we went inside for a brief meeting, my personality was deliberately switched to the one that had dealt with de la Madrid the night before.

The grey-white stucco house was decorated in plush Presidential blue carpeting and deep, cherry wood tones. The "office" was small and further crowded by those of us present for the meeting. De la Madrid was comfortably seated, as was Jack Valenti. I was not privy to Valenti's exact role in opening the Juarez border, I only know that he was well educated lo the particulars of this meeting. Dante and I remained standing since we would be leaving as quickly as I heard what Reagan, who was shuttling papers and pacing the room, had to say.

"Well, Kitten," Reagan said to me, "this is your death sentence: You'll go out ia a blaze of glory." I was not surprised to receive confirmation of my imminent death by Reagan. I had heard about death by fire from seemingly everyone involved in establishing "free trade," through Mexico, of our nation's children for drags. Reagan's use of patriotic metaphors and puns while matter-of-factly informing me he ordered my death was reflective of his often displayed lack of respect for human life. What reflected his character even more were the crimes he was involved in that prompted him to cover-up through "sentencing- me to death. I had witnessed the criminal foundations of NAFTA, which in turn could threaten the successful implementation of the New World Order should these secrets ever be revealed. Initial "Free Trade" including drugs and white slavery extended beyond the U.S./Mexican border. It routed U.S. traumatized, robotic, mind-controlled children into Saudi Arabia, while building up weapon stockpiles in Nicaragua and Iraq. Although I was considered to be no threat, predicated on the (erroneous) belief that I could not be deprogrammed to regain my memory of these events, my death would provide extra insurance to those involved. I was nearly "used up" anyway, and recording my death via "Snuff Film" was agreed upon as proof to De la Madrid and other leaders at risk, that I had indeed been silenced through death,

I could not think to respond to Reagan's "death sentence". Dante wanted to make sure I grasped the point as he graphically expounded, "The next time I ignite your (sexual) flame. Baby, it will consume you, body and soul. And you will burn, Baby, burn. And I'll take your ashes and scatter them to the wind. I'm going to blow you away. On film."

Upon hearing something cryptic to which he could relate. Valenti laughed at Dante's twist of words. Referring to the old, porn, blue pencil editing term "Blue movies," he added, "Blue blazes".

Dante laughed with him. "We'll call it 'Who In Blue Blazes Was That?' Or, how 'bout 'Cream-Ate'?"

De la Madrid noticed Reagan was not laughing and said, "That's like erasing a Mercedes to film a stunt," He leaned forward in his chair closer to Reagan, lowered his voice and said, "It is my desire to have seven just like her roll off the assembly Line and shipped to me prior to the agreement's completion."

Reagan agreed, responding, "Those (blonde-haired, blue-eyed) fine kids on the relay to Saudi Arabia are top of the line, but they don't have what she's got."

"Two faced Ones are hard to come by," de la Madrid quipped, referring to my vaginal mutilation and Presidential programming code. He cut his eyes over to me, touched himself and cryptically continued, "—from one perspective, anyway. And I like having 'One' I can 'count on."

Reagan chuckled while Dante shifted his feet and unfolded his arms long enough to cough-laugh. Valenti seemed to be bored of cliches or was missing many of the cryptic double meanings, but judging from the tone of the meeting, that was just as well. "I'll mention it to Bobby (Byrd) and delegate your order to him," Reagan told his Mexican counterpart. "It should be relatively simple to slip one in for you every few shipments or so once the Juarez border is open to such free trade activities as planned." Reagan spoke as though he were distracted and thinking of something else, even when he looked my direction.

"If you please, Sir," I began, "I have the Presidential Seal of Approval and am prepared to fulfill my role." Dante looked at his watch, aware that 1 was scheduled to be at the Juarez border by the "stroke of midnight". Reagan walked over to see the paper I had received from de la Madrid the night before.

"OK. Well, farewell. Kitten," Reagan said, as he kissed my cheek. He added in Oz cryptic, "I'll see you on the other side (of the rainbow in D.C.). Click your heels..."

My world spun black. Someone had hit me with a powerful stun gun and I was down, feeling as though Dante was half dragging me as he led me to his car, which was already idling in the circular drive. We soon pulled up to the motor home at the gas station on Hollywood Boulevard, where he had picked Kelly and me up several days before, Kelly was already in the motor home, vomiting sick and horribly traumatized. She had been convinced by someone that I had been killed. Houston attempted to create a hypnotically induced "time slip," acting as though I had only been gone a few minutes. We drove quickly, stopping only for fuel in order that I be in Juarez at the appointed time.

There 1 robotically presented the Presidential Seal of Approval to the proper officials as programmed, officially opening the border to "Free Trade" of crimes against humanity. Houston and I had hurried across the Juarez border where we were met by the Mexican official in charge. The guard looked to be in his late 40s, with classic, rugged, Mexican features. He stood approximately 5'11", had black hair, an unkempt moustache, black beady eyes and a paunchy belly protruding over his short, squat legs. He spoke excitedly in Spanish, with a harsh, cold lone to his voice as he spit out the necessary words in English, "Give me the Seal", He snapped his fingers, impatiently hurrying me. He took the Presidential seal and knocked me face down on top of a small, barren metal desk while he closely inspected the document. Even Houston was unusually quiet while this particular uniformed guard paced the small tower room, sweating profusely while he talked on his walkie talkie. Finally, he accessed and verified the bank transaction codes provided through whom he said was George Bush, Jr. He concluded the encounter by taking a stun gun from his belt and jolting me with it, supposedly to erase my memory.

I was nauseated and weak from high voltage and the ordeal as Houston and I made our way back across the border. My empty stomach rolled, prompting Houston to lie, "I told you not to drink the water". In reality, I had had nothing to drink since the champagne at the Hotel California, and 1 hadn't eaten in days. I was thoroughly exhausted when we reached the motor home in El Paso, but Houston was sexually aroused from cocaine and the criminal events that merged Mexico with the U.S. at the Juarez border.

CHAPTER 29

THE LIZARD OF AHS

After the opening of the Juarez border, I was kept actively busy according to the plan to "use me up" before my 30th birthday death sentence. I was subjected to a brutal (near death gang rape) "celebration benefit" at an identified Masonic Lodge in Warren, Ohio to "celebrate the free trade benefits" gained by involved East Coast politicos. Centers such as the nearby Youngstown "Charm School" went into mass production of slaves to mule drugs or be part of the mind-controlled sex slave "trance-sport operations". Mexico was not the only country reaping the economic benefits of criminal free trade.

After Kelly's ordeal in California, Dante and Houston were criminally exploiting her for literally "all she was worth". Subsequently, she missed an extraordinary amount of schooling. When she was in school, she was experiencing difficulty with her peers. These factors prompted plans to send her to a local Catholic school the next year, where her unusual behavior would be overlooked and covered up, Soon thereafter, Senator Byrd came to Nashville to fiddle at the Grand Ole Opry and, as my handler. Houston, remarked, "fiddle around with me" at the Opryland Hotel. Byrd explained that close association with me had become volatile due to my roles in Iran-Contra and NAFTA, and therefore he would be distancing himself from me. He spent most of "our last night together" working on his memoirs for a voluminous book on the U.S. Constitution he was writing (now published at taxpayers' expense), which focuses on his long-winded Senate (filibuster) speeches.

Byrd attempted to strengthen my programmed "loyalty bond" to him to keep me quiet "until death do us part". He told me, "If it was up to me, I would let you live". He talked at length about how our time together had been infringed upon by both de la Madrid and Reagan, Bitterness over their stronger controls on me was evident as he mocked their self appointed roles as the Wizard and Lizard of Oz. De la Madrid's fascination with U.S. mind-controlled slaves reportedly inspired him to combine Bush's lizard-like alien themes and his reputed Mayan roots/lizard man theories with Reagan's Oz themes to claim the role of Lizard of Ahs. From Byrd's ramblings, it appeared that his mockery of their roles was due to their having decided how "his" slave would die, and had nothing to do with caring that I would be killed. Byrd maintained his "bonding" programming charade all night. He played his fiddle and sang "to me" in place of his usual torturous whipping and brutality. Sex was, for the first and last time, painless.

Byrd had not distanced himself too far from me, though, where government operations were concerned. When I was "over the rainbow" in D.C. during the summer of '87, it was business as usual with Byrd. I was escorted to Goddard Space Flight Center where Byrd was waiting for me in a sterile hallway near the brass-trimmed, mirrored elevators. He was loaded down with items, which he deposited on a small table as he greeted me. He picked up a NASA ID badge and clipped it on my nipple, the metal teeth biting me with their serrated edges. When I (softly) cried out, he said, "Oh OK. Ill wear it," removed it, and clipped it on his white lab coat. He handed me a NASA lab coat like his and a white hard bat. His hard hat suggestively and "humorously" said HARD in bold red letters. My hat said NASA, in a mirror reversal of the standard bold red lettering. When I read it in a mirror, it appeared as though I were on the wrong side of the mirror and needed to step through (according to Alice In Wonderland/NASA programming). It also clearly indicared to those-in-the-know that I was under mind control. Byrd looked at his pocket watch prompting a wave of terror in me, and said in Wonderland cryptic, "We're late. As the elevator drops down the rabbit hole, we'll reverse time in order to get there a few minutes early."

Bvrd spun me around to face the elevator's mirrored doors saying, "Look deep into the mirror and be all that you can be by becoming infinitely lost in all that you see." Byrd timed his hypnotic induction so that wben he ordered. "Step through the mirror," the doors opened and we stepped through.

As the elevator supposedly went "down 99 (taken from Aquino's corny reversal of 66) levels to the depths of hell," Byrd told me the Earth "spins faster and faster at the core, causing us to spiral downward in a tornado effect." I dropped deeper in my hypnotic trance. The elevator doors opened to what appeared to me as an exact replica of the floor we just left. However, this floor's hallway led to a computer room and sanitized-looking lab area. Several of the scientists working there were amused by our hats, prompting Byrd to ham up his comedic act, Byrd ignored the fact that these NASA workers, like many others, may have deliberately stroked his entertainer's ego because they relied on his appropriations for funding,

Byrd made me robotically announce to the workers, "He's taking me to your leader."

"I'm the Commander, here," the apparent director of the underground lab said. The workers again busied themselves as he stood, arms folded defensively across his chest, while his bespectacled intelligent eyes darted the room surveying the situation. The Commander had a few, grey strands salting his short, dark hair, yet his build was surprisingly youthful and trim for his age. He and Byrd apparently knew each other quite well. Byrd strode over to him, dragging me along. "Tom," Byrd called to his 50ish 6'1" friend. "This is your specimen of the day that I promised I would deliver. I will be most interested to see what you can deliver since diplomatic relations with Mexico depends on it. Not that I want to increase any pressure you may feel, but we need seven more just like her to stuff in the mouth of his royal Lizardry (de la Madrid) to keep him from spilling his guts on the project."

"It's just as well, my friend," the Commander said, stroking his chin without uncrossing his arms. "That way he can't talk without implicating himself."

"That's the way the Chief feels about it," Byrd agreed. "He's already in deep anyway, but this order (for slaves) hits him closer to home since they'll be serving him personally."

We walked to a clinical, sanitized area that had a maze of small rooms where I was undressed and prepped for the lab. A nurse of sorts injected me with the NASA "Tranquility" drug and instructed me to put my lab coat back on. "Walk this way," she ordered as she led me down the hall, swinging her hips in an exaggerated manner. I immediately complied. The Tranquility drug had no recreational affects, but produced an attitude of peaceful compliance to all orders given. As we approached the theater-type lab, a small group of men who would be in attendance were talking with Byrd and the so-called Commander. They looked at us and laughed at my literal compliance to walk like the nurse.

1 was then led by the Commander to a "backstage" entrance which was actually a glass-encased lab surrounded by seats in ascending rows. Scientists in NASA lab coats looked down on the lab table where I lay as the Commander wired me up to a computerized machine. A camera was positioned high in one comer of the room, filming all that transpired. I was aware through conversations between Byrd and the Commander that de la Madrid had requested a video of the latest advancements in mind-control technique being used to create his seven slaves. In reality, the camera was filming scientific methodisms salted with "comic" misinformation as a humorous "no" to his request.

Since I was considered "used up" and my death was imminent, the Commander told the scientists to "feel free to fuck the lab specimen", "But first," he said, "before you satisfy your mental and physical curiosities sampling the President's (Reagan's) wares, we must satisfy El President's (de la Madrid's) perverse intellect with a little space humor." He turned to one of the technical workers and said, "You're going to have to edit this tape for de la Madrid's benefit and take this part out while we prepare her for an 'off color' chameleon joke."

A live lizard encased in a glass test tube of sorts was inserted in my vagina, The camera was focused on the area while my legs were spread in a birthing position. Acting as though I had conceived while having sex with de la Madrid, the Commander said, "Now for the finished product, which in layman's terms equates to the reproductive offspring of a Lizard breeding machine." He dramatically snapped on a rubber glove and probed me as though he were giving me a gynecological exam. In fact, he was opening the trap door of the Lizard's tube to turn him out. Very slowly, the sluggish lizard poked his head out of my vagina and crawled out onto the metal table, "This concludes all of the experimentation demonstration of the cloning of a Presidential model," the Commander said,

I apparently had been selected as the prototype for the seven programmed slaves de La Madrid had requested. De la Madrid was interested in NASA programmed staves that would be vaginally mutilated like I was. He was sexually obsessed with the hideous carving. 1 have no way of knowing what, if any, technological advancements were actually provided to de la Madrid via the film. I only know that deliberate misinformation tainted the methodologies depicted, and that I had never experienced programming or testing before or at the time by any such methods.

This video created for "his Royal Lizardry" was one of many cryptic lizard themes that NASA used in its Mexican operations. All of my programmed roles in Mexico involved the prolific, local, iguana lizards. De la Madrid had relayed the "legend of the Iguana" to me, explaining that lizard-like Aliens had descended upon the Mayans. The Mayan pyramids, their advanced astronomical technology, including the sacrifice of virgins, was supposedly inspired by the lizard aliens. He told me that when the aliens interbred with the Mayans to produce a form of life they could inhabit, they fluctuated between a-human and Iguana appearance through chameleon-like abilities. "A perfect vehicle for transforming into world leaders." De la Madrid claimed to have Mayan/alien ancestry in his blood, whereby he transformed "back into an Iguana at will." De la Madrid produced a hologram similar to the one Bush did.

in his You Are What You Read initiation. His hologram of lizard-like tongue and eyes produced the illusion that he was transforming into an Iguana. While in Mexico, I was always ordered to wait by rocks where the abundant Iguanas sunned before being "trance-ported" to my scheduled meetings with "his Royal Lizardry," the Lizard of Ahs.

CHATTER 30

IN THE INTEREST OF TIME AND SPACE

Senator Patrick Leahy (D-Vermont), who served as vice chairman on the U.S. Senate Intelligence Committee in 1985-86, was a "friend" of Senator Byrd. Leahy's position on Byrd's Senate Appropriations Committee, coupled with his former position in Intelligence, afforded him an inordinate amount of power and influence. While 1 had cause to have contact with Senator Leahy on numerous occasions, Kelly was apparently more familiar with him than I. This was evidenced by our meeting with him in Vermont in the late summer of 1985.

Alex Houston was booked to "entertain" at the State Fair in Rutland, Vermont. The entire trip proved to be a whirlwind of covert activity for me, during which time 1 obtained a packet of papers from an unidentified operative with orders to hand deliver them to Senator Leahy. Kelly had been kept as busy as I, since Boxcar Willie and other CIA operative pedophiles were in abundance at the fair in Leahy's home state.

President Reagan had given me specific orders to carry out while in Vermont, which included delivering a message to "Patrick" for him. He also told me, "When you go to Vermont, be sure and go by ("buy") LL Bean."

Literally interpreting what he suggested, I asked, "The whole store?"

"No," Reagan laughed. "I meant stop by there. 1 didn't mean buy the whole store. I already own it. Just buy a few things, like an LL Bean Swiss Army Knife."[1]

When Reagan said he "already owned" LL Bean, I thought he was referring to the amount of shopping he did there." He wore LL Bean shirts, sweaters, and slippers; slept on LL Bean flannel sheets in his LL Bean pajamas; and carried his "Presidential" black, LL Bean, Swiss Army Knife, with which he cleaned his fingernails. But I learned the real significance of Reagan's statement when I "stopped by" the Vermont LL Bean outlet on the final day of Houston's lengthy Vermont State Fair engagement.

The LL Bean outlet, located near the fop of supposedly the highest mountain in the pristine forest, appeared to be a store front for CIA covert activity. When I asked the 'clerk' assigned to Kelly and me for a black, Swiss Army Knife, his response was indicative of familiarity with government covert operations. Using the old familiar statement (trigger), he ordered Kelly and me to "Walk this way," as he led us through a storage area and out the back door. There, a black, unmarked helicopter was waiting on a pad for us.

The pilot flew us a short distance to the top of a mountain, where we landed in a clearing next to a house that appeared to have no other access. The place was run like a fortress, and two guards in suits met us as Kelly and I emerged from the helicopter. The guards escorted us into the house, keeping Kelly while I met with Senator Leahy.

I walked into an office-type room that had a panoramic view of the wilderness, where Leahy was leaning against a highly polished, wooden desk. He was wearing an orange flannel shirt that lost its purpose in crispness. It was my experience that Leahy's surroundings, like his appearance, were as sanitized as possible.

I delivered the documents and message as ordered. Leahy then proceeded to explain that he was aware that my death was imminent due to my groundwork participation in NAFTA, and that subsequently Kelly would be traded to the West Coast pornography operation. Not only did he obviously want to join in on "using me up" before my 30th birthday, but he had "tracks" to cover-up where Kelly was concerned.

Most of my traumatic encounters with Leahy were alien-themed, but be often relied on my Catholic upbringing to drive his points into my mind. From my perspective, Leahy was unquestionably one of the most intelligent criminals of this entire Shadow Government. His carefully contrived chameleon-like characteristics provided him the latitude of appearing to share the principals and beliefs of whomever he was masterfully manipulating on both a national and international level. He won Reagan's respect through their shared diplomatic ties to the Vatican, and his Irish-Catholic heritage. While he appeared publicly to oppose Byrd on Senate Appropriations issues, they actually worked together behind the scenes in their shared world dominance efforts. Again from my perspective, Leahy was a loner who had his own agenda and answered to no one I knew. Leahy's intelligence was often manifested to me by triple depth meaning to his words and actions. Everything he did was for a deeper purpose, and this trip to Vermont proved to be no different,

Kelly and I had been given what felt like a sophisticated variation of Lhe NASA CIA-designer drug, Tranquility, which turned us into the robotic mind-controlled slaves that Senator Leahy preferred. As the drug was overtaking me, I attentively listened to what Leahy was saying.

"God condones that one," Leahy said, referring to both my role in NAFTA and his pedophile abuse of my daughter. "Of course, God is not the one you need to be concerned with. He is a passive God, One who's passed on and lives only in a Bible. The God you need to be concerning yourself with is the all-seeing, all-knowing God. That great, big, Eye in the Sky. It sees all, records all, and transmits the information right where it's needed. Let me give you some sound advice-Keep your mouth shut and none of this need be known anywhere. Only your Vice President (Bush) will know for sure, and he's been keeping secrets all his life. I'm not suggesting George Bush is God. Oh no, he is much more than that. He is a semi-God, which means he is straddling the heavenly and earthly planes in order that he take action on what he sees with his ever watchful Eye In The Sky." Content with his metaphorical manipulation of my literal mind, he finished, "Now, that's enough fore-play. Go get the kid."

Kelly was standing quietly and robotically just outside the door with the two guards. They ushered us down the hall, through an ornately carved door, and into Leahy's bedroom. The room was highly effeminate for a man, decorated in pastels, white eyelet, and huge billowy pillows. When the Senator walked in, Kelly groaned, "Noooo, not you again", Leahy signalled Kelly with his hand, thus switching her into total silence and submission. Then, accessing specific personality fragments that previously recompartmentalized in my mind from Bush's and Byrd's sexual abuse of Kelly, Leahy began undressing. His pale skin looked even whiter against the white eyelet sheets, which seemed to accentuate the perversity of his pedophile actions with my daughter that I was forced to watch. His torturous abuse complete, Leahy ordered Kelly and me to follow him downstairs to his "torture lab",

I had seen and experienced basement "spy conditioning" torture chambers before both in the U.S. and Mexico, and Leahy's "torture lab" looked more like a NASA lab. His access to the latest advancements in electronic/drug mind-control technology was consistent with his ability to use it. I was immediately strapped to a cold, chrome and stainless steel table by the two guards. Leahy began reciting, "Cross your heart and hope to die, Stick a needle in your eye". A wirey "needle" was pushed slowly into my right eye while Kelly was forced to watch. This entire ordeal was directed for trauma purposes primarily at Kelly since Leahy figured I would be dead soon anyway. "If you holler, if you cry, Kelly will be the first to die. Pray to God and Bush will hear, because his Eye now has an ear." Leahy interrupted his poem to explain that 1 was now a "computer-eyesd" link-up to Bush's Eye in the Sky, with the needle-like "antenna" transmitting every word Kelly spoke. He continued wilh me, "Each word you speak, each breath you sigh,'Your eye trance-mits to the Eye in the Sky". Kelly believed it, which locked her into silence. Leahy's secret was safe-for the moment.

While I was literally out of my mind from intense pain, Leahy utilized the opportunity to program me with what he said was financial information to deliver to Byrd. This required no "personality", therefore the shattered fragments Leahy had deliberately shifted me into when raping Kelly would be ideal to "computer-eyes" his message. He told me that my body was a conduit to link him up to the Eye in the Sky, where he was transmitting the information for storage until such time as Byrd accessed it. "Only the tiniest little prick can access the compuLer-eyesd' storage bank," Leahy said, laughing at his own double meaning mockery of Byrd's penis size.

This was not the first time Leahy transferred apparently sensitive U.S. Government intelligence information to Byrd through me. I had photographically recorded numbers in my mind's "computer banks" ever since Leahy prepared me for the task some months before at White Sands Missile Base in New Mexico. It was there in the TOP SECRET mind-control area of the base that Leahy subjected me to extreme tortures and high-tech programming. Combining purposes as usual, Leahy was saying, "Funding will continue to be approved as long as (mind-control) Projects such as this continue to receive your full attention". I was treated like a lab animal with no apparent regard for whether I lived or died. I was put in an electrified metal walled and floored cell, referred to by some as the woodpecker grid, which provided inescapable physical torture.

In spite of his tortures, intelligence, high-tech methodism, and sophisticated mind manipulations. Senator Leahy failed to cover his "secrets"—including his sexual abuse of Kelly. He did succeed, however, in causing Kelly and me to be hospitalized from his torturous abuses upon our return to Tennessee. I had suffered excruciating pain and irreparable damage to my right eye, while Kelly psychosomatically suffered respiratory failure due to his extreme traumas. The physical manifestations of the psychological devastation wreaked on us by Senator Leahy failed to raise questions from outsiders as to the cause.

Equally worthy of mention, are numerous other high profile perpetrators that Kelly and I had exposure to over the years. These individuals, in spite of the CIA's "need-to-know" M.O. of maintaining "the left hand does not know what the right hand is doing," were in positions to be knowledgeable of Kelly's and my victimizations. All of them accessed our programming either for drug distribution, banking/message delivery, mind-control demonstrations, or, most often, for their perverse sexual gratification.

These too numerous individuals and events are significant chapters in my life who, in the interest of time and space, will be fully exposed in a forthcoming book. Rather than point a finger at these individuals for reasons of "vengeance" (there is none comparable), they must be publicly identified for all our sakes and, above all, for our children's sakes. Therefore, a list of perpe-Traitors has been compiled and strategically distributed for posterity, as well as to prevent these individuals from interfering in any Congressional hearings[2] that should be forthcoming as a result of this exposure.

---

[1] Black LL Bean Swiss Army Knives were a coded indicator of White House-level operations. Red LL Bean Swiss Army Knives, and regular Swiss Army Knives were a standard CIA indicator with which I was also familiar.

[2] Please support us in this effort by writing your Congressmen.

CHAPTER 31

THE KING AND EYE

Saudi Arabia threaded in and out of most operations in which I was involved, primarily due to their purchase and routing of weapons, drugs, and blond-haired, blue-eyed programmed children. According to George Bush's claims, Saudi Arabia was in essence a controlled financial arm of the United States. Saudi Arabian King Fahd and his Ambassador to the U.S., Prince Bandar, provided a front for the unconstitutional and criminal covert operations of the U.S. This included the arming of Iraq and the Nicaraguan Contras; U.S. involvement in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (B.C.C.I.) scandal; and funding of the Black Budget through purchase of our nation's children to be used as sex slaves and camel jockeys. Since the U.S. "won" control of the drug industries through the so-called Drug Wars, Saudi Arabia played an integral role in distribution. It was my experience that Bush's claim of having Saudi Arabian King Fahd as his puppet was, in fact, reality. It was only natural that criminal diplomatic relations with Mexico interface with Saudi Arabia under the circumstances. After all, King Fahd and Mexican President. Miguel de la Madrid were active members of George Bush's elite "Neighborhood" in the New World Order. Before I left Washington, D.C., it, was "my duty as a (programmed) American Patriot" to participate in initiating the King and Eye branch of Operation Greenbacks for Wetbacks.

While plans were being finalized for a clandestine 3:00 A.M. meeting at L'Enfante Hotel which I would be attending, 1 was rushed around D.C. gathering last minute messages and information. I had no choice in leaving. Kelly at Bush's Residence Office where Houston had dropped us off earlier in the day for my initial briefing. Congressman Guy VanderJagt was in Bush's office along with Dick Cheney when we arrived. Before taking Kelly upstairs to the residence area, VanderJagt told Bush his story about taking my virginity when I was a small child. He recommended Bush do the same to Kelly before someone else "beat him to it". Bush laughed and replied, "What makes you think I haven't?""

VanderJagt look Kelly by the hand and led her upstairs while Bush and Cheney began giving me my instructions. Bush joked about working "grave yard" in the "shadows" for "the White House night shift" of the King and Eye operation. Cheney began my instructions with the usual threat to Kelly's life, and was interrupted by a phone call ordering me over to the White House, The whole time 1 was gone, I experienced a sensation of panic and dread at having had to leave Kelly at Bush's. Although I could not think to reason, the Shasta experience had left me with an incomprehensible subconscious fear for Kelly's life that was compounded by Cheney's most recent threats. I was apprehensive when I was returned to Bush's house late that evening for completion of my instructions. A party was underway, and I was dismayed to see the place so crowded yet void of children.

As I made my way through the crowd, Cheney saw me and started across the room towards me, I spotted VanderJagt nearby, who had been drinking excessively, and anxiously asked him where Kelly was. He said, "Upstairs sleeping, George is expecting you". I wanted desperately to go to Kelly, but Cheney, who was drunk as usual, had reached me by that time.

"Walk this way," Cheney slurred. He imitated the Oz Scarecrow's walk as he led me through the middle of the crowd to Bush's office. Bush was busy behind his desk, and his tension was apparent. He said, "Phil Habib is doing a number on his highness' (Fahd's) head, I want you to do a number on his 'dick'".

"Please," Dick Cheney groaned at the term. "That means give him a Royal fucking. Wear him out. You're going on a magic carpet ride tonight, little Genie, down through the rabbit hole, through the minor and we'll meet you on the other side."

"Good. He'd better have a smile on his face when we walk in (to the 3:00 A.M. meeting)," Bush told me as I went out the door. "If you do your part right, he will."

I was escorted to L'Enfante Hotel where I was to be prostituted to King Fahd. I had been exposed to him sexually before, but this was my first time with him and his five young girls. Physical likeness characteristics strongly suggested that these Saudi Arabian girls were his own children. Their ages ranged from approximately ten to twenty years old. Indicating Genie-in-the-Bottle programming, of which Fahd was familiar, 1 bowed and said, "Your wish is my command", Fahd's first wish was for information, which I told him I would deliver later at the meeting. Fahd "disrobed" as his girls removed my dress. Then they "prepared" me as ordered by "washing me" with their tongues, while the youngest briefly performed oral sex on him. The girls were ordered aside while I proceeded to sexually gratify Fahd according to his instruction and those I had received earlier from Cheney and Bush. When I finished doing "my part" in the name of "Diplomatic Relations," Habib was at the door to escort me out. I was to meet with Fahd again at 3:00 A.M. in Habib's suite.

As I stepped out the door, Habib was impatiently hopping up and down like be was energized from cocaine. Using his role as White Rabbit, he said in Wonderland cryptic, "We're late! We're late! For a very important date!" He led me downstairs to the entrance of the hotel, where Bush and Cheney had just walked in looking ridiculously conspicuous in their trenchcoats.

Bush immediately ordered Habib, "Call in" and gestured to the phone across 'the lobby. Habib turned and hurried for the phone. Cheney dashed up the stairs, leaving me alone with Bush. Bush said, referring to Habib, "Don't you love to see the wabbit hop?"

When Cheney returned a moment later, my (identified) Secret Service escort led me to the boutique area of the hotel to wait while the meeting in Habib's suite got under way. 1 had endured water deprivation for some time, which my escort noted as we sat near a fountain. He told me his orders were, "You can lead a whore to water, but you can't let her drink," He teased me further, stating that he knew I could "suck the humps of a thousand camels dry." At last, he took me on to the meeting in Habib's room, where Bush, Cheney, Fahd, and Habib were in the midst of discussion.

Bush accessed the messages and bank transaction details I was programmed with at Shasta, and ordered me to relay an account of my meeting with de la Madrid and subsequent opening of the Juarez border. The complexities of this meeting, compounded by my being privy only to certain parts, should not be documented here out of context. I do know that Bush was setting the stage for implementing the New World Order, using Mexico and Saudi Arabia's roles for cover and for further expansion of U.S. covert criminal activity. This included the arming of Iraq with weapons and chemical warfare capabilities. The message Reagan had me programmed with earlier that day was further evidence of this. I delivered Reagan's message to King Fahd as ordered:

"Greetings to King Fahd from President Reagan. The negotiations you are about to embark on are not only critical to the world peace process, but may solidify U.S.-Saudi relations beyond your wildest expectations. You have my word that what appears to be the building up of forces in Iraq is but a mirage in the whirlwind. And when this operation is completed and the dust finally settles, you will see that the sands have shifted in time, running out on our adversaries and shifting all power and control to our unified effort. United we stand to conquer all in the name of world peace and world order, and I am confident that together we can not fail. The more Saddam destroys is that much less for us to do and deal with when we implement the Order. In the meantime, we all have much to gain and not a moment to lose."

It was raining by the time I was escorted back to Bush's residence where Houston was waiting to take Kelly and me back to Tennessee.

[1] The Alaska state-appointed child sexual abuse physician's exam and photos corroborate that, for once, Bush may have told the truth.

CHAPTER 32

A PLACE TO RUN, NO NEED TO HIDE

Alex Houston had maintained his capacitor distributing business cover throughout the years, routinely changing company names and customers. By summer's end in 1987, Houston had stumbled onto a legitimate sales inquiry from the Peoples Republic of China, Unable to profitably manage a legal business, he look on a partner whom he said checked out to have a curious but inconclusive association in U.S. Intelligence. This partner was Mark Phillips. Houston had forbid me from meeting Mark until his background check was completed and his allegiances understood. As much as he was intrigued with Mark's past, Houston was enthralled with his propensity for conducting international business. In exchange for Mark's cooperation, Houston and he formed a legal corporation. Mark Phillips became President and CEO of Uniphayse. It wasn't long thereafter that he won Houston's confidence through repeated professional successes, and Houston permitted me to meet him.

I sensed right away that Mark was very different from the other men I encountered routinely. He treated me as though I were a person, and his eyes revealed no sexual interest in me at all. Instead of discussing world domination, slavery, pornography, drugs, and genocide like the other men 1 knew, he introduced me to the raccoons he had years ago rescued from certain death and then tamed. I was deeply impressed with how his "wild" pets loved and trusted him. 1 could not think to trust, ask for help, or even question at the time what it was that made Mark different.

In the fall of 1987, Kelly was enrolled in Nashville, Tennessee's St. Pius Catholic School. Her unusual behaviors were addressed in school counseling, but their causes and/or origins were never addressed. Kelly still laughs at the absurdity of being counseled to vent her "anger" by scribbling the source of her anger on a piece of paper and then jumping on it. With her "anger" being caused by extreme physical and psychological tortures and sexual abuse, it could not be so simplistically relieved. Houston had forbidden Kelly to display emotion, and had so conditioned her. Once, when he savagely beat her for laughing, I huddled in a corner holding her for hours. That did not positively affect her enormous nurturing needs any more than jumping on a piece of paper. With tears streaming down her face, she opened her bedroom curtains and cried out to what she believed was "Bush's Eye in the Sky". "Why do you hate me? Why do you hate me so much, world, when I love you? 1 want to die now. 1 can't take it any more."

That, as evidenced by the near death asthma attack she endured, further proved that Houston's tortures were too much for a seven-year-old child to co-exist with. In retrospect, that remaining part of her mind that could question why her existence was too horrible to comprehend was locked away- And so it goes in the "life" of a mind-controlled slave.

In December 1987, my 30th birthday launched the final countdown to my death. Houston was in regular contact with Michael Dante (as telephone receipts prove), and arrangements were finalized for Kelly and me to be transferred to California. There, I was supposed to be burned alive in a snuff pornography film and Kelly would become the property of Dante. But first, I had orders to conclude my part in Operation Greenbacks for Wetbacks by meeting with de la Madrid. Houston had booked a New Year's NCL cruise to Mexico for all three of us.

Kelly and I were walking among the Mexican pyramid ruins in Tulum, when Houston pointed out an iguana lizard sunning itself on a rock near the parking lot. As Kelly and I approached the iguana, two Mexican Secret Servicemen emerged from a dark blue Mercedes. They used the keys, codes, and triggers to our programming that had been provided them to hypnotically create the illusion that the iguana was trance-forming into de la Madrid. This control technique was to build an amnesic block to ensure against memory recall.

In reality, we were transported by automobile to de ta Madrid's tacky museum-style house nearby. There, Kelly and I were taken into his all too familiar bedroom by a uniformed matronly woman. De la Madrid's bed was a king-size waterbed set in a darkwood canopy frame. This time the bedspread was a plush black-blood red, which de la Madrid pointed out to Kelly as he set her on the bed. It was my experience that de la Madrid's bed was in itself a NASA technology adventure.

Mounted inside of the canopy was a movie screen where de la Madrid viewed porn videos and/or NASA-provided films. From his bed I saw replicas of the NASA Goldstar multiscreen monitors that were routinely used in "experimental" mind-control conditioning. By filming the actual NASA multiscreen grouped monitors, the resultant video provided the illusion of seeing a Goldstar multiscreen when shown on a (single) screen such as was built into de la Madrid's bed canopy. For example, once when I was in his bed, the same light blue sky with moving clouds was depicted on the monitor screens that NASA had used to lock-in my programming "Somewhere in Time," de la Madrid showed on his canopy movie screen. He further enhanced the effect by having me hypnotically "float/drift" on his waterbed which he had covered with a spread of similar light blue sky with clouds print. My previous NASA programming was easily accessed "Somewhere in Time" through this simple, but nevertheless complex visual triggering method. The pornography shown was of me from previous taping, alternating with a built-in video camera projecting our sex acts onto the screen as they occurred.

This time de la Madrid said, "Let us end where we began...," referring to my witnessing the rape of my daughter in Shasta. He ordered me to undress and recline against the headboard of his bed. At the foot of the bed, he began pulling Kelly's jeans off as he said, "You gave birth to her, just as you gave birth to the border agreement, and now your role is through on both counts. The tears she will shed as you burn cannot extinguish the flames of passion you have passed on to her. Your intense sexuality has been regenerated in her, and this hormonal experiment in genetics will successfully evolve for generations to come. Your role is complete. And thanks to my friends in Washington, NASA has perfected the formula and given birth to the technology of mirrored procreation using recreated bloodlines. The only detectable difference makes the blood run cold. Reptilian. See for yourself"

De la Madrid gestured up toward the canopy screen, where the NASA created video of my "giving birth" to the lizard was depicted. By this time, the NASA provided designer drug for mind control, "Tranquility," had been administered and was kicking in full force. My eyes were hypnotically fixed on the video as he began performing oral sex on my daughter. She, too, was rendered helplessly defenseless by the drug and quietly complied with his every demand. Using specific commands, de la Madrid ordered me to spread my legs and display the vaginal mutilation carving. He positioned himself over Kelly's face, smothering her with his penis while he performed oral sex on my carving.

When at last we were returned to the NCL cruise ship, Kelly and I were vomiting sick from de la Madrid's abuse and the high voltage trauma that followed. An unusually large shipment of cocaine and heroin had been loaded, which was transferred into the walls of our custom built motor home once we docked at Key Biscayne, Florida. Houston supposedly stayed aboard ship for the next week of his engagement, while I drove the motor home full of drugs and my sick daughter to Houston's farm where we resided in Tennessee.

By the time Houston returned to Tennessee from his NCL cruise, Ken Riley had already emptied the motor home and dispersed the drugs as previously planned. The only business Houston had to attend was implementing the final phase of trance-ferring Kelly and me to Dante and being updated on Mark Phillips' latest successes.

Houston immediately began programming me to not take anything but Kelly's and my clothes when sent to Dante At the same lime, Mark Phillips and I had reached a level of communication that was new to me. Although I had no conscious understanding of what he was saying, the truths he spoke resounded throughout the depths of my being. For instance, when he showed me his "Back to the Future" Delorean sports car, he wisely cryptically stated, "Sometimes you have to know where you've been in order to know where you're going."

Just before Kelly and I were to leave for California, Mark asked me to help him force Houston out of business by providing him with the files on suspected (corporate) criminal activity that Houston kept hidden at our house. Not only did 1 gladly do so, but "somehow" I was able to ask for Help in return. I asked him to help Kelly and me get away from Houston before I was killed and Kelly was sentenced to a fate worse than death. Mark assured me that he would help.

The day Houston intended for Kelly and me to be transferred to Dante, I felt a strange compulsion to telephone Mark and notify him. That morning, Houston drove to Mark's office believing he was going to meet with him later that day. But Mark had brought a team of movers to the house, and rescued Kelly and me. He had brilliantly intercepted us as we were being passed to our intended destination! Mark even understood Kelly's and my need to rescue our farm pets from Houston's abuse. He not only found good homes for our livestock, but he had arranged for them to be loaded and transferred during our frantic rush to move out of Houston's house. Within two hours, Mark safely moved Kelly, me, our pets and livestock to freedom. Despite brilliant orchestration, pandemonium broke out when it was discovered that Kelly and I had been intercepted and detoured from our intended demise.

"Wake up, sleeping beauty," Mark said as he gently roused me with a cup of fresh coffee. "Welcome to a new day."

My eyes opened. I had never experienced such kindness before, and it seemed like a whole new world to me. Mark presented me with a beautiful watch, which he strapped on my wrist. Noting my wonder and surprise, he explained, "Now you will always know that 1 gave you the time of day."

The time of day? No one had ever given me their time before. They only took mine. And I never wore a watch before. I did not even know what month or year it was, let alone the tune of day. I had no concept of time, which Mark explained I must always monitor from that moment on.

"You say someone is trying to kill you. Why?" Mark asked. I could not think to answer. I was totally amnesic. All three of us were now in grave jeopardy, literally dodging bullets while I desperately sought the answers. How could I have requested help when I did not even know who and/or what I was running from? Somewhere inside were the answers, and I intended to uncover them all. Fast. Now there were three lives on the line.

Mark understood that safety was tantamount to memory recovery. At the same time, none of us could be safe until I could recall who and what we were up against. Mark quickly sold everything he owned, including his DeLorean, retaining only basic necessities. He also sold the motor home which had been awarded me in my divorce from Alex Houston. Using these funds, Mark took Kelly and me to the peaceful wilderness of Alaska.

February 4, 1988 marked the beginning of life for Kelly and me, free from our mind-controlled existence. It also marked the beginning of a new kind of survival as we embarked on "The Most Dangerous Game" of international proportions. Despite death threats and attempts, intimidation and cover-ups, we have survived these past seven years by refusing to keep secrets-which is in itself "another story."

---

[1] As quickly as the accuracy of my deprogramming notes were corroborated and/or verified, abstracts of various experiences and identification of abusers were vastly disseminated. Those who read these abstracts over the years, literally watched me gain piece/peace-of-mind (reintegrate.)

~ PUBLIC NOTICE ~

This book contains sexually explicit quotes and irrefutable anatomical details of perpetrators and is therefore recommended for mature readers only.

TRANCE
FORMATION OF AMERICA

TRANCE Formation of America is the documented autobiography of a victim of government mind control Cathy O'Brien is the only vocal and recovered survivor of the Central Intelligence Agency's MK-Ultra Project Monarch mind control operation. Chiseled deep into the white stone of the CIA's Langley, Virginia headquarters is a partial verse lifted from the Holy Bible and writings of Saint John..." ami the truth shall make you free." This statement, like the agency, is total reality. The building that it is engraved upon houses the world's most successful manufacturer of lies to facilitate psychological warfare.

The "Company" uses truth and technology as their raw materials to produce "pure" lies for control of you and America's allies. Within the pages of TRANCE Formation of America you'll find the truth.

US. GOVERNMENT MIND CONTROL

On August 3rd, 1977 the 95th U.S. Congress opened hearings into the reported abuses concerning the CIA's TOP SECRET mind control research program code named MK Ultra. On February 8th 1988, an MK Ultra victim, Cathy O'Bnen, was covertly rescued from her mind control enslavement by Intelligence insider Mark Phillips. Their seven year pursuit of Justice was stopped FOR REASONS OF NATIONAL SECURITY. TRANCE Formation of America exposes the truth behind this criminal abuse of the Unconstitutional 1947 National Security Act

Chapter 2

My Birth

"Before I formed you in the womb I knew you." Jeremiah 1:5

I was always suicidal from the earliest time I can remember. I hated being alive. I was filled with dread, fear, and constant torment of what would happen to me next. The people who programmed me made extremes so that if I ever told people what was going on, people would think I was crazy and say that I had a mental disorder. I had to create a false façade every day, every second, especially when we were around people. I acted like the programmers were perfect and we were a perfect family. If I ever let on that they were anything but perfect, they told me that I would never be allowed outside again. I was baffled as to why if I had the perfect family, why was I so horribly depressed, and why did I think I was the devil's child? Why did I constantly feel like there was something hideously evil inside of me that I could never get rid of?

It wasn't until I began falling apart and having flashbacks that Papa God began to show me the truth about my life. My mind had been deliberately programmed to forget all of my past and for me to live in a false reality to cover up what these people were doing to me. If you looked at us from the outside, we looked like the all-American family. This was a well-thought-out plan to cover up their evil actions, but most of all, the much bigger plan of the Illuminati in this country.

The lady who carried me in her womb was what the cult refers to as a "breeder" or "carrier." She was only existing to bring babies that had been dedicated to Satan and the Illuminati into this country. The people who brought me here were German. They have a German accent and speak German when they are not around people who could expose them. The lady programmer looked a lot like the lady who was carrying me. This was done on purpose to trick me and try to make me feel guilty about her death continually throughout my life when they were torturing me.

The Lord showed me clearly during my healing journey that I was put together in a petri dish, mixed with many different Illuminati bloodlines —specifically mixed with DNA from my programmers so that I would blend in with society by looking like them. According to human terms, I was put together specifically by evil men whose agenda was to have only one bloodline that they considered "the pure bloodline." But Papa God! He is ultimately the Creator of my blood and of my genetics! No matter how powerful the Illuminati is, they are no match for Papa God. I went through a time of intense sadness when Papa God revealed how they had mixed my DNA. The need to be a part of something, to be in a family, is a basic need of a human being. The programmers knew this, and they used this need against me every day. The lady who carried me in her womb was a victim. She was tortured and raped too. Papa God revealed this to me because I didn't understand why I had genuine love for her. He said that she loved me, and as an infant, I could feel the love that she had for me. Even in the womb, I was electrocuted by electric prods by the programmers. They would speak

Chapter 1

Why I Share the Truth

"Then you will know the truth, and the truth will set you free." John 8:32

This book was very difficult to write even though I lived it, so I know, without a doubt, it is difficult to hear and comprehend. But did you know that there are people in sex slavery, being tortured daily, government-funded mind control Illuminati victims? In this country, in your neighborhood, in your church? I'm sharing my story in great detail. Why am I sharing the truth in such depth? Because Jesus told me to tell the truth, and leave no detail out. Although it is difficult to fathom, it is essential to understanding the evil that is at work. There are millions of people who are slaves here in the United States, the land of the free. We have to stop looking at the outward appearance of a person, and walk by the Spirit. Walking by the Spirit would mean listening to the Spirit when we feel that something is just not right with a person. The disciples walked like this, the Spirit led them to call out people who were doing evil and pretending to be good. The disciples exposed these evil men and their true intentions. Jesus calls us to hate everything that God hates. Every disciple stood up against evil and many even lost their lives for speaking against it. Isaiah 5:20 says, "Woe to those who call evil good and good evil, who put darkness for light and light for darkness, who put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter."

As the Church of Jesus, we need to allow people the freedom to tell the truth, and to expose the truth even if it's difficult to hear. People who talk about difficult things are labeled as negative, when they need to be encouraged to share the truth without fear of rejection. The Bible states that "The truth will set you free" (John 8:32).

Why tell people about the horrendous things that happened in my life? Because people are trying to distort, denigrate, defile, and pervert who Jesus is. The people who do these things pretend to be Christians, and they are getting away with it. They will ultimately be exposed at the end, because that is Papa God's promise in His Word. I believe He has called me to expose them now so that other people can be set free like me. These sons of Belial count on the Church, not being discerning enough to know they are in the midst of them. "For such men are false apostles, deceitful workers, disguising themselves as apostles of Christ. No wonder for even Satan disguises himself as an angel of light" (2 Corinthians 11:13–15). Jesus warned people of the false apostles and sons of Belial. If it was important enough for us to be warned about this in the Bible by Jesus, then why do we shy away from and act as though there is no need to see the truth of the evil and the slavery that is going on in the Church? Our highest calling is that we are supposed to be loving, if we are followers of Jesus, part of love is truth. Every darkness needs to be brought into the light. According to the Bible, in the end times, even the elect will be deceived. If we acknowledge the truth now and look into the light and the truth, we will not be deceived. William Wilberforce, an abolitionist, shared explicitly all of the details of the slavery that was going on in the world. He left no detail out, in his description of the horrors they were facing. He shared the putrid smell of evil, the abusive conditions that the slaves were kept in, and the horrors that they endured. “If to be feelingly alive to the sufferings of my fellow-creatures is to be a fanatic, I am one of the most incurable fanatics ever permitted to be at large” (William Wilberforce).

The truth was revealed by Wilberforce many years before people were willing to do anything about it. He continued on in the battle against slavery year after year, warring and battling with Papa God on his side, until finally the slaves were set free! Truth needs to be seen, in order to heal. It is imperative. Truth sets people free! For example, medicine tastes awful while its going down, but the end result of taking the medicine is healing. Just like Gianna Jensen, a survivor of a failed abortion, stated, “I didn’t survive to make things comfortable. I survived to stir things up!” Jesus didn’t tell people, “Sit back. I want everybody to be comfortable.” He stirred things up! He didn’t sit back and allow evil to prevail!

As we journey through my story, I pray that, as a wonderful lady I know once said, you will see “Papa God’s story” in my story. That is my desire, and my prayer. There are a lot of things in my story that will not be easy to hear and will be hard to believe. That is understandable. We all wish that there wasn’t evil in this world. But the reality is, we live in a fallen world, with a very real devil, that has no limit to the evil he is willing to do. For those that have chosen to follow Satan, they also have no limit to the evil that they are capable of. They have given themselves over to evil: body, mind, and spirit. They have made their choice to stand against Papa God, and they were not coerced to do so. By their own free will, they chose to serve Satan and do what he does.

I will share very candidly about my past. This is directly because the Lord asked me to do so. He told me not to hold anything back, to tell the truth in its entirety. This story needs to be told, and people need to hear. We are drawing to the end. We are being called to go speak truth and prepare the body of Christ so that we won’t be caught off guard, with no idea of what is really going on in this world. Here is Papa God’s cry to each of us: “Behold, I send My messenger before your face. Who will prepare Your Way before You. The voice of one crying in the wilderness; ‘Prepare the way of the Lord; Make His paths straight’” (Mark 1:2).

Each of us, in our own individual unique way, prepare the way of the Lord. Papa God showed me that this is a “journey” for us. Journeys aren’t meant to be fast. They are slow and detailed. Each minute, each moment means something. The journey is just as important as the finish. He gave me the analogy of a person getting in their car and stepping on the gas, going at top speed. They are full of anxiety and frustration that they aren’t “there yet.” But they are missing the lessons from the journey. In this fast-food culture, we really have to stand against that mind-set of the world. It causes us to miss out on so much that Papa God wants to show us. The devil tries to get us to think we won’t be happy, we won’t be good enough, we won’t fulfill our destiny until we arrive at our destination—finally when one day our promises from Papa God are complete. But what if the journey is the purpose, and we miss the genuine message and joy He is trying to share with us now?

Let this book sink in page by page, chapter by chapter, until you get the full picture of what Papa God is trying to reveal. I will be sharing bits and pieces of what He is teaching me daily along the way while writing this book, as well as sharing the graphic details of my story and how I live each day now. After hearing about the hell that I survived, my life truly will be an expression of the power of Papa God to rescue anybody from anything! He is standing with His hand outstretched, waiting to walk through this with you, and I promise you will never be the same over me, “Die,” “You are evil,” “You are Satan’s child.” Scientifically, people would say that this is not possible to remember things from the womb, but Papa God can reveal anything He wants to bring healing. They killed this lady who carried me as I was being born and told me that it was my fault that she died. They said that if I ever got close to anyone, the same thing would happen to them.

The people who did this were German soldiers, and treated me like a prisoner of war. They hated anybody who was elderly, handicapped, Christians, Jews, anybody who was not in their elite group. The infants that they chose to bring here were not in the elite group. We were told if we did what they said and helped them take down the Christians, then we were promised that we could live. We could be like them and be truly good, the perfect race. They told us that they were originally good, that they were the chosen people. The Illuminati would refer to themselves as the God in the garden and “we,” the victims, were the ones who sinned. Therefore, we were evil, with an impure bloodline. In their narrative, Satan was trying to get us to be accepted by God, but God did not want to accept us as we were. Since we were the cause of all evil and were not perfect, God gave us to people who would torture us to be perfect like them. It was a horrible deception and hideous plan from Satan that the programmers deceived all victims to believe.

The Illuminati brought many infants into this country to train as German soldiers, who were planted into this society to accomplish a mission to take down America. The last time that was attempted. Hitler did it against the Jews. “On November 3, 1943, some forty-three thousand Jews were gathered, shot, and killed from various camps in Poland. This concluded Operation Reinhard, which had virtually exterminated Polish Jewry. The SS called this final action “Harvest Festival.” While countless historians, commentators, and books have often emphasized the industrial nature of the holocaust, SS Nazis understood the concluding action of Operation Reinhard to be a special day on the farm comparable to an annual harvest celebration. In the twisted Nazi mind, Jewish weeds had to be eradicated from the blood and soil of Germany’s lebensraum. Operation “Harvest Festival” was the single largest Nazi Jewish massacre conducted throughout the entire war. That is exactly what they are planning for Christians here in the United States, and for all of the victims ultimately. They used torture and mind control to make us believe we would be saved if we did what they told us to do.

This entire plan of the Illuminati is the attempt to destroy Christians. We were continually trained to fit into the Christian environment and tortured to take down the real Church slowly without them even knowing it. How is your biggest enemy defeated, they would say, “Catch them off guard, get them complacent, contented, believing all is well—so that when we attack there will be no retaliation, because it will be too late.”

I remember being in a little cage as an infant. I was connected to a monitor that showed if my heart was beating or not. The rest of my body was covered with electrodes; wires were going everywhere. The programmers told me they were keeping me alive. When they showed me that my heart was beating on the monitor, they locked the cage. When they showed me that my heart wasn’t beating on the monitor, they unlocked the cage. They would say over and over, “We determine if you live or die.” If I moved, I was electrocuted. So they trained my every move to be only directed by them. I learned to stay still and only move when I was told to. When I would cry, I would be shocked, so I learned not to cry. I was then told over and over that I wasn’t really hurting when I was in pain, that I shouldn’t cry. And since I wasn’t crying, they said, “You’re not hurting.” There was a constant state of confusion. The programmers would give me worms to eat and pretend like they were food. I had sores all over me from sitting in my feces and urine. When they would clean me up and put a diaper on me, they would be shocking my head at the same time. They would say over and over during the pain that I deserved the pain and that all of the pain was from God.

No matter what I did, they said I was wrong. I was put in a constant state of turmoil at all times. They would put a black cover over the cage that I was in and then tell me that I had died, and that I was alone. "God created you to torture you. He wants you here. He doesn't trust you. We have to torture you to be good enough." I was constantly thinking if I breathed right, moved right, maybe then they would let me out of this hell. They would say, "Be perfect as I am perfect. This is what God expects." No matter what, I couldn't be perfect enough. The programmers said they were born perfect, but I had to work for perfection. The programmers constantly said that God created me to never be good enough. The Illuminati say they are a divine race, that they are "perfect", and "gods." They would hook me up to a machine to reinforce what they were saying. This machine would shock me, and no matter how hard I worked, the pain never went away. So I worked harder and harder, and things never got better. I thought God hated me and wanted me to be in eternal pain.

In the hospital, I was put in a room with lots of other children. They were in cages too. Then I was put in a room by myself. I have no idea where I was; the room was white, sterile, and cold. I wasn't given food. I was given semen for food, to train me that having sex was my only way of survival. They were treating me like an animal. Actually, animals are treated better in this country than what I was treated.

At the same time, they were training me to attack like a soldier and training me to look perfect on the outside. The movie Point of No Return is the truth of what is done to many of the victims, except for those of us who have been brought there since birth. People see all of these movies today like Conspiracy Theory, and they think it is just fiction. It is real! I wish that people would ask themselves, "Where did they get the ideas for these movies?" The ideas are from rituals; it is in movies, because these things really do happen. The reason they have brought these movies out is they are trying to desensitize this country to the evil that is being perpetrated here. They are trying to make people in this country believe that nothing like that would ever happen. They told us that nobody would ever believe us and that they would think that we were crazy if we ever told. Another movie that shows the demonic foundation and territorial foundation of the Illuminati is the series of Pirates of the Caribbean. The octopus is a representation in rituals of all of the world leaders of Illuminati and their demonic power. The heart that is shown in the box in this movie represents the victims' heart in the ritual and how in the end times their heart will be exposed as evil. In the Satanic rituals, they cut out a human's heart and put it in a box. As victims, we are told if we choose to bury the truth about the Illuminati, they will not expose our heart as evil. This type of mind control and programming is foundational and is repeated over and over.

If you look at some of the people who go forward and share what happened to them, they are labeled as schizophrenic or paranoid. That's why the evil people did everything they could to try and make us feel like we were crazy. One of the biggest threats they made were that people would send us to a psychiatric hospital. What we knew of a hospital was the hell in the first five years of our life. We were brought up there, in seclusion, in torture. This ensured that we never told anybody, because we were too terrified to have to return to the hospital where we were programmed.

The programmers would poke my eyes with needles to cause my eyes to be red. Then they shaved my head and made me sit naked by myself in a room. They took pictures of me, and when I was forced to look at the pictures, they said, "See you even look like a demon." They made sure that I looked like a demon—with ribs sticking out, crouching on the floor, naked, deep red eyes, and a bald head—from all of the torture and deprivation. So when I saw myself in the mirror, I believed them when they said I was a hideous creature that deserved to be tortured.

What was their purpose in all this? To get me to believe at the core of who I was there was an evil monster who could not be trusted to be alone. An evil monster that deserved to be tortured. A demon that had been abandoned by God because of the wickedness of my heart. I knew nothing else other than what the programmers told me, so I believed their lies. That is how they controlled me. They programmed my mind to believe I needed them to control me. Without them, I thought that I was capable of no limit of evil.

As a child, I would fall asleep, and there would be a dead animal or dead person in the room with me when I woke up. They told me that I killed it while I was sleeping. I was terrified of myself. I hated being alone for terror that something evil within me would get out and do something horrible. They said God had given them the horrible task of keeping me from doing evil. I was tormented every moment, and there was no break from the torment. I lived with horrible guilt, shame, and terror of myself. I was glad that I was being tortured by them, because I was getting what I deserved. I wanted them to hurt me. I thought somehow it would make up for the evil things they said I had done.

As a child, I wasn't allowed to cry unless they said so. If I cried, they electrocuted me, and if I did cry, they would hurt someone and say it was my fault. I wasn't allowed to yawn, sneeze, go to the bathroom, eat, breathe without their say-so. When I was about three years old, they choked me until I was not able to breathe. I was gasping for breath. They said they gave me life and breath; without them, I wouldn't be able to live. They hooked me up to a heart monitor and told me that I had flatlined, that I had no heartbeat. Every person they brought in the room where I was at acted like I was dead. They began preparing me for the morgue. I was terrified as they were talking to each other. They talked like I wasn't there and said, "God hated her. He wanted her dead." Then the machine that they had me hooked up to started showing a heartbeat. They told me that they had brought me back, and God said that I could live if I let them hurt me and keep me under control. This was all before the age of five years old. They were laying a foundation of thinking that would keep me under their dominion.

A couple of days ago, I was sitting on our balcony with my husband, and there was a raccoon that was lying on the ground below us. I thought the raccoon was taking a nap, but Daniel said, "Hope, he will still be there at the end of the day." I felt intensely sad and responsible. So I started looking for a wildlife rescue in the area. I looked everywhere, and I couldn't find anybody. It was intense sadness that I was feeling. I couldn't help this poor raccoon. Then my mind went back to when I couldn't help the people who were dying in my arms. The many times that the people I tried to protect and wasn't allowed to protect. I couldn't save them. No matter what I did, I couldn't rescue them. Every single time, the evil people said it was my fault. The raccoon struggled to stand up and walk and then fell back down again. He was hurting, and it was tearing me up inside. I had watched so many people and animals suffer in my life I couldn't stand it. "What is going on, Lord? Why are You allowing this to happen?" I asked Papa God. He said, "To show you your heart. If your heart was evil, why would you care about that raccoon?" This was a profound moment that genuinely helped me see that I was not evil. Papa God can use even the smallest things in life to minister to us.

In a small amount of time, a buzzard began to try to get to the raccoon. I kept trying to scare it off, but it kept coming back. This brought back the hell I had lived through, of continually trying to protect people from getting devoured by buzzards. The people were killed by my programmers. They then told me their soul and spirit would be tormented forever if I let them be eaten by the birds or let the birds touch their body at all. I, once again, could not protect them. This is what I go through each day; there are triggers constantly. Triggers are programmed responses from sounds, smells, words, phrases, songs, hand gestures, and things throughout a normal day that would cause a response. These are established through horrific rituals and torture. I smell the smell of bubblegum, and I have flashbacks of the local doctor that was involved, raping me. I have the smell of vomit and have flashbacks of them allowing people to throw up on me and letting me sit in that horrid smell. Or the times, I would be left for days alone, with no food. Then they told me the only way I would survive was for me to eat the vomit.

There was a specific programmer who had a sign that he gave as a trigger. He didn't have a finger, so he would cut off a person's finger and shove it inside of my female parts. Then he said that he would always be a part of me and the other victims. So every time he showed the hand signal, it would remind me and the other victims what he had done to us, and start the terror all over again. A lot of Christian songs are used as triggers. For example, "Jesus, lover of my soul." The evil people raped me as they were singing that song. They dressed up like Jesus and held me down. "I will never let you go." "You have taken me from the miry clay, set my feet upon a rock, and now I know." The programmers put me in a dark hole by myself, and if I promised to pretend like they were perfect, I got to get out of the hole. But when I got out of the hole, I had to be raped. This abuse was done as the song was playing. So, when I was taken to church, I would hear the song and think that all Christians did those things. I thought everybody knew what I was going through, and they wanted me to get tortured, just like Jesus wanted me to be tortured. Every day, things were used as triggers to reinforce the programming. Coughing is another everyday thing that happens, but I was programmed about it. I was told that anybody who was coughing was trying to get people sick. Then when people got sick, the person was going to blame the sickness on me. They set this scenario up, and then they would torture me afterward. So they knew from then on that I would have extreme feelings of fear when someone coughed, and I would not trust them. In reality, every person that I would ever encounter would eventually cough, sneeze, or any of the tons of things they programmed me around; so this kept me chained to the evil people.

The evil people drugged me and told me that my hands and feet were like demons. They put fake claws on my hands and feet; then when I woke up from the drugs, I saw people who had been slashed up horribly, people who were completely torn apart. I was terrified because they told me I had been the person who killed them; I just didn't remember doing it. Since they showed me what I thought were my hands and feet that looked like claws, I was convinced I was an evil demonic monster. So from then on, I curled up my hands and place them under my armpits and curled up my toes too to keep people from seeing them and seeing who I really was. The programmers would curl up their arms or toes, and it was a sign to me that would trigger my mind to forget. An example of a smell trigger is the strong smell of egg. The male programmer was a college chemistry teacher. He had access to many different strong chemicals. He would use sulfur to burn people alive. This would melt their skin. Sulfur can even burn through rock. It also smells like eggs. I saw him burn people alive, with them screaming and crying for him to stop. The sulfur would be burning them, and the egg smell was there. Then, later to reinforce their torture, when they would make an egg sandwich, they would say they were going to burn me alive. This smell brings back horrible fear and pictures that are too excruciating to fathom. There are so many triggers that were created by the evil people I could write an entire book just about the triggers.

Chapter 3

The "Hospital"

"For there is nothing hidden that will not be disclosed, and nothing concealed that will not be known or brought out into the open." Luke 8:17

As I transition back to my story, I will share in detail the torture that was done in the hospital that I was put in during the foundational years of zero to five. I was kept in a hospital setting with many other children. I was tortured every moment of every day unless they allowed me periodically to sleep. Even sleep was used as a means to program me. They were constructing the foundational thinking of my life that they wanted me to have so they could get away with all of the torture, rape, and killing. They trained me like in the Pavlov experiments, with the dog salivating at the sound of a bell. They controlled me with shock torture, forcing me to have the behaviors that they wanted. They employed specific programming to control my every move, even training my brain to react the way they wanted it to as well. Another type of Pavlov experiment that the programmers used on me was where they made me act like a dog. They made me get on my hands and knees like a dog. Then they stimulated my vagina, only when there were animals, children, or handicapped people brought into the room. So this made me feel sexual feelings at the most horrible times when those people were present. I hated myself because I didn't want to feel sexual feelings when I saw them, but they had stimulated me so that my body would react how they wanted it to. Then they said I was evil and disgusting because I had those sexual feelings.

The programmers would starve me and then make me fight for food like an animal. They used the scripture Mark 7:27, which says, "But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled: for it is not good to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs." Then they would say since I was a mixed breed that I had to sit under their table and only eat the crumbs that fell from their table. Repeating over and over, they would say, "Jesus said you are a dog, so we are just treating you like He treats you." I genuinely thought, if Jesus says I'm a dog, then that must be what I will always be.

The programmers' objective was to control my every move and to make me think that I needed them to control me. A way they did this was by the process of pairing sexual feelings with unsexual things, then saying that I was evil for having sexual feelings. With causing sexual feelings continuously, they made me think I was evil and needed their control over me. This was used as just another way to trick me into thinking I was evil. They wanted me to hate myself so much that I would welcome the torture and the pain they were doing to me. In my mind, there was no other choice. I had to let them control me, or I would feel like an evil perverse monster.

Russian and German experiments that were "psychological" studies were actual rituals of torture, and they were used as torture techniques by the evil people. These type of "studies" started all of the basic triggers that would keep me under their control. There were thousands of code words that meant something different to victims than it would in the outside world. For example, when they said "God," I immediately thought of my "master" programmer. The male programmer also called himself my master, and he said he was my god. When the programmers said the name "Jesus," they were referring to the person they assigned to have sex with me. The person who was assigned the "Jesus" role was the only way I would get freedom, according to my programmers. Freedom meant to me that they would assign me a man to marry me that would control me every second, but I wouldn't have to be tortured. I will discuss this in more detail later in the book.

When the programmers said, "I'm praying for you," that meant that they were killing people for me. To pray meant "to prey," to do horrible things to people. The programmers would get down on their knees and say they were "preying." I knew that meant someone was going to get hurt horribly or killed. They said they were killing people for me because I was evil. I needed a sacrifice to be good enough since the Jesus of the church didn't choose me.

I was tortured as a child around each main color. I was programmed that when I saw that color or I wore that color, I was to allow a different part of my mind or alter to be out. Red meant sex parts were out. These were the parts or alters that were trained to have sex. The sex parts would have to be present and have sex with whomever the programmers said whenever they said. White meant the "God and Jesus" parts had to be out. The "God and Jesus" parts had to be perfect and were forced to be judge and determine who lived or died. The programmers made these parts think that they had a choice, but there was never a choice. For example, "You can allow one of these two people to live or die." There was never a good choice offered; my heart was ripped to shreds. Black meant the evil and death parts had to be present. Everywhere those parts of my mind went, something evil happened, and someone died, and the programmers manipulated these parts such that I'd be tricked into believing it was always my fault. Navy meant royalty parts were forced to perform. The royalty parts had been given false kingdoms and titles to cause a false pride. If you are completely deprived of all self-worth, you will do anything for purpose and meaning—anything to make you feel important somewhere, somehow. These titles and kingdoms were only given if I took on the demons that were over them. Purple meant Illuminati parts were to perform. This color meant that the Illuminati ruled and reigned over me, and I was their product. Anytime a programmer wears purple, that means that they are showing off their merchandise and product that day, and I knew I would be sold in an auction that day. Purple was a reminder that I was not free and that they owned me. This was reinforced in rituals by the Scripture "I am not my own, I have been bought with a price" (1 Corinthians 6:19–20). Pink meant princess pretend alters were out. The denial parts of my mind were forced to pretend that the programmers were perfect parents. This was normally when we were out in public. The color gold meant number one in the Illuminati. The right side of the brain and body was in charge when the alters were out, and that part of my brain and body had to take control. The color silver, number two, meant the left side of the brain and body alters were out. So in summary, the left side was the evil side, and the right side was the good side in my programming. This was also reinforced through Scripture: Jesus was always at the right hand of the Father. And the right hand was seen as holy, while the left hand was seen as defiled. They programmed me to believe that I had to be number one at all times out in public in order to earn my husband, who was going to control me. This programming was done in such great detail that whatever underwear I wore meant what part was out, and what outfit meant what I had to do that day. These colors are used in rituals and are programmed down to even how they choose the car you drive. There was an underlying reason for every single thing that they did. The main reason they go to such great detail in their programming is that ensures that no person will even suspect that they are doing evil; it is a devious setup against the victims. All of their communication is hidden, appearing even "Christian," but underneath there is a much different meaning to what they are doing.

The programmers put Wizard of Oz programming in place in the first five years of my life. If you look around you on a daily basis, there are so many phrases from that movie that are spoken in everyday life. If you research the Wizard of Oz, you will see its Satanic roots. They would set up rituals where God was the mayor of Oz; and he decided who got a heart, a brain, courage, etc. If we didn't get these "gifts," we were supposed to play the role of someone who was lacking in those areas. The entire goal was that we played a character like Dorothy was in the dream. We had to pretend we were dreaming all of the bad things that were happening. The evil people said that the yellow brick road was the road to heaven, so if I pretended well enough, I would get to go to heaven. But I never was good enough. They continually tried to cause competition between the victims, and if we weren't chosen, then the wedding feast meant our death. They tried to create a denial world in my mind and in every situation so that as we got into the society, no one would suspect that we were being hurt.

After the first five years of my life, it was time to move me into society. They chose a small town in Kentucky that was of German decent. It was the name of a German city in the Third Reich. They would blend me into the society there and cause the people to never think that they could ever hurt "their child." They enrolled me into the local school. The male programmer was a teacher, a coach, and a counselor in the school. So he was able to be there to control my every move. He made sure that he put me where there were other victims or programmers. And if someone spoke to me outside of the people who were allowed to speak to me, then he tried to discredit them by saying to me that they were part of why I was there. My programmers would go on to say the person knew how evil I was, and they were just playing the game too.

The programmers put me in the doghouse behind their house a lot. He built a doghouse that had a pen and a back shed that had a bolt on it. It was covered over with a piece of wood, and they kept me in it with the dog. They had a heat lamp they said was for the dog to stay warm. I didn't deserve to be warm, they said. The reality was that I had to sleep with the dog, which was my only interaction in life for long periods of time. I would grow to love the dog and to cling to it. When they saw that I loved the dog, they would kill it and say it was my fault. I had no one. I was completely alone.

I don't share all of this for the shock and awe value. I share this because Papa God has told me to share these details. Luke 8:17 says, "For there is nothing hidden that will not be disclosed and nothing concealed that will not be known or brought out into the open." Papa God wants all of the evil things done by evil people to be exposed. Bringing things into the light brings healing. First John 1:15 says, "God is the Light; in Him there is no darkness at all." He doesn't just ask us to be honest about the highlights of our life but also the darkness so that people can be made aware. How can a person be rescued if no one knows they are enslaved? I was treated like an animal, led around like a dog with a leash. They would blow a whistle, and that meant all of the dogs (mixed breed victims) had to gather together. My programmers said that God was dog spelled backward, so since I wasn't God or His chosen child, then I was a dog, the very opposite of God. They forced me to get on my hands and knees and repent to them for being so evil.

Chapter 4

Sharing the Truth

“You who are full of all deceit and fraud, you son of the devil, you enemy of all righteousness, will you not cease to make crooked the straight ways of the Lord?” Acts 13:10

The other day on the way to the gym, I was behind a garbage truck. I was annoyed because the truck was slowing me down. Papa God told me to look at that garbage truck. Repenting is like that garbage truck. Repenting is not saying you’re evil or a piece of trash. Repenting is to allow us to take all of the trash, the sin, that keep us from seeing who we really are—completely away. Repenting is actually revealing we’re beautiful children of God. Papa God never meant for us to believe that we are trash because we made a mistake. We tell Papa God about the sin that needs to be taken away, and He gathers it up and takes it away. So we are left with a clean house, free to be free!

Jesus warns us about evil people throughout Scripture. He speaks in Romans about giving them over to a debased mind, filled with all unrighteousness, vile passions, murder, evil-mindedness, and the list goes on. Romans 1:28–30 says, “Furthermore, just as they did not think it worthwhile to retain the knowledge of God, so God gave them over to a depraved mind, so that they do what ought not to be done. They have become filled with every kind of wickedness, evil, greed and depravity. They are full of envy, murder, strife, deceit and malice. They are gossips, slanderers, God-haters, insolent, arrogant and boastful; they invent ways of doing evil.”

Papa God also shares that they know who God is but choose to do these things. They pretend to detest the people who are doing the very evil things they do. This is the reason Papa God warns us not to look at the surface of a person, to discern with the Holy Spirit. All things that look good are not always good. I was very confused many times because Christians would shame me and say I needed to pray for them. As I began to ask Papa God about praying for the programmers, the very next day, He revealed in Scripture my answer that confirmed that I should not pray for them. Jeremiah 7:16 says, “So do not pray for this people nor offer any plea or petition for them; do not plead with me, for I will not listen to you.” Only because of the evil people’s willful choice to give their entire creation over to Satan. They didn’t choose what they chose because of wounds or pain. They chose Satan while being fully aware of who Papa God is and about Jesus’s death and resurrection. They actually know more about Scripture than most Christians do, because they twist and pervert every Scripture.

The people who hurt me were schoolteachers, a deacon, and a women’s leader in the local Baptist church. This is where the Illuminati and sex traffickers hide. They hide so they can divide and conquer. The enemy has tricked us into judging by what we see on the outside, instead of judging by the Spirit. The Spirit leads us into true judgment. Jesus warned us over and over again that there would be people who would appear good and would be evil.

Second Corinthians 11:13–15 says, “For such men are false apostles, deceitful workers, disguising themselves as apostles of Christ. No wonder, for even Satan disguises himself as an angel of light. Therefore, it is not surprising if his servants also disguise themselves as servants of righteousness, whose end will be according to their deeds.” The definition of disguise is to give (someone or oneself) a different appearance in order to conceal one’s identity, pass oneself off as impersonate. They do all of this willfully without any form of remorse.

The place where the evil people kept the victims had a morgue; at the time, of course, I didn’t know what it was. They would put us in the drawers and not let us out. The dead people were already decomposing; sometimes they would put us in the drawers with parts of the bodies. This was horrifying. They told us that God had sent us to hell—that if we didn’t do what God told us to do, we would have to stay there. The only way out of hell was to kill someone. If we killed them, they told us that we would get to live and the person who was dead would come back to life and not have to stay there. This was to reinforce in us that Jesus did not die for us, that we were too bad, and that we had to have another sacrifice for us to not go to hell. I never ever chose to hurt anybody, not once. I was forced physically, mentally, and emotionally. That was the worst part of all of the torture because that went against who I was as a child of Papa God.

The people were already dead in the cold chambers in the morgue, but to a three-year-old, there was no difference. So each of us had to stab a person. They took the knife in our hand and made us do it. Then stood back and said, “You are so evil. God hates you. Look what you did. You killed this person.” I asked when the person was going to wake up, like they promised us would happen; but the person never woke up.

So all of the other victims and I were programmed that we were evil and we kill people. Then the evil people used this and would reinforce that we needed them because they would keep us from doing evil. We believed them. There is no greater hell than to think that no matter what you do you will never be good, never be able to trust yourself, and there is a deep torment and torture to your soul and spirit. This is the deepest core lie that the Illuminati built on over and over again. They called me the “master executioner,” “me.”

This torture still affects me to this day. I always second-guess myself. Even if I genuinely know I haven’t done anything wrong, I look for an evil motive inside as to why I do something. I don’t trust that I deserve to be treated in a kind way. Someone I love walked in the door last night, and I sensed something was wrong, and I asked them if there was something wrong. They got offended and began to get angry and yell at me. Instead of taking up for myself, I just took the yelling. I didn’t require them to treat me differently. They trained me to be a doormat, to never stand up for myself. Why should I ask to be treated kindly? The programmers said I was evil; I had no rights.

The other day, I was listening to the radio about Christian writers. They said that beauty and truth are the two main reasons for writing. They went on to say that the truth is not what people flock to because it’s difficult to hear, but it’s just as important. I choose to write the truth even if no one chooses to hear, even if no one listens. There are millions of slaves out there in this country that I write this book for—for those that have no voice and no way out. Wait, I promise there is Someone that is on His way to rescue you, and He is bringing all of His children who say yes with Him! I care, and I will stand for you!

Each of you are called for such a time as this, to rescue those that Papa God is calling you to rescue. You are taking a huge first step, arming yourself with the truth you need to be aware of, the reality of what you are facing. I was so angry that I had to wait thirty years to be set free. I cried out and asked Papa God why He didn't rescue me sooner. He said, "I asked thousands of people, Hope, to reach out to you, to listen and see the truth, but they did not." You could be the person whom someone has been waiting for their entire lives, someone who will see the truth, and be a way out for them! As I transition back to my story, ask Papa God if there is any way you can help. What is your piece to the puzzle of freedom for somebody? There is no piece too small or too insignificant.

A common way they reinforced the thinking that I was evil is taking pictures with me doing things they had forced me to do, but in the picture, it did not look forced. They would use the pictures as leverage. "Don't ever tell anybody, or we will take these pictures to the police." All of the victims hated the thought of jail because they had told us that it was just like the hell we started out in. They said we would be tortured there and never get out.

It's Halloween as I'm writing this. The night of the 30th after midnight is the worst time of sacrifice and rituals. The programmers say they determine who gets to go to heaven and who gets to go to hell. There is a huge corporate ritual with powerful people from all walks of life—doctors, lawyers, teachers, pastors, judges. As a victim, you get evaluated and tested for the whole year by the Illuminati on how well you did to accomplish their plans. The two options that were given were to go to hell and realize how evil you really are, to be the evil person that God created you to be forever; or go to heaven. In heaven, the torture is all the same, but you pretend like it isn't. If you pretend well enough, you get another year to try and be good enough.

A lot of this is based on programming from the Wizard of Oz. You go to the emerald city and get a new brain, heart, etc.; and you go out and pretend that things are perfect. If you do this well enough, the evil people say that you never will have to go to hell. Of course, all of this is a lie. The same torture and terror continues everywhere with the evil people. They are continually building a denial system to cover up what they do to us.

The corporate rituals continue until November 5, election day. They chose election day because it's their way of reinforcing to victims that they are not in the "elect class." The evil people say that they are the elite, the elect, that are chosen by god, but their god is Satan. The Illuminati's plan and destiny, according to them, is to destroy those that are not "elect." They have been for decades and currently are making an army of trained tortured slaves that are set in place in every city throughout the world—people who are like me, who were born into the Illuminati with the programming and torture. We are told if we do our job, then we can become the "elect," and we will be set free. At that time, we won't be evil anymore. Every single aspect of a victim's life is a double bind. Every time you try to cause the least damage or pain, it is turned and used against you.

The school shootings and the random shootings you have seen are in majority people who have been programmed to do that job. I have seen maps of the United States, and the targets of each state, and their ultimate goal for that state. They continually said, "We are going to take over the US, and our trained army and terrorists are going to help us do that." Just like Hitler tried to take over the world, that is how they are going about destroying us within, bit by bit taking down the United States.

A way that this plan is slightly different than Hitler's plan is that the Illuminati is hiding their every move and waiting until the day all of the steps have been carried out. That way, they will catch the United States off guard and unaware that there even was a plan to take over. Satan works as an angel of light, deceiving people into believing he is good and then trapping them. The best prey is the prey that has no idea that they are even being attacked.

The list of the ways that the evil people have tried to destroy my life are endless. I get up this morning, and I feel anger and rage. The programmers continually would not let me sleep. I would sleep maybe two hours after the rituals. Then they would say, "You have to get up and spend time with god." This meant that I had to get up and get on my knees and get raped by god to make me better.

The person who raped me was a person who had the god title. The programmers would say they were sent to be god for me on earth. They were sent to keep me in line. "In line" had a hidden meaning; it meant that I died, "flatlined," and they took over. They would hook me up to a heart monitor to reinforce this ritual. The monitor would show a heartbeat, and the evil people would say, "You better let us take control of your heart, or something bad will happen." If I did what they told me to, then my heart would be under their control. Like an animal, they gave me commands, and I had to do them. Sit, speak, roll over (get raped), go to the bathroom (I couldn't go unless they said I could).

I would be on display like a science project when they would have their corporate rituals. All of the programmers would display their "work." There were times when I would wake up, and the evil people would say, "What did you do!" There would be someone whom they killed in their ritual that night, and they would say, "You did this during the night. Your heart wasn't under our control!" So I believed that I was wicked and evil, and that I could not trust myself. I wanted to be controlled because I was afraid of myself. The reality was that I never killed anybody, but I didn't know any different about myself.

I never thought I would ever get any justice on this earth due to the fact that they cover their tracks so well. They have people watching out for them continuously to make sure that there is no one following them or anyone close to where they are who could hear, see, or find out anything. They also dispatch demons to cover their tracks and to cause confusion in the spirit realm so that people will not be able to discern anything about them. They summon demons to cause a trancelike state in people as they talk to them. This causes a wall of denial and numbness to fall on the person. The demonics block the Holy Spirit from exposing their true identity. People need to be aware so that they can combat these demonics and walk in the freedom that is theirs. Powerful Illuminati leaders request for corporate demonic powers to come over the minds of people when listening to them speak on TV or at conferences. If the person listens to these top Illuminati leaders who are positioned throughout our culture, in media, entertainment, politics, sports, etc. Eventually, the person will no longer see anything other than what the Illuminati leader is wanting them to see; all of the evil will be disguised by demonic trances. They will no longer think that that person can do any wrong and begin to idolize them. At the rituals, the more innocent blood is shed, the more power the Illuminati receives. These sacrifices also give the programmers more power so that they can be taken over by the demons to be able to embody what they are trying to get people to see them as.

At the corporate rituals, each controller is showing off his programming and trying to find new ways to control their victims. The Illuminati study the way the brain works with experiments being carried out on the brain every day. They try to continually come up with ways to gain more control of the victims and over the people in this country.

Our spirits cannot be controlled, though! They could not make me choose Satan! They could not make me be evil! The spirit is the strongest area of our being. The Lord showed me that He protected my spirit. I chose Papa God, and there was not a thing the evil people could do about it.

Chapter 5

This is Real

"You are of your father the devil, and you want to do the desires of your father. He was a murderer from the beginning, and does not stand in the truth because there is no truth in him. Whenever he speaks a lie, he speaks from his own nature, for he is a liar and the father of lies." John 8:44

Papa God had me read John 9 today. When Jesus spat on the ground, He was prophesying that His life was going to the ground in death. He would heal us and bring us out of the curse. His life brings complete healing. The pool of Siloam means "sent." Jesus was sent to wash away all of our wounds and to heal us completely, to bring us spiritual sight. "I once was blind, but now I see!" He washes us with the truth. The truth is imperative. In John 9:6, it states, "When He had said these things, He spat on the ground and made clay with the saliva." Jesus spoke the truth that the blind man was not blind because of any sin of his or his parents. Papa God is showing that His DNA is what is causing the healing. His DNA brings life; He brings life. The flesh and sickness were cancelled. The life of Jesus (saliva) brought healing and truth to the blind man. Then Jesus had the man go and wash in the pool of Siloam (sent). This represents Jesus being sent to wash away our sins, the fall of man from the perfect creation that we were made to be by Papa God. Also, this represents the way that Jesus heals us and sends us out to share with others how He has healed us.

As I shared earlier, the evil people say that there are two types of humans, the perfect humans and the imperfect. The imperfect were made out of dirt by God, and the perfect humans are written about in a different book that says that they are the chosen people. They were not created. They are gods with Satan; he is their leader. According to them, God is trying to take them down because He knows that they are more powerful than He is. I was told that the "real god," Satan, doesn't make dirt like God does. Since we are made from dirt, God made an inferior creature on purpose to control. The programmers said that is why they controlled me. They said over and over that God said we needed to be controlled.

The Illuminati says that they are equal to God and Satan. They believe they will rule together as soon as they get rid of the inferior race. So that is why they have put together an army all over the world that is programmed to exterminate all those that are not Illuminati; this army is in place to dominate and control the world and destroy those who do not comply.

The majority of their trained soldiers are innocent victims who have been programmed to complete a mission so that they can be good enough to go to heaven (be the chosen few who are a perfect race). Just like Muslims teach, you can be grafted in if they take out enough of the inferior race, the Christians.

There is a very strong connection with the Muslim jihad and the Illuminati. They both are wanting the same outcome. The Illuminati and the Muslim jihad are partnered together to help each other destroy Christians. The Illuminati funds the ISIS and the jihad. I have seen many jihad at the rituals, celebrating that they massacred Christians. They celebrate because Satan gives them more power to complete their missions. They use witchcraft and sorcery to cover their tracks, to sneak onto planes and into places where they are planning attacks.

Many of the jihadists are being trained by some of our military: tactics of war and mind control. How do I know this? Because I was a victim of their tactics. There were many Muslim jihad members who came to the Illuminati to learn the secrets they have, to destroy Christians. There is a very big picture here, a picture that is unfolding right before our eyes; and the majority of people have no idea what is happening. My programmers said that there would be an Aryan man who would be raised up. He would pretend like he was Christian, but like Hitler, his ultimate goal would be to annihilate those who aren't of the Aryan race.

Despite all of this, I do not fear, because I know the end of the story: Jesus wins! We win! I do think that the Lord has called us to be aware of the enemies' strategies so we can be successful in rescuing innocent victims and be the type of people who are on the offense, not the defense. We are God's children; Satan's powers are nonexistent compared to God's. Unfortunately, if we are not aware of Satan's tactics, we run the risk of being caught off guard and end up on the defensive. For example, the quarterback is the man in charge in football. He has the ability to win the game with help from his teammates. In order to be successful and keep from being beat up in the process, they have a strategy.

Another way the Illuminati completes their purpose is to blend into the culture. The people who tortured, raped, and programmed me were teachers in the local school they sent me to. He was a teacher, a counselor, basketball coach, softball coach, and track coach. He was involved in every detail of my life, every second. He did not allow me to be alone with anyone other than whom he said I could be around. If someone happened to speak to me who was not someone he allowed, he would tell me later, "They know how evil you are. They are just testing you to see if you will mess up. They were checking you out so they could buy you." So I never trusted any person, and I thought this was normal life. I just thought every person knew what was happening to me, and they agreed that it should happen.

My female programmer was a head start teacher. The person she called her sister worked at the board of education. She made sure all of my files were taken care of and no one found out about them. Both of the programmers were very involved in the Baptist Church there to keep their cover and make them look like the "perfect family." He was a deacon, and she was over the kids' church. They hid the "hell" I lived in, very well. They called in demons to cover them daily. The demons gave them the power to be the embodiment of what they are trying to represent. They also, cloak themselves in demons so that people will never discern that they are not what they present themselves to be.

Large rituals are done corporately to call in demons into the church or wherever they are trying to infiltrate to cause confusion and division. So if you feel confusion constantly when you're around someone, ask Papa God, "Why do I feel confusion?" I think the enemy has tried to get the church to a place where they do not question their feelings or spirit. When they see something that looks good, they take that at face value.

The culture teaches people to be polite, to be nice, to not question things. There were many times that Jesus and the disciples were not "nice" in our culture's meaning of the word nice. Jesus and the disciples discerned and called out evil. They exposed a person when they were inwardly something different from what they were presenting outwardly. They had to rely on what the Holy Spirit was telling them, not what they were seeing. Matthew 3:7 says, "But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees coming to where he was baptizing, he said to them: 'You brood of vipers! Who warned you to flee from the coming wrath?'" I cry out for a spirit of discernment for the church.

Ephesians 3:10 says, "His intent was that now, through the church, the manifold wisdom of God should be made known to the rulers and authorities in the heavenly realms." We need discernment and wisdom in the church! The concentration camps and the people who are building them and funding them need to be exposed. The atrocities that are happening to innocent people who are living in a continual hell that is not a choice of their own needs to be exposed! I pray the church will be awake to all that is happening around them and within their walls.

The effect of the horrendous torture and programming I went through still affects me daily, all throughout the day. When I least expect it, a trigger happens, and I have to deal with flashbacks and the pain of the horror I went through. Where I live currently, lately, there have been tons of buzzards, at least fifty or more, around my apartment. There is a waterfall close to where we live, and many trees. The buzzards are everywhere! This gives me a very uneasy feeling. Anytime there were buzzards around in my life, it meant somebody had been killed, and it meant that as the lowest level of humanity (that's what the evil people called me), I would have to see the people ripped apart by buzzards, and they would make me eat the remains. I would throw up over and over, but no matter what, I had to finish whatever they said to finish. They said that I had killed the person during the night, and I had to get rid of the evidence. They were "just protecting me," they said. I begged to die. I begged to be killed; but they said if I died, I would be completely out of control, and a lot more people would die. So even suicide was not an option. I didn't want anybody to die, and I didn't want to be completely evil. So there was no way out for me. I was forced to do what they said every second of every day. I have asked many, many times, "Why, Papa God? Why haven't You exposed the evil people? Why haven't You made them pay for what they did and are continuing to do?" His response has always been, "I do not want to take down the innocent people with the evil people, I will not hurt my children." This is reflected in Scripture, Romans 9:22–24. "What if God, wanting to show His wrath and to make His power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath prepared for destruction, that He might make known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which He had prepared beforehand for glory."

During all of the programming, they had paired me with another female victim. We were supposed to be best friends, as far as anybody knew in our day-to-day life. But in reality, they tortured us against each other. They tortured me to hate her, and tortured her to hate me. We had to compete with each other, constantly. We were around five or six years old, and we began to go to gymnastics together. They had a programmer that was our "coach." They dressed us alike and did our hair the same so we would constantly see who looked and acted the best. If she won, I was tortured, and if I won, she was tortured. We were trained to blame each other. They bonded us through pain and torture. They trained her to be the dominant one, and me to be the underdog. That was our programmed roles in the cult. The dominant one had to torture the underdog into submission. In the rituals, the dominant one put a leash on the underdog and told them what to do. If the underdog did not do everything right, they would get tortured. The cult gives the dominant victim a false sense of control. They feel guilt and shame for torturing their "friend," but they are also told that the underdog will turn on people and do horrible things, so it's their job to make sure that doesn't happen. The underdogs have a leash put on us, and we are tortured in submission. We are told not to not make a move unless we are told. So we feel an extreme need to be controlled because we have been told that we are an evil animal that needs to be stopped. Our programmers dressed us up just alike and said we were sisters.

I feel dread and pain as I begin to write, even as I think about writing. There are so many emotions that I have bottled up from trying to survive over the years. I have not wanted to feel a lot of the emotions of today, because I needed to stay focused on healing of my past. The truth is that I was hideously tortured and raped my entire life. There are countless ways this continues to affect my life. My marriage is affected because I was controlled and never given the option of making my own choices. So today when my husband asks me what I would like to do or where I would like to eat, etc., I have difficulty expressing myself and giving any input. My physical body was always worn down and tired, and this still affects me today.

I have been healed so much in my mind, spirit, and body throughout this journey. Papa God began to show me that I have power within me; it's not true that I can't do things. I can do anything I want because I have the power of Papa God and the entire kingdom of heaven within me. I began to sing, "I have power in the name of Jesus. I have power in the name of Jesus. I have power in the name of Jesus to break every chain!" While singing this one day, Jesus showed me a vision of all of heaven rejoicing when I sang that and saying, "Finally, she sees the truth." I think Papa God rejoices when we see the power we have been given. The church, unfortunately, sometimes teaches that we can get prideful easily and that we should focus on the thought that we can't do anything and that we are useless. The reality is we can do anything with Jesus! He doesn't want us to sit around and say, "Well, I will wait till Papa God does this." He already has, and He has already empowered us. He already gave us the power of heaven! I went to work the same day that Jesus revealed this to me, and had the attitude of "I can do this. I'm powerful!" Throughout the day, I resolved issues and engaged in a way that I had never experienced. I was excelling. Later in the day, my heart was hurting horribly. I have had this happen before, but I wasn't sure the reason behind the intense pain. Papa God revealed to me the root cause of why I was having the chest pain. The programmers had told me that my heart would explode if I made any of my own choices, that it would blow up because of the evil inside of me. They said I wouldn't be able to go to heaven, because I wouldn't have a heart that could be saved. The evil people had tortured me and tortured other people in front of me to believe this lie. They said that if I ever made my own choices, I would cause them to die. It would be my fault for choosing something on my own, without being under their control. Papa God showed me that the reality is, I can make my own choices now. I can choose anything anytime I want. It's not bad to make my own choices. I can be trusted. I'm not evil. I see each day the truth that I can genuinely make my own choices. This is what abundant life is all about! I have talked to many people who wonder why Papa God gave us free will because we end up making so many bad choices. The deepest unconditional love is to allow a person the freedom to choose! Without choice, this is not living. We are just robots that do what our master controls us to do! After being a slave for thirty years, I see the absolute love that Papa God has for us in that He gave us the freedom to choose the life we want, the freedom to choose Him. He will not force us to choose Him, He will show us in every possible way who He is and His love for us, but the final choice is ours. We can choose God and heaven, or Satan and hell. Abundant life or death—it's our choice. We are not robots and slaves who are forced to be what He wants us to be or do what He wants us to do. Please take it from someone who was a slave for thirty years. There is no love in that, in any way, shape, or form, captivity is hell continuously!

In Matthew 10:39, it says, "Whoever finds their life will lose it, and whoever loses their life for my sake will find it." This scripture was used to torture me and control my mind. Along with many other scriptures, the evil people twisted them to mean what they wanted them to mean. The evil people said that I had to lose my life. This meant that I had to do everything that they told me to. If I found my life, if I made my own choices, then I would lose my life. Losing my life meant that God showed up and took everything away from me. So I was constantly in fear of making any choices of my own. I refused to make choices, and I was tortured to never make choices. They would say, "Find your life!" At that time, they would torture someone or something that they had briefly allowed me to get close to. Then they would say, "God made you lose your life because you are evil and make people suffer." So I was afraid of having a life and choices because that meant something very bad would happen. Even today, this still affects my life. If I want to get up in the morning early and get something done that I have as a goal for my life, I feel afraid and tormented because that might mean I lose something. That might mean someone gets hurt. That might mean that God is tricking me to take something away from me.

Throughout my entire healing journey, I have had excruciating pain in my heart. This is a physical pain in my body. This pain is greatest when things are going well. As I write, I have pain in my physical heart. This pain was put as foundation programming to remind me that I have an evil heart. I have been healed layer after layer, but there are still other layers to this programming. The most recent area that Papa God has been healing has had to do with NASA. In the programming, I was put on a gravity machine for training astronauts. This machine spins on an axis. They take your hands and feet and stretch them as far as they can and then strap you into the cage. There are electrodes that are placed on your hands, heart, sexual part, and feet. There is a halo that is placed on your head to cause electric shock. As you're spinning, you are electrocuted in these areas to cause extreme pain. This is performed as a test to see how much pain you can endure before submitting to do what they ask you to do. I tried and tried to endure the pain, but it was too great. My programmers told me they were superhuman and that I could be like them. They had asked the demons to take their body and shape it into whatever they wanted. They willfully gave their entire body to be used by Satan. I can't explain the terror a person feels when they see another human being shift into another being. I can say that the movies about werewolves, vampires, and zombies are not just movies that have been made up. There are actual people who have chosen for their blood, their body, their spirit, every single bit of who they are to be changed into a demonic form. I was terrified of them, and I didn't want to be like them. They knew how terrified I was, so they hooked me up to a blood transfusion and said that the same blood that went through my veins went through their veins. They said if I did what they told me to do, I would be able to save the boys, "my brothers," from being that way. So at that point, I did the hideous things they said to do. There was no way out, no other alternative. After I was forced to do what they said, the programmers said that God had rejected me and sent me away. To make me feel like I had been sent away, I was put into the cabin that had no gravity and left there by myself. I thought I had been sent into space and would never be found. To take this even further and make them look like my rescuers, they showed up again and said that my heart had been found to be black. So they stated that I was sent to the black hole "hell" by God. According to them, the black hole was a place where the rejects and failed experiments went. If I did good enough there, competed, and won, then I could get another chance at real life. The constant hell of trying to be good enough and to save people continued nonstop. I was taken to NASA and programmed many times. This programming has taken the longest to surface because of the depth of the involvement of the government in this type of programming. They buried this programming very deep so that it would never be exposed. There are members of the Illuminati in every walk of life who try to infiltrate and pollute governments, businesses, and churches; and the list goes on.

Chapter 6

Infancy to Five Years Old

"Who will rise up for me against the wicked? Who will stand for me against those who practice iniquity?" Psalms 94:16

Yesterday, my husband and I went to church. The pastor began to sing old hymns the evil people used in rituals. They would play the hymns while they did hideous things. Every aspect of church was perverted and desecrated for me. As I was singing, the Lord said He was restoring these hymns to me to show me what they really meant. As I was praying, I felt a strong sense of denial. Anytime there is strong denial, Papa God is exposing beliefs that are programming in my mind. The programmers layered denial in continually to bury their involvement. Only Jesus could destroy all of the layers of denial and bring out the truth so I could be free!

I had an intense sense of grief today. When I was in slavery, I had two other people who were supposedly my brothers. Whether they were my biological brothers or not, I do not know for sure. They are still in slavery. Their minds have continued to block out the torture and pain in order to survive. Recently, my younger brother showed up here. He is being used to try and get me to go back by the Illuminati. The evil people sent him here to manipulate me to try and protect him; that was my role in his life. I can remember from the time I first saw him, I was placed in the role of his mother. If I did not act and perform perfectly, he would not get to eat. If I didn't do what they told me to do, he would get tortured and raped. The truth was that they tortured, starved, and raped him no matter how perfectly I behaved for them. I tried to be his savior. They did rituals just to make me take ownership of him and remind me that I was evil. The goal of them sending him was to try to access the parts that had to take care of him. The reason they sent him, just like they have many times previously, was to trigger the deepest pain I have. The pain that I was unable to rescue him was hideous. I tried with every breath in my being to rescue him, and I could not do it. When Papa God rescued me, He told me the very best way I could help him was to live in genuine freedom. As the time passes, he will see that he also can be free. My prayers are that the walls of denial are destroyed and the memories are released. I pray that he gets free from their mind control. It's a hideous feeling to know that someone that you love is being tortured, and there is nothing at all you can do about it. So I push on to be healed more and more and to expose the evil of what they do so that he can get free also. I pray and trust that Papa God will rescue my brothers like He has promised. If I was there still, neither of us would ever be free. If I went back, I would be doing the worst most selfish thing I could possibly do. It's difficult because people don't understand this; they don't see past the natural into what is under the surface. The things that I have seen. They don't know the depth of the mind control my brothers are under. The programmers used us against each other throughout our entire life. They used the love of Jesus within us against us and the fact that we are not evil like them. We were tortured the most when they made us hurt each other. The evil people know that the worst thing they can do to Papa God is to hurt His children that is the Illuminati's goal.

The programmers specifically play a movie showing what Jesus did on the cross for us early in our programming. As the movie is being played, they do a ritual to make us believe the opposite of what the Jesus film says. They torture us to believe lies about Jesus. They say that He hates us and they dress up like Jesus, then rape and torture us. The power of what Jesus did for us, even after all of the torture is still imprinted on our minds and hearts. That shows you the power of the Holy Spirit and what Honest Jesus did for us. After the rape and torture and the movie is over, the programmers tell us we can choose or not choose Jesus. I cried out to Jesus in my mind, even though they tortured me, because the Holy Spirit was working despite the torture. His love is more powerful than every single day of being tortured, tormented, and raped. Even after the specific mind control programming to convince me that Honest Jesus hates me, I knew there had to be a God that was different from what they showed me.

Along with the twisting of the truth about who Honest Jesus is, each Scripture has been twisted to make Jesus look evil. The programmers would chain me down and force me to listen to the scriptures that talked about judgment. Each verse that spoke of judgment and evil, I was told it was specifically speaking of me. "Perfect practice makes perfect" is a phrase that they would say to me over and over. I was filled with anger because no matter how hard I tried, it was never good enough. In normal situations, when you are practicing something, there is no life or death results. But in the rituals, if you didn't do something perfectly, someone died. In today's society, if someone expects perfection, it usually causes lies to form in the person about their self-worth. They may have a tendency to work for love. In my situation, the result of requiring perfection always had an end result of torture, rape, and death. The truth that I know now is that no matter how perfect I was, the same results would have happened. The programmers had no intention of stopping the torture. For example, if I made a specific phone call for them (every phone call had an agenda), if I did not speak exactly as they had trained me to speak and say exactly what they wanted me to say, the threat was that I would have to torture the person on the other side of the phone. Even if I had performed perfectly, they would torture me and say I was evil. There was no way out, no way to be free, and no way to make my own choices.

Every time I would take a call in private, they would send a shock to my ear. If I did not say what they wanted me to say, then they would shock me. No matter how much I tried, I could never say exactly what they wanted me to say. There was always something I got wrong, even if I said exactly what they told me to say. The phone call was scored, and my entire day was scored. If the score was low, someone, including myself, got hurt. After getting free, I have worked for a customer service company that scored my performance on every detail of my phone call. It brought back memories; and I would feel intense fear, that no matter what I said, I did something wrong or I could have done better. During most of the customer-service types of jobs, I feel like I'm going to a ritual every single day. Even though the reality is that I'm not being tortured, the feelings are just as intense as if I was still being tortured. On the phone, I feel the same way when I was getting tortured and graded for each call in the rituals. Even though there is no torture now and there is just occasional verbal abuse on the phone by people who are upset about their issues, the feelings still feel like the hell I was in, just without torture. This is how my life is still being affected even today by the hell that the programmers put me through. Torture, rape, and abuse not only affect you then; they affect you for the rest of your life. These feelings continue until Papa God heals those lies and wounds. Then you can move on in freedom. Since the torture I went through was all day every day for thirty years, it is an ongoing journey of healing throughout each day. But there is not anything too big for Papa God! He is untangling the lies of the evil people one day at a time and bringing truth!

This book is dedicated and written for every person who is in slavery, for every person who is being controlled, and for every person who believes there is no way out. There is a way out, and Papa God is the way out! He will move heaven and earth to rescue you! There is truly no pit too deep that Papa God can't pull you from. This is also written for every person who is called by Papa God to set the captive free, and that is all of us! He has called us to be a light in the darkness. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father in heaven" (Matthew 5:16). This may seem like a task that is impossible in the current pain you're enduring. Or there maybe people you feel are just too broken and wounded that they couldn't possibly be healed and shine for Jesus. I can testify that there is a Papa God that is big enough and wise enough that He can bring healing to all wounds caused by the enemy—and cause us to shine, as we were created to shine!

Papa God has called us to set the captive free. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, Because He has anointed Me. To preach the gospel to the poor; He has sent Me to heal the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to set at liberty those who are oppressed" (Luke 4:18). There is something you can do! You can set the captive free. You have the power of Papa God within you. This will be a challenging task but will be worth every second. At the end, you will have no doubts that you helped give someone freedom, and their life will never be the same! Isn't that worth being uncomfortable? The Holy Spirit in you is saying, "Yes, it's worth it!"

Evil in this culture can sometimes be difficult to recognize. It hides in normal things, like people you think you know. Unfortunately, recognizing evil isn't the hardest part. It's the task of standing up to evil even though nobody else will; that is the hardest. We are living beneath a dam that's holding years and years of evil. You can say that that dam is not going to break all you want; but when the rains come and that dam bursts, all that bad comes out. You won't have time to run for high ground! Now is the time! Now is the time to arm yourself with truth. Now is the time to get the strategies of heaven and knowledge of the enemy's plots and schemes! First Peter 5:8 says, "Stay alert! Watch out for your enemy, the devil. He prowls around like a roaring lion, looking for someone to devour."

As I write, there is a dove that landed on my balcony, and I feel like it is looking directly at me. I feel like it is a beautiful reminder of peace from heaven, that Papa God's got this! He will rescue the captive, and He will raise up people to fight for freedom for those who don't have the strength to fight. It will not be an easy battle, but it will be worth every second. So what do you say? Are you willing to take this journey? He will be beside you every step of the way.

I'm now going to unfold my story in a detailed chronological order, a step at a time, to make sure that no detail is missed. I want each person to grasp the magnitude and depth of the Illuminati's and satanic cults' hold over our society and over thousands of innocent people. There are people out there who need someone to believe them. They need people to believe that they experienced this torture too. There are people out there who have been called "crazy" for sharing the truth of their experience. Unfortunately, a lot of the people who are in disbelief are from the church. The church, the very place we should be welcomed and accepted no matter what. The "unknown" causes fear in people. Fear causes people to shrink away and find ways to dismiss things that are uncomfortable. Scientifically, it is proven that the brain continually tries to stay in homeostasis. Our brain enters into homeostasis; it tries to stay stable, on an equilibrium. So even our brain tries to push away a truth that is too big for us to understand or fathom, it takes a deliberate choice to acknowledge and see the truth. I can guarantee you that there is an evil much bigger than what we can imagine, but that does not diminish the greatness of God. The acknowledgment of the fact that there is great evil in this world only gives us the ability and knowledge to stand against it and fight it strategically. If you go into war, don't you want a plan? God always gave His people a plan when they went into war, even if the plan didn't make sense to them. How can you fight what you're not even aware of? My goal is to make you aware so you will be prepared for the battle.

During the process of writing this book, the sadness was overwhelming at times. I have dealt with the pain of my conception with the Lord, but, obviously, there was another layer that needed to be surfaced. The truth that I know now after a decade of healing is that Papa God formed me, and He knew me before I was born. The reality of what happened is that I was put in a petri dish and mixed with all the Illuminati bloodlines. The DNA of the people who were my programmers were also mixed in so that I would look like them. I will go into much more detail about programmers in this book so you will be aware of what and who they are. A very basic description of the programmer is the person who is a member of the Illuminati or cult who continually tortures, abuses, and rapes a person to control what they think and do. Their goal is to make the person do and think exactly what they want them to.

The Illuminati believe that there is only one chosen race—a pure race that is perfect. They believe all other races need to be exterminated. People with handicaps, the elderly, the Jews, the Christians, anybody who is not in the Illuminati bloodline should be done away with. The Illuminati DNA is linked to every mountain of influence in this culture. For example, in media and entertainment, there are Illuminati at the top of these mountains. Specifically, this is done so that what people watch and what people hear is what the Illuminati chooses for people to watch and hear. Therefore, all of people's thoughts and actions are controlled by what the Illuminati wants.

At the root of my conception, I was designated a "mixed breed." As a "mixed breed," I was to carry on the chosen Illuminati races. I had to take the role of "Mary" and breed with whom the programmers said to breed with. The people I bred with were my chosen "Jesus." This was done to create the perfect generational line, according to my programmers. In the programming, we were told that the real Jesus rejected us because we were a mixed breed. We did not carry the perfect unified bloodline. So the real Jesus would only accept us if we could achieve perfection. They would recite in the ritual, "Be perfect as I am perfect" (Matthew 5:48). This is the scripture that the programmers used to substantiate that they were perfect and I was not. The mixed breeds were not perfect, and were not chosen for salvation.

The programmers inserted me from the petri dish into a lady they called my mother. I had very specific memories of this happening. Papa God surfaced these memories to give me insight to all that I went through. The memories about my DNA were the most difficult memories to handle. They took the longest for Papa God to bring to the surface. I believe that, partly, this had to do with the fact that every human being wants to belong. Belonging and acceptance is a basic human need. The lady who carried me in her womb was a victim. Papa God has shown me since then that He considers her my real mom. She had pure love for me, and she was Papa God's child. Spiritual family is much stronger than biological family. This is because, as Christians, we live by the spirit! I will meet my mom someday in heaven. I got a vision from the Lord of my mom in heaven. This vision from Papa God brought great healing; that's how I know it was from Papa God. I'm still healing from the lies about my mixed-breed bloodline. Papa

God has shown me that I have His blood in my veins, and ultimately all blood is from Papa God. This has had power over my thinking because of their programming. I was programmed to think blood is the only thing that matters.

As I was in the womb, the programmers would chant over and over that I was the seed of Satan. They inserted the EVOL machine (electrocution) into the lady's womb that carried me. This was a device that they used over and over again throughout my life to use shock to torture me. So while I was in her womb, I was experiencing electric shock. Also, when I was in the womb, they inserted a vibrator to stimulate my genitals and played music of a heartbeat at the same time. This was to program me that sex was the only way I would be alive and stay alive. They wanted me to bond to sex. They said over and over that sex was the only reason God would allow me to be born. As I was being born, the programmers pushed me back into the womb over and over again. They said I had to work harder to get out. They spoke over me that no one wanted me, not even God. This caused rage and anger toward myself that I could not do what they were telling me to do. Also, they wanted to break my spirit so that I would not fight against them and give up.

It's difficult for people to believe that I can remember these things that happened before I was even born, and I understand that. As I have been on this healing journey, Papa God has brought me back to those places. I would literally sound like a crying infant when I would be reliving the flashbacks, with all of the same emotions that a baby would have. This remembering and allowing Papa God to speak to me brought great healing to my life, so that is my proof that it is real. As my mom carried me in her womb, I bonded with her. She was an innocent victim, a "breeder." The breeder was someone who was chosen to carry children in their womb, and breed with whomever they told them to. When they are done with the breeding, the breeders are killed. She was a victim. She was also tortured to breed and carry babies that were put inside of her, whether they were conceived by her or inserted into her. Even as a baby in a mother's womb, I felt her love. I would never feel love again from a human being until I was almost thirty years old. According to scientific studies, during their time in the womb, babies hear, feel, and even smell their mothers. ("How Your Baby Learns to Love" by Sheryl Berk from American Baby.)

While I was in the womb, the programmers put a clamp on my head and pulled me out of the womb. They said that the clamp was my crown and that I was evil because I wanted the crown. They did this to cause me to believe that I was evil at the core of my being. Then when I was born, they killed my mom. The programmers spoke over and over that her death was my fault. They chanted that I was so evil I made my mom die. Anytime they chanted words over people, they played music that took the person into another spiritual realm and another conscious state. This made the words go deep into the unconscious realm where they were buried. The evil the programmers do are specifically hidden in the unconscious mind.

The programmers then wrapped the umbilical cord around my neck until I turned blue. They put me on the operating table and took a knife and slit my mom's belly. They spoke out torture levels to my mind. Then the music and chanting activated a serpent spirit to enter me. They said that I strangled my mom and that God was strangling me with her umbilical cord because I was so evil. The programmer said my heart killed my mom. At the same time, they stimulated my genitals. They said they gave me the sex feelings, because that was the only way Jesus would save me. All of this made me believe even as an infant that I was so evil that God wanted to get rid of me. Also, the programmers wanted me to believe the lie that I was so evil I caused everybody I cared about to die. At that point, the programmers put me in a body bag with my mom and told me if I was good enough I could bring her back. Of course, I couldn't bring her back, but as an infant, I didn't know that. So I learned to hate myself and see myself as completely evil. The next phase in the torture was to get me to bond with my programmers and to think that in order for me to survive I needed them to torture me.

I remember being in a little glass cage as an infant. I was connected to a monitor that showed me if my heart was beating or not. The rest of my body was covered with electrodes; wires were going everywhere. The evil people said they were keeping me alive. When they showed me that my heart was beating, they locked the cage. When they showed me that my heart wasn't beating, they unlocked the cage. As an infant, I didn't know what they were doing, but as they continued to do things, I learned that they controlled my every move.

"We determine if you live or die," they said over and over to me. If I moved, I was electrocuted. They trained my mind through torture. In every move I made on my own, they shocked me. I learned to stay still and only move when I was told to move. When I would cry, I would be electrocuted, so I learned not to cry. I was then told over and over that I wasn't really hurting, because I wasn't crying. "You're not even hurting. You are not crying!" They said over and over I was faking the pain. So there was a constant state of confusion.

The programmers made me intentionally bond with people. Then they would rip the person away from me or kill them. I would be put in isolation, completely alone, for long periods of time. The reason the programmers did this was to get my mind to bond to them, and no one else. They said they were doing me a favor. They said they would never leave me because I needed to be tortured. Even though they tortured me, I thought that having somebody control me was the only way I would stop hurting people. My mind bonded to the evil people because they were there, even if it was to torture and rape me. This caused a division in my mind due to the torture of human deprivation. The worst torture is complete isolation and seclusion. This causes a human being to have such a human deficit and feelings of rejection that they will do anything to have people with them, even if the people cause hideous pain.

The programmers intentionally created a part of my mind they called the master executioner. This part was created during the torture that was done in the underground military compounds used for Monarch MK Ultra Programming. The agenda for this programming is to create soldiers for the end-time agenda of the Illuminati. There are tunnels underground, built specifically for travel and torture, within all large cities. The victims are forced to watch while people are skinned alive. The victims are told that the people who are skinned were not obedient. They have to stay a caterpillar because they didn't do their job as a soldier. Their skins would be hanging upside down all over the room to remind the other victims that they stayed a caterpillar instead of becoming a butterfly.

Chapter 7

Details to Expose

“Have nothing to do with the fruitless deeds of darkness, but rather expose them.” Ephesians 5:11-12

Hitler and Mengele were demonically connected to each of the victims. The reason the Illuminati does this is they want to cause as much demonic bondage as they can to the victims. The stronger the generational demonic hold is, the better, the easier it is for the Illuminati to enslave people.

> Dr. Josef Mengele, nicknamed the Angel of Death, and the other Nazi doctors at the death camps tortured men, women, and children and did medical experiments of unspeakable horror during the Holocaust. Victims were put into pressure chambers, tested with drugs, castrated, frozen to death. Children were exposed to experimental surgeries performed without anesthesia, transfusions of blood from one to another, isolation endurance, reaction to various stimuli. The doctors made injections with lethal germs, sex change operations, removal of organs and limbs. At Auschwitz Josef Mengele did a number of medical experiments, using twins. These twins as young as five years of age were usually murdered after the experiment was over and their bodies dissected. Mengele injected chemicals into the eyes of the children in an attempt to change their eye color. He carried out twin-to-twin transfusions, stitched twins together, castrated or sterilized twins. Many twins had limbs and organs removed in macabre surgical procedures, performed without using an anesthetic. (Louis Bulow, the Holocaust.)

The type of experiments and torture I went through were based partly on Mengele’s experiments on torture and the mind.

The Illuminati labels the victims number 1 or number 2. The number 2s were the dogs, and the number 1s were gods. I was called a number 2. The number 2s were put alone in a room, and all of the people in the ritual would use the bathroom on them. The feces were smeared all over us. We were left for weeks in a room by ourselves with the feces still on us. The gods were told that they could cause the parts of their physical body to be able to be joined together and have power. In this ritual, they would torture us by forcing our hands to cut a baby into five parts using a knife. We were told that the different body parts could be put back together and the baby could go to heaven if we chose to be god. As the god part, if we saved the baby that was cut up, there would be a savior for the mixed breeds. In order to have the savior, we were forced to be god, the judge at the end. This was a hideous position. They made us think that, as gods, we were in control of who would live or die. The worst possible feeling was to have to decide who lived or died.

During the first five years of my life, I was in a hospital-like setting. My surroundings were sterile white, and people were dressed in all white. There was no furniture in the rooms, just machines for torture. There were many empty white rooms with other infants like me in cages. The programmers said that I was in heaven and that god had put me there. I was programmed to believe that, since I wasn't the chosen race, I was put there to torture continuously, to make me perfect. I could not see anyone's face, because they had surgical masks on. They would electrocute the right side of my body until I was numb and poke me with needles. At the same time, the programmers showed me normal pictures of themselves, and they said they were perfect. They put a black cover over the left side of my body and said the left side was evil. To make me believe I was evil, they shaved the left side of my head. They put skin irritants on my body to cause whelps all over the left side of my body. They chanted over an over that the left side was evil. I literally thought I was two different people. The Mengele twin programming. The programmers would tell the left side of my body to hold the pain. Then they covered the right side of my body with a pink blanket and forced my left hand to stab people with a knife. The middle part of my mind and body was called the "flat line." This was the sex part that they trained to have sex. They fed me sugar or injected me with sugar in the right side to cause disassociation. The evil people said the "flat line" was where the Illuminati and seed of Satan was planted. They would hold my left eye open and shine light in that eye. This was to cause the brain to store information where they wanted it to. There was an oath they forced me to take as the Illuminati queen. I was forced to swear to stay on the right side and not see any of the evil that was being done to me. The programmers said I could rule instead of being tortured if I chose to forget. If I chose to forget the truth, then I would be allowed to get clothes and food. The torture and programming was done to get my mind in a war within itself. Each part of my brain was deliberately programmed to hate the other. This further insured the evil people that the truth would not surface, because of the torture to the brain. My brain would not allow the truth to surface. The programmers were experts at how the brain functioned. They forced a right-and-left-brain disconnect on purpose.

The programmers used sex and sugar to numb my emotions. They used addiction to control me, whether it was sugar, sex, drugs, or whatever they chose to get me addicted to. Sex and sugar was used in experiments with me, much like the Pavlov studies. When sugar or sex was given to me, they would kill someone at the same time. So every time I got sugar or sex, I immediately felt guilty and fearful because I knew someone was going to get killed or hurt. This produced hatred toward myself because I was feeling good feelings from the addictive substances as someone was being killed. When the programmers took sugar and sex away, they would put me in a room alone with dead bodies and body parts. They said that I had killed and cut up the people in the room because I didn't have sex and sugar. So even though I was afraid of someone dying when I had the sugar and sex, I was much more terrified of not having sex and sugar, because I thought I would be left alone to be out of control and kill people. Sugar was also used over and over because of the influence on the brain. It is eight times more addictive than cocaine. As well, it's an acceptable drug in our culture. Sugar is killing and controlling us, but unfortunately people don't know the true reason it was introduced into society. It was introduced specifically to control people and get them sick. This was a very strategic plan of the Illuminati, and they are very prideful that they got away with it. Their goal was to bring something into our culture that would make people sick and control them, and that which no one would question. I will go into that in more detail later.

Throughout my infancy and as a toddler, I lived in deprivation. As an infant, they gave me semen in a bottle. They said semen was all I deserved because I was a whore. They said over and over that I was born for sex, and that sex was the only gift God gave me. They tortured me to believe God gave people sex but He condemned every person who had sex outside of marriage. Then He laughed at me because He knew I wasn't good enough to be married. According to the programmers, it was a trick planned out by God. The programmers told me that God really gave me no gifts and condemned me completely. I was told from the beginning He only put up with me. The programmers made me think that God said I was a whore and that sex was the only thing that controlled me from being a killer, so He paid them to rape me and sell me. Of course, they took pictures of me as an infant sucking on a penis. And other sexual photos that were positioned as though I had chosen to have sex. They said the pictures proved I was a whore.

The spiritual and bloodline ties are established at infancy intentionally. This is done so that the Illuminati has a foundation for all of the programming. The spiritual and bloodline ties are formed in many ways. The computer is used to cause a foundation of demonic roots. There is a computer that is powered on during rituals, and different electronic sensors are placed on the victim and the computer. This is to cause a magnetic and electronic frequency between the person and the computer, which the demons can be channeled through. They also scan the eye with an electronic sensor since the eye is the window to the soul. The programmers then assign a number to each victim, a computer programming number. Then they do a ritual where there is blood spilled and put on each part of the body where the computer sensors are. They call in the demons and territorial spirits to travel through the sensors and into other dimensions to cause a soul tie with the territorial spirits over regions of the world. The leaders of that region astral project and summon demons to cause an overlay or demonic force field around victims. This is what demonically keeps ministers or counselors from getting through to the core person or the hard drive when doing ministry with Illuminati victims.

The computer and the person are joined demonically. This allows people to remotely access victims through chips placed in the body through electrical frequencies. The Illuminati want everything about who they are and what they do to be so hidden that no one would have physical proof of what has been done. The frequencies are a way that they get away with their schemes in most of the communication they have with other world powers. If they meet and communicate on a different radio wave frequency that people are not aware of, then the purposes and plans that they have for this country cannot be exposed.

Another way the programmers establish a demonic foundation is through grid systems. The Illuminati plot each move that they are going to make on a grid system, physically and spiritually. The reason they do this is so they know where the portals are, for example, where high corporate rituals are done. Then they demonically connect the primary hubs and portals to each town and city and state. The victims are assigned to different grids physically and spiritually, and they are given assignments based on the grid system. There are concentration camps and corporate ritual sites set up for their end-time agenda based on where the demonic portals and territorial powers are set up. The victims are linked like a chain, and if any victim gets free, that causes a loss of power because it weakens the grid system.

The programmers and the Illuminati put cameras everywhere. They told me that they taped everything all the time. When I was put to sleep, by giving me drugs, the programmers would set up a situation where a person would be killing somebody, and they would take a video of them from the back. The person would have the same kind of hair as mine and the same clothes on; then they would say, “That was you killing people.” I believed that if they didn’t torture me, I would always be killing and hurting people. I was told over and over that if I wasn’t being tortured, my real heart would be exposed, the heart that was caught on camera doing the evil things. To me, the worst hell was not knowing what I had done and waking up after they had given me the drugs. The programmers told me over and over that I lived in a camera. So I had intense confusion. I thought every single thing about me wasn’t real, that I was an actress all the time. The programmers set me up time after time. They tried to force my mind to believe that

I wasn't capable of knowing what was real and what wasn't, so I had to rely on them (programmers) to tell me what was real. They buried me and a baby with a camera and then covered us with dirt. I was forced to say out loud, "I take the demons so the baby can live." The baby stopped crying, and I kept taking the demons to try and get her to live. Their goal was to trick me to allow the demons in. The baby never came back to life. She didn't survive.

The depth of denial and programming of the Illuminati is shown clearly in the movie The Truman Show. The man in the movie had been living a life controlled by everybody around him. They were filming him all the time. He was the only person (denial part) who wasn't aware that his life wasn't real. In the movie, the people were inside a control room deciding what he saw and what he did every day. This is an actual ritual; that is what the evil people do to victims. It is not a movie; it is reality for millions of people in this world. The movie was just a way to desensitize people to the truth. The producer in the movie Christof is a good depiction of a real-life programmer that is molding his experiment (victim) to be exactly who he says to be.

So many movies today are based on actual rituals. There are more evil movies than there are good ones. The entertainment industry is controlled by the Illuminati. This is a way to keep victims updated on their programming. What I mean by that is when they see the movie, it reinforces their programming. Another reason for the infiltration of the entertainment industry is to cause people to be desensitized from seeing the truth. When people see a movie that is based on a ritual and then a victim shares their story, people are more prone to say that the victim got their memories from a movie. The reality and the truth is the movie was copied from the ritual. An example of a movie that people think is very pure and that is filled with programming is the current movie Wonder Woman. Wonder Woman is named Diana. Diana is a "god." She is a Greek god of hunting and childbirth. The Greek gods are used in Illuminati programming. They named a part of my mind Diana. The reason they did this was to force me to believe that I hunted people to kill them. The Diana part was forced to kill and have sex with many people. They programmed that part to think she wanted the sex and the killing. I was forced to be an aggressor in sex, or they would kill people. The programmers take the different regions of the universe and the Greek gods they are associated with; then they claim that area with a demonic throne. There is a ritual with a human sacrifice that is done to create a portal and power source for the demons.

Chapter 8

Triggers

"Woe to those who call evil good and good evil, who put darkness for light and light for darkness, who put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter." Isaiah 5:20

Foundational triggers are programmed into the victim at zero to five years of age. The reason they program in triggers is so that when the victim hears a noise, sees a picture, hears a song, or looks at a picture, and thousands of other triggers; it reinforces their control over the mind. For example, the programmers tied me up and let water drip on my forehead over and over again; at the same time, they would stimulate my genitals. This caused me to have sexual feelings every time I heard the water drip. The same out-of-control crazy feeling that happened when they tortured me would start again when I heard the sound of water dripping. Another example is the ticking of a clock. I was put in a room with only a clock that ticked loudly. Then my genitals were stimulated on purpose so that when I heard the clock, I would have sexual feelings. This created an out-of-control feeling; that was the Illuminati's goal, because then I would need them to control me. Other examples are chewing gum, tapping your foot, clearing your throat, coughing, sneezing, and sniffling just to name a few. The programmers chose these things because they would happen every day all day.

The programmers used phrases and words to be trigger words. The word come was said over and over. At the same time, they would use equipment that stimulated my genitals. This torture was done so that in normal conversation when a person said come in a sentence, I would automatically have sexual feelings. I would immediately feel shame and fear. The word know was also used as a trigger word. Since know is in the Bible as a sexual encounter, they would read the Bible and stimulate my genitals. Every time I heard the word know in daily life, I thought it meant sex. When people read the Bible, I would have sexual feelings because my body had been trained to respond to those words. My thoughts were, I must surely be disgusting and need someone to control me if I have sexual feelings while someone is reading the Bible. They told me over and over that I was sick and that I thought about sex all the time. Since know was used as a sexual reference in the Bible, it was also very confusing. The programmers would dress up like Jesus and rape me, to get to "know" me. I never wanted anybody to "know" me. This made me shut down any feelings I had, because I was afraid to feel.

Another goal of the programmers, as we discussed, was to get me so terrified of myself that I believed that I needed the torture and control. When I was in the hospital, they starved me, poked my eyes with needles to make them look red, and shaved my head. They wanted me to look like a demon. They told me I was a demon, and they called me a demon. My name at that time sounded like the word demon. So they said, "We gave you that name, because we know who you really are." Then they would put me in front of a mirror and say, "This is who you really are." I looked like a demon; therefore, I was a demon.

There were many other infants and children there in the hospital setting where I was put. The programmers intentionally tried to turn all of us victims against each other so we wouldn't trust or bond with each other. They knew that there is power in numbers, and if we bonded together, we would be stronger. I was separated from all the others with a glass wall in between us. The only time they allowed us to be together was when they were torturing us. When it was time for the rituals, the programmers would bring the other infants and children food, clothing, blankets, and basic needs. Then they would bring in people to pick them up, like they were taking them out of the hospital. As I saw this happening, they would say, "Those children are the chosen race, and you are not." "If you become perfect, we will give you what you need." They told me to be perfect meant to have sex, breed, kill, pretend, and anything else they said to do to be "perfect." The truth has been revealed through my healing, as Papa God has shown me, that the other children never got anything either. The programmers set up that situation to trick each of us. The reality, Papa God revealed to me is that the evil people took back everything from the victims or paired the good things with sex and killing so that there would be intense guilt. No child or infant ever got anything good there; even basic needs were not met in that hideous hospital.

As I said earlier, I was told that I was the race that they called the "mixed breed" or dog. The programmers put a dog leash on me and walked me around like a dog. They forced me to complete commands like sit, stand, speak, and lay down. The word god is dog backward. The programmers said I was the exact opposite of god because of my DNA, so I was a dog. They would put a bowl of dog food in front of me and make me eat like a dog. I was forced to growl at anybody that tried to take away my dog food. This is another programmed way they pit victims against each other. The programmers would sometimes put only one dog food bowl in front of us, and everybody had to try and eat. This created division and competition between all of us in order to get even our basic needs met. There were programs to get us to have confusion and guilt over our survival instinct. If we ate, then that meant that some other person didn't eat and might die. This torture was used as a foundation to be able to control what we would eat daily, so we would be thin and easier to sell. Along with getting us deliberately addicted to sugar, they were creating a "damned if you do, damned if you don't" situation. Their goal was to create intense guilt when eating so they could keep us thin. They wanted to be able to control our weight at all times.

Drugs were another way that the programmers controlled me. They forced different drug needles into my arms and made me get addicted. The drugs would make me foggy and disoriented. The programmers said that if I took the drugs I would forget the evil that was going on. After they got me addicted, they would take away the drugs. This would cause hideous withdrawal symptoms. They wanted me to get to a place that I would do whatever they asked me to do, because of the intense pain of the withdrawal from the drugs. As a child, drug withdrawals are brutal and traumatizing to say the least.

The programmers core lie was that I was born evil. They said if I didn't pretend they were good and have sex, they would put me back in the hole. This was a hole beside the house they lived in; they called it Satan's womb. It meant utter darkness forever. Coke was also used in denial programming, consistently. I was given Coca-Cola (Coke) from birth, and it contained cocaine and many other addictive ingredients. In the rituals, the Illuminati members stand in a circle and put the Coke bottle in the middle and chant repeatedly*: Cum Over Killing Every day, Cum Over Killing Everybody*, an acrostic for the word coke. Then Coke is given to the victim to drink. The victim is told the Coke makes them want to have sex. Then the victim is raped. After that, they ejaculate on the victim. The Illuminati chant over the victim and call in demonic powers to "burn the evil out of the victim." So on a daily basis, I thought that if I drank the Coke, the evil within me would not be seen. To reinforce this thinking, the programmers kill someone in the ritual circle. Then they pour the Coke on the dead person and the victim. The Coke takes off the blood, so they believe that the Coke will remove the evil. There is an addictive demonic force at the root of the Coke industry. This exists on purpose to kill and control Americans without them being aware of what is happening.

The programmers would set food in front of me, but I wouldn't be allowed to eat any of the food. They would allow other people to eat while I was watching. The programmers said the people were allowed to eat because the other people were good and I was not good. I was tortured to hate fat intensely and hate myself if I had any fat on me. No matter how big I was, they told me that I was fat. If they said that I was fat, I wasn't allowed to eat until they said so.

While in the hospital, the programmers put me in a room that they called "hell." There were body parts and dismembered people in the room. They said I had killed and dismembered the people. They made me stay alone in hell with the body parts. This was excruciatingly painful. They told me that this was hell because I had to eternally live with the fact that I was a killer. I felt terror when I thought that I didn't have anybody to control me. The worst part was that I couldn't remember doing any of what they said I did. So I thought I was crazy. Exactly what the programmers wanted. I was terrified to not get tortured by them. In my mind, the torture and control was what kept people safe from me and how evil I was. For example, they had a fish in a fish tank, and they said it was fine before I was in the room. They left the room, and they said the fish died because I came in there and killed it. I said, "I don't remember doing that." They said I did remember and that I was lying. I constantly thought I was doing evil and I just didn't remember it.

There were rooms in the hospital that they used for gas chambers. They would take children into the rooms and tell me the only way the children could get to heaven is if I turn the gas on. The alternative for the children they presented was hell. Hell meant I would have to kill them and dismember them. I had been tortured to believe, as I shared before, that I killed and dismembered people in hell. I had no other choice. Constantly, they put me in a double bind. Everything they said was a "choice" was bad. I was always trying to find the least evil choice. Reality is that I never had a choice. I never got to choose anything. After thinking I had saved the children, the programmers showed me the children were dead. I was tormented and full of excruciating sadness. The programmers would then say, "Why did you do that? You're evil. We didn't tell you to do that!"

Some of the programming resembled the Nazi concentration camps. There were rituals where someone was dressed as Hitler, and he was telling all of us what to do. I had to stand in a military uniform as a child and say, "Heil Hitler." I had to pledge allegiance to Hitler and Mengele, and the mission they had for us to do in the world. The Illuminati's goal is to exterminate every person not like them. Their plan is to place the victims as soldiers in each city, in each region, and in each state. Then program us to do what that want us to do in that specific area. Therefore, they have super soldiers hidden within the US. They are trained to be ready, to be in place when the Illuminati decides to put people in concentration camps, which have already been set up. Their prideful view is that if every area is controlled by them without anybody being aware of it, then they can succeed in taking over the world. For example, global warming is an issue being pushed by actors and congressmen. The Illuminati want to eventually say that we need to get rid of the other races because they are draining our environment and natural resources. But the people in control of the money continue to be the producers of the things that are killing our environment. This is another part of their agenda.

The Illuminati brought many infants into this country to be trained as German soldiers. They are planted into this society to accomplish a mission to take down America. The last time that was attempted was when Hitler tried to get rid of the Jews. On November 3, 1943, some forty-three thousand Jews were gathered, shot, and killed from various camps in Poland. This concluded Operation Reinhard, which had virtually exterminated Polish Jewry. The SS called this final action "Harvest Festival." While countless historians, commentators, and books have often emphasized the industrial nature of the Holocaust, SS Nazis understood the concluding action of Operation Reinhard to be a special day on the farm comparable to an annual harvest celebration. In the twisted Nazi mind, Jewish weeds had to be eradicated from the blood and soil of Germany's lebensraum. Operation "Harvest Festival" was the single largest Nazi Jewish massacre conducted throughout the entire war. That is exactly what they were planning for Christians.

I have explained previously how they created a foundation of hatred toward myself and how that bonded me to them. The terror and hatred of myself was specifically caused to keep me with them. I believed in every fiber of my being that I was killing and raping people if I wasn't being tortured. The programmers, at the same time, were creating a foundation of denial. Every time they raped or tortured me or made me think I was evil, they said the only way out was for me to see them as a perfect family. They would hold up a picture of themselves and say, "We are perfect. If you always say we are perfect, then all of what you did will go away." I was tortured to push all of the pain, terror, and guilt down by pretending the programmers were good. For example, when they forced me to look at a picture of Jesus, they would say over and over "prey" for us, not pray for us. This meant if I didn't kill somebody for them, then their sins would be held against them. They said that my sins would kill them, and I had to make up for that by killing somebody to take their place. Literally as a sacrifice for my sins, since we were tortured to believe Jesus didn't die for us. Then they put a picture of themselves up on the wall for me to continually look at. If I looked at the picture of them and said they were perfect, my mind could numb out and not feel the hideous pain of having to kill someone. The truth is I didn't want to kill anybody, and I did everything to keep from having to do that! But according to them, I had to honor my father and mother (that's what they called themselves) and do what they said to do. To not honor them as parents meant a worse evil, and they used the scripture of honoring your father and mother to reinforce that lie. So now when I look at a picture of Jesus, I start to see a picture of the programmers and see them as perfect. When I look behind that denial picture and genuinely feel the pain of what was done, I see the killing that I was forced to do to honor them. That truth wrenches my being because I never had a choice.

The evil people tortured me deliberately to create as many parts of my mind as possible. The reason they do this is to get a specific part of my mind to do a job or function. Also, if the programmers divided my mind purposely, then the truth was buried deeper, and they wouldn't be found out. For example, there was a Pain part that carried the pain. This part was told that they created me to be in pain and that I was born to be in pain. There was a part they named Demon. I was forced to make sounds like a demon and look like a demon. If I did what they said, I would be able to keep people from dying, and when I got older, I could keep my child from dying. The programmers said they were keeping me from hurting people, and even from hurting my children. There was a part they named Stupid. They often used acrostics, STUPID meant, Satan Trained Under Person in Denial. The evil people made me act stupid, and they said if I didn't act stupid, they would tell everybody that I was evil. The stupid part had to deny the truth continually and pretend everything was perfect. There was a part they named the Breeder. There were generational, bloodline, and DNA rites to this part. The reason they said that they had to create many parts was I was evil at the core. There were millions of different parts of my mind created deliberately by the evil people.

The evil people twisted the meaning of the weapons of warfare in the Bible. They called the sword of the spirit, the penis. When I was raped, I was told it was the sword of the spirit trying to make me good. The evil people used electric shock at the same time. They trained me that the shock was always their way to get the evil out of me. They told me that evil resided in my belly and my heart. I was hooked up to an ultrasound machine, and they put an image on the screen that looked like a monster. So I thought I was an evil monster. Another way they caused fracturing of my mind into different parts was a military type of torture. They would strap me down and let a drip of water drip over and over onto my forehead. This caused anger and my mind to split off. It's a military tactic. There were thousands of denial parts. When I reference denial parts of my mind, I'm talking about parts of my mind that were forced to block every memory and every feeling of the torture and rape. "Fake it till you make it" is a well-known phrase in our culture that tries to make stuffing emotions something that is a good thing, but it is not! It causes destruction to your mind, body, and spirit. The worst result of faking is that it keeps us from having connection with people and Papa God!

I was continually forced to focus on the fake pictures of a perfect family, and I was told if I didn't focus on their perfection, I would have to see the truth of the evil I had been forced to do. This created a great division in my mind. The reality of the hideous memories of the hell I endured were under the pictures of us posing like we were a normal family. There were seed of Satan parts, pretty pink princess parts, Shirley Temple parts, just to name a few. Shirley Temple was said to be an Illuminati-trained child. She was tortured to sing and dance to the degree that she did on TV. They used Shirley Temple movies during the rituals to get me to focus on trying to be perfect. The programmers made me drink Shirley Temples, a drink that they said made me forget. The evil people made an intentional division in my mind between the denial parts and evil parts. They backed this up with specific brain torture to intentionally divide the left and the right brain. Their goal was to make the parts hate each other.

Another major denial program was sugar programming. In the ritual, I would be placed on a food pyramid, a demonic triangle. The leaders would call in principalities from all over the world to cover me with a sugar fog (coma). The sugar was supposed to cover my sins. I would then be forced to eat large amounts of sugar, and they injected sugar into my veins. The foundation of the food pyramid is essentially sugar, carbohydrates that turn into sugar. The Food and Drug Administration are controlled and have a foundation of Illuminati control. As victims, we were forced to chant, "Sugar controls us." At the same time, we had to make a vow and covenant to the Illuminati to stay in coma. This, in turn, would give the programmers more demonic control, and a denial sugar coma would be put on us. The sugar coma was induced to get us to never remember the things that they did to us.

Sugar is everywhere in our culture. Every celebration and social activity includes food. When you look at the different celebrations such as birthdays and weddings in the United States, cake is always present. Ball games have hotdogs, chicken wings, and beer. This could go on and on. It does not mean food is evil or an indulgence is evil. It does mean that we should be cautious and protective of our bodies and minds. There is an enemy who wants to destroy us, and there are people who follow that enemy that want to destroy us. The sugar program was a foundational program, because every time a victim would see people eating sugar we thought they were involved with the torture. If you talk to someone who has changed their eating habits and cut out sugar and processed food, there is a mental clarity that is regained with that choice, so the reality is that we are being drugged as a culture in general.

Along with the sugar programming, the programmers said that God created the heavens, earth, and humans in seven days. On the eighth day, the Illuminati created the “perfect” genes, the genes that God didn’t want to create. This included myself since I was put together in a petri dish, the foods we (the genetically modified) were supposed to eat, and genetically modified animals. The evil people said that God didn’t care about us, so He didn’t create us. Also, the programmers said that God didn’t give us food. This is where genetically modified food started, and cloning as well. The Illuminati is creating their own new world order. They want people to be sick. They want people to be tired and die before their time. This is why they have changed all of the food into GMO food. Food that has been processed with chemicals that they have created, that kill us. Plant-based food is from Papa God, and studies show consistently that plant-based foods heal our bodies. But the people who control the food and drug industry have gotten us addicted to sugar and processed foods, and our everyday experience is connected to those genetically modified foods. These foods cause cancer and every other type of disease in the body. The culture has bought the lies, and these genetically modified foods are killing us.

Another way the Illuminati is trying to take over the world is by getting people into a different state of consciousness. When evil people can get the minds of people into a passive state of consciousness, then they have more power over their thinking and actions. This is their biggest weapon of war, because people are unaware of what things are causing their mind to go into a submissive trancelike state. I’m aware of this because of the torture and rituals that I endured. The programmers would hypnotize me by making me breathe a certain way for me to go into an altered state of consciousness. Electrocution was another way they got me to go to another level of consciousness. Sugar coma and other drugs injected into my body altered my consciousness. Stimulating my genitals over and over without any release took me to another state of consciousness. This type of torture would cause so much pain, torment, changes in my body, and confusion that they caused divisions in my mind. The evil people know if they can get a person into a trance state, they can insert thoughts and ideas without them being aware. For example, in the video games, music, phones, and movies that people watch and use today, there are electrical frequencies inserted to get people to an altered trance state of consciousness. In that state, they accept all of what is transmitted into their mind. Arrival is a recent movie where I have seen this programming technique played out. In this sci-fi movie, there were aliens that arrived on earth. They had a language that looked like different variations of the letter O. This is a common symbol of the Illuminati. The language of the aliens was being measured by the sound waves and frequencies. The woman in the movie went into a trancelike state to receive a gift from them. The gift was to be able to see the past, present, and future. She was in a trance. At that point, there is a sound wave language that is not understood by our conscious mind but is understood by our unconscious mind. So the subliminal messages are sent electronically to other parts of the consciousness. Have you ever seen a child who has played video games for so long they don’t hear, see, or notice anything around them? Have you ever seen a person so engrossed into a movie that they go somewhere else? Or have you gotten on a phone call and lost all track of time? Have you been on Facebook or some form of social media and realize hours have gone by? This is the same type of thing but a milder form. There are deliberately placed messages sent through sound frequencies. The mind has gone into a vulnerable trance state, so it is open to receiving these messages. I only share this so that God’s children can all begin to be defensive about what we allow our minds to be open to. Also, so that we will pray that our minds will be so in tune with Papa God, that we will discern when messages that we do not want are trying to get through. This is the Illuminati's main way of communication. What if the Church could hear what the Illuminati is saying and know their next move? What if we could with the power of Papa God be able to shut down their frequencies and communication and cause an end to their plans? In the end, we win, but what about now? Shouldn't we, "the body of Christ," be as powerful as we can be? What if we could shut down evil at an unprecedented level, giving millions the opportunity to be free!

A scripture that describes how Papa God exposes evil is Ezekiel 8. I know this scripture is long, but I believe it's very important in learning how we can combat the evil people. Ezekiel 8:1–18 says,

> And it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the Lord God fell there upon me. Then I beheld, and lo a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his loins even downward, fire; and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the color of amber. And He put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy. And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain. Then said He unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry. He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? but turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations. And He brought me to the door of the court; and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall. Then said He unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door. And He said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here. So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about. And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan, with every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up. Then said He unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, the LORD seeth us not; the LORD hath forsaken the earth. He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do. Then He brought me to the door of the gate of the LORD's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz. Then said He unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these. And He brought me into the inner court of the LORD's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the LORD, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east. Then He said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger: and, lo, they put the branch to their nose. Therefore will I also deal in fury: mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.

I'm wondering if the doors and walls that Papa God was talking about to Ezekiel were realms and portals in the spirit. I pray that as the powerful church of Jesus, we allow Papa God to help us see the evil and expose it—that we take back the spirit realm that is ours through the inheritance we received from Jesus!

In order to track me, there were microscopic electronic sensors that were implanted throughout my body so that they could input information through frequencies anywhere in the world. Also, these sensors tracked me everywhere I went and what I did. Rituals were done to place DNA on each of the sensors and send out signals demonically to make soul ties with each part of my body with other people throughout the world. The soul ties with other victims allowed the demons to stay. The soul ties gave them power to scramble and cover the electronic signals and communication that was happening throughout the world by the Illuminati. This is a way of communication a language that can't be detected by people. Unfortunately, the church has been targeted to get them to walk in the natural more than the spirit, so they are not aware of the electronic language. The soul ties create a powerful demonic chain between victims throughout the world. I was tortured and told that if I was not "faithful" to keep the chains, then the rest of the victims would die, and it would be my fault. The physical implants were reminders that it was our job to keep the secrets. Rituals were done where the people would die when the implants were taken out. So we were tortured to believe by seeing people die, that the implants had to stay in us. We had to keep the implants and sensors a secret.

The programmers forced us travel in the spirit realm through astral projection by taping our eyes open and making us look at strobe lights and multicolored lights. Another way they forced us to travel in the spirit is by spinning us around and around. This induces a dream state just like in Wizard of Oz. While they are doing this torture, at the same time, they would make different sound waves. The sound of a heartbeat, triangle music instrument, and demonic tongues were used like a Morse code unlocking the portal or lock in the spirit to the Illuminati eye. The Illuminati eye gets the person through the portal to go into another realm. The evil people use the victim's heart against them. The victim is told if they choose to go through the portal, they will have an opportunity to rescue people in the other realm. I found that this exact ritual is shown in the movie Interstellar. I love my husband, and he likes science fiction movies, so sometimes I endure them to bless him. I know I will end up getting healing from Papa God if anything surfaced during the movie. So in this movie, the daughter gets messages through Morse code, and she thinks it is a ghost. Her father travels in space to try and save the world by finding another place for people to live other than earth. During his travel, he is unable to complete his mission. So he is sent into a trancelike state. There are frequencies and sound waves that serve as the barrier between him and his daughter. He speaks to her in Morse code; it was him the entire time who was talking to her from the future. There are rituals set up exactly like that by the programmers. The father says the answer to communicating is love. The evil people said the exact same thing. To an Illuminati survivor, love is evol spelled backward. Evol was the word the evil people used to refer to the electric shock. This was used as torture specifically in the gravity machine as NASA. There have been many victims tortured in NASA with EVOL. This does not mean that everyone in NASA or anywhere is evil; it just states the truth that there are evil people in every area, government, entertainment, schools, and churches; and the list goes on.

The evil people programmed me with most of the scriptures, also with stories, words, and songs that had to do with Christianity. This was done so that when we heard anything at church, it would always be paired with some form of ritual and torture. The evil people know that the Bible is real and powerful. They just think they are more powerful. The word covenant meant sex in every situation with the Illuminati. To make a covenant, I had to have sex with someone, and then I was bound to them for life. I couldn't make the rape and torture end if I had a covenant, unless I died or they died. Covenant is a hideous terrorizing word for victims. I was told that God would not make a covenant with me, because I was too evil. So I had to have sex with Satan. I had to make a covenant with Satan to make me good enough. The covenant was formed through torture and rape. The meaning of the word prayer was also twisted. The evil people said "prey" was the true meaning of prayer. This meant that I had to kill someone or hunt them down to have the ability to talk to God. The programmers did this specifically so that when people say in church, "Let's pray," or "You need to pray," it is a major trigger. The evil people said that the church was trying to trick us to do evil things because it was a commandment to prey! The evil people set all of this up strategically so that none of what pastors or Christians say would be trusted, and the victims would think that the Christians were evil too. Prayer meant I had to find other victims as "prey," or they would find them and kill them. All I ever did was try every second of every day to find a way in the midst of all of the hell that people would suffer and hurt the very least. There was never a good choice. No matter what, I would choose the option that had the least amount of people getting hurt. In reality, I never had any options. They made me think I had options, but I never ever had a choice at all.

Fasting was used as a torture tactic. So when it was mentioned in church, I thought that God wanted us to be starved to torture us. They would stimulate my genitals over and over and say that I was out of control, and not give me food for weeks at a time. They said that without sex and food, I would kill people. When they would starve me, they said it was God making me fast. God was taking food away from me to starve me to get the evil out of me. Communion was also used to torture victims. There were demons that were summoned in and communed with while drinking human blood and eating human flesh. The evil people said that it was God's plan to try and make us good enough when He said, "Drink His blood, and eat His flesh." According to them, since Jesus didn't die for us, we had to have another sacrifice.

The Lord's Prayer was used to torture me and the other victims. I will walk through the entire prayer to show what they do with each phrase of the prayer. "Our Father," I was told we had no father, so we weren't included in this prayer unless I did the things God told me to do in the prayer. Our "father" was my programmer. That was the case with all the victims. They made me get on my knees and say, "Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come." This meant I had to do oral sex on the person who was "father," and he had an orgasm in my mouth. "Thy will be done" meant he tortured me "on earth as in heaven." My programmers sent out the parts of my mind that were named after the physical parts of my body as they electrocuted each organ and astral projected them into the demonic realm. "Give us this day our daily bread" meant I had to eat human flesh, as they placed it before me. If I didn't eat the flesh, they told me that I would cause other people to die. "And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors" meant that I had to have sex with people to be forgiven. So when people in the church say, "You have to forgive," victims think they are saying we have to have sex with them. They always told me my debt was never paid. That is why they had to put me in a cage. They said that Jesus wouldn't pay my debt. So they had to turn me over to the torturers and tormenters. They tortured me to believe I couldn't pay the ultimate debt and that there wasn't anybody who would pay the debt for me. "Lead us not into temptation" meant we were the whores and sluts who were tempting people with sex. "Deliver us from evil" meant if they put us in a cage, then they were rescuing other people from temptation, because we were evil. "For Yours is the kingdom, the power, the glory forever. Amen." The last sentence the evil people told me meant that they could masturbate us, and if we had an orgasm, we were saying we were God. So I thought I needed to be destroyed because I was so prideful and evil. At the end of the ritual, we had to bow down to our programmer and worship them because they kept us from being evil by torturing and raping us. We were told we had so much evil sexual feelings inside us that we had to go through all of that torture for us not to be evil. They showed us the Lord's Prayer and read it over and over, so we did not question it. It was what God said should happen to us, the only communication He had with us.

Also, John 3:16, which says, "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him will not perish but have everlasting life," was used in rituals to cause horrible isolation and fear. Since I was told that I was not a part of the world that God was talking about in this scripture, I was put in a room alone for a long period of time. They said that I was too evil to be loved by God and that He didn't even include me in His love. There were programmers who said they were God and Satan. Then they would have sex. After the people who said they were God and Satan had sex, during the ritual, they had a lady give birth to a baby. I was told it was God and Satan's child, because "begotten" meant they had sex. They forced me to touch the infant sexually, and they said that I would have eternal life because the baby's DNA would help me be chosen. I was just three or four years old at this time. After they made me do that, they said, "You're evil. You touched a baby sexually. We have to control you so you won't do that again." "You can't have eternal life, but if you try harder, you might be able to." Then they put me back in the cage and said I had to stimulate my sex parts to try to be better. I hated myself. I thought there was no other way for me.

Forgiveness was a trigger word for all victims. Forgiveness meant we had to pretend that the evil people were not evil, and we had to forget what they did to us. So every time a Christian says, "Forgive them," that means to us that we should pretend that they didn't torture us. So as you can see, the Christian words had opposite meanings for victims. That is why it is so hard to get free, and imperative that Christians are aware of what is going on. Without dealing with the truth, this just keeps the evil hidden and people in slavery.

Every time I had a Bible near me, they would say, "Open that GD Bible." I would open the Bible, and then I was forced to masturbate and read the Bible to get perfect. That was the only way I would be allowed to read the Bible. Every time I opened the Bible, I had sexual feelings. They said this was because I was so evil and perverted. The programmers would go on and would say, "Open the Bible wider, or you're never going to get there." They meant my legs and I would never get an orgasm. The orgasm meant I was perfect enough to be allowed to read the Bible. But when I had an orgasm, they said I was too evil to read the Bible and that I had made that up. Constant confusion and torment was what I faced every day. I didn't even have God to turn to, because I thought He despised and hated me. Since I would have to read the Bible while I was masturbating, then this made the Bible seem all about sex and very dirty. To "know" God or for God to "know" me meant I had to have sex. They would take me into a white room that was completely empty. Then a man that was named "God" walked in, all dressed in white. He wouldn't talk to me. He just raped me. Then I would hear a voice through a loud speaker that said, "You are banished. You are evil, and we have decided you deserve to die." The man whom I thought was God left, and I was there on the floor after being raped by whom I thought was God. They spoke on the loud speaker to make me believe it was God's voice that was talking to me. "Forget the past, and press on to the high calling of God." "You are called and chosen." At that time, other men were brought in, and they raped me. "This is your calling. Forget the past, and press on to the high calling of God." My calling from God was to forget and have sex with whomever they said. I tried and tried to do the best I could, because if not God said I should be dead. I had no idea that things could be different. If this was what God was like, then I was doomed. I was torn within. Why would God do this to me? Was I evil because I didn't like this? I thought I was.

The Scripture 1 Corinthians 9:24, which says, "Do you not know that in a race all the runners run, but only one gets the prize? Run in such a way as to get the prize," was used to get the victims to think that we were all in competition with each other constantly. The goal was to be the "one," and the person who ended up with "Jesus" was the "one." Their prize was that they would be controlled by their husband, who was chosen for them. Their chosen husband would be Jesus to them. This allowed them to win the prize of heaven. Every single thing I did was to strive to be good enough. Even the cars that passed as I was driving were in competition with me, they said. So there was no middle ground: either you stayed on the right side of the road and went very slow to make sure you were last, or you had to speed to get to first place. But we never were the first or the last. We were always in the "middle," those who did not get to go to heaven. In the rituals, the evil people would kill a person at the finish line and say it was my fault because I didn't go fast enough.

The evil people would recite Philippians 4:8 (NIV): "Finally, brothers, whatever is true, whatever is noble, whatever is right, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is admirable—if anything is excellent or praiseworthy—think about such things." The programmers said they loved me while they raped me. Every evil they did, they paired it with something that was supposed to be good. This caused great confusion. I was tortured and forced to focus on the pretend things and forget the bad, because if I didn't, that meant I was evil. Papa God had to show me very clearly in my healing journey that I had to look at the evil they did to me. I had to see the lies that they told me to know the truth and be healed. How can you be healed if you don't even know what you're healed from? This is an extreme example, but it is true for every person. If you have feelings and emotions but you don't have any idea where they are coming from, Papa God wants to show you and then show you the truth where there are lies you believe. It brings supernatural peace and healing when Papa God speaks truth!

The evil people started in Genesis to pervert and twist my mind about God and creation. They said the expanse was the penis and the water was our body. The earth was formed through sex between Satan and God. The vibrations on the earth was to cause us to have sexual feelings. So God was forcing us to have sex with Him. They would put vibrations to my sexual part to make me have sexual feelings and tell me that God was having sex with me. All of what I saw that was made by God, I was programmed to believe, was sexual. Even the stars, they said, were made to remind me that God made the earth through sex. They said God separated the day and night in order to separate the good and evil people. When the sun rises, that is supposed to be God being stimulated to have sex with us.

The seasons of the year were for evil people to bring out different parts of my mind to torture. There are always corporate rituals at each season change. The programmers would spin me around over and over to cause my mind to disassociate, and they would say over an over that God spins the earth around to cause us to forget. Papa God has had to take every single lie and show the truth that He made the earth to show us that He loves us. Now Papa God is always showing me His genuine love through His creation. I was always forced to bond with animals, and then they would kill them. I wasn't as afraid of animals as I was of humans. It always seemed like animals liked me until the evil people tortured the animals to turn on me. That rejection by the animals, even though the animals were being tortured to do things to me, was a horrible feeling.

I seem to always feel close to Papa God when I see sunsets, animals, birds, and beautiful scenery. These are Papa God's signs to me each day that I'm free! For example, I was getting some healing from a memory one day, and I was sitting in my car. There was a tree nearby, and a leaf fell off the tree. He said, "You are not connected to the evil people anymore." So every time I see a leaf floating to the ground, that reminds me that I'm free!

In the first five years of my life, I had been in this “hospital” setting and had no outside influence at all. During that time, they set up pictures where we looked like a happy family. The reality was they were programmers posing as parents. When I walked out of the hospital and went outside for the first time, I saw a yellow flower and a yellow butterfly. I remember genuinely thinking that there must be something better something else other than the torture I was enduring. I had a tiny grain of hope planted that maybe God was not evil and that He didn’t hate me. The programmers looked at me and the change in my expression when I saw the yellow flower, and they said, “God didn’t make any of this for you. This is not even real for you. This is only real for the people that are perfect.” Even after telling me that, the truth is that that was a life-changing moment for me, the very first moment that I saw of glimpse of God, that made a lasting impact on my life. The Word says, “I tell you, if they keep quiet, He replied. Even the rocks will cry out” (Luke 19:40). So if Papa God can use rocks or a small flower to speak, He can use your life powerfully!

Chapter 9

Their "Product"

"Beloved, do not believe every spirit, but test the spirits to see whether they are from God, for many false prophets have gone out into the world." John 4:1

By age five, the foundational programming was complete. Scientifically, it is proven that our belief system is primarily fully formed by the age seven. Now it was time to reveal their "product." That is what they called the victims they program. Their next plan was to get me to believe that the United States was the best place in the world and that there truly was an "American dream." They put me on a private plane, and I had no idea where I was going. I was in a cage. If I was taken out the of the cage, I was on a dog leash. As horrible as that was, I was glad to be some person's property because I was terrified of myself. All of the programming had made me wonder every second what I would do if I wasn't somebody's property.

The programmers gave the denial parts of my mind names like Perfect Princess, Sugar Queen, and Stupid. They made sure that my legal name sounded like a devil and demon, so anytime they said my name, I knew that my real name was devil and demon. All of the children's names in the house where we were started with the letter D. So with these legal names, we could each play the role and program of devil, demon, and denial. The main programmers' names started with *R*s. R and R. They would say, "The only rest and relaxation you get is through us. We keep you from doing evil. You can only rest when we are in control or torturing you." The lies would continue. "You have to work every second to be good when we are not around. God created you to work every second. God says you have to read the Bible to see how evil you are. We just want you to rest, and the only rest God says you get is to forget, to have sex, and torture." They reinforced these lies by making me clean up after every ritual. I had to clean up all of the blood and body parts and anything else they said to clean. If there was a speck or spot or even if there wasn't, they would make it look like there was. I couldn't ever clean well enough. Then they would trash every single thing I did and make me start over. This would go on for hours and hours. There was never ever rest for me. I was working 24/7. Even in the few hours that I did sleep, I was in torment because I was afraid I would kill someone in my sleep.

Flatliners is a movie that is a ritual-based movie. In the movie, they deliberately get their heart to flatline. Just like the movie, the programmers hooked me up to an electrocardiogram. They would shock me until I would pass out, and before I passed out, they would show me that my heart was flatlining. As they showed me that my heart had flatlined, they would say, "We have control of whether you live or die." They would take me to places in the spirit realm while I was flatlining, a place they called heaven and hell, and do programming in those places. Then when they revived me, they said that they kept me from doing evil. I was terrified not to have them. This fear brought an influx of demons that formed a demonic bond with the programmers.

When they flew me to India, I had no idea where I was. I was put in a room by myself. I was not given clothes, my head was shaved, and they poked my eyes with needles to make them look red. There were rats and insects everywhere. I was in torment as the rats and the insects crawled all over me. There was no relief from the torture. As I sat there in excruciating pain, there were Indian men who were dressed in military uniforms, and they would come into the room. They screamed at me and raped me over and over. There was no one to help me. I had no hope; I believed I was going to die. The fear of death was intense because of the programming that they had done about death. For me, death was a much worse fate than living. there was no rest in death. There was just killing to do because I had no person to control me. At that point in the torture in India, the people who programmed me from conception walked in. The programmers had already put layers and layers of denial and false bonding to make me cling to them. For example, since they had killed the lady who was my mom and said it was my fault, they said, "You don't have to be your mom's killer if you just pretend like I'm your mom. The pain will go away, and you will have a pretend mom. That is better than having no mom." My programmers said that I could have the "American dream." If I pretended that none of the torture ever happened, they would take me to America and I could have a life there. I soon found out that there is no such thing as the "American dream."

The deepest level of denial was the torture where the programmers made my sexual parts programmed to be aroused at the most hideous things. They would stimulate my genitals and then bring an infant into the room. They would do this over and over until sexual arousal at the presence of the infant was an automatic response. This was used as another layer of denial. It was programmed into my mind that if I said clearly that the programmers are good, then they would not tell people I was a child molester. I thought because they had trained my sexual parts to be aroused when an infant was brought into the room that that meant I was evil and a child molester. There were double binds constantly being put in place to cause my mind to give up and choose the lesser evil between the two options. The definition of a double bind is only having two horrible options. This was always the constant state in my life. Another example of a double bind was when the programmers would say, "If you molest them, you don't have to kill them. Wouldn't you rather them go to heaven and not hell?" The programmers said that if I killed the children, they would go to hell and be evil all their days because my spirit would take them over. If I molested them, they would go to heaven, and the programmers would make sure that my spirit didn't take them over. Either way I looked at it, I was evil, and I was going to have to do something bad, but I always tried to choose the lesser evil. The reality is that I never chose anything. I was forced to do things—physically, mentally, spiritually, and emotionally forced! I never had a choice! This locked the denial into my mind. Of course, I never ever would want anybody to know those evil things about me. And my programmers said they would keep it a secret if I choose to never turn on them and say that they were evil. The programmers had to be "the perfect family" in my mind, or they would tell the truth about who I was to everybody. They would send me back to India or to the hospital, and I didn't ever want that to happen. There was terror constantly!

Another country they sent me to was Africa. The goal of sending me to Africa was to seal a foundation of false importance, false gifts, and false power. They had me play the role of the queen of the Africans. This meant that every man "wanted" me and wanted to have sex with me. As the African programmers were raping me, I felt like I was to blame because they kept saying, "You want this. You want this power." The confusion was that somewhere inside, I did want the power to have someone want me, because no one had ever wanted me or chosen me. I hated myself. The programmers said I was completely evil because I wanted them to be my sex slaves. I just believed what they told me. I was treated like an animal, not adored for who I was; I was used for sex. The Illuminati said that because I was a mixed breed, I could save the Africans and give them some blood other than dog blood. And then when they raped me, my programmers said I was less than a dog. So no matter what I did, I was always treated as less than human.

The objective of the Illuminati was to make me hate all other nationalities other than those in the Illuminati bloodline. The Illuminati wanted me to see that all people who were not Illuminati were trying to make me look bad and destroy me. The programmers wanted me to hate all nationalities by convincing all of the parts of my mind that I was hated by everyone who is of different nationality. If the programmers could do that, then they could keep a foundation of denial in my mind about America—the foundation of denial that says, “America is perfect, and I live in America, so I’m perfect, and my family is perfect.” One of the ways the programmers did this was by lining up Jewish people in front of me and saying that they had to be a sacrifice. If they were not a sacrifice for all of the other people, I would have to strap a bomb to my chest where my heart was and blow up thousands of people. So I had to choose between blowing up thousands of people and killing a few people and saving thousands. The only way that I would not be a killer for eternity was to do what they said. So I was physically forced to do what the evil people said. I was trying to find the lesser evil choice. The programmers said that the Jewish people who were lined up in front of me would go to heaven because they were a sacrifice. They told me that God was planning on sending them to hell, but by doing this, I would be saving them from hell. I was torn by grief in my core like the ripping of flesh from a person’s body. I believe that the physical pain would have been easier than the torment I had to endure emotionally.

They took the symbols of the crescent moon, the sun, and the tree; and put them together to form a symbol that they used in rituals. If you look at the archdiocese logo, you will know they use the same symbols. The archdiocese is linked specifically to the Illuminati and Islam. In the rituals, the goddess Isis and the sun god Rah were used to create a demonic stronghold. The programmers took the blood of the people whom they beheaded and poured their blood all over me. I wanted to die because of the torment and pain this caused me. But I was more afraid of death. I was afraid of the evil that the programmers said I would do after death. This “programmed fear” executed by the Illuminati was to keep me from killing myself. They planned it that way so they would not lose the time and money that they had invested in my programming. If I killed myself, that would be a loss to their rank in the Illuminati, meaning their programming had failed. During the Isis rituals, the programmers also brought a child into the room, and they told me that it was my child. I never knew if the children were mine or not, because they always killed or took my children from me. When they brought in the child they said was mine, they told me that my child had to be a sacrifice too. The programmers said there had to be an adult sacrifice and a child sacrifice. The sacrifice was needed because Jesus didn’t die for us. I had to have a sacrifice that was not Jesus. The evil people took the sword they used to behead a person and forced my hands onto the sword and forced the sword into the child’s heart. I was way beyond the capability to handle this pain and devastation, so my mind divided into thousands of pieces. I was told that if I was a “faithful one,” my child would rise again. They said that my sacrifice at the end would cause him to have life instead of death. All of the soldiers, the programmers called the “faithful ones.” We were told that we would be joined together at the end. Since I had a sacrifice, I had earned the right to only have to kill a few people at the end. I would have a bomb strapped to me at the end and blow myself up, instead of having to blow up thousands or millions of people. At the end, I would have a sacrifice and end up being a virgin. Therefore, my eternal fate of being evil and killing people, like the programmers said, would be over finally. The evil people continually tried to use the conscience and love that Papa God put within me to torment me and use it against me.

After the different foundational programming throughout the world was complete, the programmers were ready to begin the infiltration of their "product" into society. I was taken to a very small town in Kentucky. The town had a German name. My role had been programmed into me since I was born. I was the "Kentucky girl." There was another boy that was brought to the same house that I was taken to, and when we were around people, the programmers said he was my brother. When we were alone, the programmers said he was "my Jesus." They tortured me and forced both of us to mate. The programmers tortured him to believe that he had to control me, so I wouldn't be evil. Our programmers forced us to believe that they gave us to each other because we were so evil that we needed each other to get the evil out of us. By having sex all the time, we were told we were purifying our blood. So they intentionally created a strong bond between us. Then they brought in other people whom we would have to have sex with in front of each other. They would tell each of us individually that we were evil and disgusting for having sex with our siblings. The programmers warned us that people couldn't ever know about it, or they would put us back into the hospital that we were born in. They also would pit us against each other. They told me that he said I was fat and ugly. They told him that I was disgusted with him. When they did this programming against each other, they put us in a glass room so we could see what was happening to each other. They had speakers in the room that broadcast what they wanted us to hear. They said that this was the voice of God. So we had no one to trust. They never allowed us to get too close to each other or anyone, because we might get free.

Chapter 10

School

"To the pure, all things are pure, but to the defiled and unbelieving, nothing is pure; but both their minds and their consciences are defiled. They profess to know God, but they deny him by their works. They are detestable, disobedient, unfit for any good work." Titus 1:15-16

The school I was put in was a programming site. It had a German origin and roots. The programmers had keys to the school. The male programmer was a teacher, a coach, and a counselor at the school. The Illuminati set up specific corporate sites in towns, cities, and states. These sites were for programming and experiments. Eventually, they said that those sites would be used for concentration camps for those who did not have the "perfect" Aryan bloodline. When the rituals were done in the school, it created a demonic grid for the Illuminati to channel in demons. This location was strategically chosen to maximize the amount of demons and power that could be brought through the portal that they had established. Portals are established on a global scale to control people's minds in that area. This portal is established by torturing a person through electric shock till they ask for the demons. The reason the victims ask for the demons is there is no other way to get them to stop the torture. There are no other options. The programmers electrocuted my head, and the pain was so intense that I sometimes would faint. This type of torture causes divisions in the mind of the person, and they specifically create parts to hold the demons. I was told the demons were my friends and that they would take the pain away. There is a legal right created for the demons to be there, because the evil people had gotten my will through torture to submit to the demons to allow them in. Another way the programmers get victims to accept the demons is by threatening to kill someone if they do not accept the demons. We are promised that the demons will protect the person who has been threatened. When the demons have more power, more torture is done. When there is human sacrifice and rape, the demons strengthen, and the programmer gets more power.

I went to a school that had kindergarten through twelfth grade in the same building. They were doing experiments concerning torture and how the brain works there. The experiments were to see how the brain functioned and how they could control my brain and other victims' brains more. For example, they would tell me that my brain was responding like the brain of a pedophile, and then they would show me a screen with a brain that lit up when showed a picture of a child, and then they paired that with sexual stimulation. They said that my brain lighting up was proof that I was sexually stimulated by a child, and, therefore, I was a pedophile. I was terrified of myself because I thought I was an evil pedophile. They said that they would torture and rape me to keep me from doing evil to children. I thought I needed them to control me and that I had to have them so I would not be a pedophile.

The Illuminati uses the Wizard of Oz programming as a foundational program. The Illuminati represents the wizard, the New World Order. Every detail of the Wizard of Oz was used for torture. The rainbow was the denial overlay of the demonic realm. The evil people said the rainbow was a sign that God hated the mixed breeds and would destroy us if we did not perform perfectly. During one of the rituals, they poured bubblegum-smelling pink liquid on me, and I had to click my heels to get "over the rainbow." There was a machine that was used to stimulate my genitals over and over. I was told that if I achieve an orgasm, I would be allowed in Oz. Dorothy was in a dream state in the movie, and they would tell me over and over that all of the evil they did to me was a dream. I was tortured to believe that none of the torture, rape, and hell I went through was actually happening. They would give me drugs to make me feel disconnected and feel like I was in an altered state. This made me feel like I was going crazy. They said I would go crazy if I didn't stop thinking about what they did to me and just think about how perfect they were. They would stimulate my sex parts and say over and over that they were perfect. They said that I needed a new heart, mind, and courage. They would dissect a human in front of me and say it was my fault that they died. The organs were taken out of the person and planted within other people to form a blood tie with the people who died. They said that there was always Oz behind the curtain, watching to see what I did, and they would expose me if I tell anybody what was happening to me. The monkeys were represented as demons. The victims were told that we are monkeys with no genetic purity and who are completely evil. A part of my mind that was divided was named Monkey. I was forced to pick at people's skin and head like a monkey does. Oz was a specific language they had in the spirit realm. They communicated in different frequencies so they would not be heard or found out in the natural realm. This entire book is about evil. To follow the yellow brick road meant to follow the denial to the end until the New World Order takes over and gives the mixed breeds a new heart, mind, and courage to carry out the plans of the Illuminati.

There were German "Grand Mother" and "Grand Father" positions. I was supposed to take over the Grand Mother position as an elite if I married who they set up for me to marry. The programmers said that was the only way I would be pure enough. They looked like normal grandparents in society, but the torture with them was hideous. They dressed in military uniforms when not in public. They had a basement that had an old furnace in it, and they would burn people alive in it. They lived beside a railroad track, and he worked on the railroad. They said they would send me back to India to the train if I was not perfect enough. There was complete isolation in India, and they had created a whole system in my mind of denial about America. The Grand Mother would give me sugar bread for the sugar programming to take over, and then they would take me in the back room with body parts lying around all over the room and rape and torture me. I was terrified of that room. She said I could have a pure descent if I performed well enough. She would buy the specific clothes and makeup that the buyers wanted me to wear and then sell me "to make her money back," she said. I was prepped by bringing up the parts that had the ability to act the way she wanted me to act. Then they would sell me to the German programmers whom they were working with. The town that they were in were also concentration campsites, and there were many German programmers there.

The other programmers posing as grandparents also did a lot of military programming on me, as well as Native American rituals. They would scalp people and filet their bodies. As they did this evil, they called in demons to cover the evil they were doing. When you see people in places of influence speak to people, they are calling in demons and asking the demons for trances to fall upon the people so they will not detect the evil words that are being said to them under the surface. The demons cover their evildoing, making it all possible. The demons are channeled in, and people see a veil, instead of who they really are. They had a garage where people were worked on like cars, dissected and put back together. The male programmer's cover was a mechanic. It's important to know that these people hide in every area of life; they are doctors, lawyers, teachers, pastors. They choose to do this anywhere they can cover up what they do. The demons influence the minds of people during the trances to introduce the evil people's thoughts and ideas into their minds. The trance causes the people to go into denial, and they do not perceive anything about the evil that is going on. It numbs the people so that they are constantly in a fog of denial.

There were two people who posed as my aunt and uncle. They lived on a farm that had racehorses. This was in the wealthy racehorse section of Kentucky. They had gated land, with a large farm and fake bed-and-breakfast that was used for programming. They took me to the horse races and sold me to the buyers who were looking for Southern programmed victims. There would be people who flew in from all over the world to buy people, not horses. They were also there to test the "Kentucky programming." They were looking for girls who were able to be the southern sickening sweet denial role that the men would want to purchase. The people who posed as my aunt and uncle were very involved in the political system and drug cartel in Kentucky. There were police officers who were involved in covering up all of what was going on at the horse races, because they were paid a high price. They created a false pride within the victims through the high price they were sold at. In reality, we were treated like animals. They gave us dog commands, and we wore dog collars. We walked on a stage naked and were auctioned off. They rated us with numbers. If we did not do well in the auction, they put us in coffins and said that we were better off dead, that is, if we couldn't earn money for them. When I got a high price, they said I was prideful and showing off, and tortured the other girls because they said I was prideful. I hated myself for liking that I was sold at a high price; I just wanted some person any person to genuinely love me. Unfortunately, that would never happen until I was in my late twenties. The bed-and-breakfast that the programmers ran had a code name and was where programmers and traffickers could test out their product.

The other programmers who posed as my aunt and uncle were evil too, and they had other victims in their houses. There was another girl my age and a boy a couple of years younger, and they were supposed to be my cousins. I was pit against the girl. She had blonde hair and blue-green eyes, and they said she was a pure breed. So in the denial world, the everyday world, the programmers were pretending to be a normal family. In this pretend life that people saw daily, the programmers told me that I could be better than my cousin if I pretended well enough. They made sure I knew that she was always better in the Illuminati world, the world where bloodline was of upmost importance. She was better with the torture, rape, and programming. We were always in competition with each other. They said she was smart and I was stupid. If I acted stupid enough, they promised me that I wouldn't have to do the torture on other people that they forced me to do. They never kept that promise, of course. They said that I didn't have to do the torture if I would just try to make the other girl angry with me. I was told that if I faked being stupid she would live. She thought I was acting stupid, so she would have to do the torture.

Every single victim is programmed against each other. They don't want to take the chance that we would feel genuine love from each other. They were aware that genuine love would destroy their programming. They knew the truth. They knew the Word in detail and rejected it, because they wanted to be God. There was a boy whom we had to compete to get as a "Jesus" sacrifice for us. This person, they told us, was the one who would cover our sins. They called me "precious," and that meant that the core of my being was like Gollum, the evil creature in The Lord of the Rings who was taken over by the ring. The ring was the goal, and this meant sex. The other programmers who were the last posing aunt and uncle were in charge of getting me sexually where I was supposed to be. She would say she was a victim, and then they would act like they were raping her. I felt sorry for her. She said, "If you feel sorry for me and I'm the victim, then I will show you how to be the best at sex." I thought she was sincere, but she would laugh at me when I had sex and say, "I'm the victim because you're so evil." She told me that if I said she was the victim, I was allowed to stay looking young, like she was. They called demons in to slow my aging, and I was told I would be left alone if I cease to be salable, so I received the demons.

The evil people had already set up programming to cause division in my mind and for me to think I had a twin. This was done to cause complete division between the left and right side of my brain and body. I was tortured to believe the left side was evil and the right side was the perfect princess (denial). They told me that I was a twin—that there was a good twin and an evil twin, and I was the evil twin. There was a girl who was posed as my best friend by the evil people. The programmers dressed us alike and made us look alike. She was a victim from birth also. She was supposed to be the good twin. We were constantly made to be in competition with each other. If she was better at something, then I was tortured and put in a room by myself until "I got better." Every second, they would say she's prettier, smarter, better than I was. This caused a love-hate relationship because I thought she was my sister. They told me that I was always labeled the evil person. She was tortured to believe the same way. Her programmer was the secretary at the school we went to, and she was the gatekeeper. The reason her programmer was called the gatekeeper was she scheduled the reprogramming and watched to see how the programming was holding up in school.

When they established a specific programming, we were turned over to another programmer. This programmer was a gymnastics coach. There were many victims he was programming under the disguise of a gymnastics instructor. There were victims who had to compete in gymnastics and get specific ranking from their performance. We were pit against each other on purpose; the instructor had a large sex trafficking business with the gymnastics as a cover. We were taken to competitions and shown as animals doing tricks to see if people wanted to buy us. He took us to a corporate gymnastics camp that had German coaches that were involved with the programming. He was one of my main programmers since age five and continued to be so until my twenties. Since my programming was based on the lie that I was evil, they never allowed me to get too good at anything, including gymnastics. They said I would be too prideful and begin to think I didn't need them anymore to keep me from being evil.

At age five, they took me to a small Baptist church in that town and began to pretend to be active members of the church. The female programmer was disguised as a children's minister, and the male programmer managed the church's cemetery that was at the end of the road where their house was. To people, they looked like normal parents, and no person ever questioned that. There were other people in the church who were programmers that were doing the same thing to me and other victims. The programmers in the church passed the victims back and forth between them, trying out their techniques. I was made to sing in front of the church; this terrified me. Because during the rituals, I had to sing for all of the evil people, and they would score me. If I didn't sing well enough, they would hurt people. I would shake because I was so afraid, and my voice would tremble. They always said I wasn't good enough, and people got hurt. The pastor at that church started getting to close to me, so they focused on taking him and his wife down. They began to slander him within the church. The female programmer had the key to the parsonage under the disguise that she was taking care of the parsonage for the church. She would do rituals with torture and rape when the pastor and his wife weren't there. They would put the pastor's picture up in front of me while they were torturing me, and they would say that he was really the person that was torturing me. They said over and over that he had told them to do what they were doing. They also told me the pastor and his wife had a mentally handicapped daughter whom they had put in the mental hospital because they didn't want her. They said that I was the mentally handicapped daughter they were referring to. The programmers in the church started telling everybody that's the pastor's wife was a whore, and that she was trying to have sex with all of the people in the church. They were setting a foundation to destroy the pastor. They made sure they had a backup plan, that if my programming ever started breaking down, they would have a "fall guy."

The evil people showed me the Jesus video. Each detail of Jesus's life was perverted for me. The programmers said when Jesus came to earth, He had sex with Satan and expected all of us to do the same. The evil people said Jesus was not raised from the dead for me. So I had to try and get the men who were dressed like Jesus sexually excited so that they would be "raised" from the dead. The "Holy Spirit coming" was a sexual experience according to the programmers. This was when the Holy Spirit would ejaculate in your mouth, and then you had to speak false tongues of demons. They would hang us up on crosses and say we had to stay there until we were good enough for Jesus to die for us, and we never were. They did rituals in the pastor's office, because they had the key to the church. During these rituals, they put pictures of the pastor in front of me. They said that when I went to see the pastor, I had done evil things. They did the rituals with the cross in the church, and they would hold me under the water in the baptismal and say that they could only let me up when I was saved, "perfect." So since I couldn't be perfect enough, they pretended like they gave me an alternative. They did sexual things under the water to make me have an orgasm; that meant I was perfect and saved. My programmer was the overseer of the cemetery for the church. They would put the remains of people in the holes for burial without anyone ever knowing. They also had a tombstone for a child that was supposed to be my brother, whom they said I killed. The programmers said that I shouldn't have been born. He should have been born. They couldn't get their way and be in control at the church, so the evil people ended up getting the pastor fired, and they replaced him with someone from the cult.

There was another child who was brought into the house as well. They told me I was his mom, even though I wasn't old enough to be his mom. I took care of him and was like his mom. I bonded with him because I took care of him daily, and then they forced me to have sex with him. He had blonde hair and blue eyes; they said he was of pure descent. They forced me to be his handler. That meant that I had to hurt him, and if I didn't, they would hurt him much worse. This was the most hideous type of torture because they used my heart that chose Papa God against me. I would rather have been tortured myself, then be forced to hurt him. I was given no choice. He was forced to be very quiet. It made me angry because they told me that he was being quiet because he feared me because I was so evil. They said he was always trying to tell me I was evil by being silent. I was only allowed to sleep in the doghouse behind the house, even though they had a room "for show" in the house that was supposed to be mine. I was treated worse than an animal. If I performed sexually, I was allowed out of the doghouse. I was kept in isolation there, with no food and with bugs and mice crawling on me. If I didn't act perfectly, they would threaten to put me back in the doghouse. The threats would be that they would kill the kids at school and the other victims if I didn't pretend like things were perfect. Also, there was a place under the stairs in the garage that I would have to stay sometimes. When they allowed me to be in the house, I had to be doing something like cleaning or having sex or whatever they told me I had to do. I would sleep in the baby bed of the little boy who was supposed to be my child but only if I had sex with him. He was used as leverage against me constantly, and I would do what they wanted if they would not hurt him.

The programmers put me in pretty, pink princess pageants and forced me to pretend that all was perfect. They bleached my hair in the sun and made me look blonde, and said if I acted perfect enough, I would earn my way to heaven. I won a beauty pageant, and there was another victim who was chosen to be in the pageant with me, and she lost. The other boys who were in her house were forced to rape me; that is what they said I got for winning. The girl who lost the pageant ended up getting the boy I couldn't have, because she was a pure breed. This was a boy who was blonde and had blue eyes, and they called him "the divine." He bred with me and the girl they called my twin, and we had to compete for him. He never liked or chose me they said, because I was too evil. He only used me for sex. My programmer would have sex with him in front of me and say that I was too evil, fat, and ugly for him to ever want me.

The evil people channeled in demons and asked for the power to shape-shift into werewolves during rituals. They would call for the demons to take over them and shift them into the form of a werewolf. They would search for prey. They would kill and eat what they killed. This is shown clearly in the ritual movie Wolf, where the man is chained down to keep him from shape-shifting during the night, and doing evil things in the night. He always gets loose and is able to go kill. They would make me wear a werewolf mask, and they told me that I was evil. They said I would get free so they had to shape-shift to keep me from doing evil. The terror that I felt when I saw the demons possess them and their entire being shift into a werewolf was unspeakable. I was terrified of myself most of all, though, because I thought I was a werewolf. I thought that was my core, and I thought I was uncontrollable. I didn't want to be evil. I wanted to genuinely love people and be kind to people. They made sure I was petrified of myself. Since I had already chosen Papa God at my core, I belonged to Papa God. The demons didn't take over me and make me shape-shift into that being, but I didn't know that truth. I also saw them shape-shift into a creature that looked like Gollum in The Lord of the Rings. They would crawl around like an animal. They said that was the core of who I was, and when they weren't around to keep me under control, that was what I looked like. They continually said they were only doing what they were doing to show me how evil I was. They said my evil nature made them do what they did. They said that the evil within me possessed them and caused them to shape-shift into zombies and vampires that ate people and drank their blood. I never questioned what they said, because ever since I was born, I had been shown dead people that they said I killed while I was asleep. I would wake up, and there would be dead people all around me, and then they showed me videos of someone who looked like me doing evil things. This was how they kept me under their control for so long. The movies and TV shows today are just desensitizing people to the fact that there are really people who do these things daily in this country. Where do you think the entertainment industry gets the ideas for the movies? This really happens; it's not a movie.

The evil people have knowledge of the way the brain and body works, since some of them are chemists, biologists, neurologists, doctors, and scientists. The body has nerves that send electrical impulses to the brain, heart, and major organs that communicate what to do in the body. The evil people have had scientists for years studying how to control the nerves of a human being. They use the process of sending electrical impulses to try and control the entire nervous system. They have control over the person's body remotely. The Illuminati programmers use electricity for torture and control; rituals are done over the nerves and major organs to cause them to be under their control. There are demons that are assigned to the nerves to cause them to flex and react the way that the programmers want them to. This is also used as a major trigger, because they have convinced us as victims to believe that they are able to get us to do whatever they want us to do physically. When the mind believes a lie, the body is affected in how the body reacts. The evil people plant tiny electrodes in all of the nerves to send electrical impulses throughout the body creating migraines, pain in the victim's heart, and other physical pain. With being physically controlled remotely, they convince the victims to another degree that there is no way out.

At school, I had to act perfect, to play the role of the perfect princess. There were some teachers who were programmers, and the principal and assistant principal were programmers. This was a small elementary and high school (from kindergarten to twelfth grade). I was in the same building for twelve years. Each teacher I had each year was planned ahead of time so that every move I made was controlled. I had only denial friends (friends who were chosen for me), who were victims themselves. To anybody looking at us, they would have said, “That is a perfect family,” but it was hell. I was trained to act the way they wanted me to act. I had to sit and watch hours and hours of TV and then act out what I saw. If I didn’t perfect what I saw done by the actress on TV, I was tortured. Watching the TV was work. I had to memorize every move that was made and every word that was said. I had to be an actress in my life every second of every day. I was depressed and suicidal all the time, but nobody ever asked any questions the entire time. They saw a “family” involved in school, church, and normal activities that looked “good” on the outside. People would tell me that my depression was the result of my selfishness and spoiled nature. I was forced to be very active within the school as a cover for what they were doing to me. I was a cheerleader in band color guard, and I was voted band and basketball queen. I was never allowed to be the homecoming queen, because they said I was too evil. The word home meant sex, and if you had a “homecoming,” you had an orgasm. They would stimulate my genitals over and over and over to cause a division in my mind and make me feel tormented, and never allow an orgasm. I was terrified of orgasms, because they would kill someone or electrocute them every time they allowed an orgasm. They would say, “You’re evil,” “You liked that,” “You wanted that.” I blamed myself for the person dying, and I hated feeling sexual. The sexual feeling meant death and torture and orgasms meant I was 100 percent completely evil.

The house they lived in was in front of cornfields where rituals were performed, just like in the movie Children of the Corn. The exact rituals from the movie took place. There was furniture in the house, but I was not allowed to sit on the furniture unless I had sex or if they were videoing me. At the end of the road was the church cemetery, and the Texas Chainsaw Massacre was another ritual that they would carry out. They would cut up the people from the rituals and freeze them in the huge deep freezer in the garage. Then they would cook them into meals and force us to eat them. They made meals with a lot of sugar and fried foods, food that would taste good and cause a denial reaction. This caused confusion because of what they used in the meals. Then after I ate what they gave me, they would say, “You just ate ___,” and it was a dog that I had had to care for and bond with or a person that I had bonded with. They did that on purpose to convince me that I was evil and rip my mind into many different pieces because the pain and torment was so severe. Another movie that has rituals throughout is Nightmare on Elm Street. They would give me drugs to make me go to sleep, and then they would bring someone dressed like Freddy Kruger into the room, and I would be disoriented. The person would chase me in a building, and I could never get free. Finally, I would stop running because I couldn’t run anymore due to the drugs. Then I would pass out. They would move me into the room that they set up to look like my room. I would wake up, and they would say I was crazy and that I dreamed all of what happened. I thought I was crazy. They would say over and over, “You’re crazy. You don’t even know what’s real.” They would lock me in a cage until I told them that I made all of that up and that I was crazy. Most horror shows are taken from rituals. Another movie with rituals used by the Illuminati is Chucky. They had dolls and stuffed animals that they would display in my fake room on shelves. There was witchcraft spells and voodoo that was spoken over each of the dolls, and they used them to hurt Christians. They named each of them after the people they were praying against. They would tell me that all of the Christians were trying to destroy me, and how much Christians hated me. They told me if I didn’t do the voodoo over the Christians, they would tell everybody how evil I was. Then when they would force me to do the voodoo and curses, they would say that I wanted to curse the Christians and that I was evil to curse them. They said that I was like Chucky, and that no matter what I did, I wouldn't die; I would always be killing people. I have had many people say, "Why didn't you just kill yourself?" The reason I didn't kill myself is they told me that I would go to a place where I would kill people constantly and not have anybody to control me. I was more afraid of that than of staying alive and being tortured continuously.

Chapter 11

Reprogramming

"Everyone who does evil hates the light, and will not come into the light for fear that their deeds will be exposed." John 3:20

I was taken to Florida many times, and I had to walk the beach like normal vacationers do. Unfortunately for me, programmers and traffickers would watch me from the motel balconies. They would watch to see how well I performed and if they wanted to buy me. When they did purchase me, a ritual would take place, and they would "test" me out. This was a way that programmers showed off their project. If their programming stood up to the testing, then the programmers would get more power and prestige in the Illuminati. If we did not do well, our specific programmers would go into a room with the other programmers and act like they were being tortured because of us. A part would be split off intentionally to think that it was our responsibility to keep the programmers from being tortured. They would torture me with electrocution, at the same time, to reinforce that I was at fault. Then, afterward, I felt great guilt and shame for my programmers being punished for my behavior. I would be buried in the sand and left there overnight with only an opening for my mouth so I could breathe. There were marks all over my body from insects that bit me, and I was gasping for breath the entire night. I was petrified; then my programmers would come back to where I was and say, "will you be faithful?" That was a question that meant would we fight in the end? I said yes. My programmers just laughed and said, "You're crazy! We don't get tortured by anyone. We are not a mixed breed like you." I thought I was protecting them and they were just tricking me again. While at the beach, they also had remote locations where they took me to. I was always blindfolded while being taken to corporate rituals. This was so I wouldn't be able to tell anyone exactly where we were. There were cages that they put in the water with the victims in them. They picked locations where there were sharks swimming in that area. They opened the cages and told us to swim as fast as we could to the surface. I was in complete terror. I couldn't swim fast. They told us that if we ever told anybody about anything that happened to us, they would bring us back and let the sharks eat us.

On my sixteenth birthday, I was taken out of town to a hotel where there were corporate rituals done. There were many other victims that were taken there also. There were boys who were paired with us, and they said that if I didn't perform well enough in the ritual, I wouldn't get to have a Jesus who would rescue me. They dressed me up like a witch and forced me to cast spells and curse people on this night. If I didn't do what they told me to do, they said they would kill the other kids who were there. They said the witchcraft powers would give me control over myself from being evil, so I followed through and said what they told me to say. That night, they burned down the large garage that was behind their house, and they said that I did it. They said I wanted to be a witch and to curse people and that I was trying to cover up how bad I was. They were trying to give me a false sense of power like the witch in the Wizard of Oz. The witch had power over all of the "monkeys," demons, to do what she said, and see in the spirit what needed to be seen. If I stayed like Dorothy and forgot the truth about what the evil people were doing to me, I wouldn't have to die, and I could have power over the evil that I thought was within me. The truth was they were trying to get rid of evidence of the killings they did, with starting the fire in the garage. They said that there had to be a sacrifice at every birthday so that I would be allowed to keep on living.

The evil people would impregnate me purposely and cause me to bond with the baby. They would tell me I would get to keep the baby. Before the baby was fully formed, they would induce me and make me go through labor. There was a time where the baby boy's head was being born, and they cut his head off as he was going out of my body. They said that I was evil and I was Satan because of what happened to him. As I have gotten healing for this from Papa God, He has shown me He is holding my baby boy. And there will be a day when I will get to hold him! Over and over, they tricked me to accept the demons and spirits so they could have more power. The Illuminati witchcraft is what they use to cause me to have to go through tunnel after tunnel of consciousness to get to the Illuminati conversations that happen on different frequency levels.

The level of torture that I was put through to make me submit to the demonic was beyond what the mind can comprehend. I had to take the electrical power and demons, or they would kill children and slit them open and let their body parts fall out on me. Just writing that is hideous, but I experienced it. I do not tell this for shock value or to get attention. I tell the extent and details of the programming and torture because Papa God told me to. It may not be politically correct or something that gives me more creditability, but I'm not seeking those things. I want the darkness to be exposed and for every single victim to have an opportunity to be free from the terror of torture and slavery. I just want people to be free. If I didn't take all of the demonic, then I wouldn't be able to get the people put back together, the evil people told me. As I was allowing Papa God to heal this, He showed me all of the children dancing and laughing with Him in heaven completely free from pain. That gave me great comfort!

The programmers chose men who were victims for me to be paired with in high school. There was always an agenda behind this. One of the men was put there to bring competition between the girl victims. If we performed well enough, we were allowed to be his chosen one. There were always two worlds that we had to live in, the denial world and the Illuminati world. In the denial world, I was always paired with a man who controlled me. This was done so that the programmers would reinforce the denial "perfect family, perfect life." I genuinely wanted to be accepted and wanted by someone. They knew this, so they said if I pretended well enough, I would always be allowed to have the man to control me. In the ritual, Illuminati world, the man was always with another girl. I was never chosen. This caused jealousy and competition with all of the victims.

One of the men whom I was paired had an older brother who was the designated "fall" for a crime that was done by the police. The police in that small town were very involved in the rituals. There was a police officer who lived next to us so that he could be a "watcher," making sure that no one got close to the ritual site. He was involved with the hell I was going through. He made sure there were no calls to the police for any noise and alerted the programmers if there was anything and anybody that came near the house. The police in this town were benefiting financially for being involved with the Illuminati.

Another girl that they set me up against in high school was a girl who was blonde, and they told me she was pure breed. She always was put in competition with me to get the guy in the denial world. My programmers would say over and over I was losing my power in the denial world, that she was going to take over. So each guy they paired me with, they paired her with as well; there was constant turmoil. She was allowed to be with them for a long time, and I was only allowed to be with them for a few months. They said that was because I was too crazy and out of control.

I was taken to the Nashville airport the majority of the time, to fly to the rituals and to be trafficked. They would dress me up specifically to what the programmer and trafficker asked for, and I would walk up to the sidewalk of where people were dropped off for flights. The programmers and traffickers would see me and contact my programmers to let them know if they wanted to purchase me. Then I would be put on a plane. Nashville is a hub for traffickers. There were a lot of pictures taken of each victim who was brought to the airport, and the secret network decided who got which victim.

There are a lot of victims who are sent to Christian camps to be programmed. Christian camps are targeted by the cult because it is easy to blend in there. The programmers know who the victims from birth are, and they also target kids or teenagers who have been abused severely previously to the extent that their mind has split. The programmers have an opening in their mind through that division; then they can continue the abuse. They always bring in the victims from birth and force us to abuse the ones who are disassociated so that if they ever remember, they will remember about the victims, not the perpetrators. This is done as leverage—another way to get the victims to do what they are forced to do. They paired me with another girl at camp. She was blonde and was pure breed, they said. We were put together to control each other and compete so we would be good enough in college. She lived in Tennessee, and they sent me there to be programmed before college. I was taken to a college there for a cheerleading college camp and ritualized there. They took me to restaurants in downtown Nashville to sell me. I was trafficked, ritualized, and sold on different Tennessee and Kentucky college campuses' to other programmers.

After high school, they sent me to a college with programmers in that area, taking over as my handlers. This college was a large university in Kentucky. All of my classes were chosen for me, with programmers that were posing as professors in them. Psychology was chosen as my major. So that I could see how the psychiatrists and psychologists label the things happening to me as symptomatic of paranoid schizophrenia. This was done to reinforce the fear that they would tell people that I was crazy if I ever told what was happening to me. There was a professor who was a programmer on that campus who used the Kegel exercises and theory in a human sexuality class. He was programming and torturing me and other victims. His programming was based on the programming of Kegel that they had already done to me as a child. They forced my body to feel sexually stimulated and forced me to do the Kegel exercises over and over. This was done to get me to feel crazy when sexual feelings were forced onto me. The main programmers told me, along with the professor, that it was my fault; I wanted to be raped. So I thought that it was my fault he raped me. I was forced to join a sorority at this university. The sorority was connected to the masons and Illuminati. The girl whom I was programmed with and posed as my best friend was also a member of this sorority. We had to compete to see who would be the best in the sorority rituals. There were many victims within this sorority. A well-known jewelry and clothing distributor was the symbol that was used for the sorority. The mascot was the lion. "Satan" was the focus and leader of the sorority.

The girl whom the programmers used to pose as my cousin lived with me in the dorm. There was a war constantly between us. We had a demonic competitive program set up ahead of time. So we had to constantly be working to get better than the other. If we did not, we were told they would kill people until we improved. In every situation, I was constantly threatened that they would torture and kill my younger brother, to whom I had had to play the role of a mother. For most of the victims, we had to take care of boys who had to play the "Jesus" role for us.

My main program was the perfect princess programming. I had to make sure everybody thought my life was perfect and that I had the perfect family. I tried out for college cheerleader, and the director was a programmer. He said I needed to lose weight to be a cheerleader. Then the starvation began. They told me what I could eat and could not eat. I was allowed to eat apples to remind me of how evil I was. I was called Eve and judged for choosing to eat the apple. Also, I was allowed to eat pretzels. Pretzels represented the body of Christ and that I had to have sex with Jesus and every person in order for them to live. I was forced to drink Diet Coke because they said it was laced with cocaine and would control me to keep me from doing evil. Pizza was a big ritual symbol. Pizza meant a sexual act had to be performed on a child. You see, this symbol recently has been exposed through what most people say is a conspiracy theory called Pizzagate. It is very real, and there is an enormous Illuminati pedophile ring at the top of government.

The programmers picked a man for me to be with; he was my controller at college. His job was to have sex with me and make sure I didn't do evil things. He was a cheerleader also, so he was with me all the time. By this time, I weighed about ninety pounds. My programming was starting to break down. I was not able to keep the perfect princess programming going. The starvation was done to get all of the parts of my mind to remember being in the hospital. Then I would choose to continue to run the perfect programming. If I didn't keep the program running, they would send me back to the hospital where I was tortured in from birth. At this time, some of the memories began flooding back of the rape I endured. I couldn't see the faces, but my programming was starting to crumble a tiny bit.

The Grand Mother would have me write poems by different parts of my mind to see what I would remember. When I finished the poems, she would take me to her basement with the furnace and burn people alive. She said if I ever told anybody anything, I would be the reason people burned alive. My mind was forced to create new parts to push down what I had witnessed. The horror of seeing and smelling a human being burned alive is incomprehensible. The worst torture was seeing the pain they were enduring and not being able to do anything to save them. I blamed myself for writing the poems. I thought I had caused them to be in torment. She kept saying over and over that it was my fault. I was so confused because she told me to write the poems. She tricked me over and over; she said I wanted to write the poems and that I was lying that she did not ask me to write them. I thought I was going crazy. I never knew what was true even about my own thoughts and feelings, because of the programming. I was forced to write; then I was tortured about what I had written. It was a double bind, just like my entire life had been.

The evil people would say, "I'm going to kill ____. I'm going to hurt ____. It's your responsibility to protect them." Then I would be sent out into the woods to try to protect them from being killed. They would always find the person and kill them before I found them. Then they would say, "Didn't you hear me? I said I was going to kill them. You should have protected them. It was your fault that they were killed. I knew you were evil." I questioned my motives continuously. I asked myself all the time. I always thought I had an ulterior motive, that I had some evil core planning ways to manipulate and deceive people. Since I was an infant, this is what I have always been told about who I am.

The programming was reiterated daily. I was told I had to do "more." I had to have sex "more." I was a mixed breed, so no matter how much "more" I did, I always had to do "more." This meant rape every day all day. I had to be tortured and raped "more" because I could never be "more" for anybody. I was just always not enough. They would tie me up and chant "more" over and over and stimulate my genitals with a machine. They would stop the machine and start it over and over and over.

There was a new pastor who was brought into the Baptist Church; he was a programmer during my high school years and after. They did many rituals in the parsonage and behind the house. My programmers were working with them to do rituals to put the face of the pastor they got fired, in my memories. If I didn't see the pastor's face, I would be put back in the hospital where they put me when I was little. They assigned me a psychiatrist, who tortured me and took me to the children's psychiatric hospital in the same town of the college I went to. He did rituals in the back rooms of the psychiatric hospital. He would put smelling salts to my nose and hold me down, and he raped me over and over. He said that if I continued the princess programming and forgot all the things that were starting to surface, he would marry me and be my controller. They bonded me to the psychiatrist in terror by forcing me to have sex and be held by him. He took pictures with me and the children being forced to have sex at the children's psychiatric hospital and said that I wanted it. He said he would show people the pictures and put me in jail if I ever told the truth of what was going on. He gave me a lot of different medications to make me not remember things. I couldn't function any longer. The functioning parts of my mind were beginning to see memories and break down. I wasn't able to continue with cheerleading, sorority, and college. They scrambled to begin to reprogram and cover all of the memories I was starting to have. The girl from my childhood that was my "twin" and I were put in jobs at a children's psychiatric hospital. We were tortured with the children there. Our programmers also took pictures of us being forced to do sexual things to the children, but they said we did it because we liked it. They called us pedophiles. The pastor whom my programmers took down and that the evil people were programming me around had a sister that worked at this same hospital. They told us that the pastor and his wife had decided they wanted the "good twin." They arranged a marriage with one of their family members to infiltrate the pastor's family with the Illuminati. They said since I wasn't able to keep things together, I was the "bad twin" who was left in the hospital.

The first hospital they started to reprogram me in was in Kentucky, and I was paired with a Jewish victim. The reason they did this was to remind me of what they forced me to do to Jewish people. If I didn't stop the memories, they would tell everybody what I did. Then everybody would see that I was evil and make me stay in the hospital. I looked like I had an eating disorder. I was starving, binging, and purging. This was what the programmers were using to control me. The torture and reprogramming in this hospital slowed down the memories for a short time.

There were many Christian ministries that they took me to. They took me to programmers who were specifically targeting Neil Anderson and the Freedom in Christ model of deliverance. The Illuminati look for and study different ministries that are making a difference in setting people free. They begin to discredit and program victims around those ministries so that the ministry will not be able to have any power. The "I am" statements in Freedom in Christ were used specifically. I was strapped down and told that if the "I am" statements were true for me, then I had to take the God position. Being God meant I would be physically forced to make the decisions on who lived or died. They said that God kills people who don't perform well, and if I wanted to be like God, I would have to do the same things God did. So instead, they would read over me the opposite of the "I am" statements. If I believed that I was evil and opposite of God, then I didn't have to be forced to kill anybody or hurt anybody. They programmed me every second to believe that if I ever had any power or thought good things about myself, that meant that I would be out of control.

After reprogramming me in the hospital, they sent me to a different college. This college was infiltrated as well with Illuminati professors and board members; the man posing as my uncle was part of the board at this college. He had a network that he was selling me to in this town in Kentucky where the small college was. I was still getting drugged and programmed by the psychiatrist from the other college town at the same time.

The psychiatrist was setting up different places for me to go to get reprogrammed. There was another male victim who was brought to pair me with at this college. He was a football player, and I was a cheerleader, so we looked like the perfect pair. He had to be Jesus for me and have sex with me all the time to make me good enough. They made our child alters bond to keep us together. This made us choose the demons and whatever they told us we had to choose, in order to keep each other from getting hurt. We always had to be in competition with other victims to be able to keep each other. They brought other girls to have sex with him and would say I was too ugly, fat, and evil for him to choose me. I kept falling apart, and the programming kept breaking down. New memories started surfacing. They continually reprogrammed me with the childhood pastor's face, voice, and pictures over the real memories so they could slander him and bring him down.

They took me to a large Christian hospital in Texas to reprogram me. They had planted a programmer in that hospital who tortured me. The Illuminati always targets Christian hospitals, camps, churches, especially spirit-filled praying churches. This programmer said that he was able to commit me to a mental hospital by saying I was paranoid schizophrenic. He said if I didn't stop remembering, I was going to be put back in the hospital that I was born in. They did rituals to bury those parts that were remembering. I was forced to take a lot of pills and try to kill the parts of my mind that were remembering the truth. The evil people said that I was taken to a hospital to pump my stomach to get the evil parts out and to stop them. The entire reason this was done was so they could call in more demons, because I had chosen to try and kill myself, they said. There were more demons assigned as "friends" to push the memories down. The evil people said the demons would hide the "truth" about me, that I was an evil monster.

Another hospital that they took me to was a well-known hospital in Louisiana. This hospital is supposed to be for sexual abuse victims and perpetrators. They told me that they were sending me there posing as a sexual abuse victim, but they told me the truth was I was there because I was a perpetrator. There were other Illuminati victims there. A victim whose father was a judge was there because all of her memories were starting to surface. All of the parts of her mind were talking and sharing what had happened to her. They said if I continued to allow all of the memories to surface, I would go crazy and look like her. They were trying to destroy the rebellious parts so that I wouldn't start thinking I was able to be on my own. The psychiatrist I was assigned to at this hospital filmed me and forced me to do sexual things to other people. She said if I ever told anybody what was going on, she would show the videos to people and put me in jail where I belonged. She said that molesters were raped every day in jail, and there wouldn't be any end to the torture that I would endure. I was terrified every second of myself, and of them. I had to pretend like the psychiatrist was not evil or face those consequences. I let them bury my alters, and I vowed to them I would forget.

I was also sent to Houston, Texas, to another well-known Christian hospital. There was a programmer assigned specifically to me there. The programmer was physically handicapped and in a wheelchair. They said that I deserved all of the torture and pain because I was the person who caused this man not to be able to walk. I was having detailed memories of all of the satanic rituals beginning to surface. The pastor's face was all I saw. This was because they continued to do all rituals with pictures of his face posted in front of me. The constant threats were that if he wasn't who I saw that was doing the abuse, then they would leave me all alone. As I have said, this was my biggest fear, because of being tortured since infancy to think that I was evil.

The psychiatrist assigned to me flew out to Colorado to reprogram my core. There was a "pseudo" counseling called rebirthing or holding therapy in Colorado where they wrapped you in a blanket, held you down, and supposedly rebonded with you. This had been used in rituals, and they were experimenting with denial programming to use this to reattach with my programmers through torture. This caused the core to submit to their control and to push the anger of what they did to me down. They wrapped me tightly in blankets and repeatedly kissed me on the cheek. This meant that I was a Judas. I was a betrayer if I told anybody the truth about what happened. They said that I had sexual feelings while they were kissing me on the cheek, so this proved that they needed to control me. Being held down, kissed over and over, letting water drip on my face while they cuss and threaten me caused intense rage. They said that I was evil because at the core of my being was a raging evil monster. I was afraid of myself, so I pushed all of that rage down and accepted the demons of denial, that they were good loving parents.

There were corporate rituals done while I was in Colorado, as well. They have many underground military ritual sites in the Colorado mountains. A billionaire, Illuminati leader that is in the news a lot recently and is an ANTIFA funder; funds testing on cloning and artificial intelligence in these areas. He is connected to many previous American presidents. The money of the elite goes to buying the presidency and their agenda in this country. This Illuminati leader has set up cloning research labs that are connected to NASA and the military. This council of the elite have set up Facebook as a ploy to set up this nation. Facebook is used to track billions of people, what they do, where they go, who they talk to, every tiny detail of their life. Facebook has been used for sharing the truth of the gospel, praying for people, funding worthy causes, and much more; so it's not at all the root of the evil. The people who control Facebook are the problem. They are trying to take away our freedoms and liberties without us being aware. It is being used as an avenue to track people and know their exact location at all times. The people who control and monitor Facebook have the ability to send electrical waves to affect the communication in the spirit realm. Demonic forces are sent through the air waves and affect our minds. As I sit here trying to write, I'm in a battle. The devil does not want me to get the truth out to people. I refuse to submit to the fear that the evil people are throwing at me daily. They track my e-mail, my phone, and everywhere I go. I have been harassed continually by them since I got free. They have investigators who know where I'm at 24/7, and they send demonic attacks against me continually. I refuse to back down, though. I have been repeatedly given a mandate from Papa God to share the truth of what happened to me so that other people will be set free. Also, so that people will be aware of how the evil people attack and how to fight them. You may not see the effect of their work now, but they are planning and plotting behind the scenes to bring you down and to take away all of your freedom.

Chapter 12

Their Threats

"For those who are evil will be destroyed, but those who hope in the LORD will inherit the land." Psalms 37:9

I was used as a human shield from conception to protect the evil people from being exposed. They worked continually to put in place lie after lie to make me responsible for them. A particular ritual that was detailed and extensive was meant to remind me continually that if I ever exposed the Illuminati, they would torture my brothers. They hooked up my brothers to electrodes and began to electrocute them. As they were doing this, my brothers were screaming nonstop for me to rescue them. I was ripped inside with despair because I couldn't help them. There were loud speakers in the room, and the evil people said that God was speaking through the loud speakers. He said that I was going to hell because I wasn't rescuing my brothers. God said that I was evil and that my programmers couldn't rescue them, because He wasn't going to rescue them. God wanted to expose me as evil. The programmers were in a room, and they had electrodes on them. They began to flop around and act like they were being tortured, because they told me to flip the switch to save my brothers. Then they began to laugh and say they tricked me. I genuinely thought that they were being tortured and that I was saving my brothers, but they said, "See, you're always trying to destroy us." "Honor your father and mother, and you shall have long life." They would quote this over and over. They said since I didn't honor them, I wouldn't have long life, and I would go to hell. Then they brought a man dressed up like Jesus into the room. They made me put electrodes on him and flip the switch. He pretended to be shocked; then he laughed. I heard what I thought was God over the loud speaker continually telling me that I was evil and that I was going to hell. I told the programmer who was pretending to be Jesus that I hated him and I didn't want him because he was torturing me and my brothers. During my ministry time after being set free, Honest Jesus showed me that He hadn't rejected me, and that He was not mad at me. He understood why I didn't want that man and that He wasn't like the evil people. Papa God understood my anger toward Him because I had been so tortured around Him. As the ritual went on, they brought in a man dressed as the devil. He took my programmers into another room. Then I heard horrible excruciating screams that I thought were my programmers. I thought it was my fault that they went to hell and were being tortured, because I had not been good enough it forced God to judge them. At that time, they took me and put me on the "council." They said if I "honored my father and mother," I would always be good. I sat on a council that condemned all people to death; they were burned alive in front of me. I had no way out. I thought I was getting to stop doing evil by sitting on the council and "honoring my father and mother," but it was just another trick.

There is a demonic baton that is passed from the Illuminati leader I was speaking about earlier to each of the programmers. The baton is passed through the electrical system, through TV, phones, radios, and computers. There are grid systems in place with each survivor, electrical implants put in their skin. This allows them to be tracked continually and electrical impulses pushed through their bodies to trigger what they are programmed to do. The grid systems are also connected to all financial systems of wealth. This grid system allows the evil people to send demonic spirits to steal all financial provision from Christians who don't take their authority over what Papa God has given them. When the programmers implant the electrodes into the victim's skin, they take DNA from each of the victims at the same time. They do a ritual where they call in territorial spirits of the past and present and insert the DNA within a robot. Then all victims are told they are a robot. So from our movement to our speech, we believe we are a robot, and we are trained to act like a robot. Then during corporate rituals, the robots that Illuminati are building are called to life with the demonic DNA. The demons wrap around the DNA, and cause a counterfeit of humanity. This is showing up in our culture today, in the life-like sex robots, just do a quick google search. Another example is the robot Sophia that has just been given citizenship by Saudi Arabia. These type of clones and robots have been around for a while. The Illuminati has just been in the process of desensitizing people so that they can bring them into our everyday life. Satan and his children try to pervert and twist all of Papa God's pure creations. There are biologists, chemists, scientists working around the clock to pervert Papa God's creations. Literally, taking the faces off human beings and trying to get them to adhere to the robot. Victims are tormented deliberately to be constantly afraid that there will be a robot out there that looks like them that ends up doing evil things. Then they will be blamed for the evil that happens. Artificial intelligence has been around a long time. They are now just beginning to share some of what they are doing behind the scenes. The reason they are now starting to share some of their evil is they have so desensitized people through TV, movies, and video games to believe that all of this is harmless and pretend. There is insidious evil behind all artificial intelligence and cloning. The military has been infiltrated with the Illuminati elite who have poured billions of dollars into creating robots that are programmed to destroy at the time the evil people activate them. This is called the black awakening.

The man who was forced to pose as my older brother was sent to North Carolina. I began to remember things that they made him do to me. It wasn't his fault. He was being forced to have sex with me and hurt me. The programmers told him that I hated and blamed him. They did not want anything else to surface, so they sent him away. I was distraught that they were going to kill him because of me. The programmers said, "That's what happens when you tell. You're going to end up alone. You're evil." North Carolina was supposed to be the state you went to when you got "perfect enough." There is a Wizard of Oz park. They took me to North Carolina and showed me what would happen if I ever told people about them. They gruesomely tortured a person by removing a person's face and placing it on another person, and they forced me to watch the movie Face Off to pretend like it didn't happen. They created intense fear and confusion by saying repeatedly, "How did I know who anybody was?" They said that they had switched everybody's face. So I could say someone had done bad things to me, and really they didn't. I would never know who they really are. They told me that they would replace my face with someone else's, and then no person would know where I was and what I was doing. I would be alone and would go crazy. Then they would put me back in the hospital. I was terrified every moment of every day. We stayed in a hotel in North Carolina, and the programming was continually breaking down. I screamed when they were hurting me. A police officer went to our room and asked if there was anybody screaming. They said no, and the police officer left. The police officer assumed that things were fine because we looked like a normal family.

I was forced to start giving a fake "testimony" by speaking at different events that were infiltrated by programmers. Some of the events were at churches that had Illuminati posing as pastors, and the Gideon's. I was forced to say that the pastor they were framing ritualized and raped me. I was made to use the scripture Psalm 18 and Psalm 40. Psalm 40:2 says, "He lifted me out of the slimy pit, out of the mud and mire." My programmers used to keep me in a deep water well beside the house, and they said I should be grateful to them because they got me out of there. If I refused to say that the pastor abused me, they would put me back in the well by myself. I hated being alone in that well. There were rats that I knew could eat people, because I had seen that happen. There were insects that crawled all over me. I was living a horror story, and I didn't see any way out. So I told people that the pastor had abused me, not them. I was not consciously doing this. All the different parts of my mind had blocked things completely out of my memory. The other scripture they made me quote was Psalm 18, which says, "The Lord is my rock, my fortress and my deliverer; my God is my rock, in whom I take refuge, my shield, and the horn of my salvation, my stronghold. I called to the Lord, who is worthy of praise, and I have been saved from my enemies. The cords of death entangled me; the torrents of destruction overwhelmed me. The cords of the grave coiled around me; the snares of death confronted me. In my distress I called to the Lord; I cried to my God for help. From his temple, he heard my voice." The evil people took ropes and tied them around my neck and said that since he (the male programmer) was God, I had to cry out to him to rescue me. I was told that if I ever told anybody about what they had done to me, they would send me back to the hospital. They would remind me over and over they were protecting people from me, so I should be grateful to them.

I was truly gifted from Papa God with the gift of speaking. The programmers used this genuine gift from Papa God as leverage to keep me bound with them. I was in too deep they said, and nobody would ever believe me after I gave the testimony that the pastor had done the abuse. There were programmers at each place I spoke to intimidate me. They were there to see the programming in action. They were also there to program me more so that I would never expose them. This was so confusing, because I genuinely loved my speaking ability. I thought that I really must like being evil, and I hated myself more for having a gift in speaking. Down at the core of my being in the unconscious mind, I knew that the pastor was innocent and my programmers were getting away with hideous evil. I had no idea how to get free; I was trapped. I had been told over an over that I was stupid, dumb, and that I wasn't good at anything except sex. According to everything I had been told, I was only good at sex, because God had made me to have sex and didn't give me anything else as a gift. My mind was so confused; I felt guilty and evil every second of every day.

The evil people see all the gifts that are spiritually given to the victims by Papa God, and they pervert those on purpose. The reason they do this is the gift is powerful in showing victims their identity in Papa God. The enemy fights hard to destroy and pervert all gifts and talent given to us by Papa God. For example, I was able to put clothes together fashionably in a very artistic way. The programmers took a victim and cut them up in pieces. They said that that's why I had that gift; then I had to put all of the pieces of the people back together. So every time that I had to put an outfit together for the people I was sold to, I thought of that, and I felt evil for having that gift. I thought all gifts were evil. I was told over and over, "You can only be good at what we say you can be good at, because you use everything for evil." After my rescue, during my healing, Papa God showed me as I was getting dressed one day how He put a beautiful outfit together for me to wear, down to every detail. He was showing me that He created that gift, and it was not evil. He shared that He is creative, and, therefore, we are creative. He has a beautiful detailed woven plan for each of us, even if we can't see the plan.

Around this time, I was taken to a Benny Hinn conference in New York by the female programmer. New York is considered the final destination for victims. It is where the biggest corporate Illuminati rituals are done. They gather all of the victims together to get them linked corporately. New York stands for slavery for victims. The Illuminati torture and train us to believe it stands for the freedom for victims. New York is where we are forced to start Illuminati war on the US and take down the Christians. Each of us has been trained as mind-controlled soldiers, and do a job that we have been programmed to do at the end. The battle is really for our minds. If they can control our minds, they will be in control of all of what we do. These jobs are the only way we are told we can earn freedom. Killing a Christian for us means our bloodline will be transformed to a pure bloodline. This destroys the curse that God put on us and gives us the ability to be pure. The poem that represents the Statue of Liberty was used in the rituals. "Give me your tired, your poor. Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free. The wretched refuse of your teeming shore. Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me, I lift my lamp beside the golden door!" If we allowed the Illuminati to own us, then we could earn our freedom. They told us that in the end there will be bombings at all of the landmarks in New York, and there will be concentration camps set up. There were programmers at the conference; they recorded all of the preaching and used them in the rituals. They dressed up to look like the speakers and tortured me and many other victims to keep us from believing what the preachers were saying.

The Illuminati is constantly targeting ministries. They had a list of ministries that minister to Satanic ritual abuse survivors that they wanted to bring down. They send victims to these ministries to discredit them and destroy the ministry against their wills. They take at least a year and begin to program us to destroy the ministry. My programmers targeted a ministry that was working with SRA victims and getting some results. They got all of the Christian ministry's music, teaching materials, pictures, and all their friends and ministry partners names, and sent demons to scan them. This means that the demons find out about all of their weaknesses, wounds, and issues, and relay them back to the Illuminati. I began being tortured and programmed around them a year before they sent me there. They also sent three other victims at the same time so they could pit us against each other. They ritualized all of us together to make sure that we were programmed against each other sufficiently. Also, to make sure we didn't trust each other. Each of us were sent with the agenda to take down the ministry. We did not go there consciously knowing why were sent there; we were completely disassociated. I was told that the ministry couple was going to be taking over as my programmers. So even though they were loving and kind to me, I just thought that was an act. The evil people sent me under the disguise that they were a perfect loving family trying to get their daughter the healing she needed. After twenty-five years of torture and rape, never having anything else, I thought that this was all that would ever happen to me. They told me if I went there and worked for seven years, I would be allowed to get married. If I got married, I could genuinely be free, because the man who was my husband would be my controller, and I wouldn't have to keep being tortured. This was all a lie, of course. But I believed that this was my only way out and the only way I would be chosen.

Chapter 13

A Setup

> "In his arrogance the wicked man hunts down the weak, who are caught in the schemes he devises. He boasts about the cravings of his heart; he blesses the greedy and reviles the LORD. In his pride the wicked man does not seek him; in all his thoughts there is no room for God. His ways are always prosperous; your laws are rejected by him; he sneers at all his enemies. He says to himself, "Nothing will ever shake me." He swears, "No one will ever do me harm." His mouth is full of lies and threats; trouble and evil are under his tongue. He lies in wait near the villages; from ambush he murders the innocent. His eyes watch in secret for his victims; like a lion in cover he lies in wait. He lies in wait to catch the helpless; he catches the helpless and drags them off in his net." Psalms 10:2-10

As I began to get ministry from this couple, I began to remember specific details of what happened to me. They never asked me any questions about the abuse or told me what they thought happened. They just asked Papa God to heal me and show me the truth. I didn't remember the programmers' faces, but the genuine Holy Spirit kept revealing memories, and each time I got healing, I started to see the faces clearer. There were parts that were seeing the truth and parts that were still in denial, so I kept getting tortured and raped by the programmers during this time. It's difficult for people to understand why I kept going back. The reality is that after twenty-five years of the type of torture I went through, I didn't have any idea that there was anything different. I had been deliberately divided in my mind by the programmers. I had thousands of parts within my mind that were still trying to get free and see the truth. So day by day, I would get truth from Papa God, and I would continue to be ritualized by the evil people. I had no idea that I could actually be free, or that anybody would want me to be free. I dearly loved this couple and their children, but I didn't trust them. I had been tortured and programmed about every detail of their life. I was being lied to about every single thing about them and what they did. They had set up people around this couple who were programmers as well. There was a church that was led by a victim, and there was a covenant and pact made to keep all of the victims quiet about what was planned. There were victims on the worship team, and there was a programmer on the worship team. He would stare at us while we sang. He was involved in all of the military programming and the Jewish programming. He would do all of the torture to cover up and distort the core as much as possible the core knew who he was. When I mention the core, I'm talking about the part of my being that knew everything—all of the torture, rape, and abuse I went through. The main objective of the programmer was to bury the core. This included the monarch programming that was done in underground tunnels, and it was the deepest level of programming. They never wanted this information to be recovered. They tried to bury the core by making us so terrified of ourselves that we would never allow those memories to surface. There was a Judas program to keep us from ever telling the truth about what we were going through; if we did, we would be Judas. This meant that we would be responsible for the death and torture of the other victims. The programmer in the church raped us and would take us out to eat after church. The food we ate were used in the rituals. The cheese sauce was used as a representative of the ejaculation. And this reminded us that we were whores. He had cameras all over his house. His wife was a victim. He was connected to all of the German military programmers. He had a daughter who was tortured with me and that they put a competition between us. They switched our children and made us earn them back. If I pretended like the programmer wasn't evil, I would get my children back.

There was a corporate ritual done on the day we were all sent to Kentucky to take down the ministry. It was done on the night of the conference that the Christian couple was leading. The programmers for all the women were sent there and were involved in the ritual. My programmer was at the conference, and she stayed there when I was getting ministry from the couple. Programmers who were posing as ministers from Neil Anderson's Freedom in Christ were also there to destroy this ministry. Every time I got ministry from the innocent Christian couple, I was tortured around them and around the way that they did ministry. I was told that the couple was trying to get to the core of who I was, to expose how evil I was. The evil people told me that their ministry was to reveal all of the evil I did so that people would know about it. Reality was that they were asking the genuine Holy Spirit to reveal the lies I believed and to bring truth. I was told lies about every aspect of the ministry that was just trying to help me.

The programmers' main strategy was to force me to say they were perfect, and if I did not say they were perfect I would be exposed as evil. They were continually playing games with my mind. The Christian couple innocently watched a movie called The Game, and recommended I watch it. They did not know that I had been tortured to believe that my life was a game. In this movie, just like the movie The Truman Show, everybody knew what was going on but the main character. The main objective like the programming I went through was to manipulate and confuse to the point they would not be able to discern between reality and the game.

There was another lady who was doing the same type of ministry that was genuinely trying to help me. She was friends with the Christian couple. My programmer took me to many ministry sessions with her, and then I ended up living with her and her family. My programmers targeted her and her family. I loved this family very much, but I was tortured to believe they were setting me up too. They sent jealousy demons to cause conflict in the house between her daughters and me. I thought I was the "evil one." The programmers told me that I was the mixed breed in their house. They put poison in the dog's food, and he got really sick. The female programmer brought brownies that had metal in them, and they made the Christian lady get sick. I was too terrified to allow the truth to start to surface, because my programmers said that they would kill these people and then say I did it. I was still getting tortured and raped by my programmers while I stayed at this family's house. I would go for walks on their large property and have to meet the programmers. I would get raped to remind me that I was not allowed to talk about anything other than what they told me I could. There were denial parts of my mind that were functioning for me. I had no memory of what was going on in the present. I had many religious programs working. I would read the Bible all the time, because if I read the Bible, it would remind me of how evil I was. The programmers told me the "sons of Belial" in the Bible refers to me. I ended up moving out of their house because I was still in major denial about my programmers and ended up in an apartment. There was a victim, a man who was assigned to me with a name that resembled "demon," and he had been friends with that family for many years. He was with me all the time, and the evil people ritualized us together to bury the truth about my programmers.

I kept getting ministry, and Papa God kept bringing deeper memories. My memories were never coerced or implied by anyone; all of my memories were brought out by the Holy Spirit. Finally, the denial wall broke in some of my parts, and I was able to see all of the memories and who they were linked to, and some of my parts began seeing who my programmers really were. I was put in a job as a gymnastics instructor with another victim. We were tortured in the gymnastics building. It was a large old building with an upstairs, so there was a lot of room, and noise could not be heard easily. Papa God began bringing back memories of what happened in the gymnastics job, so I quit that. I then moved in with the Christian couple. They gave me a place to live, a job, a car, and food. They prayed for me and ministered to me on a regular basis. Other programmers were put in place all around this couple to bring them down. They had no idea what was going on. The other victims that were sent to take down the ministry were there too. There was still great torment and confusion in my mind unconsciously of whether the Christian couple were evil like my programmers had tortured me to believe. I continued to get ritualized at night by coded messages or through the programmers they set up in that town. I would get a phone call or a sign or symbol in front of me to make me go to the rituals. I still was unconscious of the rituals that were going on and of the fact that I was still under my programmers control.

I moved into a house with a girl who was sent with me to destroy the ministry. This was planned, because the Illuminati had programmed us against each other severely. She was very harsh, angry, and mean on the outside. And I was the person who was kind, quiet, and timid on the outside. In the rituals, she was timid and quiet, and I was the angry, mean person. My part that was trained to be an animal was out in the rituals. I had to growl and intimidate, or people would be killed. She had to be quiet and timid. They told each of us that it was our fault the other person got tortured. So we didn't trust each other in any way. We kept the programs and systems going to protect ourselves and other people. When we looked at each other, we saw what we hated about ourselves. It was a constant reminder. Then our programmers brought a man whom we had to share to this town. I was going to be allowed to marry the man in the natural, and she was allowed to marry him in the ritual life. This made our hate and competition even greater. He was our "Jacob," and we took turns being Leah and Rachel. If we followed through with the plan against the Christian couple, we would get the man; that would give us freedom all the time, and he would be our husband. This meant to us that we would not do evil ever again, and we would be controlled. And it also meant that we wouldn't have to be tortured and tormented for the rest of our life.

The Illuminati targeted the children of the people who were ministering to us and sent victims to be married to their children. This way, they could control their ability to expose the truth about them. There were victims and programmers who were placed around the Christian couple within their church so that I would go to their homes and be ritualized, but the Christian couple wouldn't have any idea. I just thought this was normal and that everybody was involved in torturing me. I thought that the Christian couple were my new programmers and that they had set up for me to go to be programmed somewhere else. But the reality was that they had no idea what was really going on.

I was put in a job as a case manager at a company, and the girl I was living with was put in a job as a support specialist who took the kids to outings at the same company. This was another setup by the Illuminati. We had to go into homes and spend time with children. Specific child victims were chosen; the evil people took pictures raping us and forcing us to have to do sexual things with the children. We had no choice, but the programmers said it was our fault, and they said that they would take the pictures to police and put us away forever if we told anybody. There were already police who were involved with the rituals. There was also a judge who was a programmer. We were terrified to tell anybody. They would make us bond with the children and teenagers and then force us to hurt them, and we had no way out. In the job I was put in, I had to put children into hospitals if the judge (programmer) ordered it. Then I would have to visit the hospital and get ritualized with the children. There was a hospital in Kentucky that had a whole room just dedicated to Wizard of Oz programming.

No matter how much the Christian couple gave me, I still couldn't see that I was loved. They gave me Christmas presents, birthday presents, and holidays; took us on trips; and took me out to eat. They shared their family time with me and spent countless hours of ministry with me. Their children were so kind to me and gave me kind notes and played like little kids with me. I had been trained that if people didn't say they were my father and mother, then that meant they were against me, and wanted me to be a mixed breed. This meant to me that they were not willing to share their pure bloodline. The evil people used this to cause me to never let the unconscious into the conscious—for the parts of my mind that knew the truth to stay hidden.

The "Jacob" victim whom the programmers sent for the final plan against this ministry had just recently gotten out of jail (where he was being tortured). He was sent to where I was to be my new handler and cult chosen husband. I was given a ring that was a "princess" cut for the perfect princess programming. He asked me to marry him by the river next to the bridge. This meant that he was the bridge to freedom for me. He and his sister were victims, and their father had married a victim twice. Their dad had no idea that his children were victims. He was involved in doing Christian ministry also, and he ministered to me some. This was confusing, because the evil people had tortured me around him. The evil people said that he was working to expose that I wasn't good enough for his son. They would electrocute me over and over and say, "What did you do?" So when I would be in a ministry session and he would ask, "What did you do?" I thought he was saying that I was evil. I would shut down and not allow healing to happen.

Chapter 14

Journey to Freedom

"I believe that in the end the truth will conquer." John Wycliffe

At this point in my story, I'm going to walk you through step by step on how I got free—starting with the time I faced the people who set me up and who had tried to make me to destroy the Christian couple.

While walking into the police department, meeting face-to-face with people who wanted to destroy me and the people I cared about, I felt terror—terror for what they might do to me, and even more for what they might make me do.

I was afraid of going into the denial programming, with all of the past thirty-one years of being brainwashed, afraid that the mind control would be too strong and I would be tricked again. The unconscious was flooding through into the conscious, and it was excruciating, but it was freeing at the same time. I see the kindness of Papa God in giving us the ability to block out certain things that are too traumatic for our minds. Unfortunately, the evil people had deliberately used that defense mechanism intended to shield us from traumatic events, as a curse that was used against me to keep me in bondage to them. They deliberately forced my mind to forget and break off into pieces to endure the pain that they inflicted.

Every day since I had escaped and ran to get away from the evil people till today, I had spent day after day screaming, crying, and praying in my car for Papa God to show me the truth and rescue my mind from the hold that they had on me. Memory after memory had been flooding back, and with it was intense emotion.

On the way to the police department, I was searching my mind of anything that would be triggered and cause me to be under their control. I was afraid they would access some part of my mind that was not yet free from their control. I had gotten so much freedom in my mind over the seven years of ministry I had received from the Christian couple, and then God gave me a window of opportunity to get physically free.

Standing in the presence of my enemies, I was afraid, but most of all, I felt peace knowing that I was doing the most loving thing I could do. I was laying down my life to protect my friends. "Greater love has no one than this: to lay down one's life for one's friends" (John 15:13).

Papa God had it all planned in a way that this day is my last day in the 40 Days of Purpose book I was reading. Just like when the Israelites walked out of Egypt, in the midst of the Egyptians, I was walking out of slavery in the midst of my abusers and captors. It reminded me of the scripture "And Elisha prayed, 'Open his eyes, LORD, so that he may see.' Then the LORD opened the servant's eyes, and he looked and saw the hills full of horses and chariots of fire all around Elisha" (2 Kings 6:17). The minister and friend I was now laying my life down for reminded me that with God my adversaries are nothing before me. Papa God and I outnumbered them!

The detective who had participated in the satanic rituals and abuse was there, and he took my phone from me. He was checking to see if there was any recording device on me. He had a lot to lose, so he couldn't have me taping anything that could incriminate him.

I went into a room with two people, a detective, and a police officer, each who had raped, tortured, and abused me. Even the judge in this town was one of my abusers. They were doing everything they could do to trick, control, manipulate, and cause me to break. They kept questioning me, trying to get me to go into the satanic ritual part of the abuse so they could discredit me and try to make me to look crazy. Papa God gave me insight, so I would not fall for their tricks.

The cards were stacked completely against me, but something reverberated inside my being: with Papa God, I was the majority. I didn't care if I was going to get into trouble or if I was going to be hurt, I just knew I had to tell the truth. I had determined in my heart that I would tell the truth no matter the consequences. So I testified to the truth of what my programmers had done to me—that he had raped me, as he had every day of my life. I told this to the police officer and detective who were involved in the entire setup. This was the last thing they expected me to say; they thought I was going to follow the plan. The hold they once had on my mind wasn't there anymore. Without the mind control, they could not do anything to me.

They were trying to torment me to make me terrified that I would be put in jail for not saying what they wanted me to say. Jail represented hell to me, I had been put in many cages, and I knew what could happen if they put me there. I had already had the rape kit completed on me, with the same police officer in the room who was interrogating me. I said the same thing the day when the rape testing had been done—that the evil people raped me. The police officer was pretending like I had never stated that truth, that the programmer had raped me. I plainly stated that he had raped me, and I did not waver in anyway.

There was false evidence as well. There was DNA that pointed to the Christian minister who had rescued me as the criminal. That was the part of the plan that I did follow through with. I got the DNA from the Christian couple's house, and I took it to the evil people. I couldn't bear the thought of what they had told me would happen if I didn't follow through with their plan. I would be alone, and all of the evil in me would be available for everyone to see. I would kill people and torture people all the time, for all eternity. And there would be no one there to control me, no one there to keep me from being evil.

I had been trained all my life that I would get a husband who would be with me every second and would keep me from being evil. That was my only way out of all of this. If I didn't follow through with their plan, I wouldn't get to marry him, and I would lose what I thought was the only way out. If I didn't follow through with getting the evidence, I would have to hurt the Christian couple's children. I could not bear the thought of that. Even death was not an option they said. Death for me was not an option, because I never would die. I had been programmed over and over that I would just keep doing the evil things they trained me to do, so that is why I never got around to killing myself.

People ask me why I didn't kill myself during all of this; the cult ensures that we do not kill ourselves. They make death seem like an option that is even worse than living. They set up rooms that they torture us in and called it hell, and told us what happens to people who kill themselves.

The plan for seven years had been that I was sent to this ministry by the evil people to destroy and take down the ministry and people who ran the ministry. They prepared me long before I was sent there. When the seven years of work was over that the evil people sent us there for. They got the book the couple had written, their training manual, and did rituals around the material in the book. They took the couple's picture, forced me to look at it, and raped me while saying that the couple had told them to do it. They played their music while they were torturing me. They demanded that we say the man who genuinely ministered to us and had done so much for us had raped us. Still at this point, we were still in denial, and not consciously aware of what we were doing. I had no idea in the conscious realm that I was trying to set up a man. After being tortured beyond what is humanly imaginable and threatened to be forced to molest his children in order for them to stay alive, I went to the Christian couple's house and got a pair of underwear to get DNA from the man. I gave the underwear to the Illuminati, and was in the fight of my life. I was put in a room with the detective, my programmers, the judge, and the police who were involved. They brought out every picture that they had taken of me and said that I would be sent to jail where I would have no person to control me. I would be forced to kill, torture, and molest children, including their children, for the rest of my life. I was still under the programmers' mind control. I told the Christian couple's family member I was raped by the programmer, and then the police who was involved showed up to do a rape kit. They did a rape kit. I told them specifically that my programmer raped me. But they did not allow that to be written down. I had finally gotten a revelation of what genuine love is. I wasn't rejected by the Christian couple after all I had been forced to do. They genuinely accepted me still. That did something huge in my system. I had never in my life been accepted, and especially if I had made a mistake. I had to be perfect every second; and even when I performed perfectly, I was tortured, raped, and rejected. This couple did not reject me even after the horrible mistake I made. That broke a huge denial wound in my life, and all of the memories started flooding in. I got by myself and screamed and cried and let all of the memories flood in. I chose to tell the truth. The programmers had raped me every day of my life, and the Christian man never raped me, not ever! At this point, I knew I had to get away from all of the evil that had been set up to destroy me in that town. The girl I lived with was still going to rituals, and she was with the programmers. So I had to get out of there. I asked Papa God where to go, and He showed me a place. I moved by myself without telling anybody where I was going. I didn't speak to anybody, because I was so afraid of being tricked. I spent all of my time in my car screaming and looking at all of the memories that kept surfacing. I was tormented that maybe I was doing evil or that maybe I wasn't conscious that I was still going back to my programmers. I was in terror constantly. This is what the evil people controlled me with—fear and terror—constantly. I had no idea how to do things, like go grocery shopping. When I went anywhere, I was always looking around wondering who was watching me and when they would show up and destroy me. The truth now was that I was not controlled anymore in my mind, so they had no way to get to me any longer. It was so horribly difficult to believe that I was free. I had always believed there was no way out of the horror that I endured. Another way they tortured me for decades was to make me think I was never aware of anything that I did from minute to minute. So this fear was a huge mountain to climb. But day by day, memory by memory, I stepped further into healing. A song that meant so much to me while I was going through all of that was "Voice of Truth," by Casting Crowns. He was the Voice of Truth, after all of the lies I had been told every second, of every day, for all of my life. His Voice of Truth was winning, and I was getting free in my mind! Another thing I held onto at that time was a poem given to me by the Christian couple who helped me get free. It was by Roy Lessin: "Just think you're here not by chance, but by God's choosing. His Hand formed you and made you the person you are. He compares you to no one else-you are one of a kind. You lack nothing that His grace can't give you. He has allowed you to be here, at this time in history, to fulfill His special purpose for this generation."

The evil people told me that the Christian couple were going to take over programming and controlling me. They had used the movie Truman Show as a torture ritual movie, saying that the couple they were sending me to were going to be the people who were in the control tower in the movie.

They would be controlling every detail of my life now according to my programmers. If you watch this movie, it is a mind-control movie. He lives a fake life, and everybody around him are in on it, except he is unaware of what is really going on. I just thought that these were my new "controllers," the new people who would train me to be good enough. This had happened many times before, so I didn't think this would be any different.

The evil people targeted this ministry because the ministry was making significant headway with rescuing people from satanic ritual abuse. The people who ran that ministry had only been loving and kind to me; they never hurt me. They had ministered to me, given me a place to live, a car, a job, and food to eat. I had never been loved or cared for by anyone in my life, so they were gradually bit by bit crumbling the wall that the evil people had put up inside my mind.

The Illuminati officials said they had already talked to the other victims, making me think they had given them information about the Christian couple. The police officer knew where I lived now. She knew I had just gotten a job. They had been watching me. I had been so scared that I had not gone out of the house or been around people unless I absolutely had to because of work.

They were trying to intimidate me. But I knew the setup, and I showed them I would not be their slave any longer. I told them the truth that I had gotten the DNA from the couple's house, and I had planted it so that he would be made responsible for the rape. They were pushing me to talk to reveal something that would give them something to destroy me with, so they could try and make me sound crazy in case I tried to expose them.

Just like Psalms 57:6 says, "They spread a net for my feet—I was bowed down in distress. They dug a pit in my path—but they have fallen into it themselves." They could not trap me this time. I would not go there with them. I would not fall for their traps. Papa God was with me, and He was giving me insight and strength.

I told the police officer and the detective I was afraid of the real person who had raped me, the programmer. He raped me, and he was the person, as well as the female programmer, who had abused and tortured me all these years. Even today, I want to deny the truth that I could go through with something so heinous and hurtful. That I would be willing to take a person's DNA and destroy them with it is unconscionable, especially a person who had only given me love and the possibility of genuine life.

I have no excuses that are valid. I only have the reality of the thirty years of the fear, torture, and torment of the evil people that drove me to it. I only wanted to be a decent person, and the irony was that when I finally admitted to the most hideous thing I had ever done, is when I finally saw that I wasn't evil at all. I was free and capable of standing up for truth even in the face of a death sentence.

I was not a hero. I am a flawed human being in need of a Savior. He rescued me. The same Savior still rescues me every day from my horrible memories. As I write this, many emotions, pain, and hurt surfaces; but I choose to focus on how Papa God is going to use this book to rescue many people, and raise up an army of people who will fight to set the captives free.

Each of us are born with a gift of choice, which God gave. On a daily basis, we can decide whether to choose Jesus or not. Millions of people are robbed of choice. They are enslaved and are given no choices. I was thirty-one years old when finally, for the first time ever, I was given a choice, and I had finally experienced genuine unconditional love. I was free. The ministry couple did not reject me, even after knowing all of the plans of the evil people that I had gone there with to destroy them. They chose to love me and see that I was doing the very best I could at that time. When they forgave me, I was changed. I made a decision to tell the truth no matter what.

I could be free. Jesus wanted me free. Even after all I had done, this couple wanted me to be free. So I told the truth. I told the truth even though I was petrified of myself and of what they would do to me. When Jesus "passes by," we can let him pass by. Or we can reach out and take the healing He has to offer us. Sometimes, this will be excruciatingly painful, but the pain will be worth it. Because if we don't reach out, we will live in a world of denial, lies, and continual pain for the rest of our lives. At the end of John 8, it is written that the Jews rejected the truth about Jesus being the Son of God. As the Jews took up stones to throw at Jesus, "Jesus hid Himself and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so 'passed by.'" The Jews missed out on getting to know Jesus in a special way. He was their opportunity for freedom. He is still holding out His hand to and bringing the Jews to Himself, His chosen people. His promises will be fulfilled to them.

Chapter 15

Set Free

"Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom." 2 Corinthians 3:17

Jesus passed by the evil people at a point in their life. They knew the Bible. They knew who Jesus was. Yet they willfully chose to reject Jesus. They chose power, money, pride, and evil instead. They gave their entire beings over to Satan, and there was no limit to the evil they were capable of. They had asked the demons to indwell and live within them and for Satan to take their body and use it however he wanted to.

In John 9, Jesus "passed by" a man who was blind since birth. The man chose to allow Jesus to heal him, and he had a personal experience of healing and freedom with Jesus. The Pharisees chose not to believe in Jesus. Papa God showed me that He was and still is all about choices. He would never force anybody to follow Him. Even salvation is a choice. He will not force anybody to go to heaven. He is not an evil God who sends people to hell. He is a kind God who gives every single person a choice on whether they want to go to heaven or not. He is the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

I continue to get more and more insights from John 8 and 9. I thought I was through with all of the revelation I could get from this, but then Papa God said, "Go back there." This shows me the immense amount of treasures in the Word. I always was tortured to read the Bible, because they said it was written to make me remember how evil I was. The Bible for victims is like the electric chair, because of the torture we endured every time when it was read. The scriptures were read at the rituals and twisted to mean whatever they wanted them to mean. It was just like when Satan used the scripture to tempt and torment Jesus in the wilderness. If condemnation and shame are felt and a wrong image of Jesus is given by the Scripture, it is not the Spirit of God that is unfolding before for us.

If you look at John 9, for example, and you put all of the emphasis on us to make right choices to "see" Jesus as He passes by, we miss the reality that it says, "He saw us first." He did not only see us in the physical realm; He also saw our pain, our hurt, our deepest feelings. He has felt what we felt, because He was there, and He saw all that we experienced and experienced it with us. Jesus experienced the pain and the shame that the blind man felt when people judged him. The people said that the blind man did something to cause the blindness that he was born with. Jesus sincerely wanted to take the blindness away. Jesus wanted to take the sting of the rejection the blind man felt as people judged and labeled him. Jesus cares, and He wants to heal us. Today, as I listened to the pastor speak at church, he was talking about Jesus "passing by" the woman with the issue of blood. Luke 8:40–48 says, "Jesus was on His way to heal Jairus daughter. When the crowd 'pressed in' to get to Jesus." Jesus is a gentleman. He will not force anybody to have a relationship with Him, but He gives us opportunity after opportunity to press in and see His face and His healing. The reason He wants us to press in is not so that He will get something. He always genuinely wants to give us something. He is always available to us. He passes by to remind us of that. The lady with the issue of blood knew that she could touch Him and be healed. He didn't even have to touch her. "Then the woman, seeing that she could not go unnoticed, came trembling and fell at his feet. In the presence of all the people, she told why she had touched him and how she had been instantly healed. Then he said to her, 'Daughter, your faith has healed you. Go in peace.'" She testified of her wounds and how Jesus had healed her in the presence of people. Our testimony of what Jesus has done in our life as we partner with him is powerful!

I found a church that the Christian couple knew of and moved there. I genuinely needed a church in this new town. I went to church with terror filling my mind, and I left without speaking to anybody. I ended up going to a Sunday school class with people who were so kind, but I was still so afraid. I was about one hundred pounds. Because I was so afraid all the time, I couldn't eat. I chose to genuinely trust Papa God, and I went to eat with a couple from that church. I took a few bites of food; then I got in my car to go, and I threw up all over the car because of the stress and fear.

I kept making tiny steps to believe that I was free. This battle was for my mind. One layer at a time, I began to get the truth that I needed. I ended up being friends with that couple who took me to lunch and her sister. They were very kind. They provided food through our Sunday school class and helped me find a job. There were so many times that Papa God took care of me! I became so close to the Christian couple and their children, and I missed them so much! I had lost my genuine family, the only thing close to a family that I had ever had. Papa God began bringing people who weren't evil to replace all that I lost. There were so many times I was so lonely, and I cried to Papa God, and then a person would ask me to go eat with them. Then I would keep asking God if the person could be trusted or not. I was terrified of trusting anybody, and I didn't even trust Papa God. Many times, a person at church or Sunday school would give me exactly what I needed to buy my groceries. I had a check show up in the mail that covered my rent. I would not have anything to eat for lunch, and someone at work who didn't know that I was hungry would bring lunch in for me.

Another couple in Sunday school class, asked me to spend time with them. I was so scared of the possibility of the people who tried to approach me, might be evil. That day, the pastor of the church I went attended, spoke about geese and how they fly in a V formation, which is to allow for some other goose to take over when the leader gets tired. Geese can fly 71% percent farther with each other. I genuinely felt this was the Holy Spirit telling me that I needed people. I went over to the couple's house that day, and geese flew over the house just as I was about to go in. I cried. This was Papa God's sign that I didn't have to be afraid. They took me in as family, and I lived with them for a while. They included me like family. I spent holidays with them and their relatives. She and her sister were big influences in my healing, and we all were growing together in spiritual things. Her little girl asked me one day, "Do you have a mama?" I said no. She had a little battery-powered pink VW Beetle. She said, "Well, I would have picked you up in my VW Beetle, and you could be my family." Amazing how children can say just what Papa God needs us to hear. Children are safe, and they are pure, so He ministers through them often.

This family fed me, prayed for me, and just provided a secure place for me to be. During this time, I was working through memories daily by myself, and a man at work told me about someone who did ministry and moved there from Florida. I remember Papa God showing me a vision of Honest Jesus (I began calling Jesus "Honest Jesus" because He doesn't lie), and Honest Jesus was saying this was the person I had prayed for to minister to me. I prayed for somebody to minister to me because I was dealing with all of this trauma and mind control by myself. When I first met with him and his wife, I saw his face like a demon. The devil and Illuminati did not want me to meet this man. He was doing great work of healing for Papa God. He began to minister to me, and I began to have genuine peace a step at a time. Lie after lie was being destroyed, and truth was being brought. Papa God spoke to this man to be my spiritual papa. I had never had a man who took the role of papa in my life. He was a great example of what having a papa does for your life. There were so many revelations I got from Papa God by having a spiritual papa! Papa God showed me how my papa knew my voice and cry, and could pick me out of a crowd of people. Papa God is like that a million times over! My spiritual papa told me how proud he was of me; that ministered to me greatly!

I got an opportunity to go to India on a mission trip through Truth in Love ministry. I was scared, but I genuinely felt like Papa God was telling me to go. My spiritual papa and a team were going, so I felt secure. The finances for the trip poured in! I even had an elderly man pay for my haircut one day after hearing I was going on a mission trip. There was a two-week intensive all-day deliverance class that I would have an opportunity to go through. Before I went, I visited my spiritual papa's mentor and spiritual dad. He didn't speak and was in a nursing home. While I was there, he spoke! He said, "Meet them, greet them, and pray for them." That was my mission in India! Papa God provided all of the money for the trip. On the flight to India, memory after memory of the torture and rape on the flights that the Illuminati put me on started flooding back. When the plane started getting bumpy, I was terrified, because I remembered the things that happened on those flights. When I was little, they told me we were going to crash on the flights. They said this so I would vow to follow the Antichrist so I could raise the people from the dead that were on the plane when we crashed. They tricked me to do this so the Antichrist demons would have a legal right to be there.

When I got to India for our mission trip, I began to cry. I was terrified, and I didn't know why. I began having body memories, and the sights and smells of India began to bring back memory after memory of being taken there and tortured. When we were there, I began to feel movement like coils of a snake inside my stomach, intestines, jaw, hands, and feet. These were serpent spirits that were attacking me. They would coil up in my eyes and look like spirals going around and around, and they would try and take me demonically to different dimensions. Praying in tongues breaks the Morse code of the demons that are attacking people. I prayed a deliverance prayer, and Papa God made the demons go away. We took a train to get to our motel after getting off the plane. I was trafficked and ritualized on the train when I was a kid. They chained all of the children together on the train when I was taken to India as a child. They didn't let us eat, and we had to use the bathroom on ourselves. So I was in severe anxiety and terror as I was reliving this on my mission trip. It was an overnight train, so everyone went to sleep that was on my team. I was so scared I didn't sleep at all. I was miserable. The warfare of the territory was causing intense stomach and body pains. I got an eye infection that made my eyes turn completely blood red. This caused the memories about how I was tortured in India flood back. I was poked in my eyes with needles, and I was starved there. I had insects and rats that crawled all over me. There was a commander who was part of the police force there, and he tortured me and took over my programming. I had lice and scabies, and was treated like a dog.

When I was a child, the main programmers showed up and would dress me up, feed me, and sell me there in India. I was sold in all the different caste systems in India. If I made the programmers money, they would let me take a shower. There was always a price tag on every single basic human need I had. There was a white witch whom they worshiped in India, and she would kill the children and eat them if I didn't do what she said. I just wanted to rescue the children, but I couldn't. They said if I just pretended and got the attention of men, I would be allowed to have clothes. I didn't think I was going to survive this mission trip because of the flooding of memories every day. The love of Papa God was so kind. He brought little children to sit by me in India, and that healed my heart. We were outside during our deliverance and inner healing ministry time while in India. I took stickers and candy for the kids. Most of them had never had those things before. I was able to pray over all of the children. I will never forget that!

While the teaching and deliverance was happening in India, there were bugs everywhere, because the classes were outside at night. I was so angry, and upset because it reminded me of the bugs that the evil people would allow to crawl all over me. They would say, “Don’t move. Don’t blink. Stand still,” while the bugs were crawling all over me and biting me. If I moved, I got in trouble.

During the mission trip, I got major deliverance over all of the territorial demons in India. Papa God cut off the Illuminati serpents’ heads and shut the mouth of the lion, the devil. Papa God showed me that this deliverance broke chains off all the other victims as well. Before a deliverance time, there was a beautiful butterfly that flew over top all of the people. The class name was Transformations. Papa God was really transforming lives! By the end of the trip, I had genuinely fallen in love with the people of India. They were so honoring and loving. They sat our team at the front and gave us flowers. I met a lady from India who treated me like a daughter and loved me unconditionally. After my deliverance, she would wash my face from all of the crying, fix my hair, and pat my back. I had never had that before. I ended up going back to India two more times. I was asked to give my testimony in India about how Papa God rescued me. At the end of the deliverance, when we were sharing how we were healed. Honest Jesus showed me He was taking His sword and destroying the evil people and Satan. My spiritual papa was seeing me with a sword doing the same thing with Honest Jesus! It was so healing to share my testimony in a place where I had been tortured and raped as a child.

When I got back from India the last time I went, I gave my testimony at the church I attended here in America. Papa God knew how difficult this was for me because there was a programmer who went to the same church. I was not being accessed any longer, but she and her husband were constantly trying to intimidate me and cause me to be afraid. I had made the pastor aware of the situation, and he listened. Unfortunately, he was not aware of the depth of evil they were capable of. That is one of the reasons I have been called by the Lord to write this book. People, especially pastors, need to be aware of the evil people who hide in their congregations. They need to know their plans and strategies against the church. If they are aware of the strategies, they can combat them effectively and give the church insight and wisdom on how to fight. I stood on the platform at church and looked directly at the programmers. I said, “There are evil people in every church with agendas against the church, but Papa God will expose them!” At that point, they got up and left the church. That was a great step against the enemy!

Chapter 16

Healing

"Then your light shall break forth like the morning, Your healing shall spring forth speedily, And your righteousness shall go before you; The glory of the LORD shall be your rear guard." Isaiah 58:8

There was a powerful group of people who started helping my spiritual papa with his prayer and deliverance ministry. We all were getting ministry, as well, to get the most healing possible. Wounded people, wound people, so it's very important for all of us to seek healing. There was a lady in particular who showed me Papa God's love in a powerful way. She sat in my ministry time and prayed while I was getting ministry. She gave me the first furniture of my own, a chair that was cushy and comfy. I would sit in that chair and talk with Papa God a lot. I even slept in the chair. This was a huge step for me, because I had never been allowed to actually sit on furniture. I always had to sit on the floor. It was so liberating for me! I didn't have to earn her acceptance. I called her "Amma," mama in the Indian culture.

All of us decided to go to the revival that was happening at the House of Prayer in Kansas City. The devil was trying to keep me from going. I got really sick before I went, but I knew I was supposed to go. When we got there, there was a great outpouring of joy at the revival. People were dancing, worshipping, and laughing. I was the only person on our team who wasn't able to feel joy at all. I couldn't figure out why everybody was joyful and I wasn't. I began to ask Papa God why I was so sad and unable to be joyful. He said that I felt guilty. The evil people named my daughter Joy. They gave me medicine that made me laugh, and then they began to hurt and kill her at the same time. They told me that I was evil because I was laughing at my daughter being hurt and killed. I couldn't stop laughing because the medication was forcing me to act in this way. I hated myself and wanted to die. They said to think about how evil I was when I saw joy (people laughing and happy). So every time I saw people laughing, worshipping, and looking happy, I thought of my little girl. I felt hideous and evil. At that moment there in the revival, Papa God gave me a vision of my little girl. She put my face in her hands and said, "It's okay to be happy, Momma. You don't have to be sad." I began to sob uncontrollably and was healed in that moment. For the rest of the revival, I laughed, worshipped, and danced! Papa God said, "All of heaven stops and watches me dance." There was another time that Papa God showed me a picture of Him with my little girl and my mom, who had been killed. I asked them, "Why can't I go be with you?" Papa God said it was because there were people that He would rescue through my story. If my testimony rescued one person, it is worth not giving up.

There were many times that Papa God would bring a memory to the surface where they told me I was evil, and then He would show me who I really was compared to who the evil people said I was. For example, they would say that I hated handicapped people and different races. Then the programmers would make something bad happen to them and say it was my fault. During my healing journey, Papa God has brought different races, last name was changed to Beryl legally. Hope was a name given to me by the Christian couple who had rescued me. I changed that legally as well. The entire name was a way of Papa God saying I was on an evil path that was chosen for me before, and now I was on Papa God's path. He also shared the verse about heaven with me: "The foundations of the city walls were decorated with every kind of precious stone. The first foundation was jasper, the second sapphire, the third agate, the fourth emerald, the fifth onyx, the sixth ruby, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, the ninth topaz, the tenth turquoise, the eleventh jacinth, and the twelfth amethyst." Eight means new beginning.

My elderly friend kept me from being lonely, and I helped ease the pain of the loss of her sister. She believed in me, and all she saw was somebody who had been kind and loving to her. She didn't see all of the rituals, rape, and torture. I went and visited with her every other week. We sang hymns (she played the piano) and talked about Papa God. She gave me a card that I still have. It's a picture of an old school house. She was a teacher when the school was a one room schoolhouse. The scripture on the card was 1 John 4:16. This is now my favorite verse. "And so we know and believe the love God has for us. God is love." I wrote her a poem about our time together, and when she passed away, I felt an intense loss.

At this point in my life, all of my support system in Kentucky was gone, and Papa God brought an opportunity for me to go to a ministry school in Tennessee. I spoke with the overseer of the supernatural school of ministry, and he said, "Sometimes God just wants us to make a choice to do something because we would like to do it." That advice sounded very liberating because I never thought Papa God would give me the ability to do something I wanted to do. So I told Papa God if he wanted me to go to the ministry school, then He would have to provide. So in a bittersweet gift, my friend who passed away left me just the amount of money I needed to go to the school. I quit my job, packed up, and moved to Tennessee on the day before my birthday six years ago. I was thirty-nine years old. I still talk to my spiritual papa a lot and other people I met there, but I haven't gone back to Kentucky. Kentucky is where most of the torture was done, so it brings many horrible memories. I miss my spiritual papa horribly, but he and his wife are doing very well.

There was intense warfare that happened with me leaving the state of Kentucky. A lot of territorial demons tormented me. I had the most intense pain in my head as I arrived in Tennessee, and we were trying to get our furniture unloaded. Then the warfare intensified as I began school! I began to learn more about the supernatural in a pure sense, not in the demonic realm. The devil was not happy that his territory was being destroyed. I genuinely felt the anointing flowing in all of the speakers that were brought in to teach our classes and conferences that were held there. I became great friends and family with the director of the school's wife, Wendy. She was kind and trustworthy, and she believed in me. He was the man I had talked with on the phone before I moved there, the main reason I ended up in Tennessee. They truly showed me what genuine family really is. Things don't have to be perfect in a family, but you're always there for each other. Papa God showed me that they didn't just say they were family; they really meant it. She and her husband provided an alternative that I needed to where I was living, so I moved in with them. I had a beautiful bed with a white fluffy cover and soft pillow. They provided food that was actually good for my body, not fast food. She really taught me how to start taking care of my body and not feeding myself horrible food that destroyed my body. Even to this day, I have no doubts that if I needed somewhere to go, I would always be welcome at their house no matter what.

Every time we had worship before our ministry time and teaching in the ministry school, Papa God would bring up new memories and bring healing. Papa God showed me as we see our identity in who He says we are, the chains fall off, and we walk in our Kingdom Authority! I genuinely saw for me. This was an awesome treasure to hear that they prayed for me. Papa God had also given me the name Beryl, from this beautiful lady who went to be with the Lord. It was her middle name. I will explain in detail about this a little later. This was another treasure that I would never forget. In my loss, He gave me a beautiful gift. During this time of loss, my amma (mama in Indian) gave me a necklace with an inscription that said, "I will carry you." Papa God knew that that was exactly what I needed to hear.

A couple of months later, my cat got sick for the third time with cancer. The first time she got sick, I had noticed she had a knot on her belly. My friend from church was a veterinarian. He said to bring her in. I found out she had cancer, and I had no money. I was so close to my cat; she was my family. She had been through a lot. I had her when I was still getting programmed. They had used her to get to me. They tortured her, and the pain of having to watch that was more hideous than anything they could do to me. She was free now, but she had scars from the torture. Now after all that she had already been through, she was sick with cancer. The veterinarian and his wife from my church were so kind and loving. They did the surgery for free. She was so much better for a while, but then she got sick again, and another surgery had to be done. Again, they did the surgery for free! Papa God was really taking care of us. During the third time she got cancer, the veterinarian said she couldn't handle another surgery. I just couldn't let her go. I didn't want her to suffer, but I was afraid to give her up. I was praying and praying to have an idea when she was suffering and needed to be with Honest Jesus. She got so bad she wasn't even being able to walk and eat. She had a hole in her side from the cancer. I knew I had to stop the suffering. I just couldn't fathom seeing her die, though! Papa God showed me that I wasn't killing her by letting her go and ending her suffering. I took her to the vet, and I was sobbing the whole way there. I took her and held her, and Honest Jesus showed me that He walked into the room and put her in His arms. There was no pain for her any longer! She is running in heaven having so much fun!

Papa God gave me the verse in Habakkuk 2:2–3: "Then the Lord replied: 'Write down the revelation and make it plain on tablets so that a herald may run with it. For the revelation awaits an appointed time; it speaks of the end and will not prove false. Though it linger, wait for it; it will certainly come and will not delay.'" He gave me this verse over and over during my healing journey. I believe that His plan is to expose the evil people and bring millions out of darkness. I cling to this truth each day! I also believe that His Church will be awakened to the horrible evil that is happening in this country, and stand against it together in unity!

I still went to see the remaining sister after her other sister passed away. She needed me now more than ever. We were great friends and would talk for hours. I was terrified because when I visited her, I had to go back to the town that I had left when I became free. Every time I visited her, it was an ordeal. But I knew that Papa God was calling me to minister to her, so I went, choosing to trust that Papa God would take care of me.

I ended up getting my name legally changed because Papa God told me to. The name I had previously was a cult Illuminati name that I was tortured around. I had been praying for quite some time about what I should change my name to. I asked my elderly friend what her and her sisters' full names were. She told me that "Beryl" is a middle name of one of the ladies. It stood out to me, for some reason I didn't know. The next day, as I was reading the Bible, I opened my Bible to Song of Solomon 5:14: "His Hands are rods of gold set with beryl." Papa God said very clearly to me, "You are a precious gem. I have always had your spirit in My hand. This is your new name." Beryl is a precious gemstone. And Papa God had always had my spirit in His hand. This was a direct answer to the question I had asked Papa God, "Why didn't You protect me?" He said, "I wasn't able to protect your body because of the choices of evil people, but I always protected your spirit." No matter what they did to me, they could not destroy my spirit. So my last name was changed to Beryl legally. Hope was a name given to me by the Christian couple who had rescued me. I changed that legally as well. The entire name was a way of Papa God saying I was on an evil path that was chosen for me before, and now I was on Papa God's path. He also shared the verse about heaven with me: "The foundations of the city walls were decorated with every kind of precious stone. The first foundation was jasper, the second sapphire, the third agate, the fourth emerald, the fifth onyx, the sixth ruby, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, the ninth topaz, the tenth turquoise, the eleventh jacinth, and the twelfth amethyst." Eight means new beginning.

My elderly friend kept me from being lonely, and I helped ease the pain of the loss of her sister. She believed in me, and all she saw was somebody who had been kind and loving to her. She didn't see all of the rituals, rape, and torture. I went and visited with her every other week. We sang hymns (she played the piano) and talked about Papa God. She gave me a card that I still have. It's a picture of an old school house. She was a teacher when the school was a one room schoolhouse. The scripture on the card was 1 John 4:16. This is now my favorite verse. "And so we know and believe the love God has for us. God is love." I wrote her a poem about our time together, and when she passed away, I felt an intense loss.

At this point in my life, all of my support system in Kentucky was gone, and Papa God brought an opportunity for me to go to a ministry school in Tennessee. I spoke with the overseer of the supernatural school of ministry, and he said, "Sometimes God just wants us to make a choice to do something because we would like to do it." That advice sounded very liberating because I never thought Papa God would give me the ability to do something I wanted to do. So I told Papa God if he wanted me to go to the ministry school, then He would have to provide. So in a bittersweet gift, my friend who passed away left me just the amount of money I needed to go to the school. I quit my job, packed up, and moved to Tennessee on the day before my birthday six years ago. I was thirty-nine years old. I still talk to my spiritual papa a lot and other people I met there, but I haven't gone back to Kentucky. Kentucky is where most of the torture was done, so it brings many horrible memories. I miss my spiritual papa horribly, but he and his wife are doing very well.

There was intense warfare that happened with me leaving the state of Kentucky. A lot of territorial demons tormented me. I had the most intense pain in my head as I arrived in Tennessee, and we were trying to get our furniture unloaded. Then the warfare intensified as I began school! I began to learn more about the supernatural in a pure sense, not in the demonic realm. The devil was not happy that his territory was being destroyed. I genuinely felt the anointing flowing in all of the speakers that were brought in to teach our classes and conferences that were held there. I became great friends and family with the director of the school's wife, Wendy. She was kind and trustworthy, and she believed in me. He was the man I had talked with on the phone before I moved there, the main reason I ended up in Tennessee. They truly showed me what genuine family really is. Things don't have to be perfect in a family, but you're always there for each other. Papa God showed me that they didn't just say they were family; they really meant it. She and her husband provided an alternative that I needed to where I was living, so I moved in with them. I had a beautiful bed with a white fluffy cover and soft pillow. They provided food that was actually good for my body, not fast food. She really taught me how to start taking care of my body and not feeding myself horrible food that destroyed my body. Even to this day, I have no doubts that if I needed somewhere to go, I would always be welcome at their house no matter what.

Every time we had worship before our ministry time and teaching in the ministry school, Papa God would bring up new memories and bring healing. Papa God showed me as we see our identity in who He says we are, the chains fall off, and we walk in our Kingdom Authority! I genuinely saw ethnicity, and handicapped people into my life to love and show me who I really was. Every time something evil was happening, the programmers would say, "Be positive." That meant I had to forget. When Christians said, "Be positive," or "Think about what is good," I thought that meant someone was getting raped or tortured. Papa God began to heal me and show me the difference between being positive and denial. Being positive meant being honest about what Papa God is doing or what Papa God can do. Being positive did not mean you're supposed to pretend or deny the truth. This was also difficult when dealing with the faith confessions too. When I was sick, the programmers would say that I was faking it. They would say over and over that I wasn't sick, I was faking it. When I was crying, they would say I wasn't sad or in pain. Papa God is still healing me to understand how to be completely honest, and also how to genuinely believe at the same time. This was very confusing because of the programming.

The evil people showed up in the new town I was living in to intimidate and terrify me. Papa God caused me to be like the servant of Elisha in the scripture I shared previously. This has become one of my favorite scriptures. It shows the power of Papa God against our enemies! Second Kings 6:15–18 says, "When the servant of the man of God got up and went out early the next morning, an army with horses and chariots had surrounded the city. "Oh no, my lord! What shall we do?" the servant asked. 'Don't be afraid,' the prophet answered. 'Those who are with us are more than those who are with them.' And Elisha prayed, 'Open his eyes, Lord, so that he may see.' Then the Lord opened the servant's eyes, and he looked and saw the hills full of horses and chariots of fire all around Elisha. As the enemy came down toward him, Elisha prayed to the Lord, 'Strike this army with blindness.' So he struck them with blindness, as Elisha had asked." Papa God made them blind and unable to find me while they were there. They literally almost walked right past me while they were there, without even seeing me. He caused me to see that they weren't able to do anything to me because my mind wasn't under their control anymore.

When I initially got free, I was completely alone. I had no one. I was trying to protect the Christian couple and their family from the evil people. I didn't want them to get hurt any more than I had already hurt them. So I asked Papa God, "Who do You genuinely want me to love?" He brought to my mind the elderly ladies who were the Christian couple's adopted spiritual moms. These two ladies were sisters; their husbands had already passed away. I started going out to their house, spending time with them, and listening to their stories. I was doing whatever I could to show them love. This brought great healing for me because they didn't know anything about my past. They didn't know anything about my mistakes, so it was a clean slate for me. They just loved me, and I focused on them and loved them. This was also a way I could give back to the Christian couple for all of the things they had done for me. I had a lot of pain, guilt, and torment for all the pain I had caused them. I wasn't able to let my sins go. I kept beating myself up. I remember Papa God told me one day that being miserable wasn't doing anything for the Christian couple who rescued me. Genuinely living was the best way I could bless them for all that they had done for me. So I chose to let go of the condemnation that I had toward myself. The man had given me the scripture, "Therefore, there is now no condemnation for those who are in Christ." I began to focus, think, and pray about this scripture. It says there is no condemnation now, not after you beat yourself up enough.

One of the ladies got sick, and they put her in a nursing home. I would go pick up her sister and take her to the nursing home. This was a great joy! I began to see that maybe I wasn't evil and that I was capable of genuine love. Her sister ended up passing away; that was a great loss! I had for the first time really allowed my mind and spirit to love somebody without putting a wall up. I cried and sobbed when I lost her. When I was at the funeral, I saw the Christian couple who had given their life to genuinely give me freedom. They both told me that they forgive me. She told me that they pray for me. This was an awesome treasure to hear that they prayed for me. Papa God had also given me the name Beryl, from this beautiful lady who went to be with the Lord. It was her middle name. I will explain in detail about this a little later. This was another treasure that I would never forget. In my loss, He gave me a beautiful gift. During this time of loss, my amma (mama in Indian) gave me a necklace with an inscription that said, "I will carry you." Papa God knew that that was exactly what I needed to hear.

A couple of months later, my cat got sick for the third time with cancer. The first time she got sick, I had noticed she had a knot on her belly. My friend from church was a veterinarian. He said to bring her in. I found out she had cancer, and I had no money. I was so close to my cat; she was my family. She had been through a lot. I had her when I was still getting programmed. They had used her to get to me. They tortured her, and the pain of having to watch that was more hideous than anything they could do to me. She was free now, but she had scars from the torture. Now after all that she had already been through, she was sick with cancer. The veterinarian and his wife from my church were so kind and loving. They did the surgery for free. She was so much better for a while, but then she got sick again, and another surgery had to be done. Again, they did the surgery for free! Papa God was really taking care of us. During the third time she got cancer, the veterinarian said she couldn't handle another surgery. I just couldn't let her go. I didn't want her to suffer, but I was afraid to give her up. I was praying and praying to have an idea when she was suffering and needed to be with Honest Jesus. She got so bad she wasn't even being able to walk and eat. She had a hole in her side from the cancer. I knew I had to stop the suffering. I just couldn't fathom seeing her die, though! Papa God showed me that I wasn't killing her by letting her go and ending her suffering. I took her to the vet, and I was sobbing the whole way there. I took her and held her, and Honest Jesus showed me that He walked into the room and put her in His arms. There was no pain for her any longer! She is running in heaven having so much fun!

Papa God gave me the verse in Habakkuk 2:2–3: "Then the Lord replied: 'Write down the revelation and make it plain on tablets so that a herald may run with it. For the revelation awaits an appointed time; it speaks of the end and will not prove false. Though it linger, wait for it; it will certainly come and will not delay.'" He gave me this verse over and over during my healing journey. I believe that His plan is to expose the evil people and bring millions out of darkness. I cling to this truth each day! I also believe that His Church will be awakened to the horrible evil that is happening in this country, and stand against it together in unity!

I still went to see the remaining sister after her other sister passed away. She needed me now more than ever. We were great friends and would talk for hours. I was terrified because when I visited her, I had to go back to the town that I had left when I became free. Every time I visited her, it was an ordeal. But I knew that Papa God was calling me to minister to her, so I went, choosing to trust that Papa God would take care of me.

I ended up getting my name legally changed because Papa God told me to. The name I had previously was a cult Illuminati name that I was tortured around. I had been praying for quite some time about what I should change my name to. I asked my elderly friend what her and her sisters' full names were. She told me that "Beryl" is a middle name of one of the ladies. It stood out to me, for some reason I didn't know. The next day, as I was reading the Bible, I opened my Bible to Song of Solomon 5:14: "His Hands are rods of gold set with beryl." Papa God said very clearly to me, "You are a precious gem. I have always had your spirit in My hand. This is your new name." Beryl is a precious gemstone. And Papa God had always had my spirit in His hand. This was a direct answer to the question I had asked Papa God, "Why didn't You protect me?" He said, "I wasn't able to protect your body because of the choices of evil people, but I always protected your spirit." No matter what they did to me, they could not destroy my spirit. So my how His Presence brought healing. I used to hate worship and praise, because I was forced to have sexual feelings as the evil people played worship music. My programmers would say, "Just praise the Lord to get free." That meant that they would stimulate my genitals till I had an orgasm, and then they would tell me that I was an evil whore. I was so confused. I hated myself for having sexual feelings. I felt so out of control that I allowed my programmers to continue to torture me because I was terrified of myself and the sexual feelings. I was starting to get free from the fear of Papa God's presence through the ministry school in Tennessee, and He was bringing truth to root lies that kept me from genuine worship. There were many times when Papa God was showing me the memories of all the horror I went through. He showed me so many times that He was weeping and weeping over me for the pain I had to endure. There was one time in particular that I remember being in my car and screaming out from the pain of the things that I was seeing. I was seeing detail after detail of all that I had lived through. During this time, I saw a vision of Honest Jesus standing up for me, just like when He stood up for Steven, when he was being stoned. I will never forget that! There were many times where I screamed and cussed at Papa God because I was so angry about what they had done to me. He always allowed me to get those emotions out and then brought truth.

I began to see the gifts that Papa God put within my life, like prophecy, teaching, and preaching. Before I left for India, Papa God had told me that I was called to preach, and I never told anyone what He had shared with me. Then when we got to India, an Indian pastor who didn't even speak English spoke through a translator that I would be a mighty preacher. That was a great confirmation of Papa God's word!

Throughout my stay in ministry school, I received healing from the programming of perfection, coping with the habit of always trying to be good enough. I was asked to be the secretary of the church and school. The pastor and his wife were very kind and knew about some of the things I had endured. The programmers began to harass the pastor and his wife by sending letters saying they were loving parents who just wanted to see their daughter. They were trying to make me look crazy. They had always told me that they would make me look crazy if I ever tell anybody about what they did to me. The letters, phone calls, and packages were sent frequently. I was sad that my friends had to deal with this. I found out that there wasn't any way I could get a restraining order, since they had not physically harmed me recently. They showed up at church, and just like Papa God had promised. I was surrounded by His fire. I didn't even see them. My pastor's wife told them they had to leave, and they couldn't touch me! I was continually intimidated by letters and packages sent to me and all the people I was close to—no matter what I tried, even when I contacted a retired Navy SEAL who was investigating sex trafficking to stop the harassment. He was unable to do anything, as well as the police, because of the statute of limitations.

Papa God always reminds me that he will bring justice. That is His promise to me. Luke 8:17 says, "For all that is secret will eventually be brought into the open, and everything that is concealed will be brought into the light and made known to all." When I was in India the last time, when I was praying about exposing the evil people and the horror they did to me, our car drove by a sign at that exact moment that said, "Truth can't be hidden forever!" This was another assurance from Papa God that they will be exposed no matter what things look like. He has showed me over and over the scripture Psalm 23:5: "You prepare a table before me in the presence of my enemies." Papa God is blessing my life even as the evil people fight me constantly.

When I took the position of administrative assistant for the church, I met a lot of big-name Christian leaders. I felt like I had to try to impress them and like I was lesser in worth than all of them. I felt like I was the slave and everybody was important and I wasn't. There had been so much programming about the church. I thought that every Christian hated me and they wanted me dead. It was a long journey toward healing—to see the truth that we are all just people who are loved by Papa God. I'm still learning that each day. He has shown me that it's not my job to judge who is sincere and who isn't. He has gifted people in many different ways. If people are ministering on a stage, that doesn't mean they are prideful. They may be the most humble people and are just following Papa God in their calling. I had to go to the memories where the evil people made me feel like a dog and less than everybody else and allow Papa God to show me that being in ministry and being in the limelight does not make you important. The person who is cleaning the toilets is just as important as the person who is speaking on the stage. Through all of this healing time, I was distraught a lot, and the enemy was always trying to cause division with the people around me. I remember during Sunday school when a lady said something, and I thought she was mad at me. I left and went out to my car and cried. I called out to Papa God to get rid of all of the intense rejection I felt. He spoke clearly to me. "How can anybody say who you are? They didn't create you." So since He made me, only He can say who I truly am. That gave me a lot of comfort.

When I took the job with the church, I had a lot of difficulty with working at the church by myself during the day. This was a result of all the rituals that were done to me in churches, baptismal, altars, and sanctuaries. I would try to make myself focus on the job I was doing, but I would feel the anxiety and fear of what might happen to me there. Churches had never been a safe place for me. During the rituals, the programmers would put dead people on the altar and say that I have to save them and cover their sins. They would force me to do sexual things to them to bring them to life. Churches had always been torture chambers for me. To be saved meant that I had to have sex with Jesus, whomever they chose him to be. I was told that all of us were slaves to God, so we're chained up. They twisted the scripture Romans 6:22, "You have become slaves of God," and told me that God said I was His slave for life. Papa God showed me during my healing journey, the beauty of the real church. His real Church is His people.

I met a genuine example of the Church while I was going to missionary school to be ordained. I met the genuine family I wish I had always had since birth. There was a Christian couple who took me in as an adopted daughter. She was the mama I never had. She spoiled me and took me shopping. She was always in my corner. She helped me get my book published. Papa God used her in a mighty way! You never know how you are impacting a person's life when you step out and obey. I choose to trust Papa God. He will always give us back more than what we give!

Chapter 17

Walking in Freedom

"It is for freedom that Christ has set us free. Stand firm, then, and do not let yourselves be burdened again by a yoke of slavery." Galatians 5:1

It's so difficult to explain how paralyzing it is to have these intense memories surfacing all day long. I have chosen to live my life, though, no matter how difficult it is! The alternative is to just not get up each morning, but the evil people have already stolen too much of my life already. I choose to deal with all of the triggers and memories of thirty years of torture. I choose to live the life I was given by Papa God! At least this way, Papa God can rescue other people through my willingness to tell my story. The opportunity to plan conferences for this Christian ministry in Tennessee was healing for me because I got to see people being healed by Papa God in church instead of being tortured. It was such a powerful testimony of Papa God's genuine love.

While going to this church, I met a man named Daniel. He had moved to Tennessee the same year I did. He was given a prophetic word to leave Florida and move to Tennessee to pursue a music career. He gave up his six-figure income to follow Papa God to Tennessee. He was a hairstylist in Florida, and he was playing guitar in a worship band. Papa God gave him guitar as a child to connect with him through music. Daniel is an amazingly gifted musician. All the people who were close to me mentioned that he would be a good guy to be friends with and possibly date. He was in an extremely difficult situation in his life because he gave away everything he owned and left his flourishing business to move to Tennessee. He didn't have food to eat at times, and he was sleeping on the floor, in an apartment that was infested with mold. He was trying to do what he thought Papa God was telling him to do. I started praying about Daniel, and I saw a tree outside my window. Papa God said Daniel was like the tree. His roots went deep, but the fruit hadn't shown up yet. Papa God showed me you're only as strong as your foundation. Just like the roots of a tree, a skyscraper's foundation is laid below the ground to create the most stability. To get to the bedrock, it normally requires deep excavation of soils overlaying the bedrock. However, building the foundation on bedrock (Papa God) is necessary, given the extremely large loads of skyscrapers. When the bedrock (Papa God) is exposed, the massive foundation could be placed.

While I was getting ministry one day, I wasn't even thinking about Daniel, and Papa God gave me a vision. In my vision, Daniel was a little boy, and he was being told he wasn't good enough and that he was a loser. He was afraid and rejected, and he decided he never wanted to be close to people. He told himself that he wanted to be alone. Then I saw myself as a little girl. I was being hurt, and they were saying, "We don't want you. You're a loser." I was afraid of myself, and I was forced to be fearful if I didn't have people to keep me from being bad. We both were carrying fear and rejection. Then I saw Papa God, and He was riding in a new convertible with me. I was a little girl. Then I saw Daniel and myself in the car as little children with Jesus.

From there, I saw us on a motorcycle with Honest Jesus. This ended up happening in the natural not long after that. I got a convertible with which Daniel and I went on lots of rides in the country, and we felt Papa God's presence. Daniel got a motorcycle, and we went riding, and I talked to Papa God the entire time. A little later, Daniel traded in that motorcycle, and he bought a Harley Davidson Road Glide. The motorcycle was too expensive, and we wanted to begin to save for a wedding. So he asked for Papa God to take the motorcycle from him because he couldn't afford it. That same week, someone stole the motorcycle, and his gap insurance paid for all of it except the down payment. This was testimony that Papa God is always working on our behalf.

At this point, it was the end of 2014, and Papa God showed me that He was going to establish a ministry specifically for exposing the truth of what I had been through. Papa God rescued me out of that hell, and He wanted to encourage others that He can rescue anybody from anything. I was living proof that He is big enough to heal the deepest pain, and not only heal it, but provide an abundant life afterward! Papa God shared that this was the time to move on from the church I had been at. There was something new He wanted to do! He shared with me He wanted me to have the freedom to share all of my story, and not be connected with any ministry so that I could share all of the things that He had asked. So I stepped away and got a job waitressing. This was a difficult time due to financial reasons, and I was unable to find a job. I kept asking Papa God to intervene, and He always provided for my needs. I made many mistakes as I learned how to live for the first time, but Papa God was always there!

Daniel had been praying about an engagement ring to give me. He went into place that had an antique store and different businesses, and there was a church there. He went to look at guitars, and while he was looking, he heard an angelic sound. It was from the worship music playing. He decided to go into the church service, and they were talking about marriage. He stopped by the antique store on the way out, and the ring he had been asking Papa God for was there. He had worked out all of the details. On Christmas day, Daniel gave me my presents, and I was disappointed that I didn't get a ring. Then he said, "Look in that stocking." The stocking was the one the Christian couple made for me. It was very special to me. I looked into the stocking, and there was my ring. Papa God gave me the gift of Jesus on Christmas, and He gave me my husband as well! The journey in our relationship has not been easy. There have been intense attacks on our marriage from the evil people, but we have had great healing along the way. The couple we met at church and who adopted me threw us a beautiful wedding. I walked down the aisle to "You Raised Me Up." This was the favorite song of the man who had the most to do with rescuing me from slavery. So I played it as a tribute to him and my freedom.

I had been unable to find someone to minister to me when I moved to Tennessee. It is extremely difficult to find Christians who minister to SRA and mind-control survivors. That is another reason why Papa God had me write this book. Papa God is calling His children to minister and pray for people who are trying to get out of what I went through. Unfortunately, it is difficult to even find Christians who believe that this type of mind control exists. It's hard for people to comprehend that there is that level of evil. There is a very real devil, and there are people who follow him.

I was referred to a man who had a Christian counseling ministry. I began going to ministry weekly. Papa God brought healing and truth during this time. The minister ended up getting cancer and passing away. He was an amazing man. During the programming, I had been told over and over that I was the cause of every person's death. When the minister died, I thought this was another case where I was the reason for bad things that happen to people. Even after getting free, I had Christians say they couldn't be around me because there was too much of a demonic battle. So I had a lot of rejection. Papa God showed me it was not my fault for the evil that was done by the Illuminati and the programmers, and even the warfare was their fault not mine. Little by little, I don't blame myself for things anymore. Papa God said "just like a sunrise doesn't have to try to be beautiful, it just is, that's the way His creation is. We are His creation! Jeremiah 33:3 [3]'Call to me and I will answer you and tell you great and unsearchable things you do not know.'

Throughout my healing journey for the last thirteen years, I have been through the training and ministry of Sozo, Freedom Encounters, Transformation Ministries, In His Steps, School of the Supernatural, Rapha Christian Ministries, and Daniel Duval Ministries. I have completed twenty-four plus Beth Moore studies; Priscilla Shirer, Shannon Ethridge, and other woman's ministries; numerous conferences; and three years of ministry school with Christian leaders and speakers. All of this just to get healing and deliverance and to be able to live my life without torment and terror. I don't say this to say that I'm responsible for my healing in anyway or to be prideful. I only say this to motivate people to see that we have to partner with Papa God to allow His healing to take place in our lives. He will not force His Way into my life or force me to allow Him to heal me. My only job is to make the choice to allow healing. I have a Papa God-given fight to not allow the evil people to take my life from me any longer, I will partner with Papa God to take down the enemy no matter what. To rescue the weak and enslaved till the last breath in my body. Ephesians 5:11 says, "Have nothing to do with the fruitless deeds of darkness, but rather expose them." Are you willing to join the fight? I pray that you are, because survivors need you. We need you to see the truth and step up to allow Papa God to use your life to believe us, expose the evil, and fight against it. Prayer is one way that you can change things. If you can't gather enough compassion for me, think if this was your daughter, son, brother, sister, husband, wife… What would you be willing to do for them?

Papa God has genuinely promised me that millions will be set free. The genuine promises of Papa God are ours. Even if we don't see them, we have to trust that Papa God is working. It's what we focus on. When we lasso and the rope goes over the horse's neck, that horse is ours. So whatever we focus and pull to us is ours from Papa God. During my healing, I would look up and see a person parachuting, and Papa God said that genuinely trusting Him is like parachuting. You stand at the edge of the cliff and jump. A big area of healing that needed to take place was dealing with self-hatred. This healing happened day after day. I was learning that continual self-rejection is an open invitation to Satan. It was important for me to see this and stand against it. In what I said and how I treated myself, I began to learn to be kind to myself. I'm still healing daily. First Peter 5:8 says, "Be alert and of sober mind. Your enemy the devil prowls around like a roaring lion looking for someone to devour."

During my healing journey, sometimes, I would push and push to see the memories out of works. I had been programmed to always see the evil in myself, and if I wasn't seeing the evil within myself, I must be doing something horrible. The evil people used this programming against the ministry in Kentucky with the Christian couple. They had already gotten their manual of ministry and studied it and found a way to twist the ministry so it would not be effective. The evil people said instead of the ministry revealing the truth that I was a pure child of Papa God that the ministry was just there to trick me and show me the evil within me over and over. So every time I would get ministry, I would think I was getting tricked into exposing how evil I was. It was excruciating. They used this to program me against the Christian couple and the ministry that they were doing. To this day, I still get terror and fear before I get ministry. I do experience tremendous pain during my ministry, but it's pain that has been within me for decades. The ministry is allowing the pain to surface and be destroyed, while Papa God brings truth to replace the lies I was told. The momentary pain of this healing is a million times better than having pain for the rest of my life. Once the memory is healed and truth is brought from Papa God to the lies, I never have to see those things again. It is 100 percent finished. Also, as I get free, I'm able to have an abundant life that had been stolen from me before.

For the past ten years, Papa God has been asking me to write this book. He said to not to leave anything out. The evil people still try to intimidate, manipulate, and control me by showing up at my jobs. By showing up at my husband's work, by sending mail and pictures. But I refuse to back down, and I chose to tell the entire truth of what they did to me. Now is the time. Esther revealed who she was, even though she was in danger. "For such a time as this" (Esther 4:14). Just as Haman planned her destruction, Papa God reversed Haman's plan and reversed all of Satan's plan, for Esther's destiny to be brought forth. "Whoever digs a hole and scoops it out falls into the pit they have made. The trouble they cause recoils on them; their violence comes down on their own heads" (Psalm 7:15–16).

There is scripture after scripture that shows what Papa God says about evil men. Psalm 34:16 says, "The face of the LORD is against evildoers, to cut off the memory of them from the earth." Isaiah 31:2 says, "Yet He also is wise and will bring disaster and does not retract His words, but will arise against the house of evildoers, and against the help of the workers of iniquity." In Isaiah 42:13, it says, "The Lord shall go forth like a mighty man; He shall stir up His zeal like a man of war. He shall cry out, yes shout aloud; He shall prevail against His enemies."

As I write this, there are racial wars, political wars, and terrorist attacks all over the world. There are Illuminati elites who are orchestrating these attacks to cause a war so that they can bring martial law into place. If they can get the country divided, then they can bring it down. I believe Papa God has raised up President Trump as a trump card to destroy the Illuminati's plans and unite this country for Papa God. I call all Christians to pray together for the truth to be exposed about the Illuminati. "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves" (Matthew 10:16). That we would pray for each other and the destruction of the New World Order. Also, that President Trump will be aware of their tactics and will be backed in prayer to expose them.

Lance Wallnau has been criticized extensively, but he has been a major force in exposing how Papa God brought Trump into office and the battle that he is fighting against the elite. The recent candidate and her husband have been a force behind childhood pedophilia for decades, and they are gathering her victims from all countries, especially the United States. When she chose her election day venue at the glass-enclosed auditorium, she was saying to the victims that her evil was shielded by all the people she is paying off to keep her secrets, the invisible shield of protection by those elites close to her. There will be a day in eternity that she will not be able to hide her evildoing. Everything will be exposed for all to see.

Another area that Papa God has been sharing truth about is the direct correlation between electrical waves and demons. All demons ride on electrical waves. With the current electronic age, this means that every time we use our phones, watch TV, etc., we are opening ourselves up and submitting ourselves to the electronic waves of these devices. This does not mean that watching TV or talking on the phone is wrong, in any way. It just means that we have to be wise and cover ourselves in prayer before submitting to what is going on in our environment. Take Facebook for example, it is the motherboard of our electronic system in this country, gathering information 24/7. The government and elite can track what you like, dislike, what time you get up, go to sleep, go to eat, on and on…How do you take down your enemy? You study every detail about them. Every weakness is picked apart to strategically bring them to ruin without them ever being aware that they are fighting against anyone. That is what Hitler did. His reign was planned for years and years before he took over Germany. Daily, he desensitized them to what he was doing bit by bit, and before they knew it, they were no longer free. Even dreams are manipulated through electronic impulses. The evil people do rituals and act out the dream, then scan a picture of the person they want to turn you against, apply the picture of the person's face on top of their face, then summon the demons to transmit the dream to the electrical waves during REM sleep cycle. If the person has already been opened up to demonic spirits, then an access point and portal is open for them to transmit the dream. Ever since I became free, I have had nightmare night after night—dreams so specific I knew that they were sent by the Illuminati. Papa God showed me that there were portals and access points opened up by the Illuminati during my sleep. I pray specifically for Papa God to stand guard over those portals and access points. And I pray against any electronic messages being sent while I sleep.

As a child, I was hooked up to a telephone with sensors. They scanned my female programmer and downloaded electrical impulses into the left part of my body. They placed an electrode in my temple and jaw. This was planted within my body to make a connection electronically to their computer systems. The electrode in my temple was the receiver, so I could receive the electrical impulses and messages by Morse code that they wanted me to get. The electrode in my jaw was the transmitter. It was used to send message back to them about my location and what I was doing every second. The left side of my body was planted with DNA from my female programmer to cause a soul tie and legal right for the demons to bond to those electrodes. The evil people told me that I was a cyborg taken from her and that I was a replica of her. This is terrifying because I was told that I was no more than a robot made from her DNA. So this set up a double bind of denial in my mind. I wanted to be like her because then I was told I would be real. But I didn't want to be like her because she was hideously evil. So in order to be real and to connect to people they tortured me to believe I had to be evil. This was a double bind because as a human being one of our basic needs is to connect and bond with others. This was used as another method to cause me to cling to my torturer and programmer.

The right side of my body, they called the denial side. I was told that DNA of my programmer was injected in my bloodstream to cause me to be a clone of her. So if I viewed my programmer as evil, that meant I had to view myself as evil. This was done to ensure that I never told anybody the truth about what they were doing to me. If I told anybody, then I would actually be telling people about myself being evil. They would twist this even further by telling me that I wasn't even real and that I was programmed as a robot and clone to kill whomever they forced me to kill. They said they tried to rescue me, but they couldn't so they injected me with their DNA to try and save me. They said I was the root of all evil. I was terrified when I wasn't being tortured and manipulated, and I begged to not be left alone. My fear was that I would be a robot that killed people all the time. During my ministry time, Papa God showed me that my emotions were evidence that I was not a robot or clone. A clone or robot would not have emotions; tears were able to be replicated but not the true emotions that Papa God created. If you do any google search on cloning and artificial intelligence, there are more signs of the truth that is hidden by the elite and the military starting to surface. The reason for this is that they have desensitized the American people into believing this is normal, and nothing to be concerned about. This has been going on for decades, all under the surface and disguise of a free nation. There are more slaves than ever before in our nation.

A specific actor is at the top of the mountain of entertainment in the Illuminati. His movies have been used to program all victims of Illuminati mind control. Starting with The Truman Show, Truman was in the Illuminati, and an Illuminati programmer. This movie shows how they program victims to be under their control every second of every day with an outside presenter part that has no idea they are being controlled. It also shows a control room, which controls the winds and airwaves in Truman's world. Then the movie Bruce Almighty, where a person is God. In all of the rituals, he is God, and he controls what clones and artificial programming is inserted within the victims. He is at the top of the experiments of mind control and how the brain works, creating actors out of victims. In another movie, he talks about part of the rituals, telling them they will be victims of the claw if they do not act and pretend. The claw is the connector to the real world through electrocution and electrical implants, through which they control victims with daily. The Mask is the denial world they created by making each victim wear a mask that electrocutes them if they do not pretend and act like their programmers are good. These movies are used to bury all memories of who this actor is and what he is really doing.

Chapter 18

Exposing the Darkness

"Behold, I will make those of the synagogue of Satan who say that they are Jews and are not, but lie—behold, I will make them come and bow down before your feet and they will learn that I have loved you." Revelation 3:9

Now I go and speak at every opportunity to share about the truth of sex trafficking. This is a great passion of mine to set the captive free. Sex trafficking is a small piece of what the Illuminati does, but if I can't get people to believe that there are sex trafficking victims here in the southern part of the United States, how will I ever get them to believe and fight with me against the evil Illuminati mind control? During one of my ministry times, I was weeping loudly at the depth of my being because of the sadness I felt that people did not believe the truth about what millions of people are enduring here in the US. Jesus showed me that He was weeping too and that He is very sad that people do not believe, especially His people. He said that they do not know. They have been deceived and have been clouded in their vision. Throw off the clouds and deception of denial brought by the enemy, and chose to see the truth of what is happening in this nation. The freedom of millions of people depends upon it! The freedom of your children depends upon it. Your freedom depends upon it.

There were so many times that Papa God brought an avalanche of healing through a word or a small thing that I never would have thought He would use to heal me. I was at a women's conference called the Ball in the Fall. I went to the restroom, and I couldn't get the toilet paper off of the roll, I was annoyed, and I finally tore a jagged piece of toilet paper off. Papa God said, "This is like healing. It's not perfect. It's a little at a time, jagged and torn, but I will heal all of you a little at a time. Papa God can use the smallest things and normal everyday things to speak to us. Papa God went on to say this is how you are qualified to speak to other people. You are not perfect. You are in process just like every other person." This showed me that He will bring up every lie and memory in His Timing in His way, and He will flush all of those lies down the toilet, never to return. After that, there was a little girl about three or four years old with a pretty dress and tiara on, sitting in front of me; and she turned around, smiled, and showed me her tiara. At that moment, Papa God said, "Those parts of yourself that you were told are monsters, werewolves, vampires, and pure evil, I see them just like I see this little girl." My view of myself changed in that moment, and I began to cry. I was just a little girl with a beautiful dress and tiara, the royalty of Papa God, even at the deepest darkest part of my being. Papa said, "If that little girl asked for something to eat, would you give her things that you knew would kill her, or would you give her things that were going to strengthen her and bring her life?" At that moment, I knew that I had been feeding my body things that I knew would kill me, and that I had been doing that because I wanted to kill those parts of myself. Feeding your body well is loving yourself and being kind to yourself.

Another revelation Papa God brought about my identity happened when I was working through a memory with some amazing friends that I have. They minister to many SRA survivors. During that ministry, Papa God showed me He was digging a jewel out of the sand on a beautiful beach. When He got to the jewel, the jewel shone so bright I was blinded. The stone was green like beryl. He said that the jewel was me. I was shining brightly just because that is who I was created to be, not because I did anything. A jewel just shines! Then He showed me the evil people taking the jewel and sanding it, throwing it, stomping it, and burying it. That is what the evil people were doing to me. They were trying to bury and destroy who I genuinely was created to be. This brought great healing! At that point, He showed me paintings on the wall that a friend of mine had painted, and He said that that was true beauty. The paintings would not be especially spectacular to people who looked at the surface for beauty, but for people who choose to look deep to see the genuine beauty. They were extraordinarily beautiful. He sees the genuine beauty within us. He sees the colors and creativity and passions. He sees who we really are. My friends have the gift of seeing the beauty that Papa God sees that other people do not. When looking at survivors and victims of satanic ritual abuse and government-sponsored mind control, you have to look past the outside programming and see who Papa God truly formed them to be. This will get you through the depth of the programming, anger, rage, hate, and demonic activity that has been programmed into them to cover up the genuine person created by Papa God!

As I write this book, I'm learning what rest genuinely is meant to be. The evil people programmed me to believe that I would only have rest when I watched TV. I was told this was because they could connect to my mind through the electrical waves and control me. So my entire life, I have been addicted to watching TV. Even though I wanted to do other things, I was driven to watch TV so that I would be controlled. This was the only fake rest that I had. I always felt drained and depressed after watching TV, but I didn't know how to stop. My healing has been layer by layer. So I would get freedom, and then another area would be exposed; then I would fall into watching TV constantly again. This was driven by intense fear and terror. The terror carried electrical currents too. And until I began to address all of the sources of energy attacking me, I was fighting a losing battle. The lady who ministers to me wrote a prayer that Papa God gave her, called the energy-blocking prayer. Since praying that prayer for the first time in my life, I have not had any compulsion to watch TV!

The encouraging part of healing is that once an area is healed by Papa God, that area never again has to be visited. It is over! When we settle with keeping our pain and woundedness, we keep the wounds for a lifetime, and the pain continues. That's why I encourage every single person to seek healing; healing brings abundant life from the hand of Papa God. I don't want to settle for anything other than an authentic life.

Another area of false rest that was programmed into me was eating fast food and sugary foods. If I wanted to make sure I didn't sin, I was tortured to believe that I had to feed myself things that hurt my body. These types of things exist in every person's life, just not to this degree of being programmed to make those choices. The enemy programs people to believe that certain things—whether it's drugs, Facebook, food, or whatever—are the answer for finding rest and peace from our pain. The only rest from pain is a true genuine connection with Papa God. No counterfeit will do what the presence of Papa God will do to bring rest. As I was writing this, I heard Papa God say, now genuinely rest, so automatically my mind went to going to my house and watching TV. Then I thought, you know, I feel at rest now. I was at a place of connection and communion with Papa God. He always teaches us something new every second of every day if we listen.

Another way the evil people connect remotely to victims are through sensors that are put in the body, close to the heart, brain, or other essential organs. The working of the organs creates algorithms that transmit to sensors, and the sensors communicate with the receptors that they have in their satellite system and computers. This is already being done with organ transplants. Hospitals use algorithms to locate the organs of people who need a transplant the most. This has been done for many years, but now people are desensitized to the moral and ethical issues this brings. The evil people use the sensors to scramble the signals so that it makes it feel almost impossible to connect to anybody because of the static and confusion in the atmosphere. There is a literal matrix that is put in place to cause confusion. Then demons are funneled through the rabbit hole or portal. This is what is shown in the movie the Matrix. Most sci-fi movies are based on some form of programming. This causes the American people to be desensitized to the truth that there are people who are being tortured, manipulated, and controlled every day. The evil people use encryption keys to keep the mind from going to specific information that is held in the unconscious. This is demonically set up through ritual sacrifice.

There is so much interference with the spirit realm through the electrical wavelengths that the evil people send; it is very difficult to communicate with Papa God. When I take a bath or shower, the static is reduced significantly, because tap water is not conductive. I can talk with Papa God during this time and feel like I'm not warring the entire time. During the times of war, the promise of Psalms 1 is what I cling to.

> Blessed is the one who does not walk in step with the wicked or stand in the way that sinners take or sit in the company of mockers, but whose delight is in the law of the LORD, and who meditates on his law day and night. That person is like a tree planted by streams of water, which yields its fruit in season and whose leaf does not wither—whatever they do prospers. Not so the wicked! They are like chaff that the wind blows away. Therefore the wicked will not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the assembly of the righteous. For the LORD watches over the way of the righteous, but the way of the wicked leads to destruction.

Even as we speak, I'm getting e-mails from the programmers. The e-mails contain hidden messages to me such that when a Christian looked at it, they look as though they are loving kind parents. I have been told by Christians, "Why don't you just sit down with them and work things out?" This infuriates me, because they have no idea about the level of evil that these people are operating in; they are taken over by evil completely. Not only do they choose Satan willingly with knowledge of the Word and who Papa God is. They gave their entire creation over to Satan to be used for whatever, whenever, and however. There is no limit to the evil that can be done through a person who has given up their created body of the Almighty Papa God over to Satan. They have made their choice.

The most recent e-mail I received from the programmers was about Yom Kippur, the day of atonement. To Christians and other people looking with their natural eyes, this is just an innocent e-mail. But to a victim who has been tortured around Yom Kippur and forced to be used as an atonement for other people's sins, this is a message of terror. Also, the day of atonement was used to make us turn against Papa God, and they would say that he required "us," the people with mixed breed status, to find another way of atonement. He refused to die or atone for our sins. Papa God in my healing process showed me that His blood flows through my veins; ultimately, He is the source of all DNA and bloodlines. People have a difficult time accepting this because they put such emphasis on genetic and biological family, and that is important, but spiritual family is the most important and the source of all real family that is above all other family. If we could as the body of Christ begin to see things in this light, we would have much more compassion and unity in the church. Instead of fighting against each other, we would see that we are all brothers and sisters in Christ. We are a family that will be together for eternity. Why shouldn't we have each other's backs? Why shouldn't we encourage each other and support each other?

Currently, the last form of harassment has been a threat to sue me. I did an online interview, and the programmers contacted the lady who interviewed me. They intimidated and threatened to sue. They continue to send e-mails and use other victims to try and manipulate me to be quiet. They had a victim donate to my ministry with a specific amount that was donated that triggered deep memories. For example, five dollars was donated, and they had told me that if I ever told anybody about what they were doing, they would eliminate me. The number five was the number of people in the house where I was enslaved. There were two programmers, and two other victims, plus myself. The five would be brought to four, when they killed me. In rituals, they would torture me and say that they had removed me from the five. Then they would put me in a cage and act like they didn't see me. I didn't exist. So now they are trying to silence me because they know I'm talking. If I don't say something, who will? If I don't stand up, who will? I refuse to sit around and play things safe when other people are dying and being tortured every day. That is not who Papa God created me to be.

How about you? Are you going to live a comfortable life, or the life that Papa God intended for you to live? Because that life will bring peace but not comfort. He is always pushing us out of our comfort zones to grow and to soar higher. He has great things for us if we step out of our comfort and choose to listen to His voice and follow His plan. He may be saying to you, "This is real. Believe this," and your mind is saying there is no way this could have really happened. Ask Papa God to show You what voice to listen to. Satan will always try to use our logical mind against us, but our logical mind is a gift from Papa God. It's the lies that the enemy uses against us that try to distort our logical mind. That is why it takes genuine faith to walk with Papa God, to see past the natural into the spiritual. I pray that every Christian will begin to walk in the Spirit and listen to Papa God's voice. He is crying out for us to be free. Will you hear Him please?

Svali Speaks Again

Healing from ritual abuse and mind control

Mizpah: Svali Speaks Again
About
Contact
Blog
Articles Book Info

The Two Kinds of Amnesia

The two kinds of amnesia

The two kinds of amnesia

When a survivor does not remember a particular event or experience, there are two basic possibilities. One is that the part of that person, who participated in that event or experience, vowed to forget what transpired. The other possibility is that a different part of that person participated in that event or that experience, and there are "barriers" between the different parts that prevent communication, mutual awareness, or permits awareness in only one direction (e.g.: part A always know what part B does, but part B does not even realize that part A exists).

Amnesia due to agreements to forget what happened

In the first case, where the parts of the survivor who participated in the event or experience vowed to forget it, it is important to explore why that part of the survivor agreed to forget. Was it to protect a loved one? (E.g.: The person was told "If you remember, your mother will die." Was it to protect that part's own sanity or sense of goodness? (E.g.: The person was told, "If you remember, you will go crazy," or, "If you forget, God will also forget your sin.") Was it to display loyalty? (E.g.: The person was told, "If you forget, that protects the group because you will then never divulge our secrets).

This type of amnesia is very common for the "day time" or "normal" parts of the person who have no memory of any cult activity. Often, these parts make up the "person" who first comes to therapy and believes that it is the other parts who have participated in cult activity and are programmed. In fact, the "day time" or "normal" parts of a survivor are also programmed and also participate in cult activity – but they are under vows to forget and be completely amnesic.

These reasons will need to be addressed with truth, support and love. For instance, some important truths to share with parts to challenge their agreement to forget can be "remembering does not mean you are betraying the group", "remembering will not drive you crazy", "remembering does not mean that you are evil", "when you were little and you remembered then people died and there was a big earthquake – that was a set up in a programming studio – that does not really happen in real life". Prayer is critical – ask God what it is that the survivor needs to see about being afraid to remember. Often, it is difficult for the survivor (or the therapist!) to know precisely what truth that the traumatized parts need to hear the most – but G exactly what the survivor needs. As part of addressing this type of amnesia, the following can be part of the healing process:

- Renouncing the agreements/vows/covenants to forget; asking God for the truth
- Repenting for all sins involved in the making of the agreements/vows/covenants – rituals, sacrifices, sexual acts, etc.
- Breaking all unholy ties with the others involved in the agreements/vows/covenants
- Renouncing agreements for any sort of punishment or retaliation to fall on self or loved ones in the event that the survivor remembers; asking God to provide protection for self and loved ones, for blessing
- Renouncing the belief that remembering leads to horrible consequences and the program to not remember must not be broken; affirming that knowing the truth brings freedom and healing – being mind-controlled to forget brings harm
- Repenting for all sins involved in whatever events that the amnesia was meant to cover
- Asking God to heal all traumas involved

Amnesia due to different parts participating in the event or experience

The second type of amnesia is when a different part of the person participated in that event or that experience, and there are “barriers” between the different parts that prevent communication, mutual awareness, or permits awareness in only one direction (e.g.: part A always know what part B does, but part B does not even realize that part A exists). For instance, if an assassin part has done a hit the night before, typically the “normal”/ “daytime” part of the person who is a kindergarten teacher will have absolutely no idea what happened, due to the barriers between these two different parts. She might feel a little tired from having less sleep than usual, maybe even slightly depressed (or not at all), but she will not have any memory of the event.

In this type of amnesia, the “barriers” are installed very early in the person’s childhood and are reinforced throughout the person’s lifetime. The “barrier” is most fundamentally a refusal between parts to communicate. Barriers are installed in a few basic ways:

- “Cult parts” are put through various set-ups to make them refuse to let the “normal/daytime” parts know what they do. E.g.: When a child the very young, the two different sets of parts are allowed to be “out” in the body at the same time. The emotions of the day time parts prevent the cult parts from doing their duties. The day time parts are cued back in and only the cult parts get punished by the programmer. The cult parts are then told that they should never let the day parts know what is going on or the cult parts would become “weak” and incompetent.
- “Day/ normal” parts are taught to fear knowing anything that the cult parts do. E.g.: When the child is very young, the cult parts are cued out then told to kill. The “day /normal” parts are then cued out and are horrified by the murder. The programmer then tells the child they can “make it all go away” by building a wall between them and the “bad parts” inside. The programmer then helps the child to build a wall in front of corpse and tells the child that that takes all the badness away.
- Both “cult parts” and “day/normal parts” are taught to believe that being in the body at the same time and sharing information will lead to great pain and destruction. E.g. When the child is very young, the programmers cue both set of parts out, then tortures then child or a loved one in front of the child. The torture stops when one set of parts go back in deeper. The programmer than warns the child that the two sets of parts must never be out at the same time or share information.

- Some parts are programmed to be memory "buffers" i.e. they stand between different groups of parts to block any communication or sharing of memories. E.g.: When the child is very young, she or he is placed in a large room. On one side of the room are people engaged in "normal" activities. In the other side of the room, people are engaged in "cult activities". If people from one of the room engage with the other side, both are "killed" (the child is typically too young to recognize the staged deaths). The child tries to stop the communication and is praised when she does so. The programmer tells these parts of the child that their job is to prevent disaster by preventing different sets of people from communicating.

Healing this kind of amnesia involved addressing the reasons that parts have for maintaining any "barriers" to communication, for not telling and not knowing. The survivor is put through multiple traumatic experiences from a very young age; the examples above list only a small sample of the "programming set-ups" used to convince different parts to remain isolated from one another and under control of the group. As with the first type of amnesia, prayer for truth, exposure of the lies involved in the belief system running the programming and healing of traumas involved is critical. As part of the healing process for this type of amnesia, the process can include:

- Renouncing the agreements/vows/covenants for parts to never communicate, never be aware of each other, and/or to despise or fear each other
- Repenting for all sins involved in the making of the agreements/vows/covenants – rituals, sacrifices, sexual acts, etc.
- Breaking all unholy ties with the others involved in the agreements/vows/covenants
- Renouncing agreements for any sort of punishment or retaliation to fall on self or loved ones in the event that the parts communicate; asking God to provide protection for self and loved ones, for blessing
- Renouncing the belief that parts communicating leads to horrible consequences and the program to not communicate must not be broken; affirming that knowing the truth and getting to know each other inside brings freedom and healing – being mind-controlled to stay separate brings harm
- Repenting for all sins involved in whatever events that the lack of communication is meant to hide
- Asking God to heal all traumas involved

Share this:

Twitter Facebook

Loading...

Blog at WordPress.com.

richm
Your address

Your phone number
Your e-mail address

(Your agent's name)
(Your agent's address)

77,000 words

The Thread

by

Contents

Foreword

"My father," Jeanne blinked, struggling to gain some composure, "was Adolf Hitler."

"You're lying," I said, but I knew that she couldn't be. "The drug - you have to tell the truth." She nodded. Suddenly, everything made sense. I knew that she had been involved in the German American Bund and its predecessor group and that my family had some connection to the CIA. I even suspected that the organization was a front for Nazis living in America, but this was the key to everything. As the evening went on I took every opportunity to ask every question I could think of. I learned things that many people had been killed to protect.

We're not there yet, though. I'm writing this manuscript, manifesto, testament - call it what you will - to shed as much light on the secrets and lies that have kept the Reich in power and the world in a state of constant conflict. Everything I've done, learned, failed at and triumphed in will be covered as best I can in the medium. Where possible I will include footnotes and references to evidence but in some cases I only have my words and memories.

Treating the Reich and its members like other people is a mistake. They are people that have chosen inhumanity - cannibalism, cruelty, and rape are du jeur for them. It is possible for people to come back from that, but it requires a choice on their part. They cannot be approached with the benefit of the doubt.

They view Americans as a subjugated people, whose only duty is to be supplicant to their rulers. They see us as livestock in the truest sense of the word. It will never be known exactly how many people they have devoured in their barbecues and orgies and rituals but the number must be at least in the thousands.

To say that this endeavor is my life's work is an understatement. My earliest memories are formed around my experiences with my family and the CIA has followed me my entire life. It was only when I started to pry deeper into the things that I took for granted that the walls around me began to crumble and I saw my prison for what it was. My testimony will form the basis of this book, but I will do my best to illuminate and comment where I feel like further understanding would be valuable. I started this manuscript on August 5th, 2020 because I knew that when the time came, getting it out there to the public as soon as possible would help in the understanding of how we got here and how we might even begin to heal from this.

There are some elements of this that seem fantastical - the prophecy from Aliester Crowley and the summoning of the Moonchild in particular. I started out 2019 as an ardent atheist but that is no longer a tenable position for me to hold. For this to all be random would require for coincidences that would otherwise be astronomically unlikely to occur to fall neatly into place. I don't make any claim of divinity but someone out there is watching my back. Maybe it's God, aliens, time travelers or some force unimaginable by humankind - but there is something out there and it wanted this to come to light.

The world now has something it didn't have before - knowledge of the groups and individuals who shaped much of the last century to their horrible designs. It isn't going to be easy to move forward and re-imagine what our world can be but we must.

We need a doctor, a mending, a promise. A hope that tomorrow will be better than today. I hope that you see me for what I am - a man doing his best in a world where that isn't good enough. Many of you feel the same way, even if you're afraid to admit it. Admitting that you're wrong about something is painful, in a way, but it opens your heart to the possibility of healing from that pain. As we step into the future, I hope to be your guide.

If you want the juicy bits, skip to the end and know that key elements of this testimony were provided to Senator Bernie Sanders on July 15th 2019 at Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia and were entered into a timestamped Congressional lockbox as soon as possible afterwards.

Chapter One

1987

I was brought to a gathering at a house out on Long Island. There was a pond in the backyard and a small wooded area near the driveway. There were multiple stories of the house and I remember that the kitchen was a dark stained wood with an exit to the backyard and a room above it with a window looking out.

When we first arrived, there was a small area where the children met each other. Eventually, we were all told to gather, so I went with my family. There was a speaker - an older, wrinkled man with short brilliant white hair and a tiny, wiry frame. I was instructed to heil to him and shown what that meant. He was someone from Hitler's inner circle - I believe that it was Himmler.

He went on a long rant about how we were hiding in the shadows and should be open and proud that the Nazis conquered America. He said that where he lived, he wore his medals and uniform in public. He also said that he had done so at a local grocery store on the way there and the group had admonished him. I believe it was a Piggly Wiggly and that the story made it to the regional news.

Tom and Rick were angered by this and one of them shouted that this wasn't their country that it was Hitler's wish that they remain in the shadows. The man replied that maybe that was so, but he didn't want to have to interact with subhuman filth in his day to day.

I was introduced to him as the heir to the Reich and he sized me up. I don't remember what he said to me, but shortly after, they brought out another child. I pointed and exclaimed to Rick that there was another child who hadn't been with the others and he quieted me, telling me that child was food. They sacrificed him and roasted the body over a fire.

Afterwards I cried and asked Rick if they were going to do that to me and he said no. I asked why had the boy looked so much like me? They drugged me and told me that only a few were sacrificed like that and I would never be.

Later that evening, Tom approached Rick and suggested that they kill the Nazi. He felt like what he said to the crowd was too judgmental and that he felt that they had done good work with the Fourth Reich. Rick agreed, but said that is mother wouldn't be too happy if they killed him. So, Tom suggested that I do it. They were building me up to be their heir and savior and were recording my actions with a scribe, so they would tell him that I chose to kill him.

To that end, they brought me up to the room above the kitchen area. Tom set up a rifle and had it aimed to where the Nazi would be siting. He made me pull the trigger, which fired the gun and hit him in the upper body. It didn't kill him but it knocked him down and he was writhing in pain. Tom and Rick rushed me down to finish the job.

Tom turned him over and covered his mouth as he cursed at them. As we gathered around him, a man carrying a gun approached from the driveway and asked who they were. Tom and Rick identified as Reich and the man identified as with another group. He seemed like Mossad, but it was dark and I didn't spot any insignia. He had orders to kill the Nazi but as it appeared they had that in hand, he left. I don't recall if Tom later reported him or let him go.

Tom and Rick then instructed me to hold my foot down against the side of his neck. I asked them why and they said that it would kill him. I asked why they wanted to kill him and they reminded me it was because of before. I remembered that he was racist and asked if that was the reason. Tom laughed, saying that racism was kind of their whole deal. He clarified that, no, it was because he was a threat to the Reich.

I did what I was told. I don't remember if that was what killed the man or if he lost too much blood from the gunshot wound or if Tom or Rick finished the job. I know that he died and then, right after he died, Tom suggested for extra effect that I almost drown but miraculously survive. He pointed at the pond, which was frozen over.

Rick wasn't so sure about that idea, but Tom insisted. They brought me to the water and I hung on for dear life as they tried to drown me. Once they got me into the water, Tom told me that when people drown, water goes in their nose and lungs and that they would only let me out once I let that happen. I took a big gulp and let the water in and I felt burning and began to sink.

They immediately pulled me out and carried me to the kitchen. I hadn't lost consciousness but I felt dull and cold and could barely move. I coughed up the water in my lungs pretty much immediately, but I was starting to get hypothermia.

They got my cold clothes off and started a hot shower, but I was close to losing consciousness. The Reich believed in magic, so Tom suggested they look up a "spell". Really, in hindsight, he had me pick a German language book off the shelf and since Rick didn't read German, he told Rick that the "spell" was for him to rape me in a hot shower.

They took off my winter jacket and stripped me down. Rick brought me into the shower and did what Tom told him. He kept me in the hot water long enough for me to gain enough body temperature back to be awake and aware. I don't know if I was actually raped or not, but I believed I had been.

The next morning they called in the scribe - a middle-aged man with a dark gray and white beard. He was Catholic - I don't recall if he was assigned by the Vatican or part of the Reich or both. He was later killed at his office by the same organization that the soldier from the night before was from. He listened to Tom and Rick's account, then turned to me.

He asked me what happened in my own words and was surprised that they had convinced me to kill or at least attempt to kill the man. I insisted that was what happened and he included it in his notes but insisted on noting that it was done through the direct guidance and instruction of my father and my uncle.

#

When Jean had discovered what Tom and Rick had me do, she was furious and insisted that I speak with his widow. She flew me down to a country in Central or South America - I remember that there was a large mansion that was mostly empty - it may have been Hitler's former vacation home.

She had me meet with his wife in a large wood-floored room with tall windows on the wall. Jean had me explain what had happened and she became angry. She ranted about how her husband was a great and powerful man and I was telling her that he died in an accident - killed by some child?

At this point, Jean interjected and told her that I wasn't just any child and told me to tell her my full name. I did - Ernest Adolph Marin. She was surprised. She took my face in her hands to examine my features. "Oh," she exclaimed, "then the Reich truly has its future!" She insisted to Jean that I was Adolf Hitler reincarnated. Jean humored her and allowed her to give me several gifts.

She gave me a flat wooden music box that played Eidel Weiss as well as a collection of photos of Hitler, her husband, and their inner circle. She insisted that I look at the pictures every day and try to remember them. The items were packed into a small suitcase (speckled tan) and we brought them with us when we left.

The plane took off from a small runway in a very rural area. Federal authorities in the nation we were leaving knew of the Reich's presence there. After that flight, Jean brought me back to my parents.

Rick sealed up all of the items in the suitcase except for the music box, which my mother kept in their bedroom. The suitcase was put in the attic at the time, though it may have since been moved to my childhood bedroom closet. They may also have moved the items to somewhere else or discarded them completely.

#

After a play session at the local YMCA, my mother brought me home and Jean was there. She asked me if I wanted to see how TV was made. I said yes and so did my mother but Jean said that she couldn't come on the plane because she was pregnant. Even if she wasn't it was really something intended just for me. My mother was upset but let her take me anyway.

We drove to an airport and boarded a small private jet. I took a nap during the trip there and when we landed I was surprised at how hot and sunny it was. We were driven by private car to a studio and before we entered she said that I would probably recognize the set and I did - it was the Cheers bar set. There was a studio audience and a large crowd in the set itself. It was made up to look like a wedding. The street portion outside the door was put away - only the stairs were there.

She waved towards two men, Glen and Les Charles and said that she was from Central and wanted to show her grandson how TV was made. They said that they were about to shoot and she suggested that I be put in the crowd scene, selecting two prominent "guests" a woman in a blue jacket seated next to a man and telling me to sit between them. The show runners didn't really seem to be able to protest. The director started the scene and I asked the people if this was a wedding. I was confused because that wasn't really what the show was about in my mind.

I kept asking questions and then Ted Danson said that he couldn't concentrate with me talking. Shelley Long said something about going back to one and Ted said that he would miss having her as a scene partner. George Wendt said, "Sorry everybody, that's why we don't usually let kids in the bar."

The director put me in the pool room set and asked George and Rhea to watch me while they took some tight shots because they wouldn't be in that part of the scene. I had gone in my diaper and asked them if they were able to change it. They said no and that my grandmother should be able to, but I said that she didn't have the bag that my mother kept changing supplies in.

They got called out to finish their scenes and I waited. The wedding was completed with a yes and everyone cheered. Jean came into get me and Glen and Les told her not to feel too bad, that they weren't going to use it since Shelley's contract negotiations had fallen through. She rejected the 250k offer and instead took a lower deal with a movie studio that would let her take more time to be with her daughter.

Jean said that there needed to be a new actress to take on a similar role - a brunette who wanted to be involved in things more. The implication that I understood was that Diane and later Rebecca were both intended to be ciphers for my mother and Sam, apparently, my father.

We left and on the flight home Jean made me wait in the plane bathroom with my dirty diaper. When I saw the airing of the episode I recognized the extras.

#

After I first started to walk and talk in complete sentences, my mother walked with me around the neighborhood and told me to introduce myself. She said that I should say my nick name Ernie and that my full name was Ernest Adolph Marin and that if someone said something about my middle name to tell them it was spelled differently.

I introduced myself to a couple of neighbors - if they thought there was anything odd they didn't say anything. As we walked down 202 towards the downtown area, I introduced myself to a woman who teared up when I said my middle name. She looked at my mother and asked "How could you?" My mother told her that they were trying to honor my German heritage. We walked back to the house and my mother told my father what had happened.

He called Jean and said that they had a problem. He said that he didn't want the whole neighborhood to know that they were Nazis. She told him that the couple blocks we lived on were safe territory and that most of the people living there were involved in the agency in some capacity so they could handle that internally. He said that it wasn't and she said it was probably fine, but they would need to change my name. She said that she appreciated what they tried to do, but my middle name would have always been an issue. She said that she would be by later in the evening and for them to think about a new name in the meantime.

My parents asked for ideas and she suggested family names, like before, but honoring different members of the family. My parents settled on Richard Anthony.

When Jean arrived, she said that getting it changed federally was no problem since they controlled that. Changing it with the state would probably involve paying a fee or bribe, she wasn't clear. She said that the big thing to worry about was private companies like insurers who would purchase lists for solicitation. She suggested that my parents name my sister, who my mother was pregnant with, something that used the same initials to throw them off.

#

I was just barely starting to walk - my mother still mostly carried me around. I must have been around a year old. We had visited my grandparents and in the days leading up to the trip I overheard my father talking to Jean on a phone about how it was time to do something specific. When we left, we were accompanied by a man named Chris.

I don't remember if we went to their house first, but we did pick up my Aunt Emma's boyfriend for a game of golf. Emma was not in attendance, I think she had gone shopping with my grandmother. When they reached a certain point in the game, Chris scouted behind and confirmed that no one was close enough to see. My father pulled out a gun and told Emma's boyfriend to kneel down on the ground in front of them. My mother was holding me.

He was immediately scared and did as he was told and asked why Rick had a gun and what was going on. He assumed that it was related to organized crime and said he was paid up on books as far as he knew. He also asked my mother if it was because of the pass he made at her during the Christmas party. My father said that it wasn't about that. He said that his mother was a queen and she said that he had to die. The boyfriend asked how Rick admired his mother had anything to do with having a gun pointed at him. Rick clarified that she was a literal queen and that he was to die by royal decree.

He asked to see the decree and Rick said it wasn't on paper - her word was law. Margie chimed in and clarified that Jean had told her that she had to kill someone in order for her to be a part of the royal family and he was selected as the person that would make the least impact. He asked what Jean was queen of and Rick said all of this, gesturing outwards. America. There was a coup involving the Nazis and men wearing hoods but it was too complicated to get into.

He handed Margie the gun and she set me down to her left, holding my hand. He begged for his life and said that Emma would be devastated. Margie started crying and turned to Rick and said she couldn't do it but he said that she had to, that was why Chris was there to confirm it was her who pulled the trigger.

He said that he had an engagement ring in a box in his dresser. Margie asked him where exactly. He admitted that he didn't, but would get one if that was what it would take to save his life. Margie only asked so that if there was one, she could get rid of it before Emma found it to lessen the blow. At that point, I panicked and realized that someone was about to be killed. I broke free from her grasp and ran.

Chris went after me and caught up quickly. I was stumbling as I wasn't used to walking, let alone running. I looked up at him and said what might have been one of my first full sentences, "They're killing someone back there." He looked at me and said that my family were the ones killing someone and he had to bring me back to them.

Instead of going to them, he brought me to an SUV while my mother shot the man in the chest. My mother came over and Chris and my father brought the body in and put it in the back, covered with a sheet. Chris dialed a number on a large, old-style cell phone and gave it to my mother - it was Emma on the other end.

Margie told Emma that her boyfriend had a heart attack and Emma asked if they were at the hospital and how he was doing. Margie struggled with the words and choked out, "He's dead."

Emma explained, "How do you know he's dead? Did the paramedics take a look at him?"

Chris offered, "Say he turned blue, that's something that happens with a really bad heart attack." Margie said that and Emma broke down crying. We returned to my grandparents house and Chris dropped off my parents and me.

Emma was devastated, but started talking about how she would need to make arrangements for the funeral. She was also unsure of where she would live since he paid most of the rent on their apartment. My father took me home to gather clothes and for toys for an extended stay for the funeral.

The next couple of days were a bit of a blur but I remember at the funeral my mother commenting that it didn't look like he had been shot and my father saying that the holes were usually small on the chest. The next big event I recalled was sleeping in one of the guest bedrooms and hearing Margie talking about how guilty she felt. Rick said that sometimes, his mother told him it helps to drug the person you want to admit something to with the hyocine and confess to them, so your guilt would be unburdened and they wouldn't remember.

She said that she wanted to do that, so they got out of bed and brought me with them. Emma was downstairs and they injected her in the arm with the needle. My mother told her that she was responsible for this and Emma asked her if she made him have a heart attack. My mother said no, but she caused him to die and she was sorry. At that point, my Grandpa Tony came in. He asked what was going on and Emma explained what my mother had said. He told my parents to go up to his study and he would talk to Emma.

They did and we waited for a few minutes. When he entered the room, he shut the door, sat behind his desk, and asked what this was about. Margie told him and he immediately recognized it as an initiation killing. He had been required to do one, too. He said that it was important to view it as the cost of protection and to use that protection to be better equipped to take down the Reich.

My mother told him that part of the condition of her initiation was that she woulld never try to do that. Tony said that maybe that was the case, but she should never accept this as the status quo. This is a dark time for America and that darkness persists, but it will come into light some day.

#

Shortly after Margie's initiation killing, Allison was watching me at my parent's house in Suffern. Unknown to my parents, she invited a journalist she was working with to uncover and expose the Reich. I don't remember his name, but he wanted to get me away from my parents, especially after I told him that they killed someone in front of me. My parents discovered that Allison had invited him over and banned her from looking after me. They told Jean about what happened and she formulated a plan. She invited me over to Astoria and showed me that someone had spliced her phone line with a listening device. She got on the phone to confirm a hotel reservation for that weekend at the Ritz Carlton. On the line she said that it was for Sunday but in person she had made it for Saturday.

That weekend, she brought me to the room and there were around five other children there who were around my age - some a bit older. She had us play and watch a movie, but as we talked, we realized that a couple of the parents had treated them as if they were never going to see them again after they were dropped off or picked up by agents. One was given a bracelet as a going away gift.

We asked Jean about this and she sighed expressing that she wished she could keep up the ruse longer. We were drugged and compliant, so she told us to watch a movie, then began to eat the other children. She was on stimulants which increased digestive transit time so that she could eat as much as she wanted. She made comments about which child she was defecating the flesh of.

She bit me on the right forearm as I got too close to her while she was devouring another child. She took a picture of us before the slaughter - I don't know how many other photos she took. It was terrifying. We tried to stay clustered together, but she pulled off each child one by one and after killing each and eating some of their raw flesh, she stowed their bodies in plastic bags in the closet.

Eventually, there was just two of us left. As Jean approached me and the last surviving child, a girl, we clung together and I shouted "One boy and one girl" at her. This stopped her in her tracks and she demanded to know who had told me that. I said no one, it just sounded right. She said that there was a prophecy that ended with the Reich revealing themselves with their own words, but she believed that it meant they would win.

She told me that the life she would lead would be hard and make her wish she had died then and there. The girl said it wouldn't matter as long as she was able to live. She later thanked me for saving her and tried to tell me that she was living somewhere where it got colder sooner in winter. I didn't realize that she was someone who I already knew - Jordan, who used to live around the corner from me. Even though we were young, prior to her move, we were best friends.

After she was taken away, a manager of the Ritz Carlton came in to see if everything was okay because there had been complaints. He was drugged, but he saw the stains of blood and excrement on the carpet from Jean's feeding. He said something along the lines of "This won't do at all, someone will have to clean this up." Jean said she would have someone do that, but later had him killed because he had seen too much.

When we left, it was morning. Outside, Allison and the reporter intercepted her thinking she was on the way to kill the children. They were crestfallen when they realized that she had already done so.

Jean had both of them drugged and Allison was sent to my parents. Jean took the reporter into her car and sent him with agents who she would later follow to a second location - a frozen lake in upstate New York. She came to my parents' after and told Allison that she had cut out his tongue and drowned him in the water.

As a "consolation" she promised to put out a post-humus collection of his work, edited to ensure that nothing incriminating was included. I don't know if this was ever released.

Chapter Two

1988

When I was about 2 1/2, my parents received an invitation to a wedding in upstate New York. My father said that he knew the groom from selling "records" out of the back of cars around a decade prior. In 2018, during a later incident recorded here, he told me that "records" was code for heroin and other drugs distributed specifically in black and Puerto Rican neighborhoods. His friend was promoted to station chief at some point in the intervening period between the 70's and the wedding.

The invitation for the wedding specifically said "No Children" but my father wanted me to be able to come anyway. He told my mother that a lot of military and security brass would be there and that he wanted to introduce me around. He said that if I was going to end up in the role I was being groomed for, that it would be good for me to meet these people.

Jean bought me a blue suit similar to a military uniform. She and Richie babysat Emily, who was just around a year old at that point. We drove to the venue for the reception in my father's blue hatchback - he referred to it as the Bozo car because it looked tiny but could fit the whole family. I don't recall if we went to the wedding, but I recall security guards with machine guns checking the car and the trunk before the valet took it at the reception.

The reception venue was in the woods, with a window behind the head table overlooking the area below. It might have been a view of the Hudson, we were sitting at the back so I did not get a good look.

Windows
Bride
Groom
Alan Cambey
Susan & Husband
Dinne & Husband
Mom Me Dad
Doors
Shooter
Guard
Hall Driveway
&
Parking area
Men's room
Front Entrance

My father introduced me to a few of the people there. He told them that I was Jean's grandson and they seemed to know what that meant. An older man, who I later recognized as Alan Cambey, said that I looked like a roo which I was confused by until it was explained to be a baby kangaroo.

After appetizers and other food was served, my mother told me that I should go to the bathroom because the speeches were going to start soon. I did and, when I returned, the guard to the left looked at me in shock.

He said that there weren't supposed to be any kids there and I apologized. His partner looked at him and asked why it was a problem if kids were there. He said it wasn't, he just didn't like kids. The guard asked me where I was sitting - I told him that I was sitting in the back left with my mom and dad. He said okay, go straight in and turn left. His partner grew more suspicious and, as I ran in to my parents, I heard him shoot his friend. The next few moments felt like they happened slowly but it must have only been a couple minutes.

Everyone started screaming and ducking and running as the shooter came in. He shot Alan in the shoulder as well as a couple of other guests. My mother held me close but my father ran out behind the shooter, following some of the guests. The shooter pointed his gun at the head table towards the groom.

He shouted to the bride that this was all for her, that he knew that they were in love so he had a friend waiting in a car outside and a plane fueled up and ready to take them out of the country. She looked confused, like she wasn't sure what was happening. She told him that he looked familiar, but she didn't remember their relationship. He exclaimed that it was "those damn drugs" and asked her to try to remember.

He addressed the groom next, yelling at him for manipulating her and trying to get him to admit what he had done. He also shouted at Alan about having sex with his own daughters but Alan didn't respond - he was playing dead. The groom refused to engage and, in a moment, suddenly pulled the bride in front of him as he tried to escape behind her. The shooter was startled and let out a volley of bullets that hit the bride in the chest. She convulsed for a few seconds and then went still. There were deep red spots on her dress.

The shooter let out an anguished cry, "You killed her!"

The groom replied, "Well actually, you'll find that you k..." and he was interrupted by the shooter advancing and firing two rounds directly into the groom's head. The glass behind him was splattered with blood, bone, and brain matter. It looked like strawberry jam.

The shooter looked up at the ceiling and cried out, "Oh God, what have I done?" then asked the bride to forgive him before shooting himself upwards through the mouth, splattering on the ceiling.

My mother kept telling me to not look, that they were just sleeping. I didn't understand why their eyes were open. The only other people left in the room were the other victims and people sheltering in place. After around what felt like ten minutes, more guards came in along with a woman who was there to assess what had gone wrong and how to prevent something similar from happening in the future.

She took me aside and someone gave my mother a glass of water with drugs in it to make her forget. She asked me what had happened and I described what I remembered to the best of my ability. She told me that my mother was trying to sugarcoat it, but yes, people had died. I asked her if the shooters friend waiting for him would die too and she said that they would give him drugs and question why he did it, but yes, for something this serious, they would execute him.

She told me that my mother would forget but my father would remember but have to not act like he forgot. She said that I was too young to administer the drugs so I would have to act like I forgot, too. When they brought my father back in, my mother yelled at him for abandoning us. He claimed that he had made a strategic exit hoping that the shooter wouldn't want to hurt a woman with her child. As we left to drive home, I saw the shooter's friend being questioned by the woman - he looked dazed.

Around one or two weeks later, my mother received a call informing her that the bride and groom had died in a large car accident on their way back from the wedding. I asked her why we were just finding out now and she said that something like that takes time to sort out. I asked her if other people died or got hurt, too. She said yes. I asked her more questions not understanding what had happened. She didn't remember.

I went to my father, remembering what the woman had told me. I asked him about the crash. He said that if that's what they said happened, that's what I should act like happened. He said that cover-ups like that happened all the time.

#

When I was younger, my grandfather Tony Taurisano used to come over to my parents' house frequently. One day, he came over and convinced my mother to let him take me out for the day. We drove to a location that I believed was a listening post - it would later become the site of Cambey & West. He convinced the guard on duty to give him a tour because, as he claimed, he was former army and he wanted me to see what it was like.

The guard allowed him in under close supervision, but as soon as we were in, my grandfather stole the guard's side-arm and shot him in the leg. He rushed us into an office at the right side of the hall and had me hide behind the desk. I asked if the guard was hurt and he said that it was nothing a few weeks in the hospital wouldn't heal. I asked him if he shot someone, wouldn't he go to jail? He was working on unlocking a computer behind a locked wall cage. He said that they wouldn't want people to know that he had shot him so they wouldn't report it to the police.

At that point, he shouted out that that he had me there and that they shouldn't try anything. The guards stayed at the end of the hall, waiting for someone higher up to come in. My grandfather turned to me once he had the lock open and said that this was the part he needed me for. He picked me up and showed me the computer. I was familiar with how to use computers from using my father's, so I helped him turn it on and then it prompted him for the password. I told him that my dad normally knew the password. He looked upset, but I mentioned that sometimes I saw my dad write it down, so he started looking around the desk when the man who's office it was, Alan Cambey came in.

He told my grandfather that he wasn't dumb enough to leave his password written down and that, besides, the orders had already been transmitted. Those people are already dead, he said. My grandfather set the gun on the desk and let them take him into custody. They put him in handcuffs and set the both of us in the backseat of his Mercedes-Benz. One of the soldiers drove us back to my parent's house and let my grandfather out of the handcuffs. They told my mother that he could only see me under supervision going forward.

My mother was furious at him. She asked him what he was thinking, bringing me into it? She told him that she thought he was done with all of that. He said that they were going to kill civilians, it's not like they had anything to do with the conflict. He told her what the Alan said and she agreed - those people were already dead.

She pulled out a vial of the drug and my grandfather said that he didn't need it, he wouldn't do that again. She said that it was for me. He said that it was too dangerous - that I was too young. I agreed, I told her that the lady at the wedding said that. She was confused and asked me what I meant. My grandfather said that something must have happened at the wedding we went to a couple months prior. He said it's different when it's your brain being messed around with. She said that it didn't matter and that it was probably for a good reason.

She measured out an eighth of a vial and put it in my cup. I drank it and immediately felt strange and floaty. After acting strange for a bit, I got tired and took a nap. When I woke up, he had gone home.

In the following weeks, we visited him on Long Island at least once. I remember that he was watching TV and there was coverage of George HW Bush talking about how he would never apologize for America in the wake of the Iran Air shoot down. Tony yelled that the TV that he should because they did, or at least part of their government did.

Chapter Three

1989

I was visiting my family in Astoria and mostly spending time with my Aunt Allison. At one point, Jean called me up as she had a visitor - Lucille Ball. I didn't recognize her and said as much. I asked her if she was my grandma, as at that point Jean was being somewhat open about the fact that she was my biological mother. She said no, but she was someone's grandma. I told her that I didn't believe she was Lucy and she said they shot those episodes over 40 years ago. She then said that she didn't like me because I was being rude to her.

At that point, she told Jean that she really needed to talk to her. Jean asked if it was about business. She said that it sort of was but not about new business. She wanted to talk to her about her legacy. They went towards the far part of the living room and Jean set me in front of the TV near the kitchen. An agent waited in the hall.

Lucy told Jean, calling her Jeannie, that she could feel that the end was near. Jean asked her if it was related to her recent surgery - telling her that she had inserted the line "flurry of well wishers" to the article covering that. Lucy said no, they had fixed it up well but she could feel another burst coming on and she was sure that it was only a matter of time. She said that she felt dizzy and they sat down.

She specifically told Jean that she didn't want anything about "Your father" or the cannibalism to come out. Jean assured her that it was part of the CIA and if all went well, none of that would ever come out. Lucy said that was good and sort of trailed off and Jean started shaking her and calling her name. She was staring blankly at Jean and not blinking. After a moment of trying to revive her, she called back the male agent from the hall.

She told him that "she passed" and he said shit. She asked him how she had come there and he said that she took a commercial plane. She said that people probably didn't recognize her and it didn't seem like she would have wanted to be recognized. She said that they would need to make sure that no one knew that she had traveled to New York because then there would be questions about who she was visiting on such urgent business.

She told him to get a death certificate locally and to tell one of their doctors to put the information they wanted on it. She said to be sure to put whatever time it was in California instead of New York but to otherwise keep the details as accurate as possible in case there was an autopsy. Then, he would need to be put on one of their planes and put her back in her home.

The male agent picked up Lucy from the couch and wasn't sure if he could carry her. Jean told him to put her feet on his feet and walk her out. He did so, but returned after getting her to the stairs, saying that she still had a heartbeat. Jean told him to continue - getting her medical care at this point would open them up to risk and she might blurt out something when she woke up.

He left and Jean turned to me and said that one of the greats had just past. I didn't understand what that meant and pointed to the TV, which was playing I Love Lucy and said that she was right there.

#

There was a family around the block from my parents named the Sinclairs with a son, Eric, around my age. My parents allowed me to walk over and play with him pretty much unsupervised. For the most part we would play with action figures, climb a tree in their backyard - normal kid stuff. One day, Mr Sinclair asked me if I wanted to do something fun.

Eric's older sister, I believe her name was Ariel, was about 16 and she protested. She said that I was a kid and she doubted that my parents would be okay with "it". She also said that she had been asking around with her peers and it wasn't normal for families to do what they were doing - having sex with each other.

I didn't understand what any of that meant and when offered a cup of iced tea (likely drugged), I drank it. He had me go on top of him while his wife filmed and cheered me on. Afterwards, I went home and told my parents what he told me to tell them - that I needed a diaper change and that if they had questions to come to him. He intended to drug them as well.

Instead, they called Jean and told her what had happened. The CIA put him under house arrest and they logged the VHS tape of my abuse in a federal database. Jean watched it to identify me as the victim. They told him that I was off limits but wouldn't do anything further related to his activities.

A few days later, I visited the Sinclairs again, unsupervised. His wife said that they had him just where they wanted him. I asked if Eric and I could play action figures in the basement and she said that we couldn't, because Ariel was down there until she could "learn to appreciate what she had"

- because she had a crush on a boy at school.

I went home and told my parents and they called Jean again. This time, they sent a couple people with machine guns and got her out. She had been tied up on a mattress for days. As "punishment", they put Eric and his parents in a gated community across from Suffern Middle School, forced them to sell their house and legally emancipated Ariel. They also gave her the money from the sale of the house.

A few days later, I went around the block, forgetting what had happened, and asked a neighbor where the Sinclairs were. They said that no one lived at that house, but there was a girl picking up the mail. She left the house around the time I reached the sidewalk and I talked to her.

I was still confused about what had happened. She said that she would be moving far away and changing her name. She said that most of the people in the neighborhood would be drugged and not remember that they ever lived there. She assumed that I hadn't been drugged, but I had.

#

#

My parents drove me to my grandmother's apartment building in Astoria and told me that it was for something important. They said that it might be scary and that's okay and that we would do something nice afterwards. When we arrived, there was a white cloth laid out across the floor in the room to the right of the door. It was where they normally put the Christmas tree.

#

room Door truck
Cars

#

When we entered the front hallway, Jean took my parents aside and told my mother that for this my father would have to have sex with the woman inside. She was Asian and my father said that he preferred Asian women. My mother said that it was okay as long as it was required. I could see the woman and several men through the door. My father went into the room and they closed the door.

I waited a few minutes with my mother until they were done. Afterwards, five of the men left the room and were guided out the front door and behind the truck. Two men with silenced machine guns shot them. All but one fell backward into the truck - the other fell onto the pavement behind it. The men hoisted him into the back and the truck drove away. My father left the room and my mother told me to forget what I saw and ushered me in.

I asked Jean what happened to the men and the man left in the room asked the same thing. She smiled and said that they left. He looked out the window and said that their cars were still there. She said that the men gave them a ride to a local bar and they were just having a drink. He said that one of them was an alcoholic and that they would never willingly just go to a bar. I asked if it was because he was an alcoholic that he fell down. At this, he asked me to elaborate and he realized that by my description she had them shot.

"They were my circle!" he shouted.

"Well," she said, "more money for you then."

"It's not about the money, they were my friends! We went bowling together, I know their families..."

"Well I guess you'll just have to make new friends, then," Jean chortled. The woman who my father had sex with, the Scarlet Woman, didn't seem to speak English but she started to realize that something was wrong. Jean told him to finish the ritual. He gathered himself and came towards me with a knife.

He told my mother to hold out my hand flat, then sliced open my palm. I screamed out in pain and my mother held onto my arm and followed his instruction to place my palm on the woman's forehead for a moment. She then removed it and it left a mark like a star. He told Jean that the ritual was done. He then told Jean that the ritual was done.

"That's it?" she asked him. "When my father told me about it, he said that the smell of blood was overpowering and that so many were sacrificed for the future of Germany." The Magician said that the blood was supposed to represent a sacrifice, especially coming from a young intelligent male child. She shook her head and said that it wasn't good enough. She demanded his knife and told me to come to her. He was shocked.

"He's your grandson."

"I know that he's my grandson," she said as she pulled me away from the woman. She took the knife and slashed open the woman's throat, spilling blood down the front of her dress. "That's better," Jean said, approvingly.

"She was my Scarlet Woman," he cried out.

"Well she's certainly scarlet now," Jean quipped. He shot her an angry look as he cradled the woman in his arms.

"At least let me comfort her in her last moments."

"Okay, I'll grant you that," Jean agreed.

He cried and apologized to her for bringing her into this. She choked on her blood and took a few moments to die, but she did. He asked what she was going to do with the body. She said the same thing she would do to his friends, dump them in the East River. He said that she had a family that ran a restaurant in Chinatown and that they should know what happened to her. Jean said that they would have someone tell them something.

She asked him if he would tell the others in his order that the ritual had been done. He said don't worry, that he would tell them exactly what had happened and that part of it involved papers and not to expect them. She said that she didn't care about any papers, not seeming to know what that meant. She told him to forget where they lived and he said not to worry, they would never come back there again.

My parents drove me back to our house and Jean followed. They celebrated with drinks. Jean wondered if the papers were Martha Kuntzel's papers, which in that case would be very valuable. She dismissed that notion, saying that the last time they had been seen was in Europe right before the location turned into a warzone. They were likely burned to ashes years ago, sshe said. I asked her why they killed his friends but let him go. She said that she couldn't have too many people knowing where she lived and that she needed to make sure that he told them that the ritual was done so that they would believe it. She said that she would let him live "for now".

#

The Magician and Jean had a conversation before the ritual started. She asked him if he could perform the ritual and he said yes, any magician his rank could. He said that normally it would be done at a lodge or temple in order to better channel the intent. He said that the prophecy said that someone of the bloodline would seek them out for the ritual but it wasn't supposed to happen for another 30 years.

Jean also gave my father a copy of Aleister Crowley's Magick before the ritual. He didn't read it but he still has it on his downstairs bookshelf.

#

I was in the downstairs hall with Jean when someone rang the bell. She answered it - it was a young man - around 16-20 - with a pistol. Jean put on a confused old woman act and asked if she was being robbed. He said that he was there for the woman who had his father killed. She asked if he knew what she looked like. He said that she was middle-aged and she said that there really wasn't anyone here like that and that she was just an old woman. She asked him to wait a minute with me so she could ask someone upstairs.

I was scared but she said that he wouldn't hurt a child. He agreed and she went upstairs to her apartment and I asked him why he wanted to hurt me or my family. He said that they were evil and I asked him if I was too. He said that no, I was younger and a blank slate. At that point Jean returned with a handgun and a small cup of the drug. His gun was down as she returned so she had the advantage.

She told him to drink it and kept the gun trained on him as he did. After a few seconds he went slack and she began to ask him questions. He said that the circle had planned to raid the apartment building and kill her on the winter Solstice but he wanted to get to her first. She asked him if they knew he knew and he said that he was supposed to be part of it.

She let him go and told him that he wouldn't remember this and to go along with the raid as planned. She said that this building had served them well but it was time to expedite their move to Florida to before Christmas. They moved in to the new house just before Christmas and we drove down to stay with them for a week.

#

At some point before Jean and Richie moved to Florida, they brought over a pair of tan chairs as well as three Oriental rugs. One was put in the dining room, one in my father's office, and one in the living room. My mother was not a fan of the chairs and got into an argument with Jean about them.

My mother said that she was happy to put up the Heidi decorative plants and stein and Hummel figures, but the chairs didn't match the decor that she was going for. Jean insisted that the dining room should be representative of all of the family and that she wanted myself and my sister to grow up in an environment similar to the one she grew up on.

She said that the dining set was from the same location and that even though they were from different rooms they still matched a unified theme. My mother relented and allowed her to place them in the corners of the room near the two heads of the table. After placing them, Jean called over myself and Emily.

Jean told us that it was an old chair but it was strong and stuffed with horse hair. We got excited and started picking at lose threads in the seat and she got upset, exclaiming "What are you doing!?"

We said that we wanted to see the horse hair. She said that it was inside and that doing that would break it it and mean that it had to be repaired. We told her that it looked ratty and worn-down and we were confused that she would care about that. She was usually not very sentimental when it came to things.

She said that it was worn down with love and that something very important had happened in that chair and she started to cry.

Chapter Four

1990

Jean brought me to meet the British Royal family on their yacht at a port in, I believe, New Jersey. I remember asking her why not New York and she said that she didn't want media attention. She told me that there would be children there, but different from the children at my school. They were being raised to run a country, like me. Though, I was being raised to rule the entire world.

We arrived and were greeted by family members. I don't recall for sure if Dianna and Charles were there, but Princes Harry and William as well as the Queen were. I was told to spend time with the boys while Jean spoke with the Queen.

I introduced myself to them and said that Jean had told me that I was like them. Prince William replied that they were nothing like me and I confusedly asked what he meant. He told me that my family killed people. I told him that I thought all families like ours killed people and gestured at a painting showing an ancestor of theirs in battle.

He replied that those were soldiers, people who consented to battle. Some may have been conscripts but they mostly chose to be involved in conflicts. My family had killed millions of civilians. I was shocked to hear this and went to ask Jean. I approached them from the inside of the ship and waited for a break in their conversation.

Jean was talking with the Queen about the future, the next 20 to 30 years. I noticed that the Queen was cautious around Jean, like she was talking with a snake. Reserved, polite, but studying her. Jean asked her what she thought and the Queen replied that the impression they had gotten from media was that the future would be one of exploration and diplomacy. Jean replied that unfortunately, no, there were still enough people examining history that they still had to focus efforts inwards.

I interrupted around that point, apologizing and telling Jean what William had told me - that we had killed people. Jean was incensed and asked the Queen what she had been telling them. She responded slowly and deliberately, as it seemed clear to me that Jean wouldn't like any answer. "Well," she replied in a gentle facsimile of a reminder, "there was the genocide."

Jean was furious and defensive. She said that all nations take actions that favor one group of people over another. Just because they had been more efficient at it shouldn't mean that they should be viewed as monsters. I interjected, asking her which country we had ruled because I had never heard of a genocide in America and Jean had mostly just talked about the CIA and IRA.

At this, it was the Queen's turn to be incensed, righteously so. She demanded to know what Jean's involvement with the IRA was. I answered that she had said that she was a leader of it, months earlier. The Queen said that it was a violation of Britain's sovereignty and the agreement that they had signed with the Reich.

Jean took a step back and told the Queen to think about what she was saying. If the agreement was void, that would mean that the Reich could then do anything they wanted. She countered by saying that the IRA hadn't really done the job and were unlikely to. So, rather than tear the agreement to shreds, they can make sure that the next administration would broker a peace deal. We left shortly after.

Chapter Five

1991

Jean brought Emily and myself aside and informed us that people were coming over for a meeting and that it was a special event. She said that it usually only happened once every five years. They brought together the East, Central, and Western Architects for a meeting to shape the future. This was the first time that she told me that if America had royalty, I was the heir to it. She clarified that America had government agencies, but that we were part of the CIA which was ruled by royalty.

Emily asked if that meant that she was a princess if I was a prince and Jean said no, just me. Emily asked if it was because she was a girl, Jean said that it was that she had "more of her grandfather" in her than me and that the genes were important. We were both confused about what she meant - Emily asked me if that meant Pop Pop was her father. I didn't understand how that could be a possibility - that he was - and insisted that our father must be both of our fathers. After that aside, the guests began to arrive.

Jean introduces us both to the guests. The Eastern Architect was the older brother of Lorenzo Music, husband of Carla Lalli-Music - I believe his name is Daniel. The Central architect was the head of the Sosland family who are involved in publishing and food production. The Western architect was Merv Griffin.

When she introduced us to Music, she told us that his brother was the voice of Garfield. He teared up and said not anymore, that he was too sick. Jean expressed dismay and said that she thought he was getting treatment. He said that he was but he had already lost his voice and wasn't expected to make it to Christmas. He said that the family was planning to hold an early Christmas in September, since it was always such an important holiday for them. He then brought out a gift for both my sister and I. It was stationary in a yellow gift bag.

The meeting took place on the lanai behind the house. Jean had Emily and I set the table and hand out snacks. At the start of the meeting, Jean asked Merv about the recent trouble he'd had and if they needed to worry about it. He said no, they settled it out of court, that, "it was a woman giving him a massage while naked, what else did she expect would happen?". Carla, who had been introduced as Music's new bride and therefore part of the meeting, spoke up and said that she used to work in the brothels and that they would set out strict ground rules before any encounter. Merv looked indignant and demanded that Music silence his woman. She was mortified, Jean asked her to maybe come in and help the kids with the snacks.

She was guided in to the kitchen by Jean, who also called for Emily and I to help. Carla was crying and said that she was just trying to be a part of the conversation. Jean comforted her and said that was just how men were used to talking and that they would have a larger role in the future as women, hopefully. She gave her a bowl of chips and told her to bring it to the table when she was ready. My sister and I talked to her for a bit and I think we cheered her up. She went out again with the chips and we followed, sitting on the pool chairs on the other side of the lanai. We were within listening distance still.

A chef, Wolfgang Puck, was brought in along with human flesh that he had prepared with their instructions. Carla and others complained about the fattiness of the meat and Jean commented on the person that it came from. The chef did not seem to want to be there and indicated that he had only prepared the meat and hadn't chosen to taste it during.

The main reason that they had brought them all there today, outside of their regular meeting schedule of once every five years, was the publication of the book The Medusa's Head by John Symonds. Apparently it had gotten so many details historically correct about secret events that they believed that someone had told the author. Their concern was what to do about it. They said that there was already a review in the Times about an art piece with the same name that they hoped would stick in people's mind if they heard mention of it. They weren't concerned with the limited numbered print run coming out as they had already bought up all the copies. They were worried about any unnumbered copies that were given to Symonds' friends or any acquaintances.

They resolved to use their resources to track down all of those copies, assuming there were only the 50 unnumbered editions. The numbered run, they decided, would be used as a trap. Jean learned from my use of the internet that information about pretty much anything could be found online. If they put up a listing for the book on sites listing rare books with a summary that gave just enough detail, they could draw people in. The meeting itself was only around a half hour in length, most of the time was spent socializing prior.

They discussed Symonds' role as a biographer of Crowley and how he was less than flattering in his depictions of him. They had someone drug his wife, she said that he burnt the original written draft because he was upset about how it was received.

They mentioned Martha Kuntzel being next to a pregnant woman as a potential cipher for her involvement with the planned births that led to Jean and her sister Helen, among many others, being born.

Jean also made reference to Carla being the daughter of One of Tony's sons. I said that I knew a Tony and she hurriedly said "A different one". Music later asked me who I meant and I clarified that it was my grandfather, as he expected. He did not realize that Carla was part of the royal family.

#

One evening Jean told my sister and I that they would be having a dinner guest and that we were to be on our best behavior. He came fairly late in the evening. It was Alan Cambey, passing through on what he called his "travels".

My sister and I were sitting at the table and Alan explained to Jean what he had done as she reheated dinner. He said that the Saudis would supply 20-30 people for the operation but did not want direct involvement. They did not want to get tangled up in whatever conflict would result from it. He said that it would be planned for the 27th anniversary of her father's death and she expressed delight at that.

They would take aim at the Twin Towers and other high value targets. She commented that she always hated them and that they should look at the White House and other government targets too if it was to have the desired effect. He seemed to think that would put their assets at risk but she said that they would pull the important ones the day of.

She commented that they should keep the men close and he said probably not too close because this was meant to be off the radar. She said that they would keep them nearby in Florida, so they could check in on them. He agreed and gestured at my sister and I and asked if we were drugged already. She said that she wasn't going to drug her grandchildren.

He became indignant and insisted that she do it - she had us move to a couch facing the living room while they talked. She insisted that we were kids and wouldn't remember anything important. He said that she would be surprised at what his daughters remembered. She said that they were grown and he clarified that it was when they were children. She told him that she would put us in the room we were staying in and after he left she would give us a narrative using key words from the conversation. If we didn't accept the narrative, then she would drug us.

We went to the room and after he left, she came in and told us a story about how he was an architect and the reason that they wanted to demolish the Twin Towers was to replace them. He was also afraid of competitors making a similar proposal and it might not even happen, so we shouldn't talk to anyone about it.

Chapter Six

1992

Jean brought me on a short plane ride to Palm Beach to meet with people who had just inherited an operation to give them advice on how to run it. We were driven by a private car a short distance to a large house. I remember that we entered near a dining room.

She introduced me as her grandson to two people - Jeffrey Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell. They as a couple, had inherited the operation from Ghislaine's father and Jeff was the person who would be heading it. Jean asked G to watch me while she gave Jeff advice on how to run the operation.

She didn't really know how to watch a kid and gave me a mat from a restaurant they had ordered from that had a maze on the back. I asked her if it was something that was inherited because of her why she wasn't getting advice too. She thought for a moment and said that she did want to make sure she learned some of it and left me at the table to go into the other room with Jean and Jeff.

I did overhear parts of the conversation between Jeff, G, and Jean. Jean told Jeff that most of the girls they would be recruiting would be teenagers - most of whom probably hadn't had sex before. To keep them in his sway, he would need to have sex with them and make them feel like what they had was special. G objected to that, I got the impression that they were a couple at the time. Jean insisted that it was the most effective way for them to keep them under control.

I waited probably 20 minutes for the conversation to finish - I remember being very bored. When we left and got back to the parking lot we had come from, I asked Jean why they were asking her for advice. She said that she was someone well known in the field that they were going to be operating in.

#

Jeanne brought my sister Emily and I to a local video game rental store in Florida. She told us that they were trying to make inroads into the video game industry, but she didn't have the familiarity with it that we would.

She asked us to take a look at the back of the boxes on the wall display and try to find a company name that appeared on a lot of the boxes. She specified that it couldn't be Nintendo or Sega or even any of the biggest international companies like Konami or Midway, but around the 5th most common. It also had to be a US company.

The company that cropped up the most and what she went with was Bethesda Softworks, publishers of Home Alone, Where's Waldo, Wayne Gretzkey Hockey, etc. When we told her, she said that Bethesda was near Washington DC and that it sounded like a perfect fit.

She identified Todd through the company he had previously applied to Bethesda through. He had applied to them multiple times in the past, unsuccessfully. He was also of average intelligence but had ability. That showed them that wanted to work there so badly and might be willing to do anything to do so.

On our drive back home from Florida to New York at the end of that summer, we stopped in Virginia for a few nights. We went around to Colonial Williamsburg and other locations, including a tour that she requested at the College of William and Mary. She specifically requested Todd and was willing to wait several weeks until he returned from summer break. The other tour guide was a young woman with shoulder-length brown hair. Jeanne told them that the tour was for my sister and I.

There were other members of the tour group – mostly prospective students. Though we were young, Jeanne claimed it was to show us the history of the place so that we might want to go there some day.

When we reached the chapel, the other tour members broke off and Jeanne took Todd and the girl aside to the pews in the back. My sister, Richie and I were also with them. Jeanne told them that they were really here to speak to them. She told them that she was with the CIA and looking into recruiting them. The girl was confused as it was clear that they were waiting specifically for Todd but she was randomly assigned earlier that day just because she was there.

Jeanne said that they were looking for a man and a woman and that while they had scouted Todd specifically, she was suitable just by the virtue of being a woman successful at such a prestigious school. She invited them both for dinner at the home of William Barr, who they recognized as the new Attorney General who had just been sworn in a few weeks ago. She told them not to tell anyone and that they would send cars to pick them up,

#

After the tour, we drove around to look at antique stores for antique coins and keys. I had a coin collection, but I was fascinated with old style skeleton keys. They had a locksmith at Colonial Williamsburg and some intricate examples of locks from the period. We visited several businesses listed in the phonebook that seemed like they might sell antique keys, the last one being named the Key Hut in the local mall. She said it was probably a key cutter but it was close so we decided to go anyway. Emily and Richie stayed in the car.

When I asked the girl that worked there about the type of key I was looking for, she showed me a large gold-colored skeleton key that she was using as a keychain. I told her excitedly that was exactly the type of key I was looking for and asked her how much it was. She gently explained that it wasn't for sale and that it was a gift her boyfriend had given her because she worked with keys.

"Everything has its price," Jeanne interrupted, then asked her how much it would cost for her to part with it.

The girl thought for a moment and said, "Two hundred dollars." Jeanne scoffed.

"A novelty key like that couldn't be worth more than $20 or $30."

"You asked how much. I'm including how much it means to me as a gift in that value. It's a symbol of my boyfriend's love." I told her that I understood and it was okay, but Jeanne pushed further.

"Your boyfriend can get you other gifts. It would mean a lot to my grandson if he had that one." I tried to indicate to Jeanne again that it was okay and that I understood, but she wasn't listening.

"Two hundred dollars," the girl reiterated. "You asked the price and that's what it would be."

Jeanne gave a look of disgust and stormed off with me in tow. As soon as we got to the car, she told Richie to find a pay phone so she could make a call. He circled the lot and found one against a wall and Jeanne got out, pulling me along with her. She rummaged through her bag for a slip of paper, picked up the receiver, and jabbed the numbers on the keypad. The receiver was loud enough that I could hear both sides of the conversation.

"I'm calling in a target for high priority extraction and termination. But hold her at the termination site, I want to talk to the target before its done." The man on the other end asked for the name of the target. Jeanne said that she didn't know her name but described her physical attributes and said that she worked at the key cutter at the mall she was calling from. I chimed in that it was called the Key Hut.

The man on the other end paused and started to say, "That doesn't sound like a high priority.." before Jeanne cut him off.

"Are you disobeying a direct order?" He froze.

"No, no, that's not it, I was just told that they're trying to keep track of resource expenditures and I was just asking to determine the reason..."

"That sort of thing is supposed to secret, I'm going to have to have a talk with those bean counters. Do you want a reason? She pissed me off," shouting into the receiver, "There's your reason."

#

After dinner, Jeanne told Emily and I that they would be showing us how the CIA operated, but to do that she would need for us to take a drug, which she put in the child size cups that we had gotten at a restaurant with our dinner. We ate prior to the meeting and were drugged on the way.

When we entered the house, we came in through the front door. It was up a flight of stairs from the driveway. We sat in the living room, to the right of the entrance. There was a TV but it wasn't on. The drugs made my sister and I tired and we asked Barr's wife if we could take a nap. Jeanne said that there wasn't enough time and the car with Todd and his friend arrived shortly after.

We were led through a dining room and kitchen around to a door that led down to what was historically slaves' quarters. The dining room had a large backless shelf filled with porcelain and Americana trinkets. The food was prepared in the upstairs kitchen and was brought down shortly after we were all seated. William Barr's wife did not join us for the meal.

Over dinner, Jeanne asked them what their goals were if they were going to join the CIA. They had specifically targeted Todd as he was someone that they felt would be a good fit to infiltrate the game industry, but they had asked the girl about her potential plans. She said that she wanted to help people. We mostly talked about video games and Jeanne asked me my opinion of what the perfect video game. I described it as something where you could interact with anything and it was 3D like Doom but in a fantasy setting. Todd lit up and said that he was interested in a company that was making a game just like that called Arena. It wasn't released yet but he had seen a demo of it at a computer show.

Jeanne then turned the conversation towards the CIA and the nature of what they would be doing. She asked them both if they ever saw themselves being able to kill someone. The girl said that it didn't sound like something she would be able to do. Jeanne said that it was the nature of the agency that people would be killed as a matter of course. If she was interested in helping people, there were non-governmental organizations and other ways to do that. The CIA probably wasn't going to be a good fit for her.

At that, Jeanne took a cigarette from Richie and gave it to her. She told her to go outside and have a smoke. The girl was a bit out of it as both her and Todd had seemingly been drugged. She took it and stepped outside, closing the door behind her.

"I don't need to be here for this," Barr said, pushing his chair out from the table and walking upstairs, shutting the door behind him.

Jeanne turned to Todd and asked, "What about you, could you kill someone?" He was taken aback and thought about it for a moment. He said that he might be able to kill someone if it was in a military context, but his brother had come back from the army and it had left him shaken. Richie took out a gun and slid it towards Todd past Jeanne over the table.

"I've got a gun here," he said.

"What if we asked you to kill someone right now?" Jeanne purred, nodding towards the door leading out to the driveway. Todd was shaken.

"Well she didn't do anything wrong," he replied incredulously.

"If you were to join the CIA, you might have to kill people that didn't do anything wrong." She shifted tactics. "It's not that she did anything wrong, but she has seen something she shouldn't have and she clearly won't be joining the Agency."

"What do you mean?" Todd asked.

"We're in the basement of the Attorney General of the USA, the head of the Justice Department. It's illegal to have this sort of coordination between agencies. What if word of this clandestine meeting reached the public? They would lose faith in their entire system of government."

"I'm sure that if we asked her not to say anything she would understand," Todd countered, but it was clear that he was nervous.

"This is how we handle things," Jeanne grew more excited as she nudged the gun towards him. "If you want to join the CIA and be a part of the video game industry, this is what you need to do. I am giving you an order to go out there and kill her." He slowly took the gun.

"Won't people hear the gunshots?"

"We're on the top of a hill," Jeanne dismissed. "The sound will echo across the city, no one will ever be able to track it down."

"When she goes missing won't there be an investigation? I was the last person to be seen with her over at her dorm. I couldn't lie about that if they asked me. They wouldn't believe me."

"There won't be any investigation. If they ask you if you know anything, just say you don't. We'll handle it from there. She'll just be a statistic, another college girl gone missing."

Richie opened the door first to make sure that she was still there. She apologized for not smoking the cigarette as it wasn't really her thing. She said that she had called her mother to talk over their offer. He was confused, asking her if she had gone up into the house to use their phone. She pointed to a fanny pack on her belt - it was the battery for an early cellular phone. Richie relayed that to Jeanne, but she told him to proceed.

Richie guided Todd out and told the girl that he had something he wanted to talk to her about. He went back inside and left the door open a crack. I could hear the interaction from inside the room. Todd was apologetic and told her that he was told that he had to kill her to join the CIA and that he had already asked them if he could just talk to her but they said he had to kill her. He shot her in the chest to or three times. The gun was silenced, so the gunshots barely made a sound. A few seconds passed and Todd rushed back in, short of breath.

"She's not dead," he blurted out. "I shot her in the chest and she's on the ground but she's still breathing. We still have time to get her to a hospital."

"You're not listening," Jeanne snapped. "She dies. Get out there and finish the job. Shoot her in the head if you have to." He deflated and tried to protest but thought better of it. He slowly walked back outside, leaving the door open behind him so that we could see everything.

"I'm sorry," he said crying, as he slowly angled the gun for a head shot and pulled the trigger. The bullet struck her in the forehead and blew the back of her skull off.

He came back in, there were flecks of blood on his jacket and face. "It's done," he said, handing the gun back to Jeanne.

"You did well," she said, congratulating him. "Now we're just going to send you off to training, its going to be around ten days.."

"When I visited Bethesda they told me that I had to finish school," Todd interrupted, panicked.

"Don't worry, call it a family emergency. They're not going to kick you out of school for something like that. If we have to, we'll talk to the registrar." He nodded, still dazed.

An agent led him back to the car he had come in to go to his dorm and pack for training. Jeanne told another agent to pick up the body. As we were getting up to leave, I asked Jeanne if the girl was really dead. She said no, that it was all a trick - smoke and mirrors - an illusion. I asked her why she referred to her as the body and Jeanne said that's just show business slang for actors. She said the girl had played her part well and would be properly compensated.

As we walked past to the car we had come in, I noticed the back of her skull on the ground. I told Jeanne that they shouldn't forget that if it was part of the act, but as I did I realized that she had to be lying about that. She barked at one of the other agents to pick it up in disgust that they had let me see it.

#

We got into the car and Jeanne told us that we had one more stop. She directed Richie to drive to a specific location that he seemed to have been to before. It was near a mile marker and under a billboard off the side of a major highway. There was a tall set of concrete stairs that descended into a grassy area with a large shack to the right, around 50 feet away. Richie and Emily waited in the car while we descended.

Jeanne told me to stay there and walked over, knocking loudly on the door and telling the person inside to bring the target out. She walked back to me and in her wake a tall man, Chris, dragged the girl behind him. She was bound at her wrists and gagged. Jeanne told him to remove the gag as he reached her.

The girl started screaming for mercy, for her life, for anyone who might here her. Chris indicated to Jeanne that was why he had gagged her as he was getting ready.

"No one is going to be able to hear you," Jean intoned at the girl. She gestured up at the embankment behind us. "Your screams are just going to be muffled by that and the cars. There's no point in it."

"What is this?" the girl cried out, looking around frantically. "You had better let me go. My boyfriend is a big biker and he and his friends have got to be looking everywhere for me "

"You've only been gone for an hour or two," Jeanne chided. "Unless you were going to be meeting up with him he couldn't know something was wrong."

The girl nodded frantically, "I was going to meet up with him and he knows I wouldn't just disappear like that. You had better let me go or he's going to come down here and beat the hell out of you." Jeanne didn't believe her.

"It's about time that you learn a lesson about being rude to customers. Never in my life have I encountered someone so unhelpful and stubborn, not without doing something about it at least. Now you'll know for next time," Jeanne paused, relishing the moment, "Oh, I guess there won't be a next time for you." Jeanne guided me back towards the stairs and I was ahead of her before the girl shouted out.

"I'm pregnant!" Jeanne turned back at her for a moment, looking at her like she had found a toy to play with. She practically did a jig in excitement.

"She's not really," she told me in a hushed but excited voice, "but we're going to play along. Watch this." She took a step back towards the girl, facing her with me behind her. "Well then I guess we're doing society a favor, then."

"You'd kill a pregnant woman?" she started crying. "That was why I was so attached to the key, it's my boyfriend's."

"So," Jeanne stepped closer, "if we call your boyfriend and ask him, he'll confirm this?" The girl faltered.

"I haven't told him yet but he wouldn't be too surprised."

"If we can confirm that," Jeanne said slowly, "We'll let you go. Is there a phone in there?" She asked Chris. He nodded. She took a few steps towards the shack and then turned on a heel.

"Pull down your skirt and underwear," she ordered her. The girl cried and refused so she had Chris do it. She was wearing a pad and there was a red spot on it. "I'm an old woman, but I know a period when I see one."

"He did it to me," she sobbed, gesturing with her head towards Chris. He took a step backwards and raised his hands.

"Whoa whoa, I didn't touch her. I'm a professional."

"A professional who kills people?" the girl snapped at him.

"All of us play different parts," he said.

"Put the gag back on," Jeanne ordered him. He did and began dragging her towards the shed. I asked Jeanne about the key. While the girl was still in earshot, she replied. "She's not going to need it anymore where she's going, but its too distinctive to take."

I asked her if she was going to heaven. She spoke loudly, so the girl could here her. "Heaven's too good for her. She's going in the ground. Well, first he's going to cut off all the good parts and we're going to eat her and then what remains will go into the ground." At that she gestured at the field between the embankment and the shack.

#

Chapter Seven

1993

During one of the summers my sister Emily and I stayed in Florida, Jean had over several guests. She told Emily and I that they were part of her family, her brothers and her sister. We were confused because we knew our great aunt Helen was her sister. She said that while yes, her and Helen were raised in the same home, these people were just as much her family as Helen and should be treated with respect. We agreed and she introduces us to them.

The two I remember best were the two currently most prominent on the global stage. She first introduced us to Angela Merkel, noting the correct pronunciation of her first name had a hard G like angle, but was spelled the same as the anglicized version of the name. My sister and I were excited that we had an aunt Angela like on Golden Girls. Jean was frustrated that we were mispronouncing it because it was meant to be shortened to the nickname Geli. Angela said that it was her nickname (Geli Raubel's) not hers. She said Aunt Angela could be hers because she liked Golden Girls, but she didn't want to be a villain. I insisted that Aunt Angela wasn't a villain, she loved her sister but they just disagreed sometimes. She laughed and said that it was just like in real families.

I believe we were introduced to a German man as well, but the next person didn't speak any English and had a young female translator. He introduced himself in Russian and she translated that his name was Vladimir Putin. I was also introduced to Boris Johnson, the third brother to arrive. Everyone else went out to the back to socialize on the lanai except for Emily and I, who had to finish writing in our journals.

When we came out, Vladimir had just come out of the pool and sat at the chair at the end of the table with his back to the water. Apparently, one of their male sibling had died recently from a heart attack, which was why they had gathered to memorialize him. From what they knew, he had been in fairly good health. The translator seemed surprised that Vladimir had a family like that, as he was well-known at the time.

They talked about how it was just them left to complete their father's work and made a toast to their brother. The toast concluded with a Heil Hitler at which the translator seemed to understand and, claiming she was going in to use the restroom, she ran to the next door neighbor's house. The neighbor returned with her as she seemed to be raving about Hitler and on drugs. They gladly took her back, then drugged the neighbor for his trouble.

Vladimir was the first to leave, the rest of us went into the living room to watch TV. Golden Girls was on and I fell asleep on the couch while we were watching it. I was woken up by the sound of gunfire - Jean said that it was probably just a car backfiring.

I mentioned it to my parents at the end of summer when we returned home and they said it sounded like something we probably shouldn't talk about at school.

#

I was at the Florida house alone one summer and went for a walk down the block into the area behind the house and the entrance. There were three teenagers, two boys and a girl. I asked them if they lived here and one of the boys said that they were on vacation.

I asked them if they wanted to be friends and I said that I was staying with my grandma and the boy asked if she had a pool. I said yes but I didn't think she would want people using it. He said that if she had a pool and we were friends she would probably be fine with it. I agreed and led them to the lanai.

The boys raided the liquor cabinet and the girl went in the pool. I said that I liked her sunglasses - cheap yellow plastic ones - and she gave them to me. Jean came back after around a half hour and asked what was going on. The boy who had been doing the talking before took charge. He told me to say "Fuck you, grandma". I hesitated and said that I didn't want to. Jean said it was okay and so I did. I explained to her that they were my friends and had asked to use the pool.

She put on a feeble old woman act and pretended that she couldn't really do anything to get rid of them. The lead boy offered to go but she pretended that she wanted the company. She offered to get them drinks - the boys wanted alcohol but the girl just wanted something with strawberry in it. Jean returned a few minutes later with three cups which they promptly drank.

"How do you feel," she asked, grinning.

"I can't move!" the girl moaned from a recliner pool chair.

Jean told me to go inside and get cleaned up while she decided what to do with them. I was to go to my room after and wait.

Around an hour or two later, close to dusk, she came for me and told me it was time for me to say goodbye to my friends. She had me get in the car and we drove a short distance to a construction site for one of the houses in development. She led me to an open hole where Richie was standing next to a large plastic looking cover and a shovel. In the hole, laying side-by-side like sardines were the three teenagers.

"This is a septic tank," Jean said, which is appropriate because you're pieces of shit." She smiled. "It's time for you to say goodbye, Richard."

I peered over the edge of the hole. "What are you doing with them?" I asked.

"I'm going to have Pop Pop close them up in here and cover it with dirt until they've learned their lesson or run out of air, whichever happens first."

"We'll die in here," the boy who had first approached me shouted, "We won't have enough air." I turned to Jean.

"Is that true?" I asked. She gave me a thin smile and spoke softly.

"Well, if that were true," she posited, "wouldn't they try to get out? It's just a few feet to freedom - all they need to do is get up." I thought through the logic of what she had said. It made sense to me but I didn't understand the full context of the situation. I waved goodbye to them and Jean brought me back to the house. Richie sealed them in and buried them alive.

#

A couple days later, there was a story on the front page of the newspaper with a picture of the three teens stating that they were missing. They were dressed in the same clothes and the girl was even wearing the sunglasses that she gave me. The picture was in black and white.

"We have a problem," Richie said. If the police were looking for them, there was a chance someone had seen something. Jean read the paper and noted that the parents of one of the boys was high up in a company that the CIA had "ownership" in. She decided that they would tell him that the teens had stumbled into an "active operation" and were killed during the course of it.

#

I later recounted this story to a teacher who said that it sounded like she had killed the kids. I was confused but she told me to bring it to the principal - Dr Blaise.

He said that it sounded like she did kill them but if she had access to the drug she was probably high enough in the CIA to get away with it. The teacher was confused and Blaise clarified that a number of the faculty were CIA and that they had something on most of them. For example, he had a weakness for children at which the teacher was shocked. She said that he shouldn't be around kids then. He was later outed as a pedophile and fired but they never took any action over my story.

Chapter Nine

1995

One evening, Jean came over to my parents' house and told us that she had some very special guests. Shortly after she arrived so did the Olsens - or at least, Mary Kate, Ashley, and their mother. I don't remember if anyone else from their family came.

Jean introduced us and then began her pitch to their mother. Basically, she told her, she was enormously impressed by the impact their career had on TV and advertising. Every catalog and commercial wanted their own "Olsen Twins" which created enormous demand for white twins and even white siblings of similar ages. Their mother was put off by that, saying that she hoped it wasn't just white children. Jean dismissed her, saying that other people were doing commercials like that, but her concern was white people.

Jean used magic to age up the Olsen's - she asked her mother what type of animal they were. Her mother was confused and terrified, asking that she "put them back". She did, and explained that while the human form was the common form, most people had animal blood in their ancestry. Usually the older generations knew more about this - their mother recalled that her mother or grandmother had referred to them as beautiful ibex's (or a similar animal to a gazelle native to Northern Europe). Jean said that must be it.

She explained that since America was majority white, that was the demographic she was most concerned with. She moved on to her offer. She told her that because of her contributions to white culture, she wanted to extend an invitation to join the Reich. She explained that the Nazis and America had done a deal and that her father was Adolf Hitler. Their mother immediately froze up and replied that the math didn't seem to add up.

Jean replied that she was born in the early 30's, so before his real rise to power, but he had died in 1974. Their mother recoiled, saying that she didn't want to be involved in anything political like a coup, to which Jean told her the coup had already happened. She then told her that her father's legacy was seen through the lens of American propaganda and she would be happy to tell her more about him. She suggested that the kids spend some time talking while she discussed that further.

Mary Kate and my sisters wen upstairs to play, while Ashley and I talked in the dining room. I jokingly asked if she was jealous that her sister had two first names while she just had the one. She said that it was said like a single name, like when their mom calls one of them at the mall. I was surprised that they went out to the mall without being recognized. She said that they would usually wear sunglasses or something.

I asked her if she would say her character's catchphrase - "How rude" - but she declined. I asked her why not and she said that it was part of her character, not her. She then suggested I pump my fist in the air and say "Oh yeah". I did, to which she asked me how I would feel if people asked me to do that same thing, on demand, all the time. I said that I probably wouldn't mind, but I saw her point. We joined the others upstairs for a bit and then we were called down to the living room.

Jean told their mother that if they agreed to the deal, they would be made wealthier than they could ever imagine. The girls would have to have sex with members of the Reich, CIA, allies, etc during their teenage years but would have access to a drug that would make them forget. That is, unless one of them chose to eventually marry me, which would make them exempt.

Their mother chose to think it over and Jean drugged her before she left. They were driven back to the airfield that they had come from. Several months later, Jean brought us a copy of a Full House Michelle book and told me it had elements of what they recalled about meeting us. It was titled My Best Friend is a Movie Star.

#

Months later after Melissa Atkinson was killed, my family visited Jean in Florida. I had asked her why my other side of the family would always eat Italian food but we never ate German food when we visited her. She offered to show me how to cook a stew at that visit.

After we got settled in, she had me help cut onions, potatoes and carrots and then said it was time to add the meat. She had most of it thawing in the fridge - it looked like a pork loin except with a bone in it. She took a smaller package from the freezer and told me that we would add it to the onions and carrots to stew for a long time. She said that it was something like a a ham hock or foot with lots of collagen. She unwrapped it and dropped it into the stew and I immediately recoiled when I saw it. It was a human hand wearing a wedding band.

I turned to her in shock and stammered out that it was a hand - she immediately denied it. She told me to imagine an animal that had appendages like a human but that wasn't one. I asked her if it was an ape or monkey and she said like one, but that they would get pork from. I believed that for a second and then asked her about the ring - I said that it looked like a wedding ring. She said that it was like the tags farmers would put on their livestock. I still didn't quite believe her but I resolved not to eat it as no one else seemed to have seen that part of it.

After it had cooked for an hour, she opened it and commented that they must have used lots of product on the skin. I asked again what she meant by that and she "clarified" that the farmer must have used it on their livestock. She sent me away and finished cooking.

Before dinner was served, she made my entire family take the drug that would suppress the memory of the evening. She gave my parents wine and gave me grape juice. She then explained that it was something called Victory Stew and it was something her family would make whenever they triumphed over an enemy. Since my parents had triumphed over their enemy, that was why she had asked for the butcher to save a piece of her.

My father didn't really seem enthusiastic but my mother took relish in tasting the meat. I did what I was told and ate as much as I could stomach. Jean then got the idea to have me hold up the bone of what I presumed was the arm in "victory". She said that I now had a part of Mrs. Atkinson in me and that I should feel smug about it whenever I saw her children.

Later that summer, near Labor Day, I ran into Jessica Atkinson at the local pool and remembered part of what happened with the hand. I told her and she said that it sounded like I had eaten her mother and began to cry. I only remembered fragments so I thought that had to be wrong and flagged down my mother to confirm.

My mother told her to wait with me and then walked up to the house, returning with two vials of the drug. She had both of us drink it and told us that none of it happened. Jessica asked my mother why she was crying then and my mother said she had heard a sad poem or something but the sadness was fleeting. She immediately stopped crying - it was eerie.

#

A male agent brought a girl to Jean's room who she told me that I was related to. Genetically, she would have been a niece, but she seemed a bit older than me. She said that she was there for Jean to do whatever she wanted with

The same agent that brought the girl helped strap a metal brace to Jean's head that pulled back the corners of her lips to resemble a wolf's. She told me that her father had a pair of metal wolf teeth dentures created that he used to tear at the throats of his enemies. She used them for other purposes.

She inserted the dentures in her mouth and brought the girl onto her lap. She bit her shoulder between her head and collarbone. The "teeth" tore her flesh to shreds and there were bits flying everywhere. Blood poured down one side of her body. I was crying and Jean told me to come to her.

She forced me to chew on the girl's neck in the same area she had been chewing. I choked and sobbed and tried to let as little flesh into my mouth as possible. Jean insisted on chewing some and dropping int into my mouth like a bird when she saw that I couldn't or wouldn't eat on my own. She moved the girl's neck in a way that made the vertebrae snap and commented that it was pretty gruesome and I had taken part in enough. She let me leave and Richie found me crying and covered in blood in the hall.

He was surprised and disgusted that she would involve me in her "feeding". He helped me clean up and vomit what I had been forced to eat. He told me that he was loyal to her, but that was one of the things he felt was too far even for her.

I asked him why he didn't confront her about it and he said that wouldn't work the way I thought it would. I convinced him to say something anyway and when he did, she told him that even though he was loyal to her for most of his life, she would have him killed if he questioned her again.

Chapter Ten

1996

After Todd Howard finally got a job with Bethesda, Jean had him invite me to the Compuserve beta testing forums. My username was marIQ and I was one of the only people there not actually beta testing. When questioned why they allowed a ten year old in, they said that I was a sample of their future demographic. The person closest to my age was Aleira, Akatosh's daughter.

I was part of several conversations that I can recall. There was a discussion about flowers that I responded to saying the more the better and that my family told me that different flowers have different meanings. I accidentally outed Todd as CIA in a thread that was later deleted. When the "God" names were announced, the character of Ma'iq was named after me even though he wouldn't show up until Morrowind.

Towards the end of development, Jean asked me if anyone in the beta forum seemed like a good potential recruit. I said that Akatosh seemed to be a genius, which put a target on him. Jean had his wife killed in a "car accident" order to put him in a situation where his only choice was to be recruited.

For the recruitment, she brought me with her to speak with them. I also met his daughter. She told him that he would have to kill someone at some point for recruitment. He was drugged but agreed to it in order to ensure that he had the means to support his daughter.

#

During the spring of sixth grade, all of my classmates were brought into the gym which had seats out for an assembly. They had us line up and each take a small paper cup with liquid dispensed from a cooler to drink. In line, before I got my cup, I overheard one of the younger male teachers say to a colleague that this was messed up, having us take drugs. His colleague told him that it came down from the state and that it was probably meant to help make us stronger if we encountered it. The one who had spoken up seemed doubtful, but stopped talking.

When I approached the cooler, I took a cup of the liquid, pressed it against my lips and then threw it in the trash without drinking it. The school had a DARE program and taking drugs on purpose seemed wrong, especially after I heard the one teacher's doubts. Part of me thought that by refusing to drink it, I was passing a test. All of the students sat down in their seats and a short, balding man with glasses went up on stage and introduced himself - I believe that he said his name was Carl Nicolay.

Once he introduced himself, he immediately began giving the students commands. He said that it would be like Simon Says - the first thing we needed to do was stand up and make a movement with their arms. He demonstrated and at first it just felt like a game, so I followed the commands. Then, he started to tell us to do embarrassing things like picking our nose - he even told the female students to touch their breasts. I stopped because it started to scare me. A teacher came up to me and brought me to a classroom in the far back of the room - Mrs Marina's sixth grade classroom.

There were around five or six other students in the room. They asked us why we didn't follow the instructions. Some of the others weren't sure, but I told them it was because I overheard the male teacher say that there were drugs in the water. The bald man asked which teacher and they brought him in.

The bald man asked him why he had said something, why did he question the plan? He said that he didn't mean to prevent me from taking it, he understood that it was to make us stronger, to protect us. The bald man asked, "So you want to protect these children?"

The teacher nodded. The bald man asked my name and input it on a hand held device - he frowned. He looked at the other children and asked the name of one of them that had a thin build. His name checked out. At that, the bald man ordered one of the other teachers to hold up the boy. The bald man walked over and twisted the boy's wrist, breaking it. He told the teacher that the best way to protect these children would be to follow orders without question.

The man gave me a double doze of the liquid prior to the above, with the intent that a higher dose would make us forget. I still remembered the events of the previous day when I came in to school the next day and sought out the male teacher. I asked him what had happened. He quietly said that what I remembered was accurate, but that I couldn't tell anyone. He said that it was good that I remembered and that maybe that skill could come in use for me in the future.

#

There was a plaster painting shop that we frequently visited in Spring Hill called The Plaster Place. Normally, Robbie, the owner, was at the front register but on this visit her younger sister was.

After bringing up our items to pay, her sister pulled out a "cheat sheet" of credit card numbers and told Jean that she liked us, so she would take care of it. Jean got angry and said it was illegal and credit card fraud. She did it anyway and Jean told her, "You're going to regret pulling that shit."

The next day, the police officers came by looking for Jean. They came to the front door and Richie asked if he should let them in or tell them to leave. Jean told him to let them in and immediately offered them "something to drink". They declined and said that they were there to question Jean about the disappearance of Robbie's sister. Apparently, she had told Robbie what Jean said after closing the shop but before going missing.

They questioned Jean in front of me and when they asked her about Robbie's sister, she dismissively said, "she was white trash". They questioned her use of the past tense "was" and she hastily reworded her statement as the impression she had of her was white trash. They asked her a few other questions and then questioned me separately.

They said that their theory was that she had gotten Richie to kill her, put her in the back of a truck and dump the body somewhere. I told them that he didn't have a truck. I also confirmed that Jean had made a threat. They didn't have enough to arrest her on at that point, but she was clearly the main suspect.

As soon as they left, Richie asked Jean if they should be worried - if the police dug around enough, they would find everything. She said no, that she had seen how the Reich ended and it wasn't like this. He went pale and stammered, "You saw how it ends?" she said hurriedly, "Yes, that's what I'm trying to prevent."

They strategized as to how they would handle it. They controlled the police at the higher levels - the commissioner had been to their parties so they had blackmail dirt on him. Otherwise they would use the tools at their disposal through the CIA to deal with it. The case was dropped shortly after.

#

A few days later, Jean took me to the Plaster Place and told Robbie she would explain everything if she drank something. She did and Jean apologized and told her that she would buy the business from her for around $200,000, far more than it was worth.

A CIA agent later opened a similar store in the same location, but none of the regulars went to it and it failed relatively shortly after opening.

Chapter Eleven

1997

I initially became aware of Deep Space Nine when Jean visited my parent's house in Suffern. She told me that they had cast Avery Brooks, who had seen great acclaim for his portrayal of Othello, as the lead of a new Star Trek series. They chose to push him towards science fiction to keep his career effectively side-tracked from mainstream media.

The casting backfired in a way they couldn't predict - I immediately saw him as a father figure after the first episode. I admired his relationship with his on screen son and from the behind the scenes interviews, he seemed like a kind person. My parents tried to tell me that he was angry and brutish because he was black, but I didn't believe them.

Jean later told me that the character design for Odo was based off an altered photograph of me as a toddler. The fact that he was based off a picture of a child was reported in an article but later redacted. Even though she refused to let me watch Deep Space Nine when visiting her, she was heavily involved in using it to put out propaganda and messaging.

At one point, shortly after the airing of the episode where she guest-starred, Jean brought the actress Gina Phillips to meet me. I asked her about what it was like being an actress and she said that it was mostly fine. She did mostly small parts. The only part that she didn't like too much was having to sleep with people. I asked her if she had to do that with any of the people on the show and she said no, that they were as old as her father. It was mostly younger people involved in the production side.

When Voyager entered development, Jean told them to make it as much like Gilligan's Island as possible and make sure that I could watch it without keeping track of Deep Space Nine. She didn't want me looking up to Avery Brooks or Sisko. I still watched the show, but only with my parents. I also tried to keep up with it by reading plot summaries during and after its airings.

I eventually found an online community on a Star Trek message board, the name escapes me. I started posting on it around 1996 or so and Jean became aware of it around then. She asked if I also had somewhere to talk to people about Frasier, another show she was behind. When I said no, she mused that both had the same company behind them, so she had an idea.

She reached out to the owners of the forum and gave them an offer that they couldn't refuse. In exchange for creating a subforum for CBS's other shows, including Frasier, she would give them unparalleled access to the production team of Deep Space Nine, including the writers. The private subforum for admins and mods on the site was named after the Klingon Hall of Honor.

I spent a lot of time on the Frasier and Star Trek forums, though I ended up parroting a lot of hateful speech from the resident racist. He was eventually banned, but the mod team commented that it was something that they needed to keep an eye on.

In Fall of 1997, Jean Asked me how I liked the forum and I said that I wished that I was a mod. She said that could be arranged and drugged the aunt of one of the administrators and had her convince her niece to give me the role as an opportunity. She told me to keep an eye out for the kind of stuff that I had used to post and welcomed me to the mod team.

Around that time, possibly just before, she had us visit in Florida and we met a couple people involved in the show. Ronald D Moore and Barry Jenner. Barry was nice, I kept asking him what it was like to be an Admiral and he kept correcting me that he was just playing one.

My father mostly bothered Ron, insisting that they drop Molly in a vortex somewhere, leading to the episode Time's Orphan. Ron questioned how racist my father was and Jean interceded, saying that it wasn't indicative of how she wanted to be seen. Rene Auberjonois was also there with his wife for dinner.

Later that Fall, a thread in the Star Trek main forum caught my attention. One of the members had noticed some startling similarities between the episode You Are Cordially Invited and an old Western novel that she had read. Certain lines were almost exact and the story beats followed the same structure. The community took it as evidence of plagiarism.

I mentioned this to Jean and she said that it was true. That the book was an "approved story". She asked to see the thread and I showed her. She took note of the name of the member. Days later, one of the moderators said that she hadn't heard from the member in several days so she had gone by her house and she could see boxes in the window. She was worried about her because she hadn't mentioned a move.

The woman who had noticed the plagiarism had also been in touch with a local newspaper about it prior to what happened, so an article was already in the works. They had contacted the writer who had credit on the episode and she had corroborated the story but with additional details. She said that she was given the book and was told to copy it as closely as possible using the DS9 characters instead. She had faxed this statement to the paper. I don't believe the article ever made it to a print edition.

Days later, the writer's credit was removed and her name stripped from future airings of the episode. A piece was put out in Variety or a similar trade publication explaining it as her being only involved in the outline stage and inappropriately credited.

The moderator subforum speculated as to what had happened. One of the posters astutely suggested that what we had witnessed was the arm of the state reaching out to silence people who knew too much. I told them that I had mentioned the thread to my grandmother but I didn't expect anything like this to happen. We mourned the absence of the woman who had initially brought up the plagiarism, but little did we know that Ron and the writers had heard about what had happened and did something about it.

In the meantime, Jean mined me for ideas of possible episodes. I suggested what would become the episode One Little Ship and other minor character beats. She even let me help her outline a full episode, Profit and Lace. I convinced her to have the studio add additional episodes to the end of Season Six in order to fit in the ideas. My father's contribution was to ask for more TOS actors.

Out of an incorrect assumption on my part that two network shows would be too taxing on Terry Farrell, I convinced Jean to drop her from DS9. Much to my future regret, she did it. She had her exit written as incredibly dark with a ton of pathos in an effort to pay tribute to the character.

Then, Inquisition aired. It was followed by a letter from Ron to the Hall of Honor. He expressed sadness and frustration at the death of our friend and the episode was written as an expose of the CIA and their tactics. The entire scene in the holosuite was filmed in secret and William Sadler was cast for his resemblance to Jean.

The move prompted the studio to rescind final script approval, which had been granted a few months prior. They considered that a victory because it wouldn't have much of an effect on their final season as much of it had been plotted out and approved.

Unfortunately, Jean took the move as a sign that the forum was too dangerous to allow to continue. She planned to have the entire private subforum murdered. I told her that the posts about the plagiarism were in the public, so anyone could have seen them. She then decided to just kill the administrator of the forum and their second and had the forum shut down with the excuse that it was too difficult to manage the racist posters.

Chapter Twelve

1999

I was at my grandparent's house in Smithtown, NY with my father, my grandfather Tony Taurisano, my aunt Marietta Benson, uncle Tom Benson and cousin Katie. My grandfather was sitting in the kitchen, I was on the landing of the front interior steps and my uncle and father were in the foyer. My cousin was on the front porch. My aunt was in the den.

My uncle, aunt and cousin had just arrived and I was packing up from staying there. My uncle approached my father as I was coming down the stairs and said to him - you have a daughter, right? Daughters, my father said. Tom then asked him if he was having sex with the older one yet. My father said, "That's sick." Emily, the older of my two sisters was just twelve at the time. Tom noticed that I was there and told me that I would be a man eventually and that I should hear this, too. He said that he had been having sex with Katie and that it was "the greatest gift a father could give to his daughter."My father said that it seemed wrong and that she was barely in high school. Tom said that he had slept with his wife to make her and that she was half him so that, in his mind, meant that it was half an act of love and half masturbation.

Katie
Den
Uncle
Father
Garage →
Me
Marietta Dining room kitchen
Marietta
~~Living room~~
Den
Tony
Glass sliding doors

He called Katie in from the front. He told her to tell him how the things they did in the bedroom made her feel. She was embarrassed, she said that he had told her to never talk about it to anyone, that people wouldn't understand. He said that it was fine this one time. She didn't want to, she asked - in front of uncle Rick and Richard? He told her to say it the way she said it to him. "Oh daddy it makes me so wet," and she gestured down at her crotch.

At that, my grandfather stormed in from the kitchen. "Okay, I've heard enough." He called for my aunt Marietta, Katie's mother and Tom's wife, to come in from the den. He called Tom sick for what he was talking about doing with his own daughter. Tom claimed that he had heard it out of context. My grandfather said that it all sounded pretty clear to him. Tom said that he had something in the car that would help him explain and told Katie to wait in the car. He asked us to all wait for him in the kitchen. My grandfather sat in the seat with his back to the glass sliding doors, my aunt opposite to him at the other end of the table. I sat to her right, my father to her left. Tom exited through the garage to go to his car. We waited a few minutes - my grandfather commented that he couldn't imagine anything that could explain that. At that moment, Tom slid open the glass door and quickly jabbed my grandfather in the right arm with a needle and injected a vial of clear liquid. He told my father to hold my aunt down and my father told me to stay still. I was paralyzed with fear.

My aunt told my father, "You're my brother-in-law, you're hurting me." He said that it wasn't personal and to just cooperate. My grandfather went still and quiet, staring straight ahead. She asked Tom, "What did you stick in my Father's arm?" He fit another vial into the syringe.

"Same thing I'm going to stick in you, bitch," Tom said as he injected her in the left arm. She also went slack. He told her to talk to her father about something.

"Like what," she asked.

"There are a lot of good sales at the outlets that you were talking about, talk about that," Tom said. She began talking with my grandfather about the sales and they carried on a conversation as if nothing had happened.

As they talked, Tom began to prep a third vial for me. I begged my father to not let him do it. My father said that it wasn't a bad drug, it was a conversation starter. He asked my uncle if he really had to drug me. He said yes, I looked terrified, I would definitely say something. My father said that I was mostly terrified because of the needle and asked him if I could drink it instead. Tom said that it doesn't usually work as well that way. My father insisted and had me get a cup and some juice from the kitchen. I did and I drank it.

My father then led me out to the car and Tom entered his with Katie waiting. She looked upset. He told her that they would come back in an hour or two. I sat in the backseat and my father drove me back to Suffern. On the way he asked me if I thought he should do what Tom told him to do. The drugs had taken effect at that point and I thought that what Tom said was good because he said it was good - I didn't have the context to fully understand what he was suggesting even though at that age I should have. I said that it sounded good from what Tom said. When we arrived back, I remembered only fragments and my father was concerned but I agreed not to say anything.

#

I was downstairs in the basement of my parents' house taking a nap on the couch. I woke up to the sound of my sister Emily screaming and rushed upstairs. I pushed open the door to her bedroom and saw her at the edge of her bed with my father behind her. Both of their pants were off and she was crying and bleeding.

I started throwing anything I could find at him, mostly plastic and wooden toys, screaming at him to get away from her. He was in shock and didn't really move until I picked up a cast iron bank I had gotten for Christmas several years earlier. It was as heavy as a brick and seeing that, he let her go. I grabbed her a towel and told her to lock herself in the upstairs bathroom, the only door that she could easily lock from the inside. I told her to wait there while I got help.

I ran downstairs and tried the front door and the back door but both were locked. My father came downstairs after putting his pants back on and trying to get my sister to come out of the bathroom. I had just tried to open the back door and screamed at him that he was sick and asked him why the door was locked. He said that my mother and him had agreed that whatever happened in this house stayed in this house and I retorted that I doubted that she meant this.

He had me cornered in the mud room, so I grabbed a baseball bat that he had gotten at a Yankees game for me when I was young. I started swinging it at him in wide arcs to keep him away. I backed him into the kitchen and turned and ran up the stairs to my room.

I opened the window and started climbing out onto the roof. He tried to stop me and pull the bat away from me. I must have lost my footing in the struggle because the next thing I remembered, I was on my back on the grass in the backyard.

Our neighbor, Dawn Trusewicz, came rushing over at about the same time that my father made it out the back door. Said "Oh my god, what happened?" and I said that I wasn't sure and that I thought that my father had pushed me out the window. He said that he was trying to stop me from jumping out the window. I wasn't sure what had happened at that point so I let him explain to the neighbor and bring me inside.

He told me to tell my sister that it was safe to come out and she did after some convincing. I believe that I may have had a concussion from hitting the ground so hard because I didn't remember what had happened other than my father being sick and the screaming. She was scared and he had told her that I told him he should do that (when I was drugged by Tom) so she believed that I was a part of her abuse.

He told me to go down to the basement where I was before and unlocked the doors. He called Jean and Richie and told them what had happened. I listened in from the downstairs line. He said that he would need two or three vials for me, Emily, and maybe the neighbor. They both expressed disappointment in him that he let this happen in his house. They said that the drug could take away the memories, but we would always look at him with fear even if we didn't know where that came from. They told him that they could have the vials there within one or two hours and to keep them updated.

After he got off the phone I came back upstairs and confronted him. I asked how they could send something up from Florida so quickly. He said that they were asking a friend locally to bring it over. I asked him what the drugs were for - he said that they were to help me and Emily.

I told him that we learned about people like him in school and that he needed help, because he was sick, not me. He said that he was concerned about my violent outbursts. I told him that it was righteous anger, that I was trying to protect my sister.

I asked him if he was going to get treatment. He said that they would put people like him in jail and I told him that maybe that was where he needed to be. I eventually agreed to take the drug when he claimed that he would do something about his problems.

#

In the weeks after being drugged earlier that summer, I began acting odd. I would quote sitcoms and act inappropriately, moreso than I normally did at that age. At one point, an older boy named Eric convinced me to try giving him a blowjob, which I did for a few seconds before getting grossed out. He insisted that because I loved the Golden Girls and acted somewhat flamboyant when mimicking sitcom actors, that I was probably gay. He told me that he would have an older friend come talk to me.

A few days later, I was back at the park and noticed a youngish looking teenager sitting on the bench. He was smiling and waved at me. He came over and said that his friend sent him to talk to me. He started talking about how I was special and didn't know anything about it and that he wanted to show me and tell me about it. He asked me how old I was and I told him 14. He said that he knew about himself at 16 and wished that he had known sooner. He said that most people his age would think it was wrong of him to do this with someone so young but as long as I was okay with it, he would consider it doing me a favor.

I didn't know what it was and asked - he said that it had to do with sex. I had a nebulous at best understanding of sex. The most I knew beyond the differences between men and women was that it felt good and had to do with genitals. He said that he should talk if we were going to do things and he asked which Golden Girls character was my favorite. I said Blanche, because she always seemed to get the biggest laughs and she looked the most like me. He smiled and said that Blanche had lots of sex and I felt uncomfortable. I asked him what exactly this was - was it a quest or something?

He said that it was something like that; that I would see the whole world differently afterwards. At that point, the park was empty and it was dusk. I agreed and he had me go over to the swings and told me that I should take off my pants. I paused and asked why? He said that it had to do with my butt and I recoiled, saying that it was dirty. He said that anything involving sex was a bit dirty and asked if I found him handsome. I said that I didn't know, but if he was handsome I guess that it was okay. The aftermath of being drugged led me to being susceptible to bad logic and it sounded like something that would make sense in a sitcom. I bent over and lay my stomach on the seat of one of the swings.

He took a moment to get ready and what followed felt like he had shoved a broken glass bottle in my anus. I screamed and tried to push him away. After a few confused seconds, he withdrew and I looked around the ground behind me in a panic.

"What did you do to me!?" I screamed at him. He looked confused as to why that didn't feel good to me. I told him that it hurt a lot and he said that maybe it was because he didn't have lube. I told him that I was going to tell my parents that he hurt me. He said that I shouldn't, that he would talk to his parents but my parents probably wouldn't understand. I asked why and he said that he was older and it was already a mistake to do what he did and he had helped that his father might be able to help him figure out what to do about it.

I agreed to not say anything and we both left the park. As I walked back, I realized how much pain that I was in and resolved to tell my parents anyway. With a knot in my stomach, I called for my parents as soon as I got home. My mother was watching TV in the living room and my father was in the dining room. I explained what had happened the best I could. He immediately turned cold and said that it sounded like I wanted it. I insisted that I didn't and that the boy had said that it would feel good and that this didn't feel good, it was the worst pain I could imagine. My mother insisted that if I said that I didn't want it, that this was an assault and that they should call the police. He relented and agreed to let her do that.

Around fifteen minutes later, a female detective came and questioned me about what had happened. She examined me with gloves in the kitchen and told me that it was stretching without blood so it would likely heal in a few days. She then sat down with my parents and myself in the living room.

She said it sounded like it was probably a boy 16-22 with confusion about his own sexuality. My father asked why they couldn't get everyone down at the station to canvas the neighborhood. She said that they didn't really have the resources for that and even if they did it would disrupt the privacy of the whole town. He asked what would happen if he got a posse together with baseball bats to do the same? She said that they take the safety of all the residents very seriously and that if there was anything that even looked like vigilante justice, he would be the first person they would call on.

I was scared to go out and leave the house for weeks. My parents set up a session with a therapist, Felicia Polcardi. My father refused to pay for multiple sessions due to the price and the fact that it wasn't covered by insurance. In the single session, she attempted to address the way I had acted like it was a quest or sitcom by telling me to avoid narrative thinking. My body was my own and I shouldn't let anyone do anything to it unless I was comfortable with it. It helped a bit but not as much as multiple therapy sessions over time would.

#

#

Several weeks later, my father woke me up in the middle of the night, around 2 or 3 AM, and told me that I didn't have to worry about running into the boy anymore when I went out. I asked what he meant. He said not to tell my mother because she wouldn't understand. He said that he was driving earlier in the evening around dusk and spotted a boy who matched the description I gave the police walking from the park on Memorial Drive. He stopped the car and asked the boy his name. He told him that it was James and my father told him to get in and he did.

He explained to him that I was so scared to leave the house and that I felt horrible. He stopped at an overpass over the New York State Thruway and gave him a choice. Either he would drive James to the Ramapo Police Station four blocks away, or James could jump. James jumped. I later learned that Rick had drugged him with datura so I question his recollection of the events leading up to the death.

My father was excited as he told me this. I was horrified to hear it and told him as much. How could I believe him that he jumped, I asked. He said that he wouldn't lie about that. I told him that I didn't feel safe around him, that he was basically a murderer. He said that some people have done things so bad that there's no place in society for them anymore. He asked me to try to understand that and keep the secret. I told him that I would try.

The next morning, my mother said that someone had jumped from the bridge. I asked her how did she know that he jumped. She said because it was in the paper, right there. My father stepped in and gave me a look that meant "stop talking" I did and went to school for the day.

When I got home, he approached me and said that there was a special skill our family had to forget. He said that he had once done something so horrible when he was younger that his father had beaten him up but he forgot what it was. He gave me a cup with liquid and said that it would help. I drank it.

He walked me up to my room and told me to imagine that we were in an alternate universe, that everything that happened before the death happened and everything in my future after today would happen but that this event and the repercussions of it did not. I was drugged at this point, so by the end of that evening I felt better but still partially remembered that something bad had occurred.

The next day, the police detective from before came back and told my father that she suspected him in the boy's death and that they were treating it as a potential homicide. She mentioned that it could even involve kidnapping charges. He said that the paper had reported it as a suicide. She said that yes, the paper did, but their case was still open.

She had approached as my father and I were in the garage and he told me not to say anything before coming out to talk to her. After she dropped the fact that he was their prime suspect, he went inside and quickly called his brother, John. He said that he was checking with his brother who is a police officer for legal advice, which she allowed. He came back out and said that he didn't consent to a search of the house because it was a mess but he would answer any questions she had.

She said that James was last seen walking towards his parents house on Memorial Drive, but less than ten minutes later, he was over a mile away jumping off an overpass onto the Thruway. My father suggested that maybe he ran really fast. The detective said that from the people she had talked to it didn't seem like he was suicidal. She looked at his car and said that he had a car, maybe he saw James, roughed him up, and pushed him off the bridge. My father got indignant and said, "That's the best you've got, that I have a car? To accuse me of second degree murder?" He walked over to the car and opened the trunk.

"Does it look like there was a bloody body in there," he asked. "It's not like he would have just gotten in if I asked him." The detective took it in and said no, I suppose not. She left and told him that she would be back if they had more questions.

As soon as she left and we went back inside, I told him that I couldn't keep it a secret anymore. The police were involved and they were talking about murder and kidnapping and he had to confess. He said that he couldn't do that because then he would have to tell my mother what he had done and it would destroy the family. I insisted that I wouldn't be able to keep the secret, that it was too much. He thought for a moment and said that he would tell my mother, that he believed that he could explain it in a way that she would understand.

When she returned with my sisters, he took her and me aside and upstairs and explained it. She was furious at him, the boy was apparently the older brother of one of Emily's friends. She had gone to the funeral, even. She said that he was always doing things without consulting her when they had agreed when getting married that they would be equal partners. She laid out terms for him - this was his problem to deal with. Going forward, he would talk with her about any major decisions.

The police filed charges against my father - I believe that the formal charge was induced manslaughter. I know that he was upset because IBM had a policy that if he was convicted of a felony, that he would be fired. The charge would have also included jail time.

We went to court in either Sloatsburg or Tuxedo, I don't recall. When our case came up, it was a bench trial and the judge dismissed the charges. He said that my father didn't actually kill the boy and that he almost agreed with how he handled it. They boy's father was surpried and furious. He said that my father had robbed him of his son's life, that he could have eventually been rehabilitated but he would never have that chance now.

The judge said that the prisons in New York were focused much more on punishment than rehabilitation, and that it was almost better that his son had died now rather than having him slowly deteriorate in prison.

#

QUACKENBUSH, JAMES ALLEN

James Allen Quackenbush lll, a resident of Suffern. Died October 7, 1999. He was 18. Born September 3, 1981 in Suffern to James and Victoria Adragna Quackenbush Jr. He attended Rockland Community College, loved music, art and photography.

He is survived by his parents James and Victoria at home, his brother Dennis and sister Kiersten of Suffern, grandparents Norma & Rosario Adragna of Suffern and Margaret Quackenbush of Suffern.

Visiting will be Sunday and Monday from 2-4 and 7-9 pm at the Wanamaker & Carlough Funeral Home. A Mass of Christian Burial will take place Tuesday 10 am at Sacred Heart Church in Suffern. Interment to follow at Brick Church Cemetery in New Hempstead.

The family request any donations be sent to Project Rainbow in Valley Cottage, and Suffern DARE.

WANAMAKER & CARLOUGH
FUNERAL DIRECTORS
Rt. 59, Suffern
(914) 357-0423

#

Jean arranged to have the girl who had survived the Ritz, Becca Nusbaum, due to my plea come to my parents' house for dinner. She had braided hair and sat down at the table and ate with us. Jean told me that she was going to live in a brothel and would be forced to have sex with people for the next several years. I was to give her a choice between that and death.

After dinner, we went into my sister's bedroom to talk. I told her what Jean said and asked her if she wanted to die instead. She said no, that it was good to know what kind of situation she would be going into, but she would rather keep living. I asked her if she blamed me and she said no, I wasn't the one with the power - it was the adults doing this to her.

We were given a condom and instructed to have sex if she was to survive - it would be her first assignment as part of her new life. We had sex and I quickly came. She suggested that we have sex again, which we did sans condom. I didn't know it at the time, but that was when we conceived our daughter, Alice.

She was taken away after that and we were both screamed at for taking more than what was given. Months later I was asked for a sample of semen. I was confused as to why it was taken and when I asked I was told because of what I had taken, children would be conceived using my sperm and her eggs. I was told that the number would be 144,000 and that they would all be sacrificed for the Reich's rituals.

Chapter Thirteen

2000

At a point in Fall 2000, before the remainder of this testimony, my mother came downstairs while I was using the computer and gave me something to drink. She said that Jean had asked her to ask me about the buddy list feature on AOL. I gave her a brief explanation of what it was, then she asked me who I had on mine. I explained each person who was on and where I had met them and then, when I got to Seth, clarified that I didn't really consider him a friend and told her that he was a psychopath.

She took an interest in that and asked me more details about him. I told her that he was planning to kill me when I first met him and that he had said that he had killed several small animals including cats. I told her that the only reason

I had kept him on the list was to try to dissuade him from doing things like that. She said that was all that she needed.

A few weeks later, she told me to talk to him. I did and he said that he had been recruited by the Reich to hunt humans for them to eat. He was initiated in a ritual where he ate flesh which he found gross, but he was happy at being given the opportunity to kill. I was sickened by that and told Margie and she drugged me again.

Shortly after, during Homecoming, my classmates were told that a girl had died in a car accident. She was the cousin of a friend, Melissa Peckins. The truth was that Seth had killed her as a sacrifice for the Reich. During the school day, I was taken aside by my freshman year history teacher to talk to Melissa about what had happened to her cousin. We were both drugged and I was told to console her as she had found out that her cousin hadn't died in a car crash but was slaughtered by the Reich in a ritual killing. Being drugged, I was able to recall what Seth had said and tried to console her the best I could. I held that memory and confronted him online when I got home.

He said that he had mistakenly chosen the daughter of a member of the Reich or one of his its allies as his prey. They were upset but kept him on, having him instead hunt in predominantly minority communities. I came to Margie with this and again was drugged.

Years later, after expressing to Margie that I was feeling bad about what had happened with Stacey Herbison and that I needed to settle it by turning myself in for the assault, she drugged me and told me to message Seth for him to take care of it. I didn't intentionally message him to "take care of it" but the thought of messaging must have been incepted in that moment leading me to contact him which led directly to her death.

Chapter Fourteen

2001

My family was visiting Washington, DC to give my grandfather a chance to see the White House, Senate, and other major buildings and monuments as he had never previously been there for a vacation like that - a grand tour. I was told that someone on the extended maternal side of the family had set it up for us.

We were walking down the street and a bald man flagged us down. He had noticed that I was using a Palm Pilot, which was unusual for someone my age to be doing at the time. He said that his company was looking into e-readers, so he wanted to ask my advice as a consumer what I was looking for in a reader. My parents said that it was okay to talk with him, so I answered his questions.

I said that the monochrome screen was just fine, the files in simple text were small and I could fit hundreds of books in it. I basically described how I was using it as an e-reader and he seemed enthusiastic about that.

He gave me his business card and it said Jeff Bezos - Amazon. I had heard of Amazon when it first started as an order by check/bank transfer online book store. I had showed it to Jean at the time. I said about as much and he said that they sold much more than books now. I said that I would sign up for an account and try it out.

When I told my parents, my mother told me that I should ask him for a job. I called the number on his card that he gave me and he said maybe when I was 27, which is when the Saudis decide if a prince will become more than that or not. I was confused by the way he referred to me in relation to royalty and he said never mind.

#

I was attending a show on my own in Brooklyn for the first time. It was for a band called Leftover Crack. As I was walking and trying to locate the venue, I ran into an attractive girl with wet, curly, hair. She said that I was cute and asked if I was going to the show, too. I said that I was and she asked me if I wanted to hook up. I agreed and we made out briefly before she asked me if I wanted to come upstairs. I was a bit nervous around sex and declined, but offered my AIM username to maybe talk some time later.

She said that she didn't have internet, so I offered to let her use my sister Laura's AOL account since she never used it. She took the information from me and we parted. I don't remember if I saw her at the show or not, but after the show I went to hang out with some of the people I had just met. I stayed over until close to two in the morning. When I left, I encountered Tom Hanks as detailed in my further testimony. What is relevant is that I was drugged after that encounter, and so I didn't remember giving her the password.

A few weeks later, Laura logged into her AOL account and people started messaging her. She looked at her profile and it had been changed to include Leftover Crack lyrics and the name and details of the girl, which I didn't recognize. My parents asked me if I knew anything about it and I said that I didn't. They called the CIA and told them about it and they said to change the password and they would watch for any login attempts.

They got a hit a day or two later and tracked down the girl and had an agent kidnap her. He brought her to an abandoned construction site and tied her to a chair. When they questioned her, she told them that we made out and I had given her the password. My parents put me on the phone with her and while I didn't completely remember, I believed her and told my parents as much so they would let her go. They didn't.

They asked the agent for details about her - any next of kin. He said that she had family around an hour away. My father said that he didn't feel right just dumping her body in the river so that no one would ever know what happened. He exhibited no remorse in having her killed, though. The agent offered to slit her throat and leave her in an alley to be found. I protested, saying that even if she had hacked the account, this wasn't justice. They had no right to be judge, jury, and executioner.

They said they would give Laura the choice. They presented it to her as that they had found the person that scared her and, if she agreed, they would take her out of the world forever and she would never scare her again. Laura nodded and I shouted at them to the point where they drugged me to stop from doing anything about it. They told the agent to kill the girl and he did.

Years later, when I got to college, there was a poetry reading on the front stoop by another resident, Justin Woo. It was about a friend of his who had her throat slashed in New York City and her body dumped in an alley. I later told him about the details I could remember and he said that it did sound like his friend. If my parents had done it, he said, they would have been very well-connected. There was no coverage in the papers and any effort to investigate the death or otherwise get justice was quashed.

#

I was walking south from a friend's apartment in Carroll Gardens towards Red Hook looking for a subway station around 2:30 am. I spent time at their apartment after a show at The Hook in Brooklyn. I was walking down Columbia St and at the corner where it intersects with Commerce St, a black SUV pulled up right before I crossed. The light in the back was on and I could see a driver, two men with machine guns, one black and one white, and the actor Tom Hanks sitting between them.

I didn't know what to think other than the men were probably bodyguards. I figured that New York was a big city and if some random sixteen year old would be coming back from an event at that hour, it stood to reason that a celebrity might, too.

He called out to me, "Hey, what's your name?"

I replied, "Rich - Rich Marin... you're Tom Hanks, right?"

He smiled, talking to the man on his left, "He recognizes me - check the map." The driver had what looked like a GPS device mounted on the dashboard and pressed some buttons on it.

"Are you coming back from some sort of event or something," I asked, confused at the direction the conversation seemed to be heading.

"Sort of," he said, "but really I'm here on safari hunting black and brown people." He said without a hint of irony. Even though, I thought he was making a bad joke.

"He's black," I pointed to the guard on his left.

"Well, Dave is a professional, isn't that right Dave?"

"Yes sir," apparently Dave said.

"How could you be a part of that," I interrogated.

"Well, people die all the time," Dave said, "and these aren't my people."

As we talked, the driver whispered something to Tom, who then interrupted us.

"Well Rich, I've got good news and I've got bad news."

"What's that?" I asked him.

"The bad news is that you're in the red zone, which means that you're fair game, so I'm going to hunt you. The good news is that you remind me of my son, so I'm going to give you a ten second head start." I froze.

"Are you serious?" Then he started counting.

"Ten, yes, this is serious. Run, Rich, run!" I started to run.

"Nine" I tripped on a rough piece of the road and quickly jumped back up.

"Eight" There was a van parked in front of the building on the corner and I briefly considered hiding under it.

"Seven"

"Six"

I heard a voice coming from above and to the right - in the building on the corner. "Come in," the whisper said, "come in!" urgently.

There was a loosely chained door opposite the van. It was just open enough that I could slip through sideways if I turned my head and took off my backpack. I knew from his more recent roles that he had put on some weight and probably couldn't follow me. "Come up, up, up" the voice said, panicking. I didn't see it at first, but there was a rickety stairway that led up to a loft that was basically a piece of plywood scaffolding. A woman with dark curly hair and light brown skin was on the left with a sleeping bag and ushered me over urgently but silently.

We quietly listened for a few seconds and could hear him trying to push through the door. I whispered to her "What's this?" She eyed my suspiciously.

"Are you part of this?"

"No, I was just walking down the street and suddenly Tom Hanks was chasing me with a gun. Are you part of this?"

"How do you know who he is?" she asked me again, pointedly, as if my knowledge of his identity meant we were co-conspirators.

I replied that he was one of the biggest movie stars in Hollywood. She said that she didn't watch many white movies and I tried to think of something she might have seen.

As we talked, I could hear tom conversing with the men, asking if they had any chaincutters in their SUV. They said that they didn't, but they could get anything within around twenty minutes, they just had to wait for the ferry. We were close to the ferry for Governor's Island so I assumed that was what they were referring to. He sent one of them on their way to get them, then leaned against the door, poking the barrel of the gun through. "I can hear you, you know," he said.

"Why did you have to come hide in here?" he asked tauntingly.

"Would you rather I ran down the open street where you could just gun me down from the car?"

"Well yeah," he replied, "that's sort of the point."

"Sorry, but if you're going to kill me, I'm not going to make it easy for you. Why are you doing this, anyway? You're probably the most famous person in the world. You could do anything," I figured that the longer I kept him distracted, the less likely he would be to kill us or anyone else.

"It's precisely because I am so famous that I'm doing this," he said. "But if you have to know, I developed a taste for it when we were shooting Saving Private Ryan." I looked at the woman, who was pressed against the wall furthest from the edge. That was one of the movies she was aware of.

"What, like you wanted to see what it felt like?" I asked.

"No, that was all real, and when you experience the thrill of watching the life drain from someone's eyes, you can't top that," he reveled. I edged away from his line of sight and laid flat.

"Well in that case, I hope that you understand that I'm going to get out of your line of sight. But wait, what do you mean it's all real? Say I buy that the most famous actor in Hollywood is basically a serial killer, didn't Stephen Spielberg direct that? Weren't there production crew? Extras?"

"Steven's just happy with the accolades and a paycheck," he laughed. "No, that whole sequence at the start was filmed separately on a beach in Europe. The cinematographer was this experimental Polish director named Janusz Kaminski. They picked him because he had a plan to make it look as real as possible. The people that wanted us to make it saw that America had lost its taste for war, and they wanted to show them something so visceral that it would convince people to sign up."

"So it was just a recruitment tool and you killed real people? That's sick."

He then described in detail how they did it. The production recruited 2-3000 poor and homeless men from all over Europe. Just a few from each city but it added up. They recruited more as needed during production. At the beach where they filmed, they constructed barracks and only gave the extras water that was drugged. So, after each day of production, most of them would just have a ghost of a memory of the day before. Since they all spoke different languages and didn't really socialize much with each other, it made it easier for them to exit people as needed.

After each day of production, anyone who died or were too injured to continue were loaded onto the back of a truck and cremated in an industrial incinerator. The extras weren't given live ammunition but the Irish army and others playing German soldiers were. It didn't matter that the men were drugged and scared because that was how they expected them to look.

I asked him if any of the other actors had a problem with it. He said that one of them did, so they made sure to spin his PTSD from it as a drug addiction even though the only drugs he had taken were the memory drugs to deal with what he had seen.

I asked him why he wanted to kill me if I looked so much like his son. He said that as a parent, sometimes he gets frustrated and it's not like he could just kill his son. He pushed against the door further and complained that even if he could get in there, he would be afraid that he would get tetanus and complained to the guy waiting that the structure shouldn't be there and someone should have it knocked down. The man reminded him that they had a narrow window for the hunt and Tom told me that I was lucky and left.

The woman I was with made a comment about how rich people would get squeamish about something like tetanus but not killing people. She said that this had been going on since the 80's. She didn't realize it was literally celebrities and wealthy people paying to go on safari, but people knew not to stay out too late at night. I asked her if she wanted to have sex - which was stupid and I'm not sure why I asked. At this she said absolutely not, that she still wasn't sure if I was part of it. We heard a burst of automatic fire - it sounded like he did get one person.

She gathered up her things and climbed out through a hole in the roof of the building. She told me not to follow her. I told her good luck and she stayed in the corner.

I waited for at least an hour until it started to get light again. An ambulance pulled up outside around 4:30 am and an EMT got out. He called out to me to come out. I didn't at first because I was afraid that he had a gun and said as much. He said that he didn't, but if I didn't come out, he would get one of the people who did. At that, I cautiously grabbed my backpack and climbed down, pushing through the door.

He held up a canister with a mask attached and told me to inhale, that it would calm me down. Once I did, he started asking me questions, He said that he had a report of two people holed up there, he asked me where the other person went. I told him that she left and I didn't know where she went other than the general direction. I asked him what this was, did the entire police force and FDNY know about this? He said no, an operation like this only involved around 20 people. The city was divided into zones and if 911 was called, the people assigned to that zone would be sent out.

He then asked me what I was doing before this and I told him that I was walking towards a subway station. He directed me towards one and told me to keep walking as if none of this had happened. He told me that I would forget it, but by the time I got home, I still remembered. I tried telling my father about it, but he dismissed it.

Chapter Fifteen

2002

After the initial encounter in Brooklyn, I spent the next few months mostly keeping local and staying away from the city. As bizarre as the experience was, I was unable to just write it off as a dream or something that didn't happen. My parents noticed my isolation and convinced me that it would be safe to visit Hayden Planetarium. We had gone to its opening, I was told that it was due to my father having a connection through IBM. They were premiering a new iMax film narrated by Harrison Ford - I thought that maybe there was a chance that he was going to be there.

We parked in the garage under the building and once we entered, I separated from my family to look at some of the exhibits. I was on the floor near the exterior of the iMax theater - we had just gotten the tickets for the show. When I turned a corner, I came face to face with Tom Hanks, Rita Wilson, and his two sons. He immediately recognized me and said, "He, you look familiar, do I..." I cut him off.

"You gave me a ten second head start." He froze and his family looked confused. A bodyguard came up from his left flank and asked him if he needed assistance. He held out his hand and said, "No, I'll handle it." The guard guided me to a side room and zip-tied my wrists to the chair that he told me to sit down on. He told me to wait and I did.

After the guard left, Tom's younger son, Colin, came in through the same door we had entered through. The guard left through a door on the other side of the room.

"What was that you said to my dad about ten seconds?"

I told him that he didn't want to know and that he probably shouldn't be back there. He said it was fine, that the staff had set it up for them as a green room and he would just tell them he was getting a bottle of water. He told me that he did want to know.

I took a breath and told him that my memory of the event was a bit hazy, but a couple things had stuck. I told him that his father was hunting me and other people for fun and that I remember him saying that I resembled his son, which I guess meant him.

"I don't believe you," he said. I reminded him that his father had recognized me, not the other way around. Also, whatever it was was so serious that he would have a guard stick me in a room and tie me up. He said that he had assumed it was some sort of sex thing.

He asked me when it happened and I told him it was a few months prior. I recalled that it was a Thursday or Friday and he said that he did remember his father coming home late one Saturday when it was raining and tell them he was getting back from a hunting trip. He remembered it because it was an unusual interaction.

I remembered that he had told me that he got a taste for it during filming Saving Private Ryan. He shook his head and said that his father's manager had asked him to keep an eye on him and let him know if he was acting erratic or strange. He apologized to me that I had been through that and left to call the manager.

After a few more minutes, Tom came back in with a memory drug kit he had borrowed from the guard. He attached one of the bottles to the syringe and injected it into my upper arm. I asked him if he was going to kill me.

He said that no, he didn't want me to kill me. I told him that it sure seemed like he did when he was hunting me. He said that was different and that even if he could kill me with all the press around, he wouldn't because he compartmentalizes those urges and killing was the furthest thing from his mind in that moment.

He explained that he was something like a diplomat and that if I was to go public with what had happened the tens of millions of people that look up to him would have that taken away from them. He was almost like a president and presidents get to kill people.

"That's different," I said, "and not up close like that." He said sometimes, then backed up, "I don't want to share personal information," he said, but explained that from the leaders he had known, some of them did feel that way when people were killed. He then asked me if I thought all the good he did in the world outweighed his taking of life. At that point the drugs had kicked in and his perspective was starting to make sense. I agreed to keep the secret and asked him for a hug.

He said that was the most common thing people he encountered would ask him for and he didn't usually do it, but he would make an exception. He asked me what I was doing and I mentioned that I had tickets to see the new iMax film with my family. He said that's good and that family was very important to him. That reminded me about his son coming in.

I told him and he asked which son. He didn't mention his name, I said, but it was the younger looking one. He asked me who he was going to talk to and I told him his manager and he seemed relieved. He said that it would be handled within the family, then, and he let me go.

My parents asked me where I had been - the show had already started. I told them that they wouldn't believe me if I told them. My father said try me and when I told him that Tom Hanks had put me in a room and drugged me, scowled and told me to stop making things up.

#

My parents had requested for me to go to what I was told was a ceremony that required representatives from several groups. Because I was brought to the event by the father of one of the Boy Scouts in my troop, Andrew Diaz, I assumed that it was related to the Boy Scouts. I was drugged for it, so I wasn't completely logical in my train of thought.

He drove me to a wooded area where there was a portable stage set up. There were around 50-100 people seated at outdoor tables. Most of them were dressed up and having drinks. There were a couple speakers - I asked Diaz's father and he told me that they were drugged and wouldn't remember being there. I asked if everyone was drugged and he said that most of the people weren't. But any of their guests who weren't authorized would have been drugged by their hosts.

There was a bonfire to the left. There were people in robes moving - I asked if they were doing some sort of interpretive dance. I asked him why he wasn't drugged and he said that he had done many great things for the country. At that point, a man - Alan Cambey - came onto the stage with a woman. They had sex on the stage and some members of the audience murmured that she was his daughter and they sure liked to put on a show.

After they finished, a young boy entered from the right side of the stage and the woman left. It was a young child, probably around nine or ten, dressed in a plain white garment. A hush came over the crowd.

The man said that this was the main reason that they were here and asked the boy to say his name into the microphone. He seemed confused and like he had been crying. He said that they told him not to talk. The man said that for this it was okay to say his name. The boy said it. I asked Diaz's father where the boy had come from and he told me there was a house somewhere that the kids were taken from as the speaker continued.

He said that the boy, repeating his name, was to be their sacrifice for this year. To bring prosperity and safety to their people in the Hudson Valley. He said that it was a great honor for him and that they were very grateful. The audience applauded and the man came up behind the child and slit his throat, letting him fall back into his arms and the blood fell onto his shirt He then stuffed the boy into a blue and white Igloo cooler.

I was terrified and confused. I asked why they had done that. My assumption that it was a Boy Scout event led me to ask if he was one of the scouts and how killing him was counter to that ethos. Diaz's father said that the most that the boy would have ever accomplished was to be a clerk at a grocery store and that they had given him purpose through his death. He then had me get in line near what looked like a grill and table.

I didn't have a strong sense of how long it had been since the sacrifice or even that there was one, so when the line reached a "pig" roasting on a spit, with someone carving off pieces, I did not consider the fact that it was actually the child. They cut off the lower legs and forearms so that it more resembled a pig or lamb. It convinced me enough to the point that I believed it was an animal and so I ate what I was given. I was confused why it was such a small serving for a barbecue and Diaz's father told me that most of the people had eaten previously.

We left shortly after and he stopped at a grocery store to get me food. I said something about being a clerk at a grocery store not being so bad, which led him to believe that the memory drugs had not fully done their job. He shared this concern with my parents when he dropped me off. They said that they were aware of it and he expressed concern that they would still send me. They said that I had to see it and I remembered the boy being sacrificed.

Diaz's father left and I got angry at them. I asked if this is where they would go all dressed up when they said that they were seeing friends. They said that they had been to them oncer twice because it was necessary for "protection". I remembered that the boy had been killed and realized that we had been fed his remains. I was so angry and sick that they drugged me again and put me to bed.

I told them as I went that I was done with the Boy Scouts, going back to my assumption that this was related to it. My father asked if it was because of this and my parents assumed I would forget it and associate it with my dislike of scouting. They were right, until I eventually remembered.

#

My parents drove me to Long Island for a party at Tony's house. I don't recall if either of my sisters came with us, but I remember them telling me that it wasn't going to be a regular party. When we go there, there were a lot of guests in the backyard, but we were told to stay in the house. I remember that there were at least a few other kids and teenagers there. We all hid in the small bedroom outside of Tony's room. We were drugged.

The oldest of the boys, Dan Levy, told me that he was hiding from his father who would rape him at these parties. I was astounded and angry and my response was to go outside and confront the man. I wasn't very familiar with him but had seen him in American Pie. When I confronted him outside, he seemed in good spirits and explained to me that these parties were a place where he was given the opportunity to do literally anything he felt compelled to do.

He was eating a plate of meat which looked like pork. I asked if he was Jewish and he said yes, but that there was nothing in the scriptures about human flesh not being kosher and it was, to him, a loophole. I asked if he felt bad about eating a person and he said no, especially since the "son of a bitch" was trying to destroy their community.

At that point, I told him to stop raping his son, so he decided that he would rape me instead. I tried to get Tony to stop him, but he said that was why he had tried to hide us in the house. He didn't have any authority over any of the people at the party. Eugene took me inside and asked what room to go in and I said the den.

I asked him if he was worried that I could see his face and know who he was, but he said that I wouldn't remember and my parents wouldn't let me pursue charges. Only an act of Congress can get rid of the CIA and that would never happen because they "keep us safe".

He anally raped me and then sat on Tony's chair and forced me to go down on him. I insisted that he wash himself which he initially refused to do. He said that I should be doing everything that I was told to do. I begged him to at least rinse off his genitals and he did. After a few moments of oral sex, Tony came in and rescued me.

He told him that this was his den, which apparently had significance in the Reich because Eugene apologized. He shouted him away and helped me up to the bathroom that used to be Emma's and helped me into the tub to clean off.

I was sobbing about how because I had anal sex that made me gay and that I didn't want to be. He told me that wasn't the case and did his best to calm me down. I stayed away from the party for the rest of the night.

Chapter Sixteen

2003

In early Spring 2003, he told me almost everything afterwards. He was in the den and I said that I looked up to him and that he had helped liberated Europe from the Nazis and he replied that they didn't do as complete of a job as they thought, but he didn't learn that until later. I asked what he meant by that and he said that if I wanted to learn more, that I should call my father's mother. I did, and when I asked her about what he was talking about, she replied, "Uh oh, sounds like it's time for Grandpa Tony to die."

I asked her what she meant by that and she hurriedly said oh, never mind, I just meant that he's old and had a good life and seen all his children grow to adulthood. She tried to say that she had been drinking and thinking about mortality. I didn't quite buy that bewcause she didn't sound drunk. I said goodbye and hung up.

He asked me what she said and I told him and he went pale. I was angry that she would threaten something like that when I called her and asked - he hadn't actually told me anything. He said that they had done much more than that and if they were going to kill him, he had more than earned it. Given that, he would tell me everything he could at the time.

He said that in WWII, it turned out that the Germans had actually won. They had infiltrated the propaganda department and massively trumped up the resources and abilities of the US government. They had run such a strong propaganda campaign that when they "revealed" to the heads of other government departments that Germany had taken control of the full government, they risked the public turning on them. It was a trick, though. The Germans at that time had only infiltrated the propaganda department. I later leaned from Jean that this tactic was used to make the surrender, which occurred in 1945, be accepted by the rest of the federal government. Michael Dobbs refers to it in his book Six Months In 1945 as a "separate peace".

From his perspective, though, he only learned of the fact of Germany's victory when he was approached by representatives of the Reich after he scored extraordinarily well on one of their early IQ tests. It was originally scaled around Hitler's IQ but they had to adjust for him being such an outlier. Even with the new scaling he scored around 220. Because of that, they wanted him to assist them. My grandfather did not elaborate on what that meant at the time.

What it meant for him was constantly being around the upper level Nazis in the New York City area. They had helped him gain a high position in the New York Public Works department. Even so, being around them week to week and hearing them talk about Jews and the people in the city led him, as he told me, to a breaking point.

He got a tattoo like the ones in the concentration camps and designed and alternate persona named Mister Meyer. He had always read comics as a kid well into adulthood and created him as sort of a Yiddish Professor X. He bought an apartment in New York City and wore a Star of David pendant and yarmulke to complete the look. He modeled the voice after a neighbor he had growing up, who would quote aphorisms he would attribute to the Talmud, whether or not they were actually from it. His favorite was "As the Talmud says, revenge is a dish best served cold," which was a quote from The Godfather.

He recruited several people into his team. He saw Carol Kane give a talk about how the play or film she had done recently was important to her because of her family being affected by the Holocaust. He recruited an Irish nun who was involved in intelligence work. He recruited a young man who had gotten fired for getting into a fight at his work. He recruited a young black woman who had been caught forging documents at a check cashing business. The final recruit was a young man who had lost his grandmother who had been a survivor of the camps.

He taught them almost everything he learned from being around the Nazis and they would use the information to hunt them down and take them out. They disrupted many operations and, if the trophies he kept were an indication, took out at least 20 Nazis. However, even though they had made progress, the Nazis still had plans.

He learned one dinner that they had purchased a sugar refinery in Montezuma, NY and were planning to use it to refine poisoned corn supplied via train from a Reich controlled corn farm in Ohio, the Reich's heartland. They would then distribute the corn syrup for use in icing, snack cakes, donuts - anything that would kill the poor or people in minority majority communities - especially Jewish, Black, and Hispanic neighborhoods. The Hunters stopped the truck carrying it and then took out the architect of the plan - the Architect of the Eastern Gau.

Unfortunately, when they executed the plan, the young man was seriously injured. They asked Tony to perform a Yiddish prayer that he didn't know. They had already suspected that his persona was an act but that had sealed the deal. Between that and how bloodthirsty he had started acting, the group had broken up.

He said that there were other things too , and I recalled his attempt to stop the shootdown of the Iran Air flight. After that, Tom and my father had to supervise most visits. He said that at least he was able to help liberate Italy, which was why he had signed up in the first place. I promised him that I would try to finish the job liberating America. He said that he hoped I did. He said that there was a coded message for me in his stamp collection, but I haven't had the opportunity to decode it as I have not been given access to it.

I asked him if he would be okay and he said that his house had a security system and that they didn't control the police. Within two months, though, he was in the hospital with a blood clot in his leg. He died within a month or two from an induced heart attack around 2 am in the morning. When he got the blood clot, he said he was waiting up for news about my Grandmother who had been sent to the hospital that night. For a broken hip and must have fallen asleep in his chair.

Years later, my grandmother had dementia and my mother related to me a panic attack she had about Nazis being in their house. I believe that they were ambushed and drugged with my grandmother falling in the struggle. Then, my grandfather was injected with a drug that induced blood-clotting.

After his death, at the funeral, I remembered what Jean had told me. I was with my father and Uncles Tony and Carl. I told them and my father said, "Uh oh" and went to his car. My uncles immediately became uncomfortable and shifted on their seats. They knew what was coming. My father came back with a pair of vials and gave tehm each 3/4 of one and me the remaining half vial in our drinks.

I asked him if that meant what I had recalled was true, because from what I know, when people took that drug out it meant that someone had said something true that they didn't want people to know. He said that it was probably true, but that they probably gave him a clotting drug and let nature take its course.

At the wake, Alan Cambey came to me and complained that Tony had "spoiled the meat" by having his body embalmed so quickly after his death.

Chapter Seventeen

2005

During the summer after my freshman year of college, Lexi invited me out to spend the evening with her in fancy dress. We were seat fillers at the James Beard awards in New York City. I left our table to go get a drink at the bar, where I was picked up by Carla Lalli-Music. I didn't recognize her and I don't believe that she recognized me, but I saw her on stage earlier at the event as an award nominee for a piece she had written.

As I got my drink, I chatted with her briefly and she invited me up to her room. I didn't realize that Lexi had intended for this to be a date, so I agreed. When we got up there, she introduced me to her infant son, Cosmo, which I thought was odd for a one night stand, so I jokingly asked if he was mine (I may have been drugged at the bar or by Lexi, not sure). She got serious and said that she didn't see how that was possible because we had just met.

I apologized and told her that I probably had a bit too much to drink. She asked if I was okay and I said probably not. So she called someone at the front desk to have me brought down. As we waited, I asked her who her son's father was and she said her husband in Brooklyn who was an architect. I asked if they were separated and she said that no, he was just very distant lately. I said that Brooklyn didn't sound very distant to me which I meant earnestly, but she took a deeper meaning than I intended. We exchanged phone numbers and the service that brought us in kicked me and Lexi out.

Lexi was furious at me and explained that this was meant to be a big date. She had been dating my friend Mike through most of high school and I told her it felt weird to date her. I felt bad, though, because she was my friend and it wasn't like I didn't find her attractive. When we got back to her father's apartment, we ended up hooking up and having sex. I felt a bit bad afterwards, since I was going to see Mike soon and told her as much. She said that she had something that could help.

She opened a cabinet that was full of vials. I didn't recognize them at the time, but they were the drug. She told me that she found them and that taking them would make me feel drunk but also forget what happened. I said that I didn't mean to say it wasn't nice, but maybe it would be better if I forgot. She said that it was fine, she drank them for fun sometimes. I took one and mostly forgot the next day.

For the next few weeks before my college semester started up, we went out to parties in New York City and would take the drug recreationally. We hooked up a couple more times, but she broke it off right before school started back up for me.

#

I received a phone call from Carla around September 10th inviting me to a party at her house in Brooklyn on or about September 17th. I told Lexi about it on the 11th and she was impressed that I was being invited as I told her that people from Vogue at Conde Nast were going to be there. When I arrived there, it was clear that it was a much larger gathering than that. There were several cars and SUVs parked outside. I walked there from, I believe, the Morgan Ave subway station.

Carla greeted me and introduced me to her husband, Daniel, who recognized my name and asked about my grandmother. He said he recalled coming down for a barbecue at one point. She introduced me to several of the other guests as hors d'oeuvres were put out. The other guests, as I could best recall were:

#

Brad Leone and his wife

Alton Brown

Eric Ripert

Anthony Bourdain

Ina Garten

Claire Saffitz

Adam Rapoport

An unnamed CIA recruiter who I would later interact with multiple times

#

There were also guards at the event towards the front of the house. There may have been other guests as well. Before the main discussion occurred, Daniel Music showed me around the house. I asked him if he had any relation to Lorenzo Music, remembering part of the barbecue even if I didn't have the full context. He said that he was his younger brother, which I thought since he looked too young to be older than Lorenzo Music. He showed me a shrine of sorts with some of his recorded performances and comedy albums.

I said that Carla had mentioned that he was an architect, so I asked him what he had built. He said it was more about putting together ideas than actual things. He said most of the things he had built were secret so he couldn't tell me. I said that he didn't sound like much of an architect if he didn't build things, half-jokingly. He said that he would show me something he built. He brought me into the living room and slid open a display. There was a hand-built scale model of the Amistad, with a display plaque at the bottom right.

I asked him, wasn't that like, a slave ship? Didn't that bother him? He said that was the reason he usually kept it hidden, because it tended to bother people who saw black people as people. I told him how could they not? I worked alongside people who weren't white and went to school with them. He said that they used to have laws to prevent that. At that point, the first stage of the meeting started.

Carla introduced everyone to each other and started talking about how they had been getting good results with mimetic work patterns in their video content and had plans to continue along that path. At that, Anthony Bourdain bellowed out, "Why don't we just let people think for themselves?

"We all know your opinion, Tony," Alton Brown interjected, "Why is he even invited to these things?" he asked Carla. She said that anyone with above a 5% market penetration was guaranteed a seat at the table. He said that maybe they should rethink these numbers.

She asked me what I thought. I said that it was interesting that they were teaching patterns of working in that way, but what did people do before this? I sort of agreed with Tony that people should be able to think for themselves. Carla said that was a minority opinion there. They broke the meeting for a short break and I had a horrible realization. I didn't fully remember where and when I first met Carla, but I did have a very faint memory of having sex that night. In that memory I had fragments of the conversation with Carla about her husband being distant and I felt immediately guilty.

I asked if I could talk to Music and told him that I think I had slept with his wife and that was why she had invited me. He laughed and said that he found that hard to believe. I asked him to think back a few weeks or months to a time where maybe they weren't as open with each other and he said yes, then he told me that I'd better wait inside.

Carla came over and asked me what I had said to her husband as he'd become immediately distant. I told her what I told him and she said, "But we didn't." I told her that I didn't remember clearly and I could have sworn I did. Her husband said that he would get to the bottom of it and I really wanted to remember. I was asked to sit on the couch and her husband ended the party early due to a "personal matter".

I was sitting on the couch and he had Carla go to the fridge and get the drug. He told her to get two vials and she became upset. She said that he had promised that he would never make her take it again. He said that for something like this, he had to be sure.

I asked them what it was - he said that it would help me remember and then forget. I said that I wouldn't mind remembering but Carla said that it had other effects, too. She split a vial between us and I took it in a mug.

I started feeling the effects of it almost immediately. He asked me where we met and I said that I was with my friend Lexi and that we were seat fillers. I said that I met Carla at the bar and don't remember much after that, but I know that I had sex that night. He asked me if I had seen Carla maybe sneak something into my drink and I said no, I got the wine before even seeing her and before she saw me.

He cursed and said that he never should have brought her out of the brothels, seeing her having sex with other people, how could he think she'd ever be faithful. He told her to strip and went into his study and got a letter opener. He told me to pull down my pants and go towards her to have sex with her. I didn't want to because she was his wife and I told him so. He sat on the couch and told me to try. I couldn't and both of us were crying.

He said fine, in disgust, and it seemed like he was mostly satisfied. Carla put back on her clothes and he let me pull back up my pants. I said that I still couldn't remember who I had sex with - Carla said that it must have been my friend Lexi. I mentioned her last name Lampel and Music said that one of their station chiefs was named Lampel and had a daughter. I pulled out my cell phone to show the entry for her and he got angry that I would pull out my phone. I was just trying to prove to him that I knew Lexi and Carla hadn't just told me a cover story.

Then he went into his office and I passed out on the couch. Carla told me the next morning that he was just having fun and saw me out.

#

I was at a party with Lexi for just a couple of minutes before being approached by a CIA recruiter. We had dressed up in fancy dress, so I was wearing a suit. He asked me if I was a patriot and I said sort of. I recalled being asked that at Music's and my reply came with much less conviction. He mentioned that he was a CIA recruiter and I told him that I probably could never kill anyone so I probably wouldn't be very well suited for that.

He told me that he was actually involved in recruiting for the entertainment side of things and that their assets would just be asked to act or produce or do whatever they were recruited for. I asked him what kind of work there was and he said that it was mostly in TV and movies. He claimed that they hadn't really infiltrated the music industry much because it was hard to use to push specific messages as effectively. I made a comment about bands like Against Me! And the World/ Inferno Friendship society - he seemed to recognize the latter.

I said that it sounded interesting and maybe I would want to do that some day. He asked me what about right now? I was taken by surprise and said that my parents were expecting me home for the long weekend and I was here with a friend and didn't want to abandon her. Lexi quickly said that it was okay and the recruiter told me to just text my parents and say that it was a big opportunity He asked my name and recalled that my father had done good work for them in the 70's.

He called over a car and said that they had someone to put through the entertainment track. I went downstairs and immediately stepped into a black car. I was driven to La Guardia and put on a private plane. On the plane, they took a picture of me, took measurements and gave me two vials of hyocine to drink. I did and then fell asleep for the flight. They didn't tell me where they were going.

When I woke up, we had landed and three or four women were lined up for me to pick as my guide. One was Paige

Pinckney - I don't don't remember the others for sure, but she was the one I picked. I asked where they were sent and he said "where they were before" which he implied was a brothel. Paige guided me through the airports which I realized from the signage was New Orleans, and to a waiting car.

I can't recall the first location we went to exactly, but I believe it was a tailor who put me in nicer clothes. My other suit was stashed in a bag. I was kept drugged and on more than just hyocine the whole time and did not have much sleep from the night before. We got lunch after.

We then met with a comedy improv group and I was told to basically direct them to see how I worked with others. They improvised something and the recruiter asked me what should happen next. I suggested that the characters over-escalate - one of the characters should "shoot" the other, which was direction they disagreed with. He told them to perform it as instructed and the group said I probably wouldn't be a good fit.

The recruiter then had Paige bring me to a bar, where she got me a gin and tonic at my request and I tried to talk to her. I don't remember what we discussed, but shortly after, she brought me to a room at a party with a balcony overlooking a parade. She took off her shirt and put on Mardi Gras beads. After a few minutes, she left and I became panicked and confused.

Between the drugs and the alcohol, I wasn't sure how long I had been there and how long she had been gone. I thought it was a half hour, but it was a couple of minutes. I was upset and scared that she had abandoned me. I accused her of abandoning me and broke down when she returned. She asked me how long I thought we had been there and I said a couple of days. She reminded me that I had just arrived that morning. She told me that she had just given the recruiter a status update and she would stick with it the rest of the night.

She led me to another room in what I think was the same building. It seemed much larger and there was a king-sized bed and a circular, low, couch. She asked me what I wanted to do and she said that there were no wrong answers. I was very nervous about having sex, so I suggested maybe making out. We did briefly, but it didn't really seem like she was into it, so I suggested that we watch TV instead.

I told her that when I was a kid, my grandparents would drive me up from Florida to New York and we would stay at a motel on the way. She said that she never really traveled growing up. I said that I didn't really either, other than those trips. One of the best things about it was watching HBO, especially the movies they always had in rotation, like Serial Mom. I turned on the TV and, coincidentally, that was what was on HBO. We watched it for a bit and then went to sleep.

The next morning, I was given my clothes to change back into. Prior to changing we made out again briefly, but I still felt uncomfortable about sex. I changed back into my suit. Paige got a call from the recruiter and told me that it was over and that they wouldn't be moving forward with me. I asked her why and she said that in her limited experience, they preferred people that could b e manipulated with sex, and since we didn't go that far, they didn't feel like they could use me. I had assumed it was because I wasn't very funny. I told her that I could go for sex if that was what they wanted, but she said that it was too late and that it was over.

I became scared and asked her what they were going to do with me. She told me to just do what they said and I would probably be fine. I did and I remember being drugged again, losing consciousness and waking up in a van on 202 driving towards my parents house. They asked me what the opportunity was and I told them it was for a comedy scout but that I wasn't funny enough, I guess.

#

During the period during which I was being courted by the entertainment wing, they asked me which female celebrity I would like to meet. I didn't realize it at the time, b ut when they said meet, they really meant "have sex with". I named Amy Sedaris, who I was a big fan of. I received a call a few days later for me to come to Brooklyn to a specific address.

There were two or three CIA agents there and we were welcomed by Amy Sedaris, who had prepared dinner. Her apartment was below ground level with a large living/dining area and a full window door between it and the patio. They had set up the meeting under the pretense of catching up with her about her career.

She said that she was planning to write a book, basically "At Home With Amy Sedaris" and they told her that they would help her get it published. She politely declined but they told her that it wasn't really a choice. They also told her that when they recruited her, it was mostly to be on TV, so they expected her to use the book as the basis of a television show, which would later be called At Home With Amy Sedaris.

After food, they told her that in exchange for their "help" they expected her to have sex with me. I didn't really want that, but I felt compelled to do as they said because I was drugged. They made a crack about how weird it was that out of all the actresses they had access to, I picked her and I reiterated how big of a fan I was. They then left me alone with her at the apartment.

I asked her if we were going to have sex and she replied that I was a bit young for her. I asked what would happen if she just ignored them and she said that she would never be able to work in America again. They would destroy her personal life and career. I asked her how she came in contact with them and she said that they recruited her when she was younger. I asked if it was for the sketch comedy show she did on Comedy Central. She said that it was earlier than that and I asked if it was before with her brother and she confirmed, surprised that I was that familiar with her career. She then asked if I wanted to "do this".

I said maybe but it didn't seem like it was something that we were both into. I think that we may have kissed but I really can't remember. I know that we talked more and discussed her career. She mentioned that she had been brought to a CIA brothel once, but she didn't really take advantage of the things that they offered her.

She did introduce me to Huckleberry, her model monkey which she jokingly considered her child. She said that she had made it from a kit that a friend had given her which involved baking it in an oven. I slightly indented his "skin" with a fingernail which upset her. I didn't intend to damage him but I was trying to figure out how he was made. I apologized.

When it was clear that no sex would happen, she let me sleep in her bed while she took the couch. The bedspread was a multi-colored crosshatch of different fabrics - it looked handmade. The next morning I jokingly asked if I could live there but she said no and I left.

#

I received an email from the agent who had put me through the entertainment recruiting to meet someone at Qdoba in downtown New Brunswick. I did, and it was Paige. I asked her if we had met before and she told me that we had never met before, presumably because she expected that the drugs would have taken that memory.

She gave me a soda, presumably drugged, and told me to walk down the block to the Jamba Juice and ask out a girl there. She gave me a pair of tickets to a Rutgers football game and told me to invite her to that. I questioned why and she said that I was just the girl's type.

I followed the instructions and she said yes. I don't remember the fake name she was using at the time but it was Anastasia. I didn't recognize and I don't think she recognized me, but she agreed to the date.

We first went to King Neptune Night at the Cook/Douglas dining hall. I noticed that she looked tired and she said that it was due to some medicine she was on, but she still wanted to come out with me. We ate dinner and then took a bus over to the game.

I was visibly bored and tried to make conversation, but I could tell that she wasn't really too into the game either. She got us a couple beers, which helped a bit, but after around a half hour, she asked me if I wanted to get out of there. I agreed.

She brought me to a dorm room that was mostly empty except for the furniture. I noticed that the name on the door wasn't her's and mentioned that. She said that I was perceptive and that she was borrowing it from a friend. At that point, we hooked up and I stayed the night.

The next morning she missed an exam and we slept in. She said that she would rather just spend the time with me. I agreed and we spent most of the morning together.

The agent who put me on this asked for an update and I told him about the dorm room. He told me to ask her out again and I did, but she didn't reply. He said that she probably got nervous and ran.

#

I was visiting my grandparents in Florida for ten days over winter break from school. The first night we were there, Jean said that I should visit her friend Jeff because she had to discuss business with my parents. She would have to call to discuss business with my parents. She would have to call him first to make sure he was at his Palm Beach house that night.

She said he usually was on Tuesdays, but wanted to make sure.

When she confirmed that he was there, she took out a black clamshell case and said that I would have to drink a vial before I went. I did and I remember a car picking me up but nothing else between them and getting dropped off in from of his house. I was welcomed by a girl who said that her name was Anastasia. I could feel that I was on drugs and asked her if she was on drugs, too. She nodded, but clarified that she was on different drugs.

The entrance to the house led into a kitchen. She led me down a hall through a room with a statue to the right and into the back room that had full windows with slatted shades open in front of them. There were several teenage girls in various states of undress and Jeff, getting a back massage on the floor. He stood up to introduce himself and offer me cocaine and/or other drugs. I was shocked and disgusted. He was much older than the girls and from what Jean said I expected him to be closer to college age.

I told him that I didn't think my grandmother would want me to do drugs. He said that if she sent me there, she expected me to partake in whatever he was offering. She had told me that he helped put on parties for her. I told him that I had never seen any underaged girls at any of her parties and he clarified that it was usually for things like galas. I was confused and said that I had known she was involved in local politics and he laughed at that. I told him that he looked way too old to be hooking up with girls who were sixteen or seventeen and he said that he had been sleeping with underage girls for at least the past 20-25 years.

I told him that I didn't want anything to do with it and that I wanted to go. He said that I would have to wait for a car and called Jean to have her send another one of her planes so that I didn't show up on the flight logs. I got the impression then that logs were being written up as future blackmail material. I said that I would walk, not realizing how far away I was. When I realized it would be a four hour drive, I agreed to wait. Anastasia waited there with me.

I asked her if I could call my girlfriend, Krystal, and she said that it was fine. I did and I told her that I was scared and didn't know where I was. She asked me if I was with anyone and I said yes. She told me to ask them who they were and Anastasia replied that she was a whore. I repeated that and Krystal exclaimed that she was a person, with hopes and dreams and I told her that I agreed but that was what she had called herself. She said that she had to go and hung up. I began to ask Anastasia about herself when we were approached by a woman who identified herself as a detective investigating Jeffrey Epstein.

Anastasia's first reaction was to tell him that he was being investigated. The woman said that interfering with a federal investigation was a crime that could involve up to fifteen years in prison. She said that besides, he already knew that he was under investigation. Anastasia wondered why he would come back there then and the detective said arrogance, a characterization Anastasia agreed with. She gave us both business cards and said that she had approached us because it didn't look like we were okay with what was going on in the house. I said that I wasn't and that my grandmother had sent me there. She asked me who my grandmother was and I told her Jean Marin. She checked something on a computer in the van she had come out of and asked if her middle initial was a C. I confirmed, but she said that she wasn't approved to investigate her. She told Anastasia that if she ever wanted to come forward, she should call her. She left and we started talking about what had happened.

Anastasia said that Jeff had done so much for her. I asked her what she meant by that and she said that he had bought her hundreds in clothes and I commented that wasn't worth fifteen years in prison, so she shouldn't tell him and she should hang onto the card. I asked her what her hopes and dreams were and she said that she didn't really have much and considered her existence as better than most.

I asked her what she planned for her future and she said that she was probably going to do this for her whole life. I said that, no offense, but the life she described didn't sound sustainable forever, especially in light of the investigation around him. I asked her what she wanted to do with her life after. She thought about it for a moment and she said that her teachers in school seemed to be mostly happy and satisfied in their lives, so probably something like teaching.

I said that I had friends who were going to school to be teachers and the certification process was five years long. I asked her when she would want to be a teacher and she said around her thirties. I told her that she should probably start relatively soon if that was her goal. She agreed. She said that she had started doing this when she was seventeeen and had sort of dismissed the possibility of continuing school. Around that time, the car arrived to pick me up. I gave her a hug and wished her luck.

When I returned to my grandmother's she asked me what I thought. I told him to tell her friend that he should stop sleeping with underage girls. She said okay, she'll tell him clearly lying. I also realized I had the card and gave it to her, telling her that he was investigation. She said that he had done a lot of good work for them and he would be supported.

Chapter Eighteen

2006

I forgot everything about Jeffrey Epstein within a day or so, but I had earlier expressed to Krystal that I felt like I was being followed by the CIA because of a mix of vague recollections of being hunted by Tom Hanks, tortured by Music, and bits and pieces of our family links. It wasn't a mostly full set of sequential memories like I have now, but it was enough that Krystal suggested I ask my grandparents about it.

I started by asking my grandfather if he had ever dealt with the CIA. He expressed surprise and asked me what made me ask that. He called in Jean who he told that I had asked about the CIA. She left for a moment and returned with a cup with a vial of hyocine. I drank it as I told them about it feeling like I was being followed or hunted by them. The entire time

Jean was silent, watching me as Richie talked to me.

I told him about being hunted, confusing the timeline and thinking it had happened after Music had interrogated me. I told them about what he said about Saving Private Ryan and began to recall that they said that they were CIA royalty. Around that point Richie asserted that it sounded like whatever had happened, it sounded like it was done. When he was in the Navy and encountered military intelligence officers, they tended to only be around for the duration of the operation and that was it.

He said that he would put in a word with his army contacts and that would probably be the end of it. That apparently satisfied me and I don't recall continuing the conversation.

#

I was approached by Al Stankard about what he framed as a political opportunity. Al was, by most accounts, pretty creepy and not someone I liked talking to, but he made it sound fairly interesting. I told a friend, Frankie Huang about it and she tried to discourage me from the meeting, but I figured that talking to him couldn't hurt. There were four other people than me in the meeting Al Stankard, Michael Puzio, Stephen Miller and one other person whose name I can't recall. Stephen took a particular interest in me - apparently he had sought me out specifically and the others were there just to hear the main part of his pitch.

He asked me if I was related to Helen Handwerker - I confirmed that she was my great-grandmother, which he got excited about. He asked me if I was popular in high school and if people seemed to listen to me more than usual. I thought that was odd but somewhat accurate - I nodded.

I asked him about how he knew my great-grandmother's name and he said it was in a book. He tracked me down through public records, but he had seen her name in a book with people of potentially magical lineage. I laughed at that and asked where this book was.

He told me that he had seen it when he was training at a Thelemic lodge in the Bay Area. He explained that Aleister Crowley's religion was about people unlocking their true will and letting that guide them. His true will, as he explained, was to do everything he could to prevent people from immigrating to America. He acknowledged that wasn't exactly in line with their teachings, but it worked for him.

The conversation turned to what he was planning. To him, he believed that he could use his true will and the will of maybe 30 or so co-conspirators, to effectively commit a "perfectly legal" coup and transform the United States into a white ethnostate. By putting people in the roles of aides and staffers to political leaders, they would be situated to directly affect policy and platforms.

His logic was that most people working on a campaign or in an agency is mostly just going about their day and most candidates are just interested in running and winning. With enough people spread across campaigns passionate about a certain goal, they would be able to achieve that, given time.

He believed that the only reason that the Holocaust failed was due to bad PR. A genocide could easily be performed quietly and out in the open when framed as "managing immigration". People, he said, were already turned against "illegal immigrants". All it would take was something like the Iraq war to create refugees who would be framed as migrants and stuck into camps. In Europe, they would be left out to sea.

He commented on the effectiveness of concentration camps during the Boer War. Disease ran through the camps killing people effectively and cleanly without the nasty PR of ovens and smoke. America already had facilities used by ICE that could be turned into camps and it would easily be explained as "controlling immigration", something widely supported.

The other two people, especially Michael Puzio, who identified as a Polish nationalist, were very on board with his plan. I questioned every bit of it. I told him that if I had a true will, it was more aligned with helping people than helping to orchestrate a coup and a genocide. I think that I called him a Nazi, but he came back with the fact that he was Jewish. He believed that certain groups of people just had higher intelligence and that his plan would weed out those who didn't.

I told him that I had gotten into some trouble with how I had treated women and he said that the Right was more forgiving about that sort of thing. I asked him if the whole genocide thing was negotiable, but he was intent on making America a white ethnostate. At that point, I walked out and told Frankie that I felt stupid for even considering meeting with them.

#

After the attempted recruitment by Stephen Miller, I decided to do some research into Thelema and located a number for a lodge in New York City. I left a voicemail saying that my great grandmother's name was listed in a book they had and received a call back requesting a meeting at a show. I believe that it was at the Bowery Ballroom or Knitting Factory.

I met up with a man whose name I can't recall - I don't think he gave it. He guided me to a table and gestured at a cup with liquid in it. He said that he was going to ask me a question and, if I answered incorrectly, I would have to drink it and I would forget the meeting. I hesitated, recognizing the drug as hyocine, but agreed.

He asked me, "Are you an angel of light or an angel of darkness?" I replied that I liked to think of myself as an angel of light, but I'm just a person. At that, he slid the cup towards me and told me to drink. I sighed and did and was about to leave but he stopped me. He said that some people do remember and I was the sort of person that they wanted. He told me that the correct answer was, "If I were an angel of light, you wouldn't want to know me." It was a quote from page 155 of The Medusa's Head by John Symonds.

I asked him if he was CIA since the liquid drug he gave me was used by them and he replied that he was, but he learned that they were the single greatest threat to people finding their true will in the world. He had learned that as an agent when they took him out by boat to an island to tell him about a pact America made with the Nazis.

I asked him about the book and he said that what Miller was probably referring to was the birth charts. He said that if he remembered correctly, I was either descended from Hitler or Goebbels. I replied that I didn't resemble them as far as I knew and he said that I wouldn't, necessarily.

He told me that Aleister Crowley had helped the Nazis and performed spells that involved human sacrifice. When he learned of the Holocaust and the full scope of their brutality, he spent the last years of his life pouring everything into finding a way to get them out of power. Eventually he had a vision of how to do so and founded the OTO to hold that knowledge.

He told me a bit about sex magic, but said that my real potential was in my bloodline. He told me that if I ever had a son, to bring him to one of the lodges and there was a ritual that would be performed that would involve taking a small amount of his blood. I dismissed it at the time but did share that part about my heritage and the ritual with Vanessa, commenting at the time that I would be a shitty dad if I did that.

The meeting ended around that point and I did recall most of it afterward. I even contacted and met with Aleister Crowley's last living daughter, but my questioning didn't really get anywhere.

#

While my time involved in the pilot script writing was short, Tina and Robert brought me back on to work in a reduced capacity on the pilot shoot. This was a bad idea, as I was put on the hyocine basically as soon as I got there. As soon as I remembered that there were child sacrifices, I sought out the person on the production team that was responsible for them and made an attempt to reveal it to everyone present in the building for the shoot.

It just so happened that the girl from the Black Sun was there with the sacrifice and I insisted that she bring the child out so they could all see what was really happening. I asked her what would happen to us if we refused the sacrifice - she said that would be a bad idea. She postulated that the Reich would kill us and her for letting that happen and the child anyway. I saw the child that we were supposed to sacrifice and I really saw the girl that they had brought in with her. The child was ours. The girl was Jordan, the girl who survived the Ritz and was sent to the brothels. My memories flooded back.

I asked the girl's name - it was Alice. I asked if Jordan, who was by now going as Rebecca, remembered - she said that she did and she cried, realizing that our daughter was taken from her when they took her eggs. This was the girl that was conceived when we were brought together, though. It seemed that her fate was to be the same as the other 144,000.

At this point, we realized that there was Biblical significance to that number and that the human sacrifices were meant to be magic for the Reich and sacrifices to the Bull God Moloch. We didn't believe in the magic but we knew that the Reich did.

By this point the people around us knew that something was going on. I asked Rebecca what they would do if we refused to make the sacrifice and tried to take our daughter and she said that would be bad - that they would kill us and her for allowing it to happen.

So we resigned ourselves to allowing our daughter to be sacrificed, but we weren't going to let it end there. I knew that the 30 Rock list of episodes was something that was online still, along with lists of episode names for other shows like The Good Place, Schitt's Creek, Brooklyn 99 as remnants from a Rosicrucian group that decoded them from Shakespeare's work where they were encoded. At the very least they were on the internet years before the episodes were written or even filmed, along with the names of the writers of each episode. Tina Fey and all of the writers who were present - of which there were many, including Dan Levy, or at least the actor who replaced him. All of the present writers signed the document and it was sealed away somewhere and timestamped.

I summoned up what knowledge I remembered about what I was told about Lucifer and using sacrifices to create stories. My mother told me as a child that Aesop's Fables were written and a life was sacrificed for each of those, so I told them that we would need to use the sacrifices to undo the harm, magically speaking, to subvert Aesop's Fables by making each sacrifice a direct subversion of a specific fable. As all of these people would be making sacrifices for their shows at some point in the future, we asked the people making the sacrifices to tell the children as much as possible so that heaven would know the sins being committed be the Reich on Earth.

As I did this, Rebecca hugged Alice and told her that she loved her and talked with her, taking some last moments knowing that she was her mother and that she was our daughter.

#

The Good Place was to be as close as possible to our version of scripture. We explained to them how the afterlife really worked and they based it as close as possible to it while still keeping it in the realm of fiction. The concept of the tetramorphs - four individuals embodying different archetypes - was a major factor in the story. Rebecca added the name Jeremy Bearimy which was a nickname for a friend she had.

We held our daughter together between us with me on her right and Rebecca to her left. Tina used a razor to slit her throat and she cried at what she had been forced to do. She left the room and the others watched on.

We desperately committed our child to heaven knowing that the act of killing her would turn her into an angel, someone who could never be a child again. We were both visited by her afterwards. Jordan shot her out of fear and dumped her body in a frozen lake. When she visited me, I recognized her and explained what the Reich had done to both of us - our minds were not our own and she would have never hurt her had she known that she was her daughter.

#

I was walking around Asbury Park with Rob Santucci, a housemate of mine at the time, after a World/Inferno Friendship Society show. We ran into Franz after the show and asked him what he was up to. He said that he was going to grab a couple of drinks and that he didn't think we would want to come along, but thought about it for a moment and said that it would probably be fine. We followed him and entered Asbury Lanes.

There, we sat down at a table near one of the lanes and Franz got me a drink. Rob was straight edge so he didn't have one. There was a man wearing a leather jacket there who seemed happy to see Franz. I asked him how he knew him and the man said that he had dirt on him and that Franz would do anything for him. I asked Franz what he meant and Franz told the man to tell us - we wouldn't remember it anyway. I said that I wasn't that drunk but I promised that I wouldn't use whatever it was against him.

The man shrugged and pulled out a copy of the book They Too Were AMERICANS and flipped it to page 49, showing me the below photo.

#

Willy Luedtke,
DKV.-Direktor in der Bundesleitung.

Carl Nicolay,
Gau-Org.-Leiter u.
Bundesfrauenschafts-Referent

Max Rapp.
DKV.-Direktor in der Bundesleitung

Department leaders of the German-American Bund. (From the "1938 Yearbook of the German-American Bund," author's collection)

- Bund Treasurer
- Bund Secretary
- Bund Organizational Leader
- Bund Propaganda Leader
- Bund Intelligence Leader
- Bund Commercial Leader
- Bund Publicity Leader
- Bund Educational Leader
- Bund Political Leader
- National Youth Leader
- National Women's Leader
- National OD Leader

What then were the goals and vision for the future that the Bund

#

"Turn's out, Franz's grandpa was a Nazi." I asked him where he got the book and he said that it was on sale somewhere and he bought it for a couple hundred dollars. It was worth the investment because Franz was paying him $500 a month to keep it quiet but he was going to start getting much more out of it.

At that, Franz interjected and said that wasn't going to be happening. The man was confused. He asked Franz if he wanted it to get out that his grandfather was a Nazi and Franz said no, but that's not going to happen. He had tried to play along and make it look like he was paying him off, but he never stopped to think that there were still "more of us" around to help him out. At that, he shouted into a microphone hidden on his chest and one or two people came in with guns firing. They entered from behind me, so I couldn't see if they had shot anyone else, but I dropped to the ground as soon as I heard shots. Franz pointed at the man who had jumped up in shock and said that he was the target. They put several bullets in him - at least two or three in his chest.

The shooting stopped suddenly and I was disoriented and not sure what was going on. I think that the drink Franz gave me was drugged. I asked him if he had a grudge on the guy, not remembering what he had told us about blackmailing Franz. My memory caught up and I asked Franz if he was a Nazi. He looked at me and asked what I meant. I said that he told the man that there were more off us, meaning Nazis, around. He replied that he had just come up with that as something cool to say and that he wasn't a Nazi. I took him for his word and checked on Rob. He was also okay but confused. We got up and walked to the door.

We asked the man at the door if we were allowed to leave or if they were going to kill us too. He said that depended on whether or not we allowed him to inject us, pulling out a syringe with the hyocine attached to it. I said fine and stuck out my arm, but Rob hesitated. He said that he didn't feel comfortable putting drugs in his system. I told him that it was literally a life and death choice and that they had already killed people. He let out a sigh of frustration and said fine, sticking out his arm to be injected after I was. We walked away from the venue, past a police car with its lights on. The drug apparently worked quickly on Rob because he asked me what that was.

I told him that it was a cover-up - that my father had told me things like that happened all the time. They would probably say that anyone who died was in a car crash. He shook his head at that in disbelief. I told him that whoever was behind it had the police in their pocket if the car was any indication.

We walked parallel to the beach towards Rob's car, when I asked him if he wanted me to prove to him that the man who told me to walk in the water the previous summer was actually able to manipulate me into almost killing myself, since he hadn't believed me. He said sure and we walked onto the beach.

I told him that the second he felt like he couldn't stay above water to call me in and I would pull him out. He walked into the water and was quickly overtaken, quicker than I was prepared for. The drugs also made my reaction time sluggish, but I was able to push myself to go in after him and pull him out. He was okay after a couple of minutes.

#

#

Jean had the entire family brought to California for a Reich Rally at the Los Angeles Convention center. Emily, Margie and Rick were all there, I don't recall if Laura came. Jean tasked me with finding someone to marry within the Reich. Emily and I were both drugged but Rick wasn't. I don't recall if Margie was. There were many celebrities and politicians there.

Jean told me to ask anyone who I was attracted to if they were interested in having sex with me for the rest of their lives. I did meet someone, but before that, I walked around the location and watched speeches and tried to take in what was going on around me. Someone had pulled Emily aside and was planning to have sex with her. I let Rick and Margie know and Rick intervened but by claiming her and telling them that he was having sex with her. I was disgusted but couldn't do anything but walk around.

To my horror, I found a square bit of carpet with a couch, a naked man with a naked child, and a cage with two more clothed children around 3-5 years old. The man was eating the child on his lap. I collapsed in front of the cage and tried to see how it could be opened and called to Rick and Margie for help. They told me that these children were already dead and that I lived at home, so I would have nowhere to bring them if I took them with me. Even if I tried, there was a whole room of people who would rather kill me than let me take them.

They told me to move on and I did. I had trouble remembering the things that I saw because I was drugged. I was met a boy around my age, Anthony Burch. He said that his father was part of the group that ran this. I told him about the children and he said that was why he tried to not look around at what was going on around him. He seemed to be in a similar position as me, knowledgeable but powerless. He did not seem to be drugged.

He led me outside to where several other people around our age were milling about and introduced me to Ashly, his sister. I was immediately smitten and asked her what Jean had told me. She seemed interested and, since it was the start of a weekend, we discussed spending some of that time together to see if it was a good match.

She said that she was seeing someone and I said that was fine, we didn't have to then, but she said that she wanted to. I asked that she be honest with him about what hanging out for the weekend might entail. She did and she brought me to the apartment she shared with her brother.

Once we were there, she told me that she was actually bringing me to a friend of hers and mine, apparently - Becca, who I used to know as Jordan. I didn't remember her at the time but apparently she had just turned 18 and wanted us to have a legal marriage certificate on file as soon as possible. She reached out to me through Ashly and Anthony, but me not remembering her led me to think that it was Ashly who really wanted to marry me.

She spoke with Becca on the phone for a couple minutes to confirm that she had me and that I would be ready for the wedding tomorrow. I was confused - I asked Ashly if she didn't want to sleep with me, then. Becca was on the other line and gave it her blessing, with a hint of sadness that I didn't remember her and that I would be with someone else on what was the eve of our wedding.

I recall going to a party in California the evening before the wedding. I slept at the apartment and was brought to a location the next day in Palm Springs where there was a tent on a hill where we were married in a small private ceremony. Maria was there, after Lucifer had immolated her but prior to visiting me afterwards. I was transformed into my true self for the ceremony and the sex afterwards, but my full memory has yet to be written.

At the end of the weekend, I approached Jean with Ashly, forgetting that I had been married just a day earlier to someone else, asking her to confirm a pairing between Ashly and myself. She denied it because she was biracial and my bride was to be "the purest white" because of my heritage. A few weeks later, Ashly messaged me on Facebook, but I had no memory of her and they wiped the conversation.

#

I received a text a few weeks later from Anastasia, using the same alias I went out with her under, asking me to meet her at 1:00 PM at Edo, a high-end Asian fusion restaurant. I figured that it was for lunch, so I checked their menu prior to going.

When I arrived, the restaurant didn't seem to be open, but I told them who I was meeting and they let me in. She was sitting at a table close to the center-right of the room waiting for me. I asked her if we were having lunch and she said that wasn't why she had called me, but had water brought to the table.

At that point, we were interrupted by a "young professional" man who said something along the lines of "Whatever he's paying you, I'll double it if you spend your time with me instead". She was flustered and I was confused. I replied that I wasn't paying to spend time with her. She took him aside and talked to him for a moment, telling him that isn't how this works.

When she returned, she apologized for that. I asked her what this was and she explained that she was an escort. I nodded - it was pretty clear from the conversation. I asked her why she asked me to meet her there. She said that she really liked me and wanted to see if I wanted to date her in an open relationship. I asked her if there was a chance that she would stop being an escort and she said no, so I thought about it.

I replied that I liked her a lot, too, so I was willing to give it a shot. I then said in the interest of full disclosure that I believed that I had committed rape, unintentionally, but it was something that was part of why I'd tried to avoid relationships. I said that the worst feeling in the world was being with someone where both parties weren't on the same page. She agreed with that and said that redemption and taking accountability for wrongs committed was important to her. She told me to come over to her apartment in Rockoff Hall on Saturday night. I commented that I thought it wasn't open yet and she said that it was for some people.

#

That Saturday, I came over after dinner and Anastasia greeted me. She introduced me to her friend/roommate and we went into her room to hook up and talk. She explained that she was hired to work for the people who owned Edo and in turn provide services to the college, providing the "college girl experience" to visiting men willing to pay. She told me that her name she had given me wasn't her real name, which was also why the other dorm room had a different name listed on the door.

She whispered her real name to me, but told me to use the fake one whenever I talked to her. We talked about some other things and then she offered me half of a pill, some opiod. We each took half a pill together and she said that she hadn't had any in a while since she left the place she was staying. I asked her about it.

She got serious and said that I couldn't tell anyone about it. I agreed. She asked me what I would think if she told me that there was a secret island where pretty much every famous person went to have sex with underage girls. I replied that there was a black market for pretty much everything else, so unfortunately, it made sense. She was relieved and a bit excited that I believed her and we talked about it for a while.

She asked me if we had met before and I said no, because I didn't remember meeting her at the house in Florida. She said that she remembered a Rich that looked like me and he (I) was the one who convinced her to pursue her teaching certification.

She described the island and told me about G, whose name none of them could pronounce properly. When it was clear that Jeffrey Epstein, the man who owned the island, was under investigation, G had gathered up a group of around 5 girls and told them that they had a choice. All of them could take $30,000 each and leave together or none of them would. The alternative was an implication that they would be killed if they didn't take the money.

By taking the money, G explained, they would be complicit in the operation. However, it was more money than most people would have been able to save in a lifetime and it would assist them in whatever they wanted to do after. She recalled having friends at school that watched each other's backs, even when their fathers would have sex with them. They made it through that by keeping tight relationships with each other.

They took the money and were dropped off via helicopter in Florida. As most of them were from New York or the surrounding area, they came to the northeast. Anastasia chose to continue doing sex work and struck the deal to work at Rutgers. She didn't elaborate on the specifics of the deal so I don't know who it was made with.

She did tell me some specifics about the island. She said that among the guests she had seen there were Bill Clinton, Bill Gates, Will Smith, and photos of several of the cast members from Cheers on the wall. Jeff had a wall with photos of him and many celebrities to tell the girls exactly how well-connected he was. She specifically said that a lot of people assumed that Donald Trump was a visitor, but he wasn't. He knew what was going on but had refused a girl Jeff had sent him - Anastasia had overheard the phone call from Jeff's side.

She also said that Tom Hanks was the worst of them and the most brutal. He had shoved a girl's face in the mud while having sex with her and told her that she was dirt so she should eat dirt. She also said that on one visit, he had come with an older, small woman and several children dressed in white and when they left, the children were gone. I speculated that the woman was Jean, later learning that I was correct. I shared my memory of being hunted by him and she said that sounded like him.

I asked her if anyone in the Bush administration was involved and she said that she had never seen George W Bush and didn't recognize any of the other names I mentioned. She did say that his father's Attorney General was instrumental in setting up the operation.

Our relationship continued for several weeks. At one visit, I told her that it seemed like there was an active investigation that looked like it had the potential to put him away for good. She said that it seemed possible and she would consider calling the number she was given.

During one of our evenings together, we had used heroin and I nearly died. I woke up to her pounding on my chest and I thought she was mad at me for vomiting on her pillow. My left lung had filled with vomit and apparently I hadn't been breathing. She had administered narcan or a similar drug to revive me.

The next weekend, she asked me to come over on Sunday instead of Saturday. She asked if I wanted to have sex and we did, then she went into the bathroom for close to 10-15 minutes. When she came out, it was clear to me that she was crying, but she had wiped it away. She told me that after what had happened, she talked with her friend and she told her that if we kept seeing each other, one or both of us would probably end up dead. I was upset but saw the logic of it. I asked her if she really wanted it to end and if so why she had just slept with me and she said yes but was clearly lying. She said that she wasn't going to be in a relationship for a while and wanted a last taste of intimacy for a while.

I left and, as I rode the elevator down, I thought about how the relationship had ended and tried to accept it. By the time I had walked back to the house on Delavan I was living in, I was visibly heartbroken to the degree that when I saw Molly and Rob, they could tell something was wrong. I explained to them what had happened and Molly briefly excused herself and returned with a glass of orange juice and a vial of hyocine. I asked her what it was and she insisted that it was a vitamin supplement.

I looked her in the eye and told her that I knew that it wasn't and she confirmed. I told her that we were going to have a conversation about where she had gotten it but, lucky for her, I wanted to dull the memory of the relationship, so I drank it. After laying down in my room for a few minutes, Molly came in to check on me.

I asked her where she got the vial, not recalling her deal with the CIA. She claimed that a bald man knocked on the front door a few weeks prior, saying that he was from my family. He gave her a kit with a request to administer it to me if I ever came back acting out of character or upset. I told her that he was CIA - not my family - not cognizant that the two were one and the same. I bought her story and left it alone. I started dating Heather shortly after.

A few days later, I was walking around New Brunswick and recalled that the restaurant at Rockoff Hall was open. I remembered wanting to try it out, but forgot that I had wanted to go there with Anastasia. I walked over and ordered, while I was sitting down and facing the stairs, Anastasia walked down them and froze when she saw me.

"You aren't supposed to be here," she said and I was confused. I thought she meant that the restaurant wasn't supposed to be serving customers yet. She clarified that our relationship was over and that this wouldn't work. I replied that I had never seen her before in my life and was dating someone anyway. She said that it was good that I was seeing someone but asked me if I really didn't remember her. I said that I didn't and she teared up.

She pulled out her phone and recited my phone number. I felt uncomfortable but still couldn't remember. She said that I was clearly in crisis and I remembered that she was going to school for something related to helping people. She made me promise to go straight home to Suffern and tell my parents that I needed psychiatric care because of my missing memory. I was skeptical, but agreed.

I went home that evening and told my mother what had happened. She drugged me and I forgot again until the chemistry test and then forgot again until my meeting with Jeffrey Epstein at his New York residence. The next time I would speak with her would be after that meeting, I called one of the investigators looking into him and gave them her number. I received an angry call from her a few moments later.

I apologized and said that I had just remembered and wasn't even sure if those memories were real. She said that they were and that she was going to have to burn that entire identity and phone number and that she said that she understood that my socio-economic background played a factor in my actions. She asked me if I had told anyone else.

I replied that someone from the CIA had drugged me and I told them that I remembered her. She was more understanding about that as she knew that the CIA had drugs that forced people to tell the truth. I also told her that I remembered meeting Epstein and telling him to fuck off and that I loved her. She replied, surprised, asking if it was true that I loved her.

I replied that yes, I did love her. We had a short relationship but every second I was with her felt electric. I hadn't said it because I didn't want to scare her off, but it was true. She replied that the fact made her feel much better about a decision she had made. I paused for a moment in realization, then asked her if she was pregnant. She confirmed.

I was shocked but happy at the news. I thought that it changed everything but she disagreed. There were still people after her. I suggested that maybe if we were married, they would leave her be, but she replied that if my family was sending me to Epstein for a job interview she wouldn't want to be involved with them. Besides, she said, she felt like this was something she needed to do on her own.

We said goodbye and I shared the news with my mother and asked her about our family. She drugged me and said that there was nothing different about our family. I asked her if it bothered her if she had a grandchild out there that she would never know. She said that she wouldn't consider that child family.

#

I got a call from Carla inviting me to a a meeting at a restaurant near the Conde Naste building. I was cautious and asked if I was going to be in any danger, but she said that it would be fine. I agreed to go and also had a meeting set for around 8:00 PM with the recruiter who I had met at her party.

When I arrived, there were several people at the table. Carla, Chris Morocco with his wife Molly, Gaby Melián and Claire Saffitz. Chris was introduced as a friend of Carla's from school and Gaby as someone who worked at the test kitchen. Claire and I were brought in to test our dynamic with the group and each other. Carla brought us both non-alcohol drinks because we were both underage. She clarified later that they were drugged.

She had us talk about what we were interested in when it came to food and what we would want to do if we were in the industry. I talked about how I was surrounded by food growing up and that my uncle was a professional chef. Claire talked about wanting to study from the masters in France and learn about cuisine and pastry. There was a brief break.

I approached Gaby at the bar and asked her why she was helping the CIA because they were, from my experience, white supremacists. She said that I shouldn't know about the CIA, which I shrugged off, saying that I did. She sad that she had helped them with an attempted coup in Argentina which failed, so they brought her up here. I asked why work with them if they failed and she said that they were the only game in town. We returned to the table.

I asked Chris if he was gay, which came out very much the wrong way. He reminded me that he was there with his wife. I was embarrassed at the way I had asked and failed to cover for it by saying sometimes people got married for convenience. It was around that time that he and his wife left. I apologized and Carla pulled me aside.

She told me that I wasn't going to be a good fit for this and that some of the words that were coming out of my mouth were just crazy. I apologized again and suggested that maybe Brad from her party might be a good fit for this and she said that he was under consideration. Recalling Todd's recruitment, I asked if she was going to have Claire shoot me. She balked at that and said no, but that we wouldn't be moving forward with this. I was relieved and, as everyone else was leaving, left as well.

I started walking away and felt someone tap on my shoulder - it was Claire. "It's a good thing for you that you didn't make the cut."

"Oh, how's that?" I asked.

"Well, I don't usually date people I work with. So, like I said, lucky for you." I stopped walking, realizing that she was coming onto me. I blushed and let out a nervous laugh.

"I'm kind of seeing someone," I replied. I had gone out with Heather a couple of times but we hadn't had sex.

"When you say kind of, what does that mean?" I answered and she replied. "It doesn't sound that serious yet. Besides, this is like a vacation for me. I'm here for three weeks and after that you might not even see me again." I thought about it for a moment and agreed. I was on the fence on the relationship to start with and I was attracted to her and how straightforward and self-possessed she was.

We made a brief stop for soup dumplings before going to the hostel room she was staying in. We talked for around an hour about various things including her plan for what would eventually be Gourmet Makes. I told her that I felt that we had been drugged and that I wanted to wait before doing anything intimate. After talking for a while, we had sex and she gave me her phone number and contact info before I left. I told her that I would be meeting with the CIA agent from Carla's party.

I walked to the meeting with the agent and waited at a table as he talked to someone else. After a few minutes, he beckoned me over and ordered me a Diet Coke. He began by asking me straightforward questions about what I might know that would be of use to him.

I told him first about Carla's party and how the food personalities were all controlling people through videos and he reminded me that was where he had given me his card. That was the first sign to me that my memory wasn't all there.

I then recalled the meeting that Al Stankard had arranged with Stephen Miller and told him that there was a white supremacist who attempted to recruit me into what he described as a legal coup. He was very interested in that. I was surprised, I told him that the impression that I got of the CIA was that they used people of all backgrounds. He said that they used them, yes, but it always for the benefit of white people. There were always people in the background that would prefer a white supremacist system and they would always be there, behind the scenes. He asked about Stephen Miller, Al

Stankard, and their associates. I didn't remember Stephen's last name but I remembered that he lived in the Bay Area.

He asked me if I knew anything else, and I told him that I knew someone that survived Epstein's island. He was surprised at that - he noted that it was a high level operation. He paused and said that a lot of the girls from this area and chances are that some of them would talk and reason stood that they had friends and relationships with people in the area, too.

I suddenly remembered that I had promised Anastasia to never tell anyone about that and asked him why I had said that. He gestured towards my drink. I asked if I had been poisoned, loudly enough to catch the attention of the table behind me. He said that I should keep my voice down - that it would give people a bad impression of the restaurant. I told him that if the waiter drugged me, I would want to give them a bad impression of the restaurant.

At that, the person behind me stepped over and asked me if there was something wrong. I said yes and the recruiter told the man to mind his own business. He said that we were practicing lines for a play. I said that I wasn't and he tried to help get someone to call the police. The recruiter summoned the waiter and told them that he would take care of their bill and to get them out of there. The waiter complied.

I asked the recruiter if people actually practiced lines like that and he said that he just thought of the first thing that came to mind. I asked him why he had drugged me when I had come to him willingly and he replied that I was like a sponge that heard things that I maybe shouldn't and he was going to squeeze every bit of information from me. I was what they called in the spy business a useful idiot.

He said that he thought he had gotten all he would get from me and that it was time for him to get information about me. I asked why and he said that it was to destroy me, to separate me from my closest friends and drive me, if not to suicide, a situation where no one would ever believe me.

He asked me who my closest friend was. I told him that it was Vanessa Beuschel and that she was engaged so I didn't think he would be able to through her life out of balance. He told me that I would be surprised.

I asked him if he was going to go after my family, too. He said that my parents were protected, but I wasn't. I asked him what that meant - protected. He seemed to catch himself and said that usually older people were protected.

He then asked me the worst thing I ever did. I couldn't think of something immediately so he told me to stare at the ceiling fan and let it transfix me and shake my memory loose. I told him that I had raped Stacey Herbison. I hadn't intended to and I didn't realize that she was too scared of me to say no and that I had only understood that afterwards. He said that he was sure her mother would like to know that and wrote it down. I also said that Seth Model had told me that he killed her, but I was also told that she had committed suicide and that I wasn't sure which was true.

At that, he told me that we were done. He said that he had put enough drugs in my drink that it would be unlikely that I would survive the walk back to the train station. If I died, they would just chalk it up as another random drunk stumbling into death. His duty of care was ended and that was what I got for fucking around with an architect's wife. I told him to tell Music that I didn't and that I remembered that it was Lexi that I slept with but he said that it didn't matter.

I left the restaurant and looked up and down the street. I was completely lost even though I had known where I was when I had entered. I though for a moment and then hailed a cab, asking to be brought to Penn Station. I moderated my breath and tried to center myself. I got there in one piece and by the time I used the bathroom, I was steady enough that I was sure that I would be able to make it home. My parents picked me up from the train station and I immediately went to sleep. I wrote on the paper with Claire's number that I was drugged by a CIA agent.

I woke up about an hour later feeling very out of it and not remembering what had happened. I found the paper with my sloppy note and Claire's information, so I called her. I said that I found her number and asked her if she was Claire Saffitz, mispronouncing her last name. She said yes, correcting me on the pronunciation and saying she was just with me. I asked her if she would believe me if I said that I had been drugged by a CIA agent.

She said, "Oh my God, Rich," and I could hear her tear up. She asked me what they did to me and I told her that all I knew was that I had been drugged. She said that she wanted nothing to do with Carla if she was associated with people who would do something like that. She said that when I had left her I told her that was who I was meeting with. I said that maybe she should think it through. If she was going to want to be at the top of her field, whether that be the culinary arts or something else, she would seemingly have to deal with these people sooner or later. I suggested that she talk about this to one person she completely trusts and no one else. It was a decision she would have to make. I also said that I wasn't sure if this was the norm or if it was just because Carla's husband had it out for me. She agreed and we hung up. A few minutes later, I received an angry call from Carla asking me what I had done.

I told her that I hadn't intended to scare Claire away and that I had her number written down and it was the first thing I had seen when I woke up. She told me that I shouldn't have even hooked up with her, that we had been drugged. I told her that I had figured that out and insisted that we wait for the effects to clear before doing anything.

I told her what I had told Claire and said that I wasn't trying to interfere and that I only called her in a panic because of what her husband's agent had done. She seemed annoyed at him and told me she would get in touch if there was anything else.

#

I was walking in New York City, likely to a show on my own, when I spotted Claire talking with Carla at a table outside of a restaurant. I recognized Claire's voice but couldn't place it. They were discovering how to a approach a restaurant's menu when writing a review of it when I interrupted them.

"Sorry, do I know you?" I asked Claire. She was surprised, as was Carla. She said that I did but Carla said that I wouldn't remember her. I told her that I did but that I couldn't exactly place her. I asked her if we used to date.

She said that no, not exactly, but we had hooked up. I turned to Carla and said that she looked familiar, too. She said that she knew me, too, but there was no way I should be able to remember. I reiterated that, again, I remembered, even if it wasn't everything.

She insisted on drugging me by putting a vial into my drink, an iced tea that I had purchased at a nearby Starbucks. Claire watched on and I walked away.

#

After being rejected for the CIA backed BA Kitchen gig, I had a vague recollection that I wanted to work for Conde Nast. My mother encouraged me to formally apply to a position there, so I did.

I met with Molly Baz for the interview and she said that my resume looked good for the program I was applying to. I told her that I knew this place was a CIA front and she immediately responded with a pre-rehearsed speech about how Conde Nast took pride in preparing their employees with a wide range of skills and had no direct connection to what they did in their future careers. I said that just confirmed it, having a speech like that. She asked if I knew anyone who worked there and I said Carla, who she went to get.

When Carla came down, she asked me why I was there and told me that I didn't have the temperament for the position. I told her that I thought if I applied and worked my way up I might develop the skills. She told me that wasn't how it worked. I left of my own accord - I don't think they drugged me this time.

#

I was given a phone number to share for the CIA's comedy recruiter even though they had decided against recruiting me. I gave it to a co-worker at Au Bon Pain - Chelsea Peretti - who signed on along with her friend, who had already seen some success with his group Lonely Island, Andrew Samberg.

She was recruited because they were looking to put someone with Jordan Peele, who she was a fan of from his time on Mad TV. After she left the job, she introduced me to Andy along with a couple other people including Rob Delaney.

#

In 2006, Carla contacted me several times to try to find a position within the "organization" that would be a good fit for me. This was after the incident with the walk-in with Claire but before the 2010 recruitment attempt. The recollections below may be out of order.

One of the times she called me in during this period was a request to come over to my Uncle Tony's house. I thought that it was just him inviting me over, but when I got there, Carla was there along with several people. She explained that all of us were rougher around the edges but still people who would be recruited into the food entertainment sector of the CIA. We would just have to come up with something on our own, put it up on YouTube, and the CIA would support it.

I asked why it was at Tony's house and if she knew him from school or something. He said that, apparently, she was his daughter and so after introductions they left the main portion of the house to talk in the attached apartment. The other people that I recall being there were Sean Evans, Matty Matheson, Andrew Rea, and Alvin Cailan. They were all smoking pot and I was also given a dose of hyocine to drink. We were encouraged to brainstorm and discuss what we would do.

Sean started first, as he had already been working with Carla on a channel called First We Feast. He also had a plan for a game show that would be called Hot Ones, where contestants would have to answer questions while eating progressively spicier wings. I mentioned that there was a porn series or something like that already and he said that Carla was already using CIA resources to scrub it from the internet.

Matty mentioned that he wanted to do something with comfort food and Alvin wanted to do something similar with burgers. They had a lot of tattoos and I asked them what kind of stuff they did with the CIA. They said that they mostly did stuff around drugs, killing who they were told to kill, etc. I became a bit nervous at that - I asked them if they had all killed people. Andrew said that all of them had killed at least one person, as part of recruitment and I said that I hadn't.

He was curious about that - he said that he hadn't known of anyone brought into a CIA operation without having killed someone. I said that maybe it was because of who my family was. He speculated that maybe if it was an architect I was related to, which I replied that I didn't think I was.

I mostly talked with him about what would eventually become Binging With Babish. He had already created a backstory and had plans for the YouTube channel. He planned on making food from movies and TV shows. I didn't really have any idea of what I would want to do given the opportunity to be backed by the CIA.

When Carla came back up, I told her that I didn't really have anything and it sounded like they wanted it more because they were willing to kill for it. I told her that I didn't want to be involved.

#

At a separate meeting, she had me meet with Bari Weiss, who was a CIA asset whose entire goal was to be a nominally liberal pundit who was extremely pro-Israel. She was dating another female CIA asset, Kate MacKinnon. She said that she would eventually marry a man to push the narrative that being gay was a fling.

The same day, she had me wait on some Saudi businessmen to try to listen in on their meeting. Her thought was that if the drugs didn't completely work on me, I might make a good spy. I didn't.

#

For this meeting, Carla told me that I would have to wear a suit because I would otherwise look out of place. She said that the operation wasn't exactly on the books but they really wanted to find a "place for me in the organization".

I took public transportation to the location and was invited inside. I was seated on a large leather armchair with an ottoman and presented with a cup of hyocine to drink by a teenage girl in a bikini. I drank it, but then she attempted to sexually stimulate me. I recalled what Anastasia had told me about how Epstein had the girls do that and refused. She tried again and I laid down with my crotch facing the back of the chair so that she couldn't get to me. She looked up, presumably at a camera and said that I wasn't letting her do anything.

At that, the door behind the chair opened and Jeffrey Epstein came out ranting that he was just trying to do something "nice" for me and told me to get my pants back on as the girl had undone the buckle. I asked if he wanted me to leave but he didn't, he had me come inside his office.

There was a fireplace to the right, but we met at his desk on the side of the room. There was an office style full glass window behind him. I asked him if he was Jeffrey Epstein and he said that he was. I told him that I had told Carla that I didn't want anything to do with him because of how he had stolen Anastasia's youth from her. I told him that I loved her and to go fuck himself.

He got mean and said that if I was anyone else he would have the shit beaten out of me. I asked him what that meant and he seemed surprised. He made a comment about being part of one of the most powerful families in the entire world and not even knowing it. I asked him if he meant the Marins and he said whatever they told you, and pulled back from that line of discussion.

He told me that what I felt as love was just a chemical reaction and that he loved all the girls he had slept with and started rattling off a list that started at A. He said he would prove it to me and then had me leave.

As I walked towards the subway, I was pulled aside by a middle-aged woman with short shoulder-length hair. She told me that she wanted to have sex with me and I asked her if Epstein sent her. She pretended like he hadn't for a moment but then dropped the act and said that he was nice to the girls but if she didn't do what he wanted, he would beat her. I didn't want that to happen so I agreed.

We had sex briefly and a few moments in, she said "I love you", assuming that I would say something like it back. I replied that I didn't but I liked her well enough at which point it stopped and she let me go.

Chapter Nineteen

2007

I was at a bar with a friend, Bill Cashman, and I recalled part of what happened with Seth. I told Bill that someone I knew who was a "troop" had killed someone in his hometown just before he shipped out and told me. I didn't recall all of the facts at this point, just that. I wrote it off as I recalled it as how in our society at that point, people who were enlisted were basically untouchable.

We were interrupted by someone who said that he was in the military and he strongly disagreed with that statement and it was people like the person I was talking about that gave the troops a bad name. He said that his quartermaster would have a record of the replaced bag and that they would absolutely prosecute him. He gave me a card, but after that evening, I forgot again.

Chapter Twenty

2008

I got a call from Carla asking me if I was willing to help convince Claire to continue working with them as she was having second thoughts about going abroad to France. I said that I was dating someone so I wasn't willing to do anything sexual and she clarified that it was nothing like that.

I went to the Conde Nast building where I met with Carla and Brad. They were somewhat quiet and I asked when Claire would be there. They said that she would be coming soon. They led me to the back of a walk-in freezer that was off. I commented that it was warm and they said that they were still setting up things for the kitchen.

They told me to strip down to my boxers and I reiterated that I had a girlfriend and they said that it was just for the visual effect. I wouldn't have to do anything. I asked if I was meant to be eye candy, which was met with silence. I did as I was told and then they began wrapping me up in plastic wrap. I was confused but went along with it. After I was wrapped, they brought in Claire and told me to talk to her.

It took her a moment to recognize me. I asked her what this was about and she said that she didn't want to leave her friends and family to go off to France. I said that I understood that and turned to Carla and asked her if she really had to go to France. She said that they had invested a lot in Claire and the reason they had wrapped me up was to remind her. If I didn't go, they would dismember me with the meat cutters there and scatter me in the East River. To drive the point home, Brad stuck the point of a kitchen knife through the plastic and into the top of my right breast. The blood spread under the plastic and I let out a shriek of pain.

Claire was shocked and crying and said that no, they wouldn't need to do that. I told her that I thought they were bluffing, that they wouldn't use equipment they ate off of to do that. She said that they didn't care about that - that Carla and her husband were cannibals and that Brad had cooked them "special" meat at a barbecue that they made clear to the other guests was for them alone. Brad shrugged and said that once it's off the person, it's just meat. Claire agreed as long as they would let me go.

Claire left to go to Paris and Brad left as well. Carla unwrapped me and bandaged my wound. I told her that the next time she called, I would not hep her. She said that was fine and that I shouldn't, that these people wouldn't hesitate to hurt me.

After I left, I met Heather in Elizabeth and we ate at the Tropicana Diner. I told her in broad strokes what had happened and showed her the wound but she didn't believe me.

Chapter Twenty-One

2009

I had been friends with Ralph Attanasia since at least 2006. He was mutual friends with one of my housemates and they were also in a band together. I was surprised to see, after losing touch with him for a while, that he was on the TV show Cake Boss as a regular. I reached out to him and congratulated him on his stardom and asked if he wanted to hang out to catch up.

He invited me to a dinner party in New Jersey at a banquet hall. I greeted him and we made some small talk and I jokingly told him that the last time I met a bunch of food personalities, they were all involved with the CIA. He went pale. The man next to him told him that he knows what he has to do and that if Ralph didn't, he would and Ralph would not like the way that he'd handle it.

I was confused. I knew that my mother had mentioned that Ina Garten had been involved in the CIA and had assumed incorrectly that it was common knowledge. My memory of the encounters with Carla were missing most of the negative parts. I just recalled that they were involved with the CIA. I said that the way they were talking, it sounded like they were involved in organized crime. Ralph said that it was basically what it was.

He told me to follow him to the men's room and told me to wait while he got his kit from his car. I begged Ralph not to inject me with it and told him that I could act drugged and his handlers would never know that I wasn't. He said that they would know. He gave me a beer to drink while he prepared the needle to inject me. When he put the needle near my arm, he instead emptied it on the floor and told me that he was my friend and he wouldn't do that to me.

We exited the men's room and I confirmed to his handler that he had drugged me, then Ralph clarified that he had put it in a drink. I looked at him shocked and angry. He told his handler that he would drive me home because I was his responsibility. He said he would tell me that I had too much to drink.

As soon as Ralph put me in his back seat he apologized, saying that he was such a terrible friend for drugging me. I agreed with him and asked him how he got mixed up with the CIA. He said that his grandmother had gotten sick and he had mentioned it at work. One of the producers on the show offered him a deal. He would commit to doing something that would be a suicide mission in about a decade and the CIA could provide his grandma with an experimental treatment that could extend her life by up to seven years.

He said that he saw it as a deal similar to Roald Dahl's The Witches, where the grandson was transformed into a mouse with a shortened lifespan and would live for about as long as his grandmother. He would also be an agent in the meantime, but would have to murder someone he knew for initiation. I asked him who it was and he said that it was a friend from LARPing and the CIA had covered up the death and he had to dump the body in a river.

I asked him if his grandmother would agree with what he was doing and he said that he hadn't told her. I had figured that, but I asked him if he thought that she would be okay with that. He said that she told him that she would do anything to avoid dying and he figured that his actions were in line with her wishes. I told him that I thought he should ask her, indirectly and maybe reconsider his actions.

I told him that he wasn't a terrible friend; that by drugging me he saved me from what his handler had planned for me. He dropped me off at my parents house and we resolved to meet up again, but he said that we couldn't discuss what had happened.

I texted him the next day and asked if there was some safe space we could discuss it and he said there was nowhere safe.

#

A few weeks after finding out that Ralph was CIA, he invited me over to his apartment to hang out. I arrived late afternoon and he introduced me to his girlfriend, Paige. I did not recognize her at the time but she recognized me as her charge from a CIA recruitment trip I was sent on in New Orleans in 2006. She just said Hi and afterwards, I turned to Ralph and asked him if we could talk about the CIA.

Paige turned to him and angrily accused him of not drugging me when he was supposed to. He said that he had, but it didn't take. I backed up his side of the story as it was the truth. She told him that if it didn't work he should have done it again or told someone. I told her that I assumed that he had invited me over to drug me again.

She told him that if he did it incorrectly, maybe she should. She then threatened him that she would have sex with me as a punishment to him. He sullenly retorted, "Do what you have to do," and I insisted that I had a girlfriend. He gestured at me and said that I didn't want to and she said that it didn't matter.

She gave me a full vial or two in a cup of diet soda and had me drink it. Then, she told me to go into the bedroom and she took off her top. She got close to me and shut the door and told me to make noises like I was having sex. She made noises and I didn't know what kind of sound I made but she told me to stop because it didn't sound anything like sex.

She had me sit down and I asked her why she was going along with whatever the CIA had planned if it meant Ralph would die. I said that if she was his girlfriend she must have some attachment to him. She agreed that she liked Ralph but the Agency had big plans for him. I asked her what big plans entailed. She said that if this didn't work, she would have Ralph wrap me in a rug and dump me in a river, so she would discuss some of it. I told her that Ralph wouldn't want to do that and she replied that he's already done things he hasn't wanted to.

She began by telling me that being in intelligence is less about spying and more about killing people that could potentially be a problem. The mission of the agency was to keep the racial breakdown of America relatively the same, which generally meant sabotaging minority communities to prevent them from growing or becoming more influential. She said that she was involved to fight for what she saw as the real America, the one with no economic opportunities and crumbling infrastructure compared to the relatively well off urban areas on the coasts. I replied that just because the buildings looked nicer didn't mean that people were much more well off. She doubted that, but went on.

She said that this was all surrounding the 2020 election and that the ultimate goal of the plans was to institute open fascism. I questioned why fascism and she said that she didn't know, that the architects had possibly determined that was the ideal form of government to preserve the most number of lives. She then went on to say that there would be a lot coming that would mean hard decisions would have to be made.

First, she said that in 2016, two candidates would run against each other - both very unlikeable. The Democrats would likely run Hillary Clinton and the CIA had a very unlikeable candidate lined up. After a long and vitriolic election cycle, their unlikeable candidate would win, with the appearance of being helped by outside foreign actors. In reality, it would be the CIA influencing the election.

He would be used to implement some of the worst policies imaginable. It would be a trial balloon for the upcoming fascist state. He would use the excuse of a caravan of migrants to institute concentration camps and use it as motivation for being a terrible, unlikeable president. Eventually, she said, he would be impeached but not removed from office.

Parallel to that, she and Ralph would get engaged and he would make efforts to become an actor. The engagement would run long and they would never marry and his attempts at becoming an actor would fail. This would serve as a narrative for why he would then assassinate the president during the Easter Egg Roll at the White House. This would serve to have his Vice President be the candidate in 2016 and continue with more or less the same administration.

There would be other factors involved in pushing America towards fascism. In late 2019 an agency would release a virus that Paige was told was a weapon of war in China from a lab in the Wuhan province. It would prevent China from taking a larger role on the world stage but she was told that it wasn't really going to spread here. It would be used as an excuse to institute a quarantine, which would be in place during the big event - a 4 km asteroid that would hit near Venezuela on April 29th 2020. It was large enough that it would wipe out part of South America, Cuba, and Haiti. She was not clear on the exact date, I guessed based off the context - I believed it to be 1998OR2 which clearly did not hit.

With all of that happening, the idea was that the only viable way forward for America would be a fascist state. Eight years of a far-right government would lock up the Supreme Court for the next half-century and it would be impossible to pull society to the left once such a government was entrenched.

I questioned this as she told me about it. I asked why fascism and why not socialism or communism? She offered Venezuela as an example of a failed socialist state, at which I replied by saying that the CIA had a long history of sabotaging socialist and communist nations. There wasn't a good example of the system working because the CIA always intervened.

I said that it sounded like she would be in the public eye. How did she know that they wouldn't have Ralph or whoever would actually be the trigger man kill her, too? She replied that she was loyal and that part of the plan involved her going on TV and pushing the narrative that the CIA had set up. They would give her money in a one-time payment to live off of.

I asked her if there was a way for all of this to happen without Ralph dying. She said that if he didn't do it, some other patriot would. I asked her how she could do that to someone who she cared about. She said that she liked Ralph, but her mission came first. She said that the reason she agreed to be with him was because he reminded her of me and how kind I was when she escorted me through the program in New Orleans. I told her that I didn't remember and she said that I wouldn't. She told me a bit about what happened, but nothing too specific. I would remember it on my own, later.

I then offered to help plan a takeover of the architect's house. I remember being there and the layout. She listened but didn't really take me seriously. I think she was listening to determine what I knew.

At that point she said that it was time to stop talking and told me to lay down next to a rolled up rug and watch TV. I fell asleep at that point and was awoken shortly after by Ralph telling Paige that he had looked me up on her handheld and that I was on a protected list. He told me to get up and I apologized, saying that I must have had too much to drink.

I feigned not remembering anything and Ralph drove me back to the train station. I told him on the way some of Paige's mission but I specifically told him that she did seem to really care for him. If there was another option, she might take it. He dropped me off at the platform and told me that his life was too dangerous for us to keep hanging out. I agreed.

She also mentioned that Pete Buttigieg would run and that he and Chasten were both CIA groomed for the role. They would also push Bernie Sanders to run and lose - "discrediting socialism".

#

On the train ride back from Ralph's, I felt the memory of what I had learned slipping away, so I began repeating it to myself in my head. I might have made a note in my phone but I found it difficult to operate.

As soon as I got in, I rushed home and told both of my parents that "Cake Boss Ralph was going to kill the next President." I had no memory of their previous association with the CIA so I had no reason to distrust them at the time. I mentioned the flu-like disease and the asteroid, but my mind was fixated on that one phrase. I couldn't stop repeating it, so they called a neurologist. I don't recall his name but I selected it from the phone book.

He made a house call and diagnosed it as a benzo loop. He said that it was due to a thought getting stuck in my head while being under the influence of hyocine which he was aware of being used by the CIA. My parents asked him how he could know that and he said that he had come across it once or twice before. He said that the solution would be to give me another dose and do my best to clear my head while under the influence. I didn't want to forget, but it was so persistent that I didn't really think I had a choice. After I took it, he told me that I would have to be held for a mandatory observation period at the local hospital. I didn't have a choice, so I went with him. After around an hour or two, a CIA station chief came and drugged me again. He said that they were government secrets, not my secrets and to let them go. If I didn't forget them they would have to kill me.

I was released after an overnight stay and told my father that I still remembered everything. I insisted on doing something, so he made an appointment at the New York State Federal building a couple days later. The person we met with there said that if it had to do with the CIA, it was outside of his jurisdiction and that they knew more about the structure of America than anyone. He drugged me but not my father. I promised my father that I would leave it alone as long as he told Nan and Pop Pop to get out of Florida before the asteroid hit. He agreed.

After that, I wrote down the things other than the asteroid, which I knew I couldn't do anything about on my own. Wuhan, the 2020 election and planned assassination, and contacting Senator Sanders would be the things I could try to affect. I decided that I had to do something, so I thought about what I could possibly do to set something in motion ten years in advance.

I decided on two things - I would send an e-mail or letter to Senator Sanders, who Paige had confirmed was not part of the CIA. I would also meet with my friend Frankie Huang, who was an aspiring journalist. I would tell her what I knew about the coronavirus and the hopes that it could be prevented. I texted Frankie and asked if she would be able to meet in person about something related to being a journalist. She agreed to meet with me at the outside food court at Penn Station.

After confirming that, I created a burner AOL account and wrote an email to Bernie Sanders. I told him that the CIA was planning something around the 2020 election and he would be pushed into entering the race. They did not think he would be able to win but I thought he could. I said that if he was able to push the youth turnout and run a strong issues based campaign, he had a chance. He would have a lot of opponents but he would have the strongest message. He would also need to be aware of the labyrinthine caucus rules. If he made it to the general election, his opponent on election day would not be the same one he was initially running against. I sent the message and nearly immediately received a reply saying that he was aware of rumblings around 2020 and that he was shown my email. I deleted the account after that.

A few days later, I met with Frankie at Penn Station.

However, as soon as I got there, I was ambushed by Paige and a taller male CIA agent. She asked me why I had contacted Frankie and she was interested in what I was planning to tell her. I stammered that it was nothing, but she insisted on putting a wire on me and told me that if I said anything, they would kill me.

I met with Frankie, who had a bowl of miso soup. I tried to think of how I could communicate in any way. The best I could do was write the word "Wuhan" on a piece of paper and ask her if she knew what it was. She said that it was a province in China and asked why I wrote it. I said that something was going to happen there in 10 years, but I couldn't say. She became frustrated and left.

Paige and the other agent returned and said that Frankie was drugged via the soup and wouldn't remember, then drugged me too. She said that I hadn't revealed any state secrets but they would be keeping a close eye on me.

#

I had taken the train in to Manhattan for a show. I was dressed in a suit, so it was probably a World/Inferno show. As I walked past the entrance to the Conde Nast building, I locked eyes with Brad Leone, just barely recognizing him, but shrugged it off. He recognized me too, and caught up with me, handing off his drink to a friend.

"Do I know you," he asked. I said maybe and introduced myself. I asked him if maybe he had played with my band and he said that wasn't it. He asked me if I had ever been in the test kitchen and I said no, not to my recollection. He said that he thought I had and I told him that I felt like knew him but really couldn't place it. He then said he remembered and described tying me up in a metal container to threaten someone - black ops shit.

I replied that I hadn't been involved to my recollection but if that's what it was. He said that he needed me to come inside and file a report. He sat me down at the front desk and went inside. He returned a few minutes later with a cup and a soda. He said, "Here's the deal - there's a termination order out on you and they want me to kill you, but I'm not going to do that. They put me in charge of this station and I don't think that it's a good idea to go killing people all the time."

"Thank you for not killing me, I guess," I replied, shocked.

He set the cup down between us. "No problem. So here's what's going to happen. I'll pour you a nice sodee with something to help you forget all this." He poured it in to the soda. "Now just take a nice drinkee drink and I'll wait here with you until you're done." I shook my head at his casual demeanor but did as I was told. He suggested that I drink alcohol later to help with the forgetting, which I did at the show. I recall it was at Irving Plaza and I told Kevin Rankin what had happened, but he didn't believe me.

Chapter Twenty-Two

2010

I had just ended a temp assignment from Leapforce and was having anxiety about where I would be able to find a new job. Rick said to wait before I did anything and then called Jean from his home office. He told her that it might be time and Jean replied that "He'll never go for it". Rick said that he knows me and that if I saw what was being offered, that I would take it. She agreed to set it up.

My parents came to me and told me that I was a prince of the Reich. They explained that it was mostly an American organization with some Germans still involved. If I agreed to it and passed a test, I would be in charge of it. I agreed to try it, it certainly sounded better than navigating the post-Great Recession job market.

About an hour later, a man arrived driving a cargo van. I was told to go in the back with a blond woman. She drugged me and gave me a new smart phone. It was a live line and on the other end was Aubrey Plaza. I asked her if it was really her and she sent a photo of her to prove it. It was her in the dark looking at the phone.

I was confused as to why they had her call me. She said that if I took the job that she was one of the people I'd be hanging out with. Without a filter due to the drug, I asked her if she was interested in having sex with me, to which she laughed and said that maybe if we hung out and "vibed". Then she had to leave to go back to set.

After the call, the blond woman had undressed and went to have sex with me. I recoiled because it was unexpected and sudden. I asked her what she was doing and she said that she had just wanted to do what they told them in training and "take what she wanted". After my reaction, she withdrew and clothed herself again.

The first stop in the city was Takeshi Sushi. I met with a man who had me sign documents from One Irving Plaza Corp to become a part-owner of the company. It would have provided me with around 10k per month. The money was laundered through restaurant to me. I signed and then ordered food at the restaurant which I paid for with my debit card.

I was told that most of the people I would be meeting with were either authorized to know what was going on or, if not, under the same drug. I was encouraged to ask the ones who were drugged their deepest secrets for future use as blackmail.

My next location was a meeting with one of the two brothers who made up the duo Wicked Kitchen. I became aware of their YouTube channel much later - at the time they were were working with Tesco. He had out a sampling of grilled vegetables covered in different sauces. I commented that there was a lot of sugar in that and he replied that it wasn't more than you would find at a restaurant.

I asked him why he didn't have any tofu or seitan out and he said that he did have recipes for that but this was the kind of stuff he ate normally. I asked him how long he spend in the gym and he said around an hour every day. I said that he must in order for him to be able to build those kind of muscles without that much protein.

I told him that I wasn't a vegetarian but the one plant substitute I would like is a replacement for canned tuna. I used to eat it as a child until I started getting allergic reactions to it. He mentioned that Lorma Linda had most of the market for vegetarian seafood alternatives covered. I replied that I wasn't familiar with them and would try them out. He then mentioned that their food lines were mostly high end to which I suggested the bagged seasoned tuna packages.

My next and final stop was a brothel/club disguised as a storefront in Manhattan. I was greeted by a man named John who brought me up in a freight elevator at the back of the "store". He brought me first to what was basically a dimly lit area that was sparse - sort of like a back stage green room. He left me there with some people while he got everything ready for me upstairs.

There were three people in the room. Ninja, who was a pro gamer and had recently started streaming on his own, his bodyguard, and a naked girl who was sitting on Ninja's lap. He introduced himself and we discussed what kind of video games he played. I said that sounded fun and I asked if I could stream with him sometime and he said that he had an image of a young rock star. I mentioned that I used to be in a band but mostly did office work now.

While we were talking he was doing cocaine and having sex with the girl. I asked her how old she was and she said that she was 16. I said that was fucked up and Ninja replied that he was only 19 so the age difference wasn't that big. I replied that I guess not but it didn't seem like she was there only having sex with people within a legal range.

I turned to his bodyguard who was on his phone to ask him what he thought of it. He replied that it was a free show and went back to what he was doing. At that point, John returned and asked me to come up in the elevator with him. He said that everything was ready. For me to get everything, I would have to kill someone.

As I entered the elevator, I recognized him in the different lighting. He was the actor John Krasinski from The Office. I stammered out recognition and pronounced his last name with "s" pronounced as in snake. He quickly corrected me by informing me that pronunciation was more frequently used by Jewish immigrants while he pronounced it "Krachinski" because he wasn't Jewish. I was taken about how quickly he was to defend how his name was pronounced and how he chose to phrase it.

We reached the destination a couple floors up. The area looked like a nightclub. For some reason I recall a basketball court - it may have been on a poster or the "club" may have been a VIP area at a basketball stadium. All I know for sure is that it was in Manhattan.

Leaving the elevator, I reminded him that I was supposed to be dosed at each location. He expressed surprise that I was being drugged considering that I was the heir. He got a drink for me and when I drank it, I replied that I was surprised that I was designated heir over someone like him but I guessed that it was due to genetics.

He introduced me to Steve Carell and his wife Nancy, Seth Meyers, and called over Ed Helms. Then, talking to one or all of them, I'm not sure who exactly he was addressing at this point, but he said that when he was growing up, he would tell friends on the drug to do anything and they would do it. He had even convinced one of them to jump off a roof.

Looking around for ideas of what he would instruct me to do, he settled on a nude woman to my right. He told me to have sex with her. I said okay and turned towards her but then stopped and asked him wouldn't she mind? He seemed frustrated that I hadn't acted immediately and explained that was what she was there for - why else would she be walking around naked?

The logic made sense to me in that state, I did what he had told me to and the woman pulled away in shock. I didn't penetrate her but I came close enough that she realized what I was trying to do. I was confused. For some reason I thought she had heard him and that it was expected - I looked at him in confusion and then back at her.

I tried to explain what he had said and apologized saying that I wasn't trying to hurt her. John, in a commanding voice told both of us, that was what she was there for. I told her that I didn't want to if she didn't but she quickly covered her emotions and said that it was fine. She turned back to dismiss the couple she had been talking to and then turned back to me. We then had sex in front of everyone. I think Ed Helms gave me a high five.

Afterwards, I thanked her and realized that she had been talking with the couple to plan an encounter in one of the rooms. It was at that point that I realized that there were rooms. I apologized and said that she could go with them now, but she replied that she had to get cleaned up. I turned around as she left and my memory of what had just happened went away.

John had left to check on something, presumably the person who I was supposed to kill. I turned to Steve Carell and said that I had to shake his hand. He said that he didn't really want to do that because I had just raped someone. At that I was in order - confused then horrified. I said that after what had happened in college, I had done everything I could to not do something like that ever again. I was confused and didn't even remember what had happened minutes ago.

He realized that I was serious and offered me a ride out of there. I agreed and quickly used the bathroom then took the elevator down. I threw out the smartphone they had given me on the way out. He guided me to a waiting car and I sat in the limo on the passenger side facing him and Nancy. She was terrified of me, she had seen the sex after I had spoken with the woman as a brutal rape. I tried to explain how I couldn't remember exactly what had happened but only Steve was really interested in talking with me.

He asked me where I lived and I told him Suffern and that I usually took a train from Penn Station home. He had hoped to drop me off at a location within the city. I was clearly in a vulnerable state and he didn't want me to do anything or for anything bad to happen to me. I replied that the drug was only really effective when the person who gave it to me told me to do something. I should be able to retain control. I told him that I would get a jelly and a strawberry donut at Dunkin Donuts in Secaucus, but would otherwise go directly home. This satisfied Steve.

I told him about how John was specific about how his name was pronounced and told him that I was pretty sure that the CIA were Nazis. He didn't seem to think that was true, so I asked him about how they recruited him. He said that they had found him when he was hosting a radio station in college. They had arranged their marriage and told them to have kids together to strengthen their bond.

He said that they mostly called them up for movies that had messages about having kids. They had the drug at home in case people overheard that they were off doing a CIA film. I suggested that if they had any doubts about how powerful that drug was that if they ever drug their son to tell him to do jumping jacks. Steve was taken aback and said that he would never just drug his son and I couldn't articulate that what I had meant was in the case that he had to for one of the reasons he had the drug, but I dropped it.

He said that part of the reason Nancy had referred to the sex as brutal was because he was a timid lover, something that John had heard him talking about and inserted into the show. It was more John's show now - he had convinced the CIA to use it as a platform for up and coming new assets. He had a plan to leave the show as his contract was coming up in the next few weeks. He was going to suggest that it might be his last season and see what the CIA would say.

Recalling Shelly Long's exit from Cheers, I suggested maybe implying that he would like to do more movies. I had forgotten that was what drew Jean's ire - I just gave advice based off the association. It did seem like a different situation, though, as he was established and a CIA asset rather than someone they were just trying to control.

As we reached Penn Station, I told him to keep his eyes and ears open. I really thought that there was something wrong with the CIA. I thanked him and Nancy and took the first train out.

At Secaucus, a CIA agent stopped me to make sure that I was making it back safe. When I got hom, I told my parents that I wanted nothing to do with Nan's friends ever again.

#

I was left in a funk after the attempted recruitment and didn't want to leave the house. I was encouraged to put my name in to the staffing agency R J Staffing and did a short stint at a non-profit that helped with people who didn't have full mobility. I recall that the earthquake in Haiti occurred at the end of that assignment.

A few days later, I received a call saying that another assignment had become available and they wanted me. I was dubious of that, but they had Anna, the office manager, call me and tell me about the job. It was temp to hire and they wanted someone familiar with comic books as DC Comics was one of their clients. I agreed to come in and my first day was around President's Day.

I was introduced to everyone. I recognized Yesenia Velez from a small gathering at a house with my friends but I don't think she recognized me. I also met Alan Cambey, who I didn't recognize but had met many times before. Most of the people were busy with post-holiday work, so I was initially trained on data entry for qualification cards.

A few days into working there, Anna pulled me aside, gave me something to drink, and brought me into the handicap bathroom to have sex. Alan returned from "lunch" and knocked on the door insisting that we stop. He told Anna that I wasn't part of the group of people that knew about this and that my family had sent me there to be "safe". I was surprised, then drugged further.

In my time there, initially up to the point where I got engaged, I was pulled aside by various female employees in upper management to have sex. I was always drugged and outside of the encounters, they treated it like it never happened.

I was once asked to "perform" with a female co-worker in the main conference room where several people watched. I was also invited, with that same employee, to act as "paragons" - naked statues at the entrance of an orgy at Alan's house. I allowed a guest to perform oral sex on me, which led to Alan kicking me out, not paying me, and pulling in the caterer to take my place.

One time, my sister Laura dropped me off and Alan drugged me and asked me if he could eat her as he had planned to 15 years prior. I waited in the vestibule in front and Karen G was aware of what he was saying and doing. Alan also told me that Tony killed his friend in the 70's.

After I was engaged, the sex stopped, mostly. Alan raped and then forced me to rape a fellow employee after we had made a mistake on a large order. He would also take female employees, including both of his daughters out to "lunch" where he would drug and have sex with them.

In June, I was sent to Folio, a trade show in New York City. I ran into Carla Lalli Music at the bar outside of a panel she was on and she commented that it was a familiar scene. I was confused and asked her if I knew her to which she said yes, but that I wouldn't remember and shouldn't try to. After returning to the office, Diane took me aside and told me that Cambey & West was CIA and most of the people who worked there had been involved with it directly or indirectly.

#

I was gathered with Heather's friends Kat, Jason, Rita and Doug for a moving to Texas "party" for Heather in New York City. We went to various locations: the Nintendo Store, a tropical zoo, a park, and an Italian family style restaurant in Manhattan. I don't remember the specific itinerary. Close to the park, though, I wandered off for a bit as heather was buying something at Duane Reade. The others were waiting for us at the park.

I noticed a bookstore with some type of event going on inside. As I tried to get a closer look, a man approached me and asked if I had a death wish. I took a step back and said that I didn't mean to violate a security boundary, I was just trying to see what was going on. He said something to the effect of nice try and that there was a termination order out on me.

I asked him what that meant and told him that it had to be a mistake. He pulled out his device and said that it doesn't make mistakes. I asked him to doublec check and he did and showed me - it was a picture of me on an old monochrome lcd screen. It said terminate - to kill on sight. He pulled me in through a metal door and zip-tied me, barefoot, to a metal chair.

He stepped over to the right and started looking through several blunt metal tools. I was drugged and I asked him to please check with a person first. I didn't think it was possible for me to have such an order out on me. I told him that I was with people and that they would be looking for me - he said that he was going to cut me up into so many pieces that they would never find a trace of me.

Selecting his implement, he walked over to me. I shouted for help at a young man who I could see through a crack in the door. He ran, I don't know if he ever reported it. The man asked me which one of my fingers I used the most. He said that he would alternate between fingers and toes and then teeth. He had a pair of dull wire cutters up against the sides of my right index finger and moved to squeeze when there was a knock on the door.

He set down his tool and opened the door slightly - it was Carla Lalli-Music. She said that she had gotten an alert that there was a security situation and wanted to check on it. She recognized me in the chair and pulled the man outside. I could overhear their words.

She said that her husband was trying to start a war that he couldn't win. She said that she had me placed in Cambey & West and that I seemed to be doing well with the program. She told him that those were the people who signed his checks and let him do what he did and that if he killed me they would retaliate.

He recognized who she was talking about and recalled that he had interacted with me several times as a child. They let me go and I tried to tell Heather's friends, but they didn't believe me.

Chapter Twenty-Three

2011

I made the decision in spring 2011 that I was going to go to E3 and to try to meet people in the industry. I scheduled most of the week prior to the show off from work and booked a room at Level Furnished living. The time off was right after a visit to Heather in Texas, who I did not tell about the trip. I didn't have tickets to E3 proper, but I knew that there were a lot of pre-show events that I might be able to get into on my good looks and charm alone.

After settling in at the room and buying sheets and groceries at a local store, I walked over to the convention center to get my bearings. Outside of the center, I spotted three men who I walked up to.

I told them that I was out of college and looking to break in to the video game industry and asked them if they knew of any events going on. The tallest said that they had just finished setting up their booth and were about to get drinks and invited me along. They introduced themselves as Pete Hines, Todd Howard, and one other person whose name escapes me.

We walked a couple blocks to a restaurant and were seated at a table near the window. I had my back to the front of the restaurant, Todd was directly across the table from me and Pete was to my left. I told them that I was familiar with their games but hadn't really played them because I didn't really have a PC. I told him that it was pretty much a choice for me between Morrowind and Ocarina of Time and picked the latter.

Pete said that Morrowind was optimized to run on pretty much anything, but Skyrim, their newest game would be pretty demanding on PC. I asked them about Fallout: New Vegas which turned out to be a big sore spot. They felt like upper management didn't trust them with the IP and didn't give them much of a choice. I was confused as the game looked like it shared a lot of assets. I had also commented that most of the popular mods for their games seemed to be adding visual effects like godrays and bokeh effects.

They clarified that they built the engine and a lot of the assets but another studio made the game and they just published it. I made an analogy to Majora's Mask, though they reminded me that was still first party Nintendo. I mentioned that Nintendo did let Capcom use the Zelda IP and Link's Awakening assets for the Oracle games, which Pete seemed interested in.

The discussion turned to a potential "side-quel" game for the next Fallout, which I was surprised was already in development. Pete mentioned that they had been experimenting with online and that it could be a good fit. He mentioned a recent trip to West Virginia and I chimed in with my own trip there.

There was mention of how quest content would work and I asked if their players were likely to roleplay between each other. They agreed and I suggested that they look to something like Space Station 13 as inspiration. They have crafting systems for everything including chems - which Pete said fit well with the Fallout IP. There was also discussion of several smaller cities and West Virginia's proximity to DC, the setting of Fallout 3.

I asked them why they didn't re-release Morrowind for newer consoles, and they said that there were a lot of problematic themes like rape and slavery prominent in their older games, even in Fallout 3. There was brief discussion about the Elder Scrolls Online, which they were also a bit irked at having to allow another studio to make. I said that it seemed for them to learn about how to run an online game and potentially serve as a platform to revisit the provinces people miss from their earlier games.

The conversation turned to mobile games, which was something I had a lot of interest in as a concept. I believed that mobile games would follow a similar trajectory to PC games as the hardware improved. Other than touch controls, the architecture was more or less the same, so a game could start its development cycle on significantly more advanced hardware than what was out at the time and by the end of its development cycle be higher quality than games developed on contemporary hardware.

There was a game, I believe that it was Infinity Blade, that was developed in Unity that I used as an example. It was pretty basic combat but it looked pretty. If that was something that fit their IP, a similar model could work. Todd mentioned plans for a management sim, which became Fallout Shelter. Pete mentioned also adding a town and quests to the game that ended up being Blades.

Around that point, I said that I had run into CIA people in the past in large cities and asked them if they had ever run into anyone like that. They said no, but then Todd got up and said he was going to get another round. He returned with drinks and I picked the one closest to him. As I drank it, I immediately felt the effects of hyocine and said so. Pete again said that he didn't know anything about that and, at that point, the others left and it was just me and Todd.

So I said to him that I guessed he was CIA. I asked him how he knew that I'd drink the one with the drugs in it and he clarified that he drugged all of them. I asked if the others would be okay. He said that they would be fine and all had drivers to get them home. He said that they would be better off than me.

He asked me where I was staying and I told him. I said that most of the time when I was drugged like that, I would just be left to leave, but he said that he liked to see it through. I wanted to stay to get another drink, but Todd didn't want to be recognized. He insisted that we walk back to my hotel.

On the way, he gestured for me to come look at the LA river basin. He said that a lot of films shot there and that I should go down to check it out. I realized that it was far too steep and that he was trying to get me to kill or injure myself. I sat down against the barrier and refused to look. He gave that up and told me to get up to go to my hotel. He tried to get me to cross the street into traffic, which I also resisted by hanging on to the crosswalk post.

When we got to the hotel, he asked my room number and said that he would be back. I went to my room and emailed myself the contents of my iPod Touch's notes, which included my flight number and terminal number as a reminder that this happened. I then laid down to try to combat the effects of the drug by centering myself. A few minutes later, Todd returned.

He had a bag from a pharmacy with razor blades. He started filling the bathtub with water and tried to convince me to slit my wrists. He said that the narrative of me meeting my favorite developers and then killing myself made sense. I reminded him that I hadn't really heard of any of them until tonight, which at the time I didn't realize was a lie.

I told him that it wasn't going to happen and to stop trying. I sat up on my bed and talked to him. I asked if he wanted to make out, to which he replied that he was married with two kids. I replied that I had a girlfriend and that I didn't know why I had asked him that. He said that he had heard that it was a side effect of the drug.

I told him that I'd survived being hunted in the streets of Brooklyn. He said that he'd done a hunt like that. I was furious at hearing this. I asked him if he loved his children. He said yes, that he read stories to them, tucked them in, and tried to be a good parent. I told him that every single person that he killed had people who loved them just as much, if not more. He said that he was starting to feel bad about that and I told him that he should.

Then, looking at him in his track suit, I realized who he was. I asked him slowly, if he had been a tour guide at William and Mary. He said yes, when he was there. I then asked him what he remembered about his recruitment. He said that he didn't remember much, but that they told him that he was ruthless. I let out a hollow laugh and told him that was a lie. He looked confused and I told him that I was there.

He had a vague recollection of there being children at the dinner. I told him that he was drugged and that the last thing he wanted to do was to kill his friend. He said her name and that she was the only girl allowed into chess club. I realized that he had loved her, at least as a friend and possibly more. He agreed.

I told him that every step of the "recruitment" he had tried to save her, up until the point where Jean directly ordered him to. Even then, he was crying and apologized. I asked him what they told him about why he was being recruited and he said that it was because he was the best at what he did. I told him that Jean said that it was because of he was of average intelligence and he wanted it enough so he was easy to manipulate. He was insulted, but I reminded him that was what they said. Intelligence wasn't a scale from 1-100; people are intelligent in different ways. I told him that his presence here was an indicator that he was at the top of his field.

He seemed conflicted. He asked me if I knew about the Reich. I tried to remember and recalled one time when Rick told me about it in high school then drugged me when I started freaking out. I told Todd that it sounded familiar. I asked him about it and he told me that they took him out to an island on a lake in Ohio and told him about how the Germans had won World War II and secretly invaded. I asked him if that meant he was a Nazi and didn't think that Jewish people were people.

He said that they believed that some people were more prone to be intelligent than others. He then mentioned his friend and coworker Adam Adamowicz as someone he knew who was Jewish and brilliant. He then mentioned that he had terminal lung cancer. I said that I was sorry to hear that, then asked him if he thought that the Reich had anything to do with him getting sick.

He didn't think so, but I said that it seemed like the kind of thing they would do. Artistic control over what they considered "their" projects seemed like a big deal to them. He did say that they had helped find two promising artists, one of which was already working with them. I asked him if Adam had family who died in the Holocaust. He said that he didn't know for sure, but probably. He said that he didn't know for sure, but probably. So I said, go against the Reich for him.

Todd initially balked at the idea, saying that he had killed people after his initiation. Competition for jobs and people eaten by the Reich. I told him that I think I might have eaten human flesh, too, and I think that I have caused people to be killed, but letting the Reich continue to run things wasn't the future for America.

He seemed to be on the fence, so I asked him if he thought that the Reich could remain a secret forever. If he thought it could then there really wasn't anything I could say about going against it that would sway him further. If he though that it would go public, then his choice was to either sink with it or have some semblance of a life after by helping to bring it down. That seemed to give him the resolve. He agreed.

We started talking about how the CIA had infiltrated the gaming industry and how it could be exposed or dismantled. He initially had the impression that this would be immediate but I told him that it was likely that it would take around ten years to gather enough evidence on something so complex and that we would need at least several politicians in both houses of congress to have enough momentum.

He asked me about a demo they were doing the next day, if he should get someone else to present it. I told him that he would still have to work there and keep up appearances to the CIA and Reich. He said that he might have trouble doing it, but I told him to look at this as a new mission.

One thing he suggested was bringing back the Wolfenstein franchise, which they had acquired with id software. He told me that the Reich specifically disliked it due to the nature of the IP.

He also agreed that it would be good to minimize harm to Bethesda and at the same time humble his cultivated rock star image by taking steps to show that other people worked there. He would do this by showing off more concept art, more of the people involved in the design process and putting other members of the studio out on stage.

We discussed in what ways the CIA had infiltrated the gaming industry and he said that he had a counterpart at Rockstar Games. One of the team members at BGS was CIA but not Reich. He also explained that the XBox architecture was built in a way that sent more data than was disclosed to the companies for analysis.

For example, Todd said, there was one quest in Skyrim that's design was inspired by an old spy recruitment test. The player was presented with three people, all of whom they're told deserve to die. The player is supposed to select one and kill them. If the player kills just one without interrogating any of them, that player is flagged as a recruitment prospect as they've indicated a willingness to kill but also follow orders. Their earlier games Morrowind and Fallout 3 had explicit psychographic tests as part of character creation.

I asked him if any of the mods that were built for their games were analyzed in this way. He said that none of them really matched the quality of their content in a way that would be useful for that. That sentence stuck with me after the wipe and inspired me to involve myself with the Skyrim modding community.

Todd said that he had some recollection of me being on the Daggerfall beta test forum on Compuserve. I was there as marIQ and accidentally outed him as a CIA agent at one point, which prompted a meeting where some of the BGS staff were spoken to and the thread that I posted in deleted. Ma'iq the Liar was named after me.

We discussed the overall trajectory of the game industry and how the CIA and Reich was encouraging crunch, erasure of individual achievements except for the few chosen, and it being a boy's club. Todd had ideas about how to expose some of that, specifically through a journalist at Kotaku.

As a test of their integrity, he would leak the setting of Fallout 4 to them. He figured that worst case, they don't respect anonymity of him as a source and he can justify it to management as a misguided viral advertising attempt. Best case, he now had a journalist to leak to.

He also shared that the Reich insisted that they use Jeremy Soule, a serial rapist who used his "encounters" as inspiration for the soundtrack for their games. He had already assaulted a woman who they worked with and swept it under the rug. I asked him if he thought he was likely to re-offend and he said yes.I suggested at that time they say that enough is enough and they tell the CIA that they're trying to run a business. That was the type of justification I'd seen work against Jean.

We discussed how he would keep notes about his other dealings with the Reich. He originally planned to keep records on his computer, but I convinced him to keep journals instead. Even if he was high up in the Reich, I didn't think that a digital record would be safe. He was concerned about his wife and kids finding a journal, but he determined that a hidden panel in his safe was the best place to keep them.

I also asked him if he planned to tell the other higher ups at BGS about the truth of the CIA and his role in it. He said that he might try to. He probably would drug them to be sure of their reaction before telling them everything.

The discussion then turned to the possibility that, after bringing everything to light, he may not be able to work in the game industry ever again. In that case, now would be the best time for him to make his dream game. He had one in mind - Starfield. He described it as Star Trek meets Star Wars. You start out in a Federation type organization, but once you get out there in space running maintenance missions in your shuttle, you find yourself in the midst of a Star Wars style galactic civil war where you are the chosen one.

I asked him how long the development cycle of the game would take - he said about ten years. I commented on the perfect timing of that. He said that it was more or less depending on what other games they made in the meantime. He said that the others seemed to like the idea of the online Fallout game so that would probably get made. The mobile Elder Scrolls game also seemed likely. He was concerned about ESO killing the franchise or at least overshadowing the possibility of an Elder Scrolls 6.

I told him that from a fan's perspective, the worst thing a franchise can do is disavow a work based on it as not up to par. He seemed to agree that they might need to set aside their personal feelings about ESO and maybe give them more resources than they would otherwise. It would also help to let fans know that this is more or less where the franchise will live for the next decade and that there will be an Elder Scrolls 6.

He mentioned that they would likely skunkworks it and also a Special Edition for Skyrim. We also discussed letting fans know an extended timeline of their future games to ensure that they know that Starfield and TES6 are coming eventually.

Towards the end of te conversation, he said that he would have to send me back to New York because he couldn't afford for me to remember and maybe run into him again. He set up a plane ticket for me at 10 am the next day. I was to check out around 9, then go to the terminal and say that the reservation is under CIA.

He also asked me for my passwords to clear out any emails and financial transactions related to my flight and trip I gave them to him, neglecting to mention the email in limbo that had my flight number. When he left, I told him to try not to kill anyone if he could avoid it, which I regret as it came out unintentionally glib.

I was upset that I would miss the presentations but he told me that they would be livestreaming them as well. I made a mental note of that and went to sleep. I woke up the next morning and took a car to the airport as instructed. I told the woman at the kiosk that my flight was under CIA, which confused her at first. She entered it in and the software took over her screen and brought up my flight info to her surprise. She asked me if I was an agent. I said no, that I was someone affected by them and that thy weren't as "cool" as they were made out to be. I flew back to NYC and watched the Skyrim demo on livestream. Todd seemed to be wearing the same red track suit as he had the night before.

In the following weeks I became engrossed in the Elder Scrolls and Fallout games, eventually becoming an influenctial figure in the modding community.

Chapter Twenty-Four

2012

Some time after Heather and I moved into the larger apartment, but before our wedding, I woke up in a haze. I realized that I was drugged and couldn't move. I believe that Heather had questioned me about how I felt about Becca and didn't like my answer. I could hear her talking to Margie in the living room over the phone through the door.

Heather was telling Margie that she could feel me slipping away from her. Margie suggested that she could put in a termination order for her but Heather would have to be the one to carry it out. Heather said that she had been having panic attacks from her initiation murder and had hopes that Becca would become a friend. Margie then suggested that she invite Becca over and drug her and tell her to have sex with me. In her experience (attempting to rape me after finding Super Taboo in my internet history when I was 14) the fantasy is always more appealing than reality.

Heather called Becca over and she arrived just a few minutes later. I was able to hear pretty much everything through the door. Heather gave her a glass of datura. She asked what it was and Heather cagily told her that she had to drink it before she told her. After she did, Heather told her that she wanted her to have sex with me. Becca responded that she didn't need anything to make that happen, she thought that I was hot.

At that point, Becca came in and closed the door behind her and started stripping off her clothes. I told her to wait and tried to explain to her what was going on, but she said that she was going to take full advantage of the permission she had been given. I convinced her to slow down and so she came over and sat next to me in the bed. I explained to her that she had been drugged and that it was affecting her judgment and memory. She told me that she wasn't feeling anything out of the ordinary when aroused and that she just wanted to make me feel good. She confirmed that she was attracted to me prior to being drugged.

I believed that she was in control of her actions, but told her that I still didn't feel comfortable having sex like this. She offered to fulfill a fantasy of something sexual that wasn't necessarily intercourse, to which I shared a fantasy of waking up to oral sex. She agreed and we played the fantasy out. Afterwards, she washed her face in the bathroom and left.

I went back to sleep briefly, but was woken up by Becca calling Heather on her cell phone. She asked if what had happened really happened. Heather denied it initially, but Becca said that she distinctly remembered putting on makeup earlier. Heather moved rooms so I couldn't hear the rest of the conversation. When I woke up, Heather asked me if I had remembered anything happening and if I was okay and my response was why shouldn't I be?

#

Heather and I went to a party at a house on the east side of the island. It was hosted by a middle-aged woman who I had not met before. There was a keg set up near the garage, but most of the people were in the main area of the ranch style house.

After around an hour, we were given cups of punch. I talked to some people for a bit, then the woman announced that there was a bedroom open if anyone wanted to have sex. A few people went in, including Becca, who I noticed left a few minutes after. I told Heather that I wanted to go in after I saw Becca go in but wouldn't without permission - Heather said that she had a headache which seemed to be a no, so I didn't. She was sitting with the woman, who I believe was a station chief or at least someone higher up than a regular agent.

Instead, I sat down to talk to people. I overhead Michael Wetzel tell another student that he should let him dissect his father's brain. He said that he had done it before and I asked if he worked with cadavers. He said that no, that he had taken someone who was talking to him at the grocery store and cut open their skull while they were still alive. I decided to take the opportunity to question him further.

I asked him how he got the person to come with him. He said that his family had a drug that he used that made them do whatever he told them to do. I asked if he had killed others and he said yes, he had a lot of different charts on brain structure and he was encouraged by his family to study them. I asked what he did with the bodies and he said that he buried them in the woods by his house. At that point, he stopped himself and asked me why he was telling me this; that it could get him in a lot of trouble.

I painted at his cup and told him that he was drinking the same drug he had access to. He got mad at me and I quickly replied that I hadn't drugged him, pointing at the woman who did. He went up to talk to her and returned, saying that she told him that no one would remember, so it was okay.

The next day, I asked the other person Michael Wetzel had been talking to if he remembered the conversation. He didn't, so I dismissed my vague recollection as a dream.

#

Heather was on her way back from her lab around the same time I was putting away laundry. When I put away her underwear, I noticed a black CIA memory wipe kit with two vials of scopolamine and a needle. At first I considered leaving it, but instead decided to confront her. I set it on the coffee table and waited a couple minutes for her to arrive home.

I asked her as she walked in where the fuck she had gotten a CIA memory wipe kit. She accused me of going through her things - I reminded her that she had asked me to put away laundry. I told her that this was a big deal and that the CIA had been following me my entire life and I would never be able to trust her unless she told me everything.

She claimed that she was first approached by a male agent at a conference or her school orientation. I asked what happened and she claimed that he looked up her name and told her that she was dating someone that they wanted to keep an eye on. She agreed when they offered to send her parents $500 monthly.

I asked if anyone else was recruited then, she said that she wasn't sure but named two others - Matt and Christie. I don't know if she was being truthful as she seemed to be lying about her recruitment. I told her that I would never marry her if she was still watching me, so she called her contact and told them that it was off. I told her that she had to drug me so that I wouldn't remember but she thought I just wanted the drugs. She was under the impression I was involved with heroin after I stumbled back drugged to a meetup in NYC. I told her that it was the same drug and they were going to kill me at that point but I talked my way out of it.

She let me take a vial of the drug and threw out the rest. A few days later, we went to a party at Tierra Farris's apartment where she drugged both Heather and I via drinks.

Chapter Twenty-Five

2013

Chapter Twenty-Six

2014

Chapter Twenty-Seven

2015

A few weeks after moving to New Jersey and beginning to work at Cambey & West again, Diane took me aside and told me that I needed to come into the office on Saturday. I initially thought that it was for work and told her I didn't expect to be working on Saturdays. She clarified that it wasn't optional and that it wasn't for work - it was for something CIA related.

I came in and sat at my computer, but was told to come outside. I was drugged and shoved in the back of an SUV. I woke up in a dark woodshed with a workbench, tools, and another person. He was dressed in a tight, formfitting workout outfit. I asked him where we were and he seemed confused.

I rephrased my question and he said New York City. I said it didn't seem like we were but I could tell that we had both been drugged. I asked his name and I replied that we would gt out of there, not exactly believing it myself. I asked him where they picked him up from and he said that he was exercising in his neighborhood.

At that point, an agent opened the door to the shed and told me that it was over and to follow him. They closed the door and left the other man in the shed. I was led into the house via a small back stairwell and into a main room. It was Alan Cambey's house and he, his wife Margo, and Music were waiting for me.

Alan said that he had brought me here to ensure that I wouldn't cause anymore trouble for his friend, gesturing at Music. I told him that I just wanted to work and I didn't want to cause trouble. At that point, dishes of food were brought out. He waited for me to see what was on my plate, then told me that it was the man from the shed and that the next time I cause a problem for them it would be me.

I didn't believe him because of the drug. I asked which part of the person it was because it didn't look like human flesh to me, not that I recalled what human flesh looked like. I also requested a beer in an attempt to play it cool. He had one brought out and said for the details about the meat, I would need to ask the chef. At that, Carla came out.

I said that I recognized her and she confirmed that she knew me as well. She said that the meat was from the man's shoulder. I tasted it and felt relieved for a moment - it didn't remind me of pork shoulder, they had to be lying, which I said. She said that she had ground it up and cooked it with some asparagus and shaoxing wine. I believed her then and set it aside.

I asked her if she was still having relationship problems and she sat down on Music's lap, said that they had worked it out and started making out with him and grabbed at Alan's crotch. I asked if Margo was okay with that and she said that he had far too much energy for her alone, and implied that he also had sex with their daughters and that she was okay with that.

I asked how they knew each other and Music said that they had met around 35 years ago and were safari buddies. I asked what they hunted and he gestured at my plate. I told them again that I just wanted to work. At that point, they let me go to my car that was parked outside to leave.

Instead of driving straight home, I found a police station and stopped there. The officer I spoke with was sympathetic, but told me that if they were CIA and he reported it, they would be notified first. The policy was that anything involving cannibalism or Nazis went to the CIA. I asked him why Nazis and he speculated that the CIA were experts on Nazis.

When I returned home, Heather asked me how the work thing was. I told her that no one from work was there, which she found odd.

Chapter Twenty-Eight

2016

Chapter Twenty-Nine

2017

I drove in to Brooklyn and parked on the East side of Bogart Street a couple of blocks from the venue. I attended the show and had one or two drinks at the bar over the course of the night. No one I knew well had attended, so I mostly kept to myself and used my phone.

At the end of the show, I was standing next to the tables between the bar and stairway down to the street. I noticed a man and woman on a date and overheard the man telling the woman how great the band was and she was clearly not interested. I thought it was a bit funny at first, until the man offered to get her a drink from the bar - practically insisting. She said that she didn't want anything, but agreed to a water when he insisted. This raised a red flag for me, so I kept him in the periphery of my eyesight.

When he got the water at the bar, he had his back to me for a moment and it looked like he was pouring something in it. His date eyed the glass when she got it and drank it. Her behavior immediately changed and he asked her if she wanted to get out of there and she agreed. I wasn't sure if she was drugged at first - they could have been acting differently towards each other for other reasons, but as the show was letting out, I followed them down the stairs.

At the sidewalk I worked up the nerve to ask her if something was wrong and the man immediately jabbed me in the arm with a needle of hyocine and told me to "Mind your own business." With that, I was positive that she had been drugged and much of my memory surrounding the CIA started to come back to me and I immediately sprang into action. I told him in as authoritative of a tone as I could muster that I was making it my business and demanded to know who his station chief was. He told me at first that he didn't know what I was talking about but he was clearly lying and confused as to why his drugs didn't work on me. I called bullshit when he denied it.

I asked him again who his station chief was and offered up the name Lampel. Who at the time was the only person in that role I could remember. At that he dropped the act and nodded and asked what he did wrong. I gestured to the woman and said that he drugged her and was clearly going to rape her. She was watching on but not talking. He told me that he was only doing as he was told to do in training.

I asked him what they told him in training and he said that they were told that because they were protecting America that they could take what they wanted. They just had to give whoever they desired the drug first so that they would "understand" and not remember the moment afterwards. I made up a lie that there were other schools of thought on this in the CIA and I was part of a faction that didn't see it the same way. I gave him my name and told him to call his station chief if he didn't believe me or had any questions.

I turned to the woman and asked her if I could call her a cab or something. She slowly said, "Maybe, I'm feeling out of it." The thought struck me that she was in too vulnerable of a state to put in a car or with a stranger and offered my hand, telling her I was parked nearby and could drive her home. She took it and I rushed her to my car, looking back to see if we were being followed. We didn't seem to be.

When we got in my car, I told her that she should shut off her phone because that was how the CIA could track us. She did and I asked her for her address to input into my GPS. I asked her if he knew where she lived and she said that she had him pick her up from a friend's address for safety. I asked her if there was someone home at her apartment and she said yes, her roommate.

I drove carefully to the apartment building in Astoria and when we go there, I told her to go inside, tell her roommate what had happened and that if she had any questions that I would wait. I asked her to tell her to come out and confirm to me that she had gotten in safely. She left and a couple minutes later, her roommate came out and angrily asked what I had done to her friend.

My first instinct was to be defensive but I took a second and thought about how what the woman explained to her would have sounded. I backtracked and explained that I had witnessed her date slip something in her drink. That I had seen the drug before being used by the CIA and that I had interceded and wanted to make sure that she got back safely and did not go out on another date with that man again. She didn't quite believe me and asked if she should be calling the police on me. I said that if she talked to her friend that she could confirm everything and that I would wait and not leave. I asked her just to not leave my car door open so a rat wouldn't jump in as my car was enough of a mess already.

She went back insite and came out shortly after entering. Her roommate had already gone to bed, but she said that based off what she said, how I was responding, and how her friend was wearing several layers that didn't look to be messed with that she at least believed that I didn't do anything to her. She said that she wasn't sure about the CIA part, but thanked me for getting her friend back safely. She asked if I twas okay to drive and talked with me until I was.

I insisted that the CIA weren't what people thought they were and that people in government really needed to get them under control. She mentioned that she had actually just been nominated by her brother to run for congress against an incumbent. I told her that I'm sure she would be a good candidate and she replied that I couldn't know that because I didn't know her views. I laughed and said that was a fair point. I always assume that younger politicians are generally on the left even though I know that's not always the case.

I asked her what her political beliefs were and she said that they were coming at her opponent from the left. She said that she would be running against Representative Joe Crowley, a Democrat. I asked what group was running against a Democrat and she clarified that it was a primary challenge coming from the Democratic Socialists. She said that she had worked for Bernie Sanders. I expressed that I supported him in 2016 and felt that he would have won against Trump in the general election. She said that she wasn't as sure - but it did start a movement of challengers from the left.

She mentioned that she was in the process of figuring out how she would campaign and said that she usually goes by Sandy Ocasio-Cortez. I commented that she had three names so she could abbreviate to initials and she clarified that she had a middle name - her last name was just hyphenated. I asked her what her first name was and she clarified that it was Alexandria. I made a comment that AOC sounded better than SOC and we discussed a bit of how she planned to campaign. I asked her if she did make it into Congress to do what she could about looking into the CIA.

She offered to let me use the restroom before I left. I briefly came in and met her boyfriend before using the facilities and driving home. I stopped at State Line Diner on the way home, as well.

#

I had driven in to the city to see World/Inferno Friendship Society open for a Slackers Christmas show. After World/Inferno's set, I left early and dropped off Kevin Rankin in Astoria. I drove back to Suffern and parked in a lot downtown to walk around and play Pokemon Go, when a man with a pickup truck waved me over. I cautiously approached and he asked me if I had gone to high school with Vanessa Beuschel.

I said that I had and he asked my name, which he seemed to already know. He entered it into a handheld device that I recognized as being used by the CIA. He said that I was on a protected list but that shouldn't be an issue because he wasn't planning to hurt me. He asked me if I was willing to help her. I asked if she was in trouble and he assured me that she was fine. He asked if I would do her a favor and I said that I'd do anything for her. He said that he was glad to hear that and gestured me to his truck. I went towards the back to go around to the passenger side and felt a needle jab me in the neck. My legs gave out and he scooped me into the back of the truck and pulled over the bed cover.

I gained consciousness when the car was going over a gravel road. It felt instantaneous but it must have been a half hour or so. The car stopped and he came around to get me out. I was able to walk and he guided me into a house and sat me down on the couch in the living room. He explained that he and Vanessa were together and she wanted to have a kid and he did too, but could not bring himself to have a child that was biologically his in case he, as a station chief, had to make a decision that might put that child at risk.

I told him that I didn't really feel comfortable with that and that if it was something that would put the child at risk, it would be something that would put Vanessa at risk and I didn't want that either. He then explained that it was his job to make those sorts of calls and that he hoped that he never needed to but couldn't allow himself to potentially have a conflict of interest. I asked him what job he had that was so important. He said that he would only tell me because I would forget and said that he was a station chief.

Knowing that I would likely remember at some point, I used the opportunity to ask him about the structure of the CIA. I already knew about the role of architect so I asked him about how many station chiefs there were and how they operated. He said that there were around 70 spread out over the US and they used agents and assets to monitor local businesses for potential threats. I asked him what would be so big that he would have to risk their lives and he vaguely referred to a potential natural disaster or disease.

I then asked him how he met Vanessa and if he had been ordered to hook up with her by Music or someone else higher up. He said no, that he had met her at a bar. I then asked him why it was me specifically that he had picked up and he said that he had asked Vanessa if there was anyone else other than him that she had wanted to potentially have a child with and she told him about me. I said that didn't really sound like information that she would readily offer up and he confirmed that he had drugged her.

I said that it sounded like he was trying to give her as close as possible to what she wanted and he nodded. I told him that Vanessa knew me for a very long time and that she would recognize the child as mine, which he dismissed by saying that we had similar enough features. I asked him if I could talk to her and ask her what she thought about it and he said only if I agree, so I agreed.

He brought her down the steps through the kitchen and said that I was here for her. He set a kettle on the stove and set a timer, as he put it, to evoke a dreamlike quality to the encounter. He seated her on the couch next to me and I asked her if she knew what he was asking me to do. She said that she did. I said that as long as she knew this was real and not a dream, I would do it for her and she agreed.

We had sex on the couch and after it was done, Steven took her back upstairs and turned off the stove. He then drugged me again and put me in the back of his truck and drove me back to my car. I didn't feel safe going back to my apartment via car because I wasn't as familiar with the roads, so I asked him to instead drop me off at my parents' house. I slept in my old bedroom after taking a shower.

Chapter Thirty

2018

Some time after the holidays, my memory of the events of December 23rd resurfaced. As I tried to reconstruct the events of the night in my head, I realized that I had to have my cell phone location history on the night I was kidnapped because I was playing Pokemon Go. I realized that it was on the night that I was kidnapped. I pulled it up in my web browser and found the closest address on Maps. I drove to the area which was only about a half hour away and found the house. I parked nearby and went up to ring the doorbell and Vanessa answered the door.

She was surprised to see me and I told her that I had been there before. She said that I hadn't and I described the layout of the building and that I had sat on the couch. She looked a bit confused but said that she would make some lemonade and we could figure it out. In the meantime, she called one of the workers on the farm to give me a tour.

He said that he was just about to fix something to the left of the house and told me to walk ahead of him. I did so, and ass soon as we were out of site from the porch, he knocked me to the ground from behind and pulled a gun on me. He asked me who I was and what I was doing here. I asked him if he was going to shoot me and he said that he didn't have authorization to. I told him that I was a friend of Vanessa's and her reaction should have proved that.

He said that I wasn't authorized to be there and that he was going to drug me and Vanessa and told me to never come back. He asked me how I found the place and he deleted my Google Maps history.

#

I texted Vanessa at some point earlier in the year about Saturday Night Live; the January 27th episode with Will Ferrell. Growing up, we had used to talk online every Saturday and watch it together from our respective homes. We continued to exchange texts throughout the year, though I had no recollection at that point of my two visits to the farm. She said that she would be visiting her family for Easter and she would have some time to meet up. She mentioned at that point that she was pregnant, which I congratulated her on.

We met at the Airmont Diner and had lunch. Afterwards, in the parking lot, I noticed that she was planning to walk back to the Howard Johnson she was staying at with Steven. She invited me in and I sat on one of the beds while she used the restroom.

As I waited, I casually looked around and noticed a CIA memory wipe kit on top of a "tool kit" which I know from first-hand experience is meant to be used to dismember people piece by piece or, if they're lucky, torture them. I froze up and as soon as she came back in the room I pointed it out to her and explained how and where I'd seen that sort of stuff before. She said that it was just something Steven had for his job and before I could prevent her, she called for him from the other room. When he came in and saw me and heard her explanation of what I had said, he sighed and said that he must have underestimated our pre-existing relationship.

We were both confused at what he meant by this and he explained that the child Vanessa was carrying was mine, unless she had any flings in the meantime. She started to cry and I asked her if she knew about this. She shook her head and said that she had no idea.

Steven took out the memory kit and injected me first. I asked him if it would hurt the baby if he used it on Vanessa and he said that it wouldn't. She allowed him to inject her too. He then said that he would give us a half hour to say goodbye and that I wasn't to contact her again because she would be busy raising a child. We talked while drugged briefly, then I left.

#

At most WIFS shows in the city, I usually met with my friend Kevin Rankin and this show wasn't much different. At the venue, I was hungry, so I ordered a meal at the bar with a beer. I talked to Kevin about a few things, then brought up that I had been kidnapped and forced to impregnate Vanessa. I don't think I recalled the full event, but as soon as I mentioned that something like that had happened, he produced a vial of hyocine from his cargo pants pocket.

I was shocked and asked him where he had gotten it. He said that a few months prior, he had been approached by someone at his apartment. He was offered $500 a month to become a CIA agent. He had to kill someone "he barely knew" and was given the opportunity to kill people, something you normally had to be in the army to do. I was appalled and told him that wasn't legal. He said that the person who recruited him said that it was and that they made the laws.

He then told me that they said if I ever mentioned a child to drug me. He offered to let me orally injest it because I was a friend. He handed it to me and I sighed and poured it into my beer, but the bartender noticed. He called out to Kevin and I, then Kevin went over and drugged him via needle with his second vial. He told him to go home sick and he did.

The rest of the show was uneventful, save for Kevin following up to see if I remembered anything, which I didn't.

#

During the summer, I saw an event that some mutual friends were going to for a baby shower for Vanessa. I was confused as to why I hadn't heard about it and after thinking it over, I was able to recall that it was my child. I only had a vague recollection of Steven's involvement, but I knew that he was CIA and that I would be watched if I came close to her, so I devised a plan.

I purchased a gift for the baby - a plush Star Trek Enterprise-D with Worf and Picard - and wrapped it up. I had my sister Laura drive me up to Wendy's and take my cell phone with her so I couldn't be tracked. I walked the rest of the way to Vanessa's parents' house and hid in the woods behind it to get an idea of who was home. They had large, woods facing windows, which made that task easy.

When I was fairly sure that her parents were the only people there, I walked into the open and signaled her father who was on the computer downstairs. He called her mother on the phone intercom and they both came out.

I explained to them that I wasn't sure how, but I knew that the baby was mine. I told them that Steven had something to do with it and that they shouldn't trust him. They rebuffed me and said that Steven seemed like a fine young man and that whatever thing that happened when we were drinking didn't matter and that the child would never know that I was his father.

I begged them and explained that it wasn't while we were drinking and told them that I genuinely couldn't remember what had happened. I was someone they knew forever and I thought they would believe me. I realized that I wasn't getting through to them and was going to leave, but they insisted that I come inside. They had a memory kit waiting for me and told me that I would stay, say congratulations to Vanessa, shake Steven's hand, and leave. I was terrified - I didn't want him to know that I had come. He was the whole reason I didn't bring my phone with me.

They brought me inside and took out a memory kit. I told them that drug was involved in whatever happened but they ignored me and made me take a dose. They threw out the gift, telling me that I would have no influence on the child's life. They made me wait for Vanessa to arrive and I hugged her, said congratulations, and shook Steven's hand then left.

#

I was at my apartment when I received a text message from my mother telling me that Vanessa was there with a baby. I didn't recall anything at that point but some part of me wondered if I was the father. I told Heather that I had to go to my parents for a family emergency.

When I got to my parents, it was dusk. I came in through the back entrance and was greeted by my parents who told me that Vanessa was there. She was on the front porch in hospital clothes holding a newborn baby. She told me that he was my son.

At first I asked her how that was possible but realized pretty much immediately that she had no reason to lie to me and she had clearly gone through an ordeal to get to my parents' house. I told her that I didn't remember how it had happened but if she said he was my son, then he was my son.

She said that one of the drugs they gave her during the birth had triggered recall of the memory of everything that had happened. Because she remembered and wanted to leave him, Steven was going to send her somewhere, to in effect, keep her a prisoner through the CIA while she raised the boy. She didn't want to go and she didn't even want to be with him anymore because of what he had done. She came to me because she trusted me and as the father I might be able to do something.

My parents didn't seem to indicate that they knew anything about the CIA other than as a government agency. I knew that once they did come, they would have drugs to make them talk that I could somewhat resist. I told Vanessa that they likely tracked her here by her phone, so we would have to get her and our son somewhere safe that they wouldn't think to check. I figured that it was unlikely that they would check in all the houses in the neighborhood, so I walked with her up the block to the house of John and Jean Chambers, the parents of one of my childhood best friends.

I explained to them that she was running from a bad situation and that if they could keep her safe for a couple of days, I would come for her and our son and get her further away. They were surprised but welcomed her in and helped get her warm. I walked back to my parents and the CIA arrived shortly after.

They drugged me and I bluffed that I had no idea where Vanessa was and that she left her phone with us and got in a white car and left. They said that they picked up the friend with the car at the on-ramp for the New York State Thruway and I told them that meant that she could be anywhere between there and here and they'd have to check everywhere. As they questioned me, one of them got a radio message that they had found them. I deflated, feeling that I had failed them.

Sitting up on the front steps of my parents' porch, I was approached by a woman with short hair. I recognized her as the same woman who I had spoken with in the aftermath of the Cambey Wedding shooting. She introduced herself as a person who was there to analyze what had gone wrong. I told her that the boy wasn't even Steven's son - that he was my son and that Vanessa had remembered and was going to be locked away for it. The woman said that information was useful and while he wouldn't be demoted, the CIA would likely give Vanessa the farm and give them couples counseling and a divorce, if that was what she wanted. I wouldn't be allowed to see my son, but Vanessa would at least be closer to freedom.

They checked their devices and determined that my mother and I would both be drugged, but not my father. After they drugged me, I asked him why. He said that he sold heroin in Black and Puerto Rican neighborhoods in the 70's for the CIA. He didn't elaborate on his role within the organization or our family's connection at that time.

Around two months later, on October 28th, they made a post on social media about the birth of the child, and because I didn't remember any previous interactions I took that date as the actual birthday.

Chapter Thirty-One

2019

I went to a World Inferno show and was surprised to see Ralph there as he hadn't RSVP'd on the Facebook event like I had seen him do for the recent Jersey City show at White Eagle Hall. I didn't recognize Paige, so I introduced myself to her. She said that we had met before and that she had given me something to drink. She asked me what it was.

I initially cracked a joke about it being something that affected my memory but she didn't visibly react. I then said that if it wasn't alcoholic, it would have been either diet soda or water. She seemed satisfied by my answer to which I replied that was good. I didn't ant her to dump my body in a river or something.

She looked concerned when I said that and asked me why I would phrase it in that way. I said that there was a river nearby but I remembered that she had said that to me nearly a decade ago. Ralph offered me a drink and said that they wanted to ask me questions about something. The drug should work in a way that past uses would also be erased from my mind.

I drank it and Ralph took me aside. He wanted to know if I had any insights into Claire Saffitz, who had recently started dating Harris. Apparently, she had been at one of her favorite restaurants and pretty much took him home after his shift in the kitchen one night. I wasn't clear as to why he was asking me. He reminded me that I had hooked up with Claire around a decade prior.

I told him from what I remembered it seemed like Claire wanted to have something for herself. If the CIA was as overbearing on her as they had been, her taking home Harris was an act of rebellion against them. She knew what she wanted and so she took it. Ralph said that the CIA's concern was that he wasn't an asset they controlled and they weren't sure if he was being influenced by foreign powers. I told him that I doubted he was being influenced and their best bet was to keep her happy by letting her do what she wanted.

He shared with me that Claire had asked for guarantees that I was alive after the walk-in freezer incident. It had been tough for the CI to provide proof of life since I rarely posted photos on Facebook.

Ralph also mentioned that he was engaged now and that I knew what that meant. I pretended to not and that I knew what that meant. I pretended to not and replied with something about his whole life being stretched out ahead of him. He seemed disappointed, but didn't push the conversation. They left shortly after.

#

I had a brief conversation with Diane Cuellar about this the following workday. She said that it was probably nothing to worry about and that agents like to check in from time to time. She mentioned that they had access to a safe house if I ever needed protection as part of my employment there.

#

I received a text message late at night with a picture of my son from Vanessa. She then called me shortly after to confirm that he was mine. I took some time to talk with her and process the information. The call was relatively short, I don't recall if it was prematurely ended.

Around a half hour later, there was a knock at the door. It was Kevin Meyer, who was there to drug me because both people on the call were supposed to be drugged. This was my first time meeting him - he mentioned that he was a therapist and asked to talk to me for a bit as the drug took effect. He came inside and I opened a beer to have with the drug.

Vanessa and I had discussed a gift of Star Trek pez dispensers on the phone. I think that I said that they were Star Wars ones as a test to see if she remembered what she had really gotten me or as a warning that the line wasn't secure. Kevin asked me about that and I told him. When I told him that it would be hard for me to forget that I was a father he told me to appreciate what I had.

#

Shortly after the visit at the WIFS show, I was at the Doylestown apartment setting up furniture when I head the doorbell. It was Paige, who I didn't recognize at first but eventually did. I asked if Ralph was with her and she said that he wasn't. I said that I didn't want to meet with a friend's girlfriend alone, but she said that it was fine. She was on her way to take care of some things in Washington DC and wanted to talk with me, so I relented and invited her in.

She asked for a tour and so I showed her around. When we got upstairs, I said that was where I would be working remotely. At that point I recalled that Cambey & West was for people affected by the CIA and mentioned that and she seemed satisfied and said, "So you do remember."

I said yes, that I remembered bits and pieces but that I really didn't want to remember anything that I wasn't supposed to. I tried to assure her that I wouldn't be telling anyone. I don't know if she believed me, but she left.

A few days later, she returned with a male agent and a form. At first I only let Paige in but they said that both would need to enter to have the conversation. The form was a contract stating that all of my assets would be seized if I ever disclosed anything about the CIA to anyone. I asked if this was enforceable and then immediately replied of course it was. After signing it, I was given a vial to split with Heather so that I wouldn't remember.

In the conversation held prior to taking the vial, I also asked if they were interested in recruiting for the game industry and she said that I would have to kill someone if I did. I replied that I couldn't do that. I did offer to react to Ralph killing Trump on social media, but that wasn't part of their planned narrative. I told her I'd rather he not but if he did, he did.

A few days later, Paige returned. I was surprised to see her again so recently since I had signed the form. She said that I wasn't in danger but that she wanted to talk to me about Ralph because she was having trouble. She asked for a restaurant suggestion and I suggested either Panera or Bacco Bistro. She invited me to her car and as soon as I sat down, she jabbed me in the left thigh with a needle. I told her that she was like a cat but she said that she saw herself as more of a scorpion. She drove us to Bacco and we took a table near the back. I ordered an eggplant parm, she ate the fried dough appetizer - she said that they reminded her of zeppolis.

She said that she was having trouble convincing Ralph to undertake his assignment. The Last Jedi line about winning by saving what you love had resonated with him. I told her that, full disclosure, I felt the same way about it. We were approached by a waiter asking if there was something shady about what we were discussing and I replied that it was about boyfriend trouble. Paige quickly "clarified" that it was about my boyfriend. When he left us alone, she said that she was going to be all over the news in a few months and didn't want him to remember her face.

I asked her what would happen if she and him ran and she seemed to consider this before dismissing the notion. I told her that Diane had access to safe houses, but that they were probably not usable by her and Ralph. I then mentioned that I had a friend who had been in hiding from the CIA and who had moved to Brooklyn when Paige stopped me and said that sounded familiar. She told me to try to remember where she was originally and I said New Brunswick and the friend was Anastasia. She recalled that she had put me on that assignment. She then dismissed the possibility, she couldn't live like that even if it was possible.

She mentioned that Ralph had made a lot of his thoughts about the potential assassination about his niece and not wanting to make the world worse for her. I asked her if she thought about using that relationship in some way, not hurting her but using her or his feelings for her as leverage. She was shocked that I would suggest that - it was clear that she saw something of herself in the child. I apologized, but she said that it did give her an idea as to how to approach the issue.

At that point, the conversation turned to me remembered about being hunted by Tom Hanks and other aspects of my previous interactions with the CIA. I told her that Music, the Eastern Architect, was allowing those kind of activities to happen and he even had a scale model of the Amistad - showing that he really didn't consider black people to be people. I told her that the people who had run the hunt used hyocine and she said that a lot of groups did.

I tried a different tack - telling her that from what I knew about the structure of the CIA it was divided into three districts - or gaus - and there were around 70 listening stations - the same number of divisions as the German American Bund. She said that lots of groups had structures like that. She also mentioned that she was aware of other "countries" within the US, so it's likely that some knowledge of the Reich's existence is part of training.

I then had the revelation that I had a son with Vanessa. I recalled the helicopters searching the area on the night she had made her escape from the hospital and that it was a station chief that had me impregnate her. She asked me if the agency knew and I said that they had to know, since they used their resources to track her down. I hadn't heard from Vanessa since then. She said that she would look into it.

At that point, she suggested that I go to the grocery store for a bit and I did. I forgot pretty much everything that had happened until the waiter, who had asked if we were criminals stopped me near the entrance of Acme. He said that Paige had made everyone except for some of the back of house staff drink from a pitcher she had drugged. He asked what it was and I said that it would make him forget what had happened. He said that he had made a voice memo which I suggested that he delete. He also gave me his number.

When I got back, it was over an hour and a half later. Diane called me about something and I mentioned that an agent had visited me, so she told me to take the rest of the day off.

#

On a Saturday while Heather was at work, a woman came to my door and told me it was about my son. She told me to tell

Heather that there was a family emergency and to leave my phone there. I left with her and asked her for some proof that I wasn't about to die. She let me call Rick and Margie who had been told to say that I was with them. She then said to not push my cover too hard or it would break.

It was around an hour drive, maybe less. Vanessa was waiting for me on the porch. I was surprised that she remembered everything as I had been told that she was going to be drugged. She said that she hadn't really been wiped yet but she was currently drugged. We spent the rest of the day spending time with each other and I tried to get to know our son but he was a bit shy and she told me to say that I was a friend of hers because he wasn't allowed to know me as his father.

One thing that I learned there was that Jean had visited. There was a picture of Vanessa along with Jean and Steven's mother. I froze when I saw it and asked her about it. She said that she said that she was Steven's grandmother and that her name was Jean, but she didn't think it was possible that she was the same Jean.

We went to her bedroom and had sex and talked for the rest of the evening. I remembered that she was amazing at remembering directions, so I gave her public transportation instructions to my apartment and wrote the apartment number on a scrap of paper that I hid behind the photo. If she ever needed to escape, she had directions.

She said that she was mostly happy there so far. The CIA had forced her parents to sell their house and move in with her after her escape attempt after our son's birth. She was responsible for planning the crops and determining what to grow where.

I spent the night and the next morning made a failed attempt at scrambled eggs. The same woman brought me back to the Doylestown apartment after. She confiscated any paper I had written things down on and privately told me that I should keep some sort of journal.

#

After meeting with Paige at Bacco's and my visit to Vanessa seeing the picture of Jean, I knew that I had to confront her. I called her early in the week and suggested that I come down for a visit and cook them a nice vegetarian meal with a "meat" sauce based off Malvina's recipe. They agreed and I booked my flight for later that week.

I don't recall which airline I flew down with, but when I got to the terminal, I was greeted by a driver. I asked when I went with him if he was a limo service and he gave me a noncommittal answer. After I arrived at their house, I put my bag in the center room and walked over to a grocery store for the ingredients I needed. When I came back and started cooking, they were gone for a bit of time which gave me an opportunity to case the joint.

I checked the refrigerator and cabinets, not finding anything. Then, I went to Jean's room and checked the TV stand. There were rows and rows of vials. My stomach tightened. I knew what I needed to do. I grabbed four of them and made my way to the kitchen. I pulled out the blender, ice, and campari and made a mixed drink along the lines of a Negroni with the drug and a couple of splashes of gin for flavor. I left it in the pitcher and put the empty vials in the empty bags from the Gardein meatballs I had used. I shoved it down into the garbage.

I suddenly remembered that Richie slept with his Navy side-arm under his pillow, so I rushed to his room and carefully lifted it by the bottom and kept it pointed at the ground. I slid it under the liquor cabinet just as Jean and Richie returned.

The table was set and I served the food. Then, and I was careful to do this in full sight of Jean, I poured the contents of the blender into three glasses equally. When we sat down. I made a big show of drinking mine. I ate and made small talk and waited for them to drink, and they did. I knew more or less how the drug affected me, so I was able to retain control.

I asked them how they felt and Jean replied that she was light-headed and asked me if I put anything in the food. I replied no, but I did put something in the drinks. She was shocked, stating that I drank it too. I nodded, then took another swig. I replied that I liked to party and I assumed that came from her side of the family, recalling the man from the OTO who said that I was either descended from Goebbels or Hitler. I remembered Stephen Miller and the book.

I told her that the CIA had been following me around my whole life and I needed answers as to why. I had remembered asking them in 2005 and how they drugged me then. Jean asked me what I expected to get and I said that I would question them both, then leave and let them forget. Jean said that I hadn't considered the fact that the place was wired up, gesturing to the intercom system on the wall behind me.

I asked her how long I had and she replied a half hour, immediately after which she questioned why she answered me, as that was her only leverage. I asked her if she had ever been on the drug and she said no. I replied that she would have to tell the truth and it was very effective at getting to that.

Richie said that he needed to go to the bathroom and I replied that there was a garbage can in the corner. He then said that he could hold it. I told him that it sounded like he didn't really need to go. He replied that he was an old man and he didn't want to be put through the indignity of that at which I allowed him to use the bathroom in the hall. He did, while I waited. I turned back to the dining room.

A couple minutes later, he came back from the hall asking what I did with it. I asked if he meant his gun and he said yes and I replied that it was somewhere safe. He insisted on knowing where it was and told me that I didn't know how to handle a gun. I humored him and told him exactly where it was and he seemed somewhat satisfied.

I told both of them that I didn't want anyone to get hurt and Jean said that she couldn't guarantee that. I told her that my heart sank when I found the drugs and that I loved them and just needed answers. Jean said fine, that I would have to learn about it eventually but I should have just asked. She struggled to compose herself and began to speak.

"My father," she paused, "was Adolf Hitler." My immediate reply was that it wasn't possible. Then I realized that she couldn't knowingly lie. It was her first time being drugged and she hadn't been able to resist it before. I had assumed that he died in 1945 as history books recorded but she said no, that was American propaganda. I asked if he was still alive and she replied that he died in the 70's. I processed this information for a moment.

I asked her how the CIA came into this. She said that the UK had been defeated after the blitz and a surrender had been negotiated. Around the same time, FDR's doctor had poisoned him and, after his death, the Reich called Harry Truman and had Dwight Eisenhower negotiate the full and unconditional surrender of the United States of America. In the years following the war, the CIA was established as the agency through which the Reich would act through. The other post-war departments were also part of the Reich's design.

As she spoke, I used my cell phone to look up the things that she was talking about. I also tried to remember things I had frogotten so that I could directly or indirectly question her. My recall of historical events was somewhat disjointed. I forgot the year in which World War 2 had ended. My recollections that follow are roughly in the same order in which the events occurred

As it sunk in that this was real, I began to ask direct questions.

"Are there aliens?"

"If there are, they haven't reached out to us."

I pressed her for more information and she claimed that they had seen signs of things in the upper atmosphere but they had never been able to launch something close enough to see it. I don't recall if I asked about Roswell but I remembered that when I was a child she confirmed that was a crashed Soviet flight using genetically engineered children as the pilots. The genetic engineering dimension was why the crash was covered up - they didn't want people to realize what could be done with such methods.

I asked if Heather's new job had anything to do with her, as it was sudden and higher paying that anything she had been offered in the past. She dismissively said that Heather's job wasn't "real". I asked if that meant that Heather was drugged at work or in on it but she clarified that it was mostly work that was mostly clerical in nature. She said that Heather was fired from her previous job because she was a klutz. I asked if she would have opportunities there and she said of course, she wanted to see her succeed because she was her blood. She said that the founder was someone who helped them develop genetic testing.

I asked her if by blood she meant because she and I were married. She said no. I asked if she meant because she lived in America and was white. Again, no. She then clarified that Heather was one of thousands of children created in a lab using her eggs and Tony's sperm and I was, too. She told me that when Hitler was crowned king or emperor or whatever, the Reich used various means to spread their genetic material in an assertion of victory. The people would be their genetic descendants and would, in their hopes, think similarly to them.

I asked if Heather knew about any of this. She said that she was my handler at one point but stopped - I recalled the phone call after I found her memory wipe kit. She was wiped and didn't seem to have any recollection. I asked her if they had done something similar with Hitler's sperm but she said that unfortunately, they hadn't collected any genetic material from him before his death. I asked her if she had any brothers or sisters and she confirmed that I met them.

I recalled Aunt Angela watching Golden Girls on the couch and realized in shock that she was Angela Merkel - widely seen as the most steady and progressive politician in the Western world. I asked her the others and she said Vladimir Putin, Boris Johnson, and a name I can't recall. The last one she said is in Germany in the medical wing of the government. I had met them at a memorial for their brother who had died of a heart attack in the 90's.

I questioned why Merkel was seen as progressive and Jean dismissed that as just an act. She was just a better politician than her. I asked her why she wasn't running things here, then and Jean said that she wasn't a citizen. She said that they were all born to people who supported their ideology. She also said that there were many others but the recognized Six were part of an "organ" called the Seven Headed Dragon, along with their father. Their goal was to destroy all the nations of the Earth and replace them with an eternal Reich.

I asked about Putin, if that meant that the whole Cold War was a hoax. She said no, that was real and he helped them win it. I asked about Boris Johnson, who I had the impression wasn't in a position to help anyone win anything - she said that they were helping him and expected him to be the next Prime Minister.

I asked about an article I found on my phone about a bank account in Switzerland that could be claimed by an heir to Hitler. She said that it was a trap set to draw in any children that they didn't know about. I asked her if there were other leaks, after seeing that Merkel was speculated online to be Hitler's daughter. She said that there had been a few recently. She mentioned that Eva Braun's underwear had ended up in a thrift shop in Ohio. A video had also leaked of CERN sacrificing a child that they had given them. She also said that one of the house staff at his home had leaked a photo of his corpse in 1974.

#

gettyimages
Kurt Hutton
3301370

#

I asked when he died and what happened to Eva Braun. She said that he died overnight between September 8th and 9th in 1974. The Reich held a day of mourning on September 11th. Many of the men, including Ernest Handwerker, joined the Elk's Clubs and there was mourning in the Reich. She said that she hated Eva Braun because she always insisted on being called mother and made her do chores, so when her father died, she drugged her and dropped her off in a city with nothing but the clothes on her back. She said that she was wearing a sweater.

I asked about the Reich and its locations. She said that Hitler had lived in Centerville on an island in the middle of town. When they were choosing a location for the Reich's capital, he wanted something in the middle of America. There was also a nearby historical site that the Reich associated with a snake cult that they believed was ancient and global.

On the smaller island in Centerville, there was a statue of Hitler surrounded by German children. She said that there were Reich towns all across America, mostly in the Midwest and mostly in the shadow of larger cities. She referenced an incident where I found on Encarta Atlas that Rhine was one of the most common street names in America by saying there were as many Reich towns as there were streets by that name.

I pulled up the items sh mentioned on my phone as we talked. The CERN video was clearly real - she explained that they said that it was a prank and, importantly, referred to the sacrifice as a woman even though it was clearly a child. They covered it up by claiming it was a prank and only firing the man who took the video. The picture of dead Hitler was easy enough to find and Vice had an article about Eva Braun's panties.

I asked about the cannibalism, not recalling my previous exposure to it. She said that they started to eat human flesh after their victory in the war. They had sacrificed hundreds or thousands of children in the 30's in an attempt to summon the Moonchild - her - and continued to do so for each of their spells. She said that they sacrificed 5 or 6 per year - one for each of the members of the dragon. They would also eat adults - usually enemies but sometimes just for fun. I knew that she killed more than that but didn't recall just how many.

I asked her if I was the Messiah - something one of the Thelema adherents I had spoken to suggested. She said that it was up to her, that there were many candidates but she had the authority to name which one would be presented as such. I asked her if the children were considered as well and she said not really. So far, I was the only one of them to show any sign of potential divine powers. She claimed that she had them as well because she was the Moonchild.

She admonished me, saying that I hadn't been an angel either, bringing up the accused rape and later murder of Stacey Herbison. I protested, telling her that it wasn't intentional, that Seth had taken my words incorrectly, not recalling my mother's involvement. I recalled the judge and my parents' interference and recalled that he was the same judge that dismissed the charges against Rick. She also said that they had interfered with the investigation and had it quickly ruled a suicide.

She said that the judge had been in the Navy, so Richie had approached him for a favor. She said that they used people in the military to cover for things like that. Eva Braun's panties were another case where they brought in someone to cover for them.

I told her that I had found out about my youngest son. She said that they couldn't have found a better heir if they had tried - he had strong Bavarian genes from Vanessa. I asked her if she engineered the conception. She said no, that was all Steven's doing. I asked her if that meant that I could finally be a part of his life and she said no, I was never going to be a part of his life.

She then said that I was such a disappointment and asked me where she went wrong. I told her that having been raped didn't help. She said that there was nothing she could have done about that. I told her that I thought I turned out okay considering, but she dismissed me as someone voting for a "Socialist Jew".

I almost laughed at how she phrased it - she sounded more and more like a Nazi as the conversation went on. I asked her about the Nazis - why did they call themselves socialists, then? She said that it was only about consolidating power and ramping up production of military hardware to become powerful enough to invade their enemies.

I brought up Ralph and Paige and asked her to not have Ralph kill Trump. If she had to, she had an asteroid that she could put him in front of. She could achieve her ends without him dying. I considered him a friend and he had only signed up with the CIA to help his grandmother. I really tried to play up that angle. I said that it was a bit derivative to have a failed actor kill a President and she laughed at that and told me that was what she said when she first heard of the plan.

She said that she would consider that, or having him infected with coronavirus. I froze, then slowly asked her if that was going to be coming here. When Paige had told me about it, I was under the impression that it would only be in China and mostly a distraction rather than something that would kill a lot of people. She said no, it was going to be everywhere and the intent was to mostly kill people here. I asked how many - she said that worldwide they were aiming for around 10-11 million. She offered to infect Tom Hanks for me as a bit of revenge for him hunting me.

I asked her how, if it was basically the flu. She said that it was much nastier than that and they selected it because of how virulent and deadly it was. She said that it was airborne and they would use the mail and specifically Amazon to spread it. The workers wouldn't be allowed to take sufficient health precautions. I told her I doubted Bezos would agree with that and she said that he would do anything they tell him to do, he has his yacht and his billions.

I asked why people couldn't just go to the hospital with a bad case - she said that they would, but hospitals would be quickly overwhelmed. The biggest bottleneck based off of their projections was a lack of ventilators. Most hospitals only have a few, but not even the biggest hospitals would have enough to keep up with demand.

She said that the first wave would kill hundreds of thousands before the government would act. She said that at first, they would tell people that the economy had to remain open because it was the nation's lifeblood. I expressed disbelief that people would buy that excuse. She said that they expected people to protest and with Congress unlikely to provide assistance, people would start getting evicted.

Then, she went on, they would spread a video of a black man being killed to stoke racial tension and spark further protests. I asked her if they were going to kill someone and she said no, they would just amplify a video they would have otherwise suppressed. I asked what they would do if people were staying inside and not interacting with cops and she said that they would let Derek Chauvin - she actually named him - kill a man named Floyd who he worked with. I asked if Floyd was a first or last name and she indicated that she didn't know or care. She also mentioned spreading videos of Elijah McClain.

I asked her what would happen if they couldn't stop the protests. She said that they would crack down on them heavily but she expected them to end when Chadwick Boseman died. I asked if they were going to kill him too, but she said that he had cancer and was projected to die in the Summer.

I suggested that I might be able to take on the role she had planned for me. She said that it was too late, I would have to kill someone and when she set me up to kill Mike, I refused to. She then said that if I killed someone I know, she would be willing to let me be a part of my son's life. I agreed, even though I knew that I wouldn't be able to go through with it. I wanted to see what they would do.

She asked me for a name and I initially said my father, but she obviously refused that. She told me to think of a friend, maybe one who was trans, and the first name that came to mind was Sheena Riotta, who she made a call to have kidnapped and brought to Florida.

There was also an earlier section of the conversation where we discussed the children. She said that her own children all had different fathers, with Rick's being Anthony Hopkins. She said that they were sixteen and on a date at a movie theater, he was in the army at the time.

I also recall being disgusted that she forced Margie to have a miscarriage and tricked her into using the IVF company that created the cuckoos.

I asked her how the asteroid tied in to this as Paige described the lockdowns as intended to keep people safe from the fallout of that. She said that it was perfect and came close to her father's birthday. She told me that their scientists had told her that while the orbit didn't look dangerous, it would hit something called a keyhole which would bring it into a potential collision course. I looked up the concept of the keyhole on my phone.

She said that she had a vision around the late 90's of an asteroid causing a tsunami. She then called the scientist and had them check. They said that they didn't have anything on their logs that could potentially hit so she had them check again. That was when they came back to her with the keyhole story. I told her that the keyhole of an orbit was impossible predict and that it sounded like they told her what she wanted to hear. She said that they wouldn't do that. I asked if Deep Impact or Armageddon were CIA films and she said no. I speculated that she just saw the trailer for Deep Impact in passing and her vision was just a dream.

She said that if the asteroid didn't hit, they had an explanation ready for agents aware of it. Johns Hopkins University was working with them and the CIA would float a rumor that they had deflected the asteroid. They would then tell them that they projected that it would do too much harm and that was why they had deflected it rather than allowing it to hit.

I asked about how this would affect the election. She said that the reaction would be split and they had narratives planned around that. For the left, they came up with the slogan "Boomer Remover" which they predicted would gain traction and make them look bad. For the night, they would dismiss it as "just the flu" and treat it as such. They expected the deaths to mostly be older, skewing conservative. I asked why they would kill off their voters and she said that they were Republican voters, not Reich. They expected vote turnout to be low because of the virus, which would cement a Republican win due to the extreme gerrymandering and voter suppression efforts. She said that whatever happened, they would do their best to pressure states into calling races early and sowing as much disinformation as possible. She said that their preference would be a Republican, but they would let a Democrat win if that ended up being the most believable result based off the votes.

The discussion turned to other questions I had about the coup that put Hitler in power and how the CIA functioned. She said that he was invited by JP Morgan and several other prominent Americans to run the country in the same matter he did Germany. The plot was uncovered by Smedley Butler and John Spivak but suppressed by the Dickstein Comittee, later the House Unamerican Affairs Committee. Spivak leaked the uncensored minutes in his paper The New Masses but no one believed him. The HUAC was later used to fight the enemies of the Reich in a bastardization of its original purpose of fighting fascist groups.

Aleister Crowley had separately spoken with Hitler at the behest of Martha Kuntzel as he was convinced that he was "the coming man". Though their hidden history characterizes Crowley as a collaborator, it was likely Kuntzel who later stole Crowley's papers on the summoning of the Moonchild from the cave where he he kept them. Kuntzel used rituals based off of Crowley's sex magick, using live children in place of the symbolic bud sacrifices. Though both played a part in founding the religion of Thelema, it was Kuntzel who dictated Will above Love while Crowley believed in Love above Will.

Her parents were both involved in the Friends of New Germany and later the German American Bund. They visited Germany in the early 30's and took part in sex rituals to "summon" the Moonchild. They were also ardent Nazis.

#

Der Stürmer
Der Stürmer

#

They believed that the Moonchild would be born in Cancer as an en cal birth. While Jean was born early - just prior to the cusp - she was an en cal birth. Though such a birth is easily induced with certain teas and drugs, they took it as a win and named her Jeanne Claire, giving her the initials JC - a mark of their hopes upon her to be their messiah.

She claimed that Crowley orchestrated the sacrifices and rituals at the Nazis behest. Between that and the Germany he saw rise from his efforts, he fled, stole Martha Kuntzel's papers and spend the rest of his life trying to fix his mistake.

The Reich continued to work with another group that adhered to Kuntzel's brand of Thelema and that church is still active in Europe and South America. The Vatican is also aware of the Reich - Jean told me that she could make me a Cardinal or a Bishop if I wanted to be. She claimed that the Reich is also in control of a large portion of Hollywood and the media landscape, especially acting through the CIA.

One example of that total control over messaging she recounted was the death of Naya Rivera. She had died of an overdose in Fall 2018, but rather than allow that narrative to be reported on, they suppressed the news of her death and concocted a convoluted narrative based off earlier photos of a lake trip with her son. They also took photos of actors "mourning" her from a distance to pass off as her co-stars from Glee. Her son has lived with her mother since the death. To keep up appearances, the CIA sent donuts and coffee to a rehab group in her name to make it look like she got clean.

She also said that most of what ended up in tabloids were stories that they failed to suppress in time. An example she gave was Patton Oswalt murdering his wife. She said there was a process for him to "request" a new wife, but he wanted to "give her a murder to solve" a sick reference to her work attempting to track down the Golden Gate Killer.

She also gave Cobra Kai as an example of a CIA production. When I was a kid I liked the Karate Kid movies and she had at least one produced specifically at my request. She said that Ralph Macchio was already in is 20's and no longer a kid, but if they ever brought the character back, she wanted him to be a car salesman. The character of Kreese was brought back to portray how agents were trained - there was a scene where the dojo was split in two and told to fight in the woods until only one team remained. In the CIA exercise it was literally a battle to the death.

We discussed other TV shows and movies and what kind of messaging they had. She said that they hated It's A Wonderful Life because it was produced prior to their "deal" with the US government and contained messaging that they disagreed with. They tried to suppress it, but when it came into the public domain that became impossible.

She told me that every year, around Hitler's birthday, April 20th, they attempted some action in honor of him. I looked up several on my phone and quizzed her on them. She denied any involvement in Columbine, but claimed her father would have loved that. She did confirm that a Reich agent had caused Chernobyl and that Waco, while not planned, came close enough that they moved the forces in to escalate. I questioned her about other events and she also confirmed that the CIA had been behind the Boston Marathon bombing, telling the older brother that they backed their country and that this was a sanctioned act. She also said that they were behind Charles Manson and the Tate murder - it was an attempt to start a race war.

I didn't ask her directly about her involvement with 9/11 because I remembered Alan's visit and I didn't want to tip her off that I already knew the CIA was behind it. I asked if they were involved in the Sandy Hook shooting since it fell on my birthday, but she denied any involvement. As we were sitting and waiting, however, I thought about coronavirus and how it was supposed to "jump" to humans and had a terrible realization.

I chose my words carefully, asking as casually as possible if, based off how the crossover occurred, if they had anything to do with HIV/AIDS. She said that it was because "they" were always walking around like they owned the place. I replied that I wasn't aware of a large gay population in the 60's or 70's that was open, assuming that was who she was referring to. She corrected me - the disease was targeted at the population of Haiti.

It was one of her father's last major "gifts" to the world. They had sent multiple infectees out into the population but hadn't projected a spread outside of Haiti. She went on to say that many of the Reich's attacks took the form of diseases and blights. They primarily infected crops and livestock, which they used to manipulate markets and inflict damage on enemies.

Eventually, they brought in Sheena, who had been abducted from Brooklyn and flown down directly. I was given a gun and told to kill her, which would allow for me to be a part of my son's life as I had already abdicated my role as heir to the Reich. I shot the pillow, setting aside the gun and asking for her life to be spared. It was and she was sent back to her home. I was drugged and sent back to my parents' house.

The discussion lasted for around two hours total and I asked her questions about everything I could think of. The answers escape me at the moment.

Chapter Thirty-Two

2020

Chapter Thirty-Three

2021

THE SS BROTHERHOOD OF THE BELL

THE NAZIS' INCREDIBLE SECRET TECHNOLOGY

Joseph P. Farrell

SS BROTHERHOOD OF THE BELL

NASA'S NAZIS, JFK AND MAJIC-12

Other Books by Joseph P. Farrell:

Roswell and the Reich
Nazi International
Reich of the Black Sun
The S.S. Brotherhood of the Bell
Secrets of the Unified Field
LBJ and the Conspiracy to Kill Kennedy
The Cosmic War
The Giza Death Star
The Giza Death Star Deployed
The Giza Death Star Destroyed

SS BROTHERHOOD OF THE BELL

Adventures Unlimited Press

SS Brotherhood of the Bell

Copyright 2006
by Joseph P. Farrell

All Rights Reserved

Published by:
Adventures Unlimited Press
One Adventure Place
Kempton, Illinois 60946 USA
auphq@frontiernet.net

www.adventuresunlimitedpress.com

SS BROTHERHOOD OF THE BELL

NASA'S NAZIS, JFK AND MAJIC-12

Joseph P. Farrell

Acknowledgements

Many people have made this book possible. I would like to thank first my friend Richard E Wood, BSC, for assistance and research he undertook at my request on the internet for certain items that appear here and, hopefully, will appear in a subsequent book. I am also profoundly grateful to Mr. Igor Witkowski for such quick and timely answers to my inquiries, and for allowing me to use some of the many photos that appear in his excellent book, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe. I would also like to thank him for first breaking the story of the Bell, which may be the most important story of suppressed science and technology in the 20th century. I hope that my own book will stimulate interest in Mr. Witkowski's superb research in his The Truth About the Wunderwaffe.

I'd also like to thank Mr. Henry Stevens of the German Research Project and author of Hitler's Flying Saucers, for loaning me a copy of the story recounted on pages 181 and 182 here. I believe that this story may be the first account of the Bell's operation and test environs, and I am very grateful to Mr. Stevens for bringing it to my attention. Stevens, like Witkowski, has been a tireless researcher into the realm of exotic Nazi technology and more importantly has kept alive the Nazi origin of some UFOs through his voluminous research.

And as always, thanks to my publisher David Childress, especially for being there when it counted.

Finally and most importantly, thanks to my mother, who put up with me in her basement while I was writing this, during a difficult transition period in my life.

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements – x -
Preface – xi -

Part One: The "Background":
The "Race" to the Moon

Chapter 1: "In the Nick of Time" – 1 -

A. "We Can Still Lose This War" -3-
B. German Potential in Late 1944 Early 1945 -10-
  1. Papers for Paperclip: Project Lusty -10-
  2. Death Beneath the Seas: The Extraordinary Capabilities of the Type XXI U-Boat -13-
  3. Death in the Air: The Sound Barrier Too? -15-
  4. Death on the Ground: Weapons of Mass Destruction in Use by the German Army on the Eastern Front in 1941 -23-
  5. Beyond Nuclear and Thermonuclear Bombs: Indications of a New Physics -27-

Chapter 2: "The Peenemünde Problem" – 29 –

A. The U.S.A. Gets the Crème de la Crème – 30 –
B. The U.S.S.R.'s Early Space Achievements – 32 –
  1. Booster and Lift Capabilities – 33 –
  2. The First ICBMs and the Characteristic Russian "Bundle" Rocket – 36 –
C. What's Wrong with This Picture? – 37 –
D. The Real Origin of the Bundle Rocket: "Projekt Zossen" – 37 –

E. SS Obergruppenführer Hans Kammler's "Evacuation" of Peenemünde and the Russian Arrival – 39 –
    1. Strange Events at an "Empty" Site – 39 –
    2. The "Urals Incident" – 42 –
F. Over-The-Horizon Radars and the Amerikaraket – 44 –
    1. The German "Proto-Transistor" and Television Miniaturization – 45 –
    2. The Problem of the Miniature German Klystron Tube: Roswell, the E.T. Myth and the Nazi Legend Revisited – 48 –
    3. Over the Horizon Radars – 50 –

Chapter 3: "From Russia with Love": The Two Space Programs Hypothesis – 54 –

A. The Two Space Program Hypothesis – 56 –
    1. The Torbitt Document Version – 56 –
    2. The Hidden Planetary Geology, Climate, and Archaeology Versions: – 67 –
        a. The Absurdist Versions – 67 –
        b. A Scientifically and Politically Plausible Version: The Hoagland Version – 68 –
    3. The "Alternative Three" Version – 69 –
    4. Fantasia in the Desert: The William Lyne Version – 81 –
        a. Public Consumption versus Occulted Aether Physics – 86 –
            (1) Lyne's History of Aether Physics – 89 –
            (2) Lyne's Version of Tesla Physics – 92 –
        b. The National Security Act and Scientific Suppression– 100–
            (1) Strange Nazi Parallels – 101 –
        c. The Nazi Role in Occulted Aether Physics – 101–
            (1) Roswell, MJ-12, and Disinformation – 101 -

            (2) Von Braun's Alleged Pre-War "P2" Project in New Mexico – 103 –
        5. Both Feet in Atlantis: The "Jan Van Helsing" Version – 104 –
        6. The Dark Moon Version – 115 –
- B. Conclusions and Speculations - 128 –
    1. The Torbitt Version – 129 –
    2. The Hidden Planetary Geology, Climatology and Archaeology Version – 129 –
    3. Jim Keith's Casebook on Alternative Three Version – 130 –
    4. The William Lyne Version – 131 –
    5. The "Jan Van Helsing" Version – 132 –
    6. The Dark Moon Version – 132 –
    7. Combining the Versions – 133 –
    8. Possible Entities and Requisites for Coordination – 135 –

Part Two: The "Bell": Nazis and Occulted Physics

Chapter 4: "Das Laternenträgerprojekt": The Bell and Igor Witkowski – 141 -

- A. Igor Witkowski on the Bell – 141 –
    1. The Significance of the Story of the Bell – 142 –
    2. An Obvious Question and a Not So Obvious Answer – 142 –
    3. The Personnel and a New SS Player on the Scene: The Forschugen, Entwicklungen, Patente – 144 –
        - a. SS Obergruppenführer Emil Mazuw – 145 –
        - b. Prof. Dr. Walther Gerlach – 148 –
        - c. The Mysterious Dr Elizabeth Adler – 152 –

        - d. Otto Ambros of Auschwitz "Buna" Factory Fame – 153 –
        - e. Dr. Kurt Debus – 155 –
            - (1) "Kriegsentscheidend" – 157 –
    - 4. Dr. Hermann Oberth Takes a Trip with some Friends – 159 –
- B. The Operation of the Bell and Its Effects: Witkowski's Reconstruction of the Bell – 162 –
    - 1. Where It All Happened – 162 –
    - 2. The History and Code-Names of the Project – 166 –
    - 3. The Last Flight of the Ju 390 – 167 –
    - 4. The Design of the Bell and its Effects in Operation – 171 –
    - 5. Witkowski's Reconstruction of its Possible Physics – 179 –
    - 6. A Story from the Neo-Nazi Fringe – 185 –
    - 7. Mercury Vortex Engines… Again – 188 –

Chapter 5: "Working in Fields of Physics that were Monstrous on a Daily Basis" – 192 –

- A. Strange Claims and Quotations: Indicators of Wartime German Research in "Scalar" Weapons – 192 –
    - 1. The "Artificial Rubies" Passage from the Farm Hall Transcripts – 193 –
    - 2. The Farm Hall Transcripts' Indications of a German Photochemical Process of Isotope Separation and Enrichment – 195 –
    - 3. Back to Roswell and the Majestic 12 Documents: Another Odd Corroboration of Possible Nazi Knowledge of Cold Fusion – 199 –
    - 4. A British Intelligence Agent's Statement on the Monstrous Areas of Physics being Developed by the Kammlerstab – 201 –

- B. Bearden's Reconstruction of the History of Scalar Physics – 203 –
  - 1. Bearden on the State of Electromagnetic, or Electrodynamic, Theory, and the Elements of Scalar, or Quantum Potential, Physics – 207 –
    - a. Classical Electrodynamic Theory as a Perpetual Motion Machine – 207 –
    - b. What the Soviets (And Nazis) Found on Their Scavenger Hunt: E.T. Whittaker's Decomposition of Scalar Potentials into Bi-Directional Longitudinal Waves – 211 –
  - 2. Bearden's Claims for "Scalar" Physics and its Weaponization – 219 –
    - a. The Dangers of Scalar Resonance: Planet-Busting "Doomsday" Implications – 219 –
    - b. The Scalar Template and Weapons Applications – 221 –
  - 3. The Implications of Bearden's Reconstruction of the History of Scalar Physics – 222 –
    - a. Back to "Freya" and "See-Elefant": The German Over-The-Horizon Radars – 229 –
    - b. An Odd Allied Intelligence Report Indicating the Nazi Operation of Scalar Weapons – 232 –
  - 4. Conclusions and a Post-War Scalar Postscript: the "Scalar Weapons" Nations and Germany – 236 –

Chapter 6: "For Whom the Bell Tolls": Scalar Physics, Zero Point Energy, and the Vorticular Aether: A Speculative Reconstruction of the Physics of the Bell – 242 –

- A. U.S. Declassified Patents from the Cold War and SDI – 242 –
  - 1. Enter the Mossbauer Effect – 245 –

B. Plasmas, Rotation, Pulses, and Zero Point Energy – 248 –
  1. Plasmas and Transmutation – 248 –
  2. Four Mysteries and Ion Oscillation – 250 –
  3. Paul Brown's Glow Plasma Oscillator – 250 –
  4. Non-Equilibrium Thermodynamics and Self-Organization – 252 –
  5. Oscillation of Plasmas and ZPE Coherence – 253 –
  6. Gray's Scalar Compression Tube – 254 –
  7. Counter-Rotating Electromagnetic Fields, ZPE Coherence, and Kontrabary – 255 –

C. The Vorticular Mechanics of the Aether: The Theories of O.C. Hilgenberg and Carl F. Krafft – 257 –

D. Back to Mercury Vortex Engines – 266 –

E. Speculations: The Bell as a Scalar Physics Device – 269 –

Chapter 7: "Gerlach's New Alchemy:" The Mysterious Serum 525 – 272 –

A. An Article in the Evening Newspaper – 272 -

B. Mercury Pyro-Antimonate, or Red Mercury (Mercury Antimony Oxide) – 278-
  1. Code-name DOVE - 278 –
  2. The .01 Kiloton Yield Pure Fusion Bomb: The Logic of Fusion Weapons Development – 283 –
    a. First Generation Weapons – 283 –
      (1) Radiological Weapons ("Dirty Bombs") – 283-
      (2) The Semi-Fission, or "Atomic Fizzle" Bomb – 283 –
      (3) The Pure Fission, or Atomic Bomb – 284 –
    b. Second Generation Weapons – 284 –
      (1) Boosted Fission Weapons – 284 –
      (2) Fission-Fsusion (-Fission) or Full Hydrogen Bombs – 285 –

            (3) The Neutron Bomb – 285 –
            (4) The “Salted” or “Doomsday” Bomb - 285 –
        c. Third Generation Weapons: The Pure Fusion, or Pure Hydrogen Bomb – 287 –
    3. The Red Mercury Legend, Recipe, and “Xerum 525” – 288 –
        a. The Red Mercury Legend – 288 –
        b. The Recipe and “Xerum 525” – 292 –
        c. Nuclear Isomers, Spin, GRASERS, and Gerlach – 294 –
C. Back to the Nazi Atom Bomb: The Implications of the Ohrdruf Test Reconsidered – 296 –
    1. The Claims for the Ohrdruf Test – 297 –
    2. The Implied Existence of a Reactor Technology: Hartek and Houtermann’s “Cold” Reactors and the “Recipe” – 302 –
D. Briefly Back to Roswell and MAJIC-12: General Nathan Twining’s “White Hot Intelligence Estimate” Reconsidered – 303 –
E. A Summary and Conclusions – 304 –

Part Three: The “Brotherhood”:
Nasa’s Nazis, JFK, and MAJIC-12

Chapter 8: “The Day After Corso”: More MAJIC 12 Documents in the Light of Nazi Technology – 311 –

A. MAJIC-12 Documentary Analysis – 315 –
    1. Document 1: Air Materials Command Secret Memo to Brig. Gen. George Schulgen, Sept 1947. – 318 –
        Analysis – 321 –
    2. Document 2: Analytical Report of Research and Development Laboratory of 2 September 1947 – 326 –
        Analysis – 329 –

3. Document 3: Letter of Anonymous Source to Timothy Cooper – 332 –
   Analysis – 333 –
4. Document 4: Letter of Anonymous Source to Timothy Cooper Concerning Privitization of MJ-12 – 334 –
   Analysis – 339 –
5. Document 5: Top Secret/Jehovah NSA Intercept: - 343 -
   Analysis – 345 –
6. Document 6: Annex C Fragment – 346 –
   Analysis – 347 –
7. Documents 7 and 8: Top Secret Memo of President Roosevelt to General Marshal, 27 February 1942; Double Top Secret Letter of FDR to General Marshall Feb 22/24, 1944 – 348 –
   Analysis – 350 –
8. Document 9: Recovered, Reconstructed, and Test-Flown "S" Aircraft and Paperclip Personnel Assistance – 351 –
   Analysis – 353 –
9. Document 10: Dr. Edward Teller's Pitch to President Reagan for the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) – 354 –
   Analysis – 358 –
   Preliminary Scenario Assessment – 358 –
10. Document 12: The MAJIC-12 Bowen "Encyclopedia of Flying Saucers;" The Kammlerstab, and Nazi Saucers – 361 –
    Analysis – 370 –

B. The Day After Corso: An Examination of Corso's The Day After Roswell in the Light of the Cooper-Cantwheel Documents and German Wartime Technology – 374 –
   1. Corso on the Integrated Circuit and Transistor – 377 –

2. Lasers – 380 –
3. Fiber Optics – 381 –

Chapter 9: "Mae Brussellsprouts": Nazi Survival and JFK

– 385–

A. J.F.K's Policies – 386 –
B. Mae Brussel on Nazis and JFK – 389 –
  1. Her Thesis – 389 –
  2. Germans and Atsugi AFB, Japan: An Oswald Nazi Link – 390 –
  3. Gehlen and the Russian Orthodox Diaspora – 391 –
    a. Implication: The Infiltration of US Intelligence and Defense – 392 –
    b. Nazis and "the Rogue Element" In US Intelligence – 393 –
  4. Schacht-Onassis – 394 –
  5. Dulles-McCloy on the Warren Commission – 394 –
  6. A Review – 395 –
  7. South American Death Squads: The "Kinder, Gentler Gestapo" for Hire - 396 –
  8. George De Mohrenschildt – 398 –
  9. The Paines, The Oswalds, and General Dornberger – 399 –
  10. Martin Bormann and JFK - 399 –
  11. The "Octopus" Before the "Octopus": the Bunge Corporation Beats Danny Casolaro by Two Decades – 403 –
  12. More Odd Behavior and Connections: West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger and Nixon – 411 –
D. The JFK Connection in Early MAJIC-12 Documents – 412 –

        1. Guy Bannister, UFOs, and JFK – 414 -
    E. The Magus of Ingolstadt – 415 –
        1. Bormann and Ingolstadt: A Connection to the Illuminati? – 416 –
            i. Bormann's Manipulation of Hitler – 417 –
            ii. Bormann's Surrender of the A-Bomb to the USA: The Hydrick Thesis – 419 –
            iii. Bormann's "Special Evacuation Command" and Kammler's Bell: the Nick Cook Thesis – 422 –
            iv. Continuation of Ultra-Black Projects and German "Independence" at White Sands and NASA – 423 –
    F. Skull and Bones and "Secret Germany" – 425 –
        1. 2004: Bonesman Bush versus Bonesman Kerry – 426 –
        2. Daddy and Dubya Bush: The RNC and the Eastern European Émigré Community – 426 –
        3. Secret Germany – 427 –
            d. The Hohenzollerns Become Grand Masters of the Order - 432 –
            b. Hitler's Only Known Initiation – 434 –
        E. Final Thoughts – 435 –

Chapter 10: "What is the Brotherhood of the Bell?" the Brotherhood of the Bell in History and Practice – 438 –
    A. Nick Redfern's FBI Documents on Nazis and UFOs – 443 –

Bibliography – 456 –

Preface

In the preface to my previous book on wartime German secret weapons, Reich of the Black Sun: Nazi Secret Weapons and the Cold War Allied Legend, I mentioned my youthful reaction to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and my perplexity with the subsequent findings of the Warren Commission and its "lone nut magic bullet" theory. I then proceeded to mention another curious anomaly of the history I had learned in school, namely, the fact that the U.S. military had not tested the uranium "shot-gun" atom bomb it had dropped on Hiroshima. The mention of those two odd events in that Preface was not accidental nor merely a whim, for the two events are not unrelated. Indeed, they are not even loosely unrelated, as there are direct threads – and in some cases whole cables – connecting both.

I am not the first author to draw attention to the pervasive Nazi connections lurking in the background of the JFK assassination, nor, I imagine, will I be the last. The well-known conspiracy theorist and JFK assassination researcher Mae Brussell was perhaps the first major "alternative researcher" to speak out about this aspect of the assassination. Others followed in her wake, adding a detail here or a story there, but it was Brussell who first courageously unearthed the most sensational details. Notwithstanding her ability to ferret out the detailed connections of conspiracy, however, even she managed to miss perhaps the most important lynch-pin connecting Nazis, the Roswell episode, and one possible motivation for the JFK assassination: Nazi technology.

However, to the average reader, even one predisposed to believe in some sort of conspiracy involved with the cold-blooded murder of President Kennedy, the idea that there is a Nazi connection must seem to stretch credulity. Even Brussell urged that to draw such connections would have been beyond the wildest yarn of Robert Ludlum, popular and well-known writer of espionage thrillers throughout the 1970s and 1980s. But to maintain a connection between all that and to Roswell, the establishment of the MAJIC-12 group, and indeed, the establishment of the whole "national security" intelligence apparatus of the U.S. government, would seem to stretch credulity to the snapping point. But that, indeed, is what I believe in part to be the case. And that case is what this book is, in part, about.

But here, as in Reich of the Black Sun, the focus is not only on the implications of Nazi survival and the possibility that its secret weapons projects were continued independently of any of the governments of the post-war world. We shall also continue the detailed comparison of the wartime development of exotic physics and technologies by the Nazis, with the technologies of "recovered craft" outlined in the MAJIC-12 documents that was begun in Reich of the Black Sun, for new documentary evidence has come to my attention since its publication, and this in turn compels further investigation, an investigation that was begun in chapters 16 and 17 of the previous book. As will be seen in the main body of this work, these documents almost nowhere evidence the type of contradictory data-sets encountered in the MAJIC-12 documents examined in Reich of the Black Sun, but rather, speak more directly to a terrestrial, though unknown, origin for the recovered craft. And in at least one instance, a MAJIC-12 document clearly points the finger to Nazi Germany, and even casts an aura of suspicion on the all-too-convenient death of General Patton. When these details are compared with the known developments of Nazi secret weapons research, the picture is quite disturbing. Even more disturbing is why such documents and their terrestrial origin implications continue to be ignored by the North American UFOlogy community.

As such, this book is, like the previous one, a book about the exotic weapons the Nazis were developing, but unlike the previous one, it is more about the underlying, and quite monstrous, physics they were developing as a basis for these weapons. Likewise, this book is also about the implications of that physics and those weapons for recent politics and history. As we shall see, this physics has strong ties with the "scalar" non-linear "electro-acoustic" waves and thinking developed first by Tesla, and subsequently elaborated by Nazi and Soviet physicists, and also to the type of physics I have posited was the basis underlying my three books on the Great Pyramid and the weapon hypothesis, The Giza Death Star, The Giza Death Star Deployed, and The Giza

Death Star Destroyed. The scientists and mathematicians in Nazi Germany that began the groundbreaking and revolutionary work in this type of physics were in the uttermost lofty reaches of the classification system of the SS. The group of scientists and engineers investigating this monstrous new physics and its implied technologies were an elite band, a "brotherhood" within the black brotherhood of the SS that I call simply "the SS Brotherhood of the Bell." Their credo, forced on some by the Nazi ideology and readily embraced by others, was the development of a whole new paradigm of physics, free of the constraints of relativity and "Jewish physics." And develop it they did.

It is therefore in the complex interface of history and technology that this book, like the previous one, lives. Therefore some may contrive to dismiss this work as even more speculative than its predecessor. In this respect, while always believing the Kennedy assassination to have been the work of a conspiracy, I myself came to entertain a possible Nazi involvement rather late, preferring, like most, to see a network of "coalescing interests" comprising the Mafia, disenchanted CIA and possibly FBI elements, and high-level business and banking interests as being behind it, united for a brief moment, to achieve a common and horrible goal. Certainly such elements, particularly in the murky connection between government and "big business" and, most importantly, "banking," would have the necessary clout and influence to maintain a cover-up down to our day. But the motivation for such an ongoing cover-up remains unclear.

Until one adds in Nazis and advanced technology that, in its benign aspect, promises an end to current energy technologies and the geopolitical order that they impose and threatens the complete upheaval of the global economic "order", and that, in its malevolent aspect, is black with the dark promise of truly planet-busting weapons utterly beyond the wildest thermonuclear fantasies of an Edward Teller or Andrei Sakharov. Add to this mix elements within the federal government running on the fumes of fear and in thrall to globalist corporate oligarchies intent on public suppression and secret development of alternative physics and energy systems, and one has a coalescence of interests that would have strong motivations for murdering a President who gave repeated signals that he was prepared to dismantle all of it, or at least bring significant parts of it out into the open.

Some may therefore dismiss this work as an exercise in paranoia, and perhaps it is. But given the history of governments in modern times, one can never be too paranoid. After all, they are. And as a lesson of paranoia with global ambitions, the Nazi regime of the Third Reich is without peer. It takes genuine crazed paranoia to lead a nation the size of the state of Texas to conquer Europe and wage war with most of the rest of the world for six years, and then to plan, in the midst of it all and with customary German thoroughness and organization, for a continuance of Nazism after the war. But it took likewise a paranoia without peer to dream of a physics with so much flexibility, not only with a potential planet-busting capability but also with an endless promise in the fields of energy and propulsion, and then to proceed to begin the theoretical and experimental spade work to bring that physics to practical and realizable weapons and propulsion systems. As this book avers, by the time of the German surrender, they had made sufficient progress in their work that it was continued by them after the war in a number of "host" countries, including the Soviet Union, South Africa, Japan, Brazil, and, yes, (West) Germany.

But there are other reasons that have made this sequel necessary. The first of these was my acquisition of some of the wartime papers of physicists mentioned in Reich of the Black Sun. Acquisition of these papers has caused me to correct certain inaccuracies in the previous book and has raised new questions. Secondly, the excellent series on Hitler's "victory weapons," German author Friedrich Georg's Hitlers Siegeswaffen series, has continued with the recent appearance, just last year, of his research into German long-range rocketry, guidance systems, and nascent space program. This research, placed in the wider context of SS projects in radical physics, raises new questions about the "Allied Legend" that were first raised in Reich of the Black Sun. Georg's research, as we shall see, also raises important questions not only regarding what was going on at Peenemünde in the final weeks of the war, but also important questions directly calling into question Lt. Col. Corso's account of the Roswell affair in his famous book The Day After Roswell.

Equally important, Polish military researcher Igor Witkowski's superb research into all aspects of German secret weapons has finally been published in a single volume in English entitled The Truth About the Wunderwaffe. Needless to say, the material in Witkowski's book on the SS's most secret project, The Bell, greatly expands the amount of information available in English. The emergence of Witkowski's research in English would, in and of itself, require a sequel to Reich of the Black Sun. I therefore rely heavily on Witkowski's magisterial research in this work. Witkowski's research likewise also raises serious questions and doubts about Col. Corso's assertion that "ET" technology was gradually seeded into American industry after the Roswell incident. And of course, Witkowski's research forms the essential foundation for any examination of the Bell and the exotic physics it may represent.

As will be apparent in the main body of this work, however, I have cast the Bell and the physics it may represent in a very different interpretive and admittedly much more radical and speculative a context than does Witkowski. It seems to me that this was necessary both because of the type of signature effects it seemed to have, but also because of the indications that the Germans were investigating a type of physics called by various names, but which, following the suggestion of Tom Bearden's research into this subject, I have called "scalar" physics.

Such physics represents not only a new and efficient energy source, but also perhaps the ultimate power for destruction. Therefore, its continued and perhaps independent development by various criminal conspiracies and syndicates may indeed have been one of the penultimate factors and motivations in the assassination of President John F Kennedy.

Finally, Carter Plymton Hydrick's excellent research has finally been published in book form, Critical Mass: How Nazi Germany Surrendered Enriched Uranium for the United States' Atomic Bomb. Since there are slight revisions in this work from the internet version I first relied on in Reich of the Black Sun, revisions that themselves compel new speculations – many from Hydrick himself – it seemed appropriate that this work was the best place to address some of these issues. In any case, Hydrick's work remains a standard in this alternative history of World War Two secret weapons that, like Witkowski's or Meyer and Mehner's research, simply cannot and must not be ignored by the serious inquirer into this suppressed and hidden history and science.

Finally, a word must be said about my own personal attitude towards and "philosophy" of UFOs, lest the contents of this book be taken to represent it in toto. First, I wish to make it abundantly clear that I am not philosophically opposed to the idea of extra-terrestrial life, nor, for that matter, to the idea of life-forms that inhabit "higher dimensions" or "planes of existence." That being said, I am similarly not opposed to the idea that such life forms may have visited, and may be visiting, the Earth. However, I am convinced, by a reading of various "contactee" and "abduction" reports, that much of this phenomenon is of a profoundly spiritual, and – dare I say it – evil nature.

With these broad remarks in mind, then what of actual UFOs? That is, what do I make of those reports that clearly indicate actual advanced "craft" themselves? While I am also convinced that there are many genuine reports, and even some even more stunning NASA space shuttle footage, by the same token, in but few cases do I personally detect a physics and performance signature that compels to any "extra-terrestrial", that is to say, extra-solar system origin for the phenomenon. I do not deny the extreme performance characteristics, only that in most cases the characteristics reported still fall short of anything practical for interstellar travel. Moreover, I fully realize that to connect some of the phenomena and documentary evidence to Nazis is a decidedly unpopular view in the UFOlogy community, over-populated as it is by any number of well-known names that push the ET hypothesis no matter what, and even when they should know better. They produce their documents, and argue quite persuasively for their authenticity, and then go on to argue on the basis of their contents that the ET hypothesis is the most plausible explanation for the "government UFO cover-up." And I do not deny the strength nor the cogency of their arguments. However, as I shall show, there are other documents that argue against that hypothesis, equally persuasively, that will never be mentioned by those well-known names at their conferences, for they clearly imply a "Nazi angle" to the story, even if "ET" is left in the picture.

By the same token, my use of the "Nazi Legend" to reinterpret the MAJIC-12 story and Colonel Corso's The Day After Roswell may be misunderstood as well. Accordingly, I do not believe the "Nazi Legend" explains all UFO sightings for the simple reason that there are far too many of them for this source to be the origin of all of them. It explains only a limited number of cases, during a limited time frame in selected locations. Likewise, it explains some of the motivations of those who suppress "the truth about UFOs" but certainly not all the motivations.

But however I attempt to limit misunderstandings, I nonetheless do not expect this book will have me invited to any UFO conferences any time in the near future, nor, for that matter, will it endear me to many practiced in the "esoteric sciences" for reasons that will become obvious in the main body of the work.

It thus only remains for the reader to judge if a solid prima facie case has been made for the largely speculative reconstruction that now follows.

Joseph P. Farrell
2005

Part One
"The Background":
The "Race" to the Moon

- "The foundations for the grand space project were laid down during WWII.
- "This project was conceived and designed as a collaboration between two superpowers.
- "The Cold War was a convenient cover under which aspects of this project could be implemented and hidden."

Mary Bennett and David S Percy,
Dark Moon: Apollo and the Whistleblowers, p. 200.

1.

"In the Nick of Time"

"The methods and philosophies that the Nazi scientists brought with them resulted in serious breaches of U.S. security and the unthinkable horror of American soldiers being used as research guinea pigs in the same way that concentration camp prisoners had been used during the war."
Linda Hunt, The United States Government, Nazi Scientists, and Project Paperclip: 1945 to 1990[1]

"James Webb, NASA's second administrator, complained that the Germans were circumventing the system by attempting to build the Saturn V in-house at the center. Rocco Petrone, who became the Marshall director in 1973, said that Webb felt the group needed to be more tightly controlled."[2]

On January 4th, 1945, U.S. General George S. Patton wrote a remarkable thing in his war diary: "We can still lose this war." It was a remarkable statement, especially since the last large German offensive of World War Two, the Battle of the Bulge, was all but finished, and the victorious Allied armies, like their Soviet counterparts in the East, were then poised to deal the final death blows to Hitler's crumbling Third Reich. Optimism prevailed at the Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (SHAEF). For some reason, however, General "Blood and Guts" Patton, despite his well known public image of bravado and optimism, had serious private fears and reservations. The question is:

Why?

Why indeed, since on any conventional military appraisal, the German Reich was finished. It was only a matter of… time.

But even with the ill-fated German Ardennes offensive – the Battle of the Bulge – there is more than meets the eye when one adds in the thesis of my previous book, Reich of the Black Sun, that the Nazis may have won the race for the atom bomb well ahead of the Manhattan Project. The objective of the German offensive was, according to the standard explanation, to break through thinly held American lines in the Ardennes, drive behind the Allied lines in

---

[1] Linda Hunt, The United States Government, Nazi Scientists, and Project Paperclip: 1945 to 1990 (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1991), pp. 8-9.

[2] Ibid., p. 219.

Holland, seize the port of Antwerp, and thus not only drive a wedge between American and British forces, but also to cut the supply lines to British Field Marshal Sir Bernard Law Montgomery's armies in the Netherlands. But the standard explanation fails simply for the reason that the Allies would have been capable of using Dutch ports to supply the "trapped" armies. Thus, the end of the war presents, behind the "obvious" and "well known 'facts,'" yet another mystery. What really was the Nazi leadership trying to do, and why would it have caused such concern to General Patton to cause him to remark about it in his diary? British author Geoffrey Brooks pinpoints the hidden military and political reasoning that lay behind the Nazi offensive by raising precisely this question:

> Hitler's Luftwaffe ADC von Below remarked in his 1982 memoirs that even he could not understand why Hitler wanted to go to Antwerp – "a place that led nowhere."[3]

But the answer may lie in a curious order placed in German shipyards in the period leading up to the surprise German offensive, for an order for twenty-four "500-ton submersible barges able to transport and launch V-2 rockets" was placed at yards in Stettin and Elbing.[4] And London was just within range of the V-2 from Antwerp.

But the mystery does not yet end, for an offensive merely to resume the V-2 bombardment of England does not yet make sense. According to Brooks, one only begins to see the logic behind the German offensive by seeing it connected to a resumption of V-2 attacks, for "the V-2 campaign had been a failure. Hitler knew that. There had to be something extra to make all this worthwhile."[5] What that "something extra" was, was hinted at by none other than the Deputy Commanding General for the US Army Air Force's Intelligence, Lieutenant General Donal Putt, shortly after the war in 1946. Brooks' comments are worth citing extensively:

---

[3] Geoffrey Brooks, Hitler's Terror Weapons: From V1 to Vimana (Pen and Sword Books: Barnsley, South Korshire, 2002), p. 103. (ISBN 0850528968)

[4] Ibid.

[5] Ibid.

> (Lt. General Putt) told the Society of Aeronautical Engineers: "The Germans were preparing rocket surprises for the whole world in general and England in particular which would have, it is believed, changed the course of the war if the invasion had been postponed for so short a time as half a year." Putt was also quoted in an aside as having stated that "the Germans had V-2s with atomic explosive warheads." A surprise is a surprise and hitherto ordinary rocket warfare had proved unproductive. The range of the V-2 was 200 miles. The crucial success of the Allied progress by December 1944 had therefore been to drive the German forces in Europe beyond this limit. The objective of the Ardennes campaign was the Belgian port of Antwerp, 200 miles from London.[6]

In other words, once again, the Nazi atom bomb is the hidden logic at work in the operational plans of both sides late in the war, and is very likely the hidden operational logic behind the otherwise militarily indefensible German offensive in the Ardennes. Small wonder then, that Patton would remark "We can still lose this war," even at such a late date. Similarly, if this scenario is the basis of his remarks, then it also serves to indicate that America's most celebrated field commander was also privy to some very sensitive information.

As was seen in my previous book, Reich of the Black Sun, a number of articles appeared in the post-war Western press to corroborate the notion that the war was won, not against a tottering Reich, but just in the nick of time. The articles usually accompanied these evaluations with revelations of Nazi secret weapons, most of them on the "fantastic" end of the spectrum. Perhaps this was a ploy to convince the Western public that the Nazi leaders were quite insane – as if any convincing needed to be done by that point – and that their hopes were so wildly bizarre and unrealistic that indeed the Third Reich's military state in late 1944 and early 1945 was all but hopeless.

A. "We Can Still Lose This War"

But psychological operations or not, even the American aerospace firm Convair (Consolidated Vultee) got in on the act, with a two page advertisement in Life magazine in its August 27, 1945 edition with an "article" entitled "…by the Skin of our Teeth."

---

[6] Brooks, Hitler's Terror Weapons, p. 19.

> SEVERAL TIMES during the European phase of this war, victory was almost within Germany's grasp…on land, on the sea, or in the air.
>
> Above all, knowing the vital importance of air supremacy, the Nazis tried time and again to wrest it back from the Allies.
>
> And they almost succeeded.
>
> ### Time Ran Out
>
> Especially in the last months of the war, our margin of safety was slimmer than most of us suspected.
>
> Just how slim it was is known best to certain American military experts who have since inspected some of Germany's underground research laboratories and war plants.
>
> Here they saw secret weapons in various stages of development…weapons which might conceivably have turned the trick for the Nazis if they could have used them boldly in a last desperate gamble.
>
> Some of these things can be revealed. Others cannot – yet.
>
> In one plant, the U.S. Army officers found partially assembled jet fighter planes of radical new design. There were planes potentially better than anything the Allies had in combat at that time.
>
> IF time hadn't run out on the Germans, quantities of these jet planes might have changed the balance of air power in their favor.
>
> In a V rocket plant, burrowed 800 feet deep in limestone rock, our technicians found blueprints for a fearful V bomb with an estimated range of 3000 miles.
>
> "We planned to destroy New York and other American cities starting in November," said a German rocket engineer.
>
> ### Target: U.S.A.
>
> In a converted salt mine, our ordnance officers examined nearly completed jet-propelled heavy bombers… bombers claimed by the Germans to be capable of crashing high explosives into the industrial cities of the eastern United States and flying back again across the Atlantic.
>
> Goering himself said the planes had been successfully test-flown and would have been in operation if Germany could have held out three months longer.

But those catastrophes, and others, never quite came to pass on the German timetable of war. We managed, right to the end, to maintain the air supremacy we had achieved…sometimes just by the skin of our teeth![7]

…by the Skin of our Teeth

SEVERAL TIMES during the European phase of this war, victory was almost within Germany's grasp . . . on land, on the sea, or in the air.

Above all, knowing the vital importance of air supremacy, the Nazis tried time and again to wrest it back from the Allies.

And they almost succeeded.

Time ran out

Especially in the last months of the war, our margin of safety was slimmer than most of us suspected.

Just how slim it was is known best to certain American military experts who have since inspected some of Germany's underground research laboratories and war plants.

Here they saw secret weapons in various stages of development . . . weapons which might conceivably have turned the trick for the Nazis if they could have used them boldly in a last desperate gamble.

Some of these things can now be revealed. Others cannot—yet.

In one plant, the U. S. Army officers found partially assembled jet fighter planes of radical new design. There were planes potentially better than anything the Allies had in combat at that time.

If time hadn't run out on the Germans, quantities of these jet planes might have changed the balance of air power in their favor.

In a V rocket plant, burrowed 800 feet deep in limestone rock, our technicians found blueprints for a fearful V bomb with an estimated range of 3000 miles.

"We planned to destroy New York and other American cities starting in November," said a German rocket engineer.

Target: U. S. A.

In a converted salt mine, our ordnance officers examined nearly completed jet-propelled heavy bombers . . . bombers claimed by the Germans to be capable of crashing high explosives into the industrial cities of the eastern United States and flying back again across the Atlantic.

Goering himself said the planes had been successfully test-flown and would have been in operation if Germany could have held out 3 months longer.

But those catastrophes, and others, never quite came to pass on the German timetable of war. We managed, right

Consolidated Vultee Article

---

[7] Cited in Georg, Star Wars 1947, pp. 25-26, all emphases in the original.

the end, to maintain the air supremacy we had achieved . . . sometimes just by the skin of our teeth.

How about Japan?

What's happening in those war plants the Japs have built underground? We wish we knew! We, for one, are not selling this enemy short—not on scientific ingenuity born of desperation.

Every now and then—close on the heels of dispatches telling how our heroic flyers are knocking Japs out of the sky at a ratio of 10 to 1—comes a disturbing rumor of an entirely new Jap weapon.

This is why it would be one of the costliest mistakes this country could possibly make, if we were to permit ourselves to be lulled into a sense of security because of our present-day air superiority.

The race we must win

We are woefully stupid if we assume that Japan isn't working desperately to develop new planes and air-borne weapons that will whittle down our air superiority.

Air supremacy, alone, of course, will not win this war or guarantee a lasting peace in the years to come.

But if we maintain air supremacy in the Pacific, Japan can't win.

And as long as we maintain our air superiority after victory, no aggressor nation is apt to be foolhardy enough to dream of attacking us.

That is why constant and continuing research in the field of aeronautics is a MUST for America—today and always!

But experimental research is only the first step in winning the race that will insure America from attack in the future . . .

The best planes periodically resulting from this research must be put in production in sufficient quantities to develop manufacturing techniques and tools and to keep the nucleus of a manufacturing organization which can be quickly expanded if ever needed.

We must also have enough planes for our Armed Services to train the Flight and Ground Crews in their use. One or two experimental planes are not enough to keep our Air Force and manufacturing organizations ready for any emergency.

Only when the design and production "bugs" always present in a new plane are revealed and eliminated by use—can our ever-improving aircraft be considered proven military weapons.

LET'S KEEP AMERICA STRONG IN THE AIR!

CONSOLIDATED VULTEE AIRCRAFT CORPORATION

San Diego, Calif. · Vultee Field, Calif. · Fairfield, Calif. · Tucson, Ariz. · Fort Worth, Texas · New Orleans, La. · Nashville, Tenn. · Louisville, Ky. · Wayne, Mich. · Dearborn, Mich. · Allentown, Pa. · Elizabeth City, N. C. · Miami, Fla.
Member, Aircraft War Production Council

Consolidated Vultee Article

This disquieting state of affairs suggests that there was more to German rocketry at the end of the war than merely lobbing short-ranged V-1s and V-2s on London and other western European cities. Indeed, if blueprints for a rocket with a 3,000 mile range were found in an underground factory at the end of the war, this strongly suggests that the rumored intercontinental Amerikaraket was nearing production, and that implies that some long range prototype may have already been tested.

Moreover, this "we won in the nick of time" attitude is corroborated by two very unlikely sources. Project Mercury and Gemini astronaut Gorden Cooper revealed that at the war's end

America was only one week from catastrophe.[8] But even more sensational corroboration of General Patton's gloomy assessment comes from President Franklin Delano Roosevelt himself. After receiving information via Turkey that the Germans were working on a "V-3" that could strike the east coast of the U.S., President Roosevelt revealed in a letter to his cousin Daisy on December 6, 1944, the real reason for his concern: not the rocket itself, but the fact that the Germans possessed "a weapon named V-3, that could destroy anything within a circumference of a kilometer with a single blow."[9] The dating here is significant, for it would place Roosevelt's letter after both the German fuel-air bomb tests and, more importantly, after the alleged a-bomb test on the island of Rügen ca. Oct 10-11, 1944.[10]

President Roosevelt and General Patton were not the only senior Allied officials to express private reservations about the future course of the war at that late date. Indeed, behind the Allied superiority in all conventional arms, there lurked a disquieting fact, a fact made clear by the following secret memorandum:

---

[8] Georg, Star Wars, p. 15. See also pp. 182-183.

[9] Ibid., p. 199, my translation.

[10] As I note in my Reich of the Black Sun, p. 80, Italian eyewitness Luigi Romersa, who described the test in detail, leaves out of his description any observation of the fusing of the soil at the test site into the glassy silicate covering associated with above ground low altitude nuclear tests. This fact weighs strongly against the test having been of a nuclear device though other signatures of the device tested there resemble a nuclear bomb. Background radiation on Rügen appears too small for a nuclear device. Romersa might thus be obfuscating his testimony; perhaps the test was elsewhere in the Baltic, or perhaps the test was of a large fuel-air bomb?

SECRET

HEADQUARTERS
UNITED STATES STRATEGIC AIR FORCES IN EUROPE (REAR)
Office of the Director of Intelligence

AAF Sta 390
APO 633, U.S. Army
5 January 1945

MEMORANDUM:

To: Brigadier General George C. McDonald, D. of I., Hq., USSTAF.

1. You will recollect that the SHAEF forecast, arrived at after D-day in 1944, placed the capitulation of Germany at the end of December of that year. It is believed that this SHAEF forecast strongly influenced the planning in Washington and in this theater. Predicated upon this date, questions of type U.S. Air Force equipment, weapons, tactics, training and supplies were decided.

2. Hitler's Germany did not place the termination date of this war at the end of 1944. Hitler's Germany has indicated with determination and virility that it expects this war to continue for a long and indefinite period of time, and that it is struggling to gain supremacy in weapons as well as generalship.

3. With the exception of a few modifications and improvements in the U.S. Air Forces in this theater are fighting with substantially the same weapons as they used in 1942. From 1942 through 1944 the aircraft and equipment of the U.S. Army Air Forces were superior in practically every detail to anything the enemy had in this theater. Indeed, weapons and equipment in general, whether belonging to the Ground Troops or to the Air, enjoyed for the U.S. superiority during this first period. This period ended December 31, 1944 with Germany still fighting, but Germany is not fighting with the weapons of 1942. She is leading the world in tested jet propelled airplanes, long range missiles, new type submarines and, in certain classes, better tanks. A large part of her manufacturing facilities have gone underground and she is bending every sinew for the last stand on the Vaterland frontiers.

4. Our Ground Armies, despite superiority in manpower and quantity of equipment, are presently engaged more in defensive than offensive fighting and, unless this state of affairs is quickly changed or the Russians actually drive through to Berlin and victory, we must face the grim expectation of fighting Germany and her new capabilities through greater 1945.

> 5. The new submarine threat is mounting and we may expect that the Admiralty and our Navy will soon bring pressure to bear on the United States Strategic Air Forces to go after submarine yards, pens and components manufacture. The tank and armored vehicle industry is proving a fresh and considerable menace in the present Western campaigns, so pressure might be expected from the Ground Armies to devote a part of our bombardment weight to these production centers. A special report had been prepared by Lt. Col. Haines dealing with the growing menace of jet aircraft…

If this somber assessment did not succeed in warning General McDonald of the true nature of the situation, it was spelled out in no uncertain terms in the conclusions at the end of the document:

> 6. CONCLUSION:
>
> a. The war has not terminated in accordance with SHAEF plans.
>
> b. SHAEF timing has dominated the development of equipment, training programs and establishment of manpower and supply for this theater.
>
> c. The first cycle and period of the war has ended without the capitulation of Germany and with Germany leading in the development of principal new weapons and methods, which will be included in her capabilities during 1945.[11]

In other words, the Germans simply were not complying with SHAEF's desires for them to roll over and surrender in the face of overwhelming Allied numerical superiority. Indeed, as the document indicates, that very numerical superiority was threatened with immanent obsolescence, if not being totally obsolete, in 1945. Germany, which had invented modern combined-arms maneuver warfare as a means of offsetting her potential opponents' numerical superiority, was about to change the nature of warfare yet again, and catch the Allies flatfooted, unprepared, and off balance.

But was the reality of German potential in fact in line with these gloomy Allied intelligence prognostications?

---

[11] Cited in Friedrich Georg, Hitlers Siegeswaffen, Band 2: Star Wars 1947: Teliband B: Von der Amerikarakete zur Orbitalstation – Deutschlands Streben nach Interkontinentalwaffen und das erste Weltraumprogramm (Schleusingen, Germany: Amun Verlag, 2004), pp. 194-195.

B. German Potential in Late 1944 Early 1945

1. Papers for Paperclip: Project Lusty

Late war German war-making potential is perhaps best summarized by a series of recently declassified documents – first uncovered by British researcher Nick Cook – called "Project Lusty." This, as Polish researcher Igor Witkowski observes, was a "parallel operation in relation to 'Paperclip.'"[12] Its contents are "such an absolute revelation that it gives the impression of being a story from another planet."[13] The Project Lusty documents > consist of a descriptive section as well as a list of intelligence facilities/ "targets" in the occupied Reich. In the descriptive section, at the very beginning, mention is made for example… of seized German evacuation transports – U-boats. This concerns facts that not only shed a completely new light on the end of World War II and the issue of the Third Reich's scientific and technical achievements, but above all are shocking with the awareness that they are still clouded in a curtain of secrecy![14]

Under the aegis of this program alone, and by its own admission, some 110,000 tons of scientific papers were transferred over three months to a center in the United States, where they were then processed and disseminated to the interested agencies of the US government.[15]

---

[12] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, trans. from the Polish by Bruce Wenham (Farnborough, England: Books International (European History Press, 2003), p. 224. Witkowski's research in The Truth about the Wunderwaffe, like Carter Hydrick's in Critical Mass, is first class and simply put, cannot and must not be ignored by any serious inquirer into the alternative and secret history of World War Two secret weapons and technology. I state this simply to put the record straight, since a number of stupid and utterly silly remarks have been made about Mr. Witkowski in various reviews of Nick Cook's The Hunt for Zero Point. These reviews have tried to impeach Cook's story by, in some cases, implying that Mr. Witkowski's work was somehow slip shod or second rate. The persons making such comments have obviously never bothered to read Mr. Witkowski's work nor considered its profound implications. So, once again, to set the record straight, Mr. Witkowski's work is superb and magisterial. The reviewers implying that Mr. Witkowski is an "unknown" or a second-rate author might possibly be in the covert employment of somebody's (Hot) Air Force.

[13] Witkowski, op. cit., p. 224.

[14] Ibid.

As if that were not enough,

> The records of the German Patent Office, for instance, were found buried 1,500 feet underground in a potash mine near Bacha. There were approximately 225,000 volumes, which included secret files.(...) Eventually, the files were evacuated and studied.(…)[16]

This is a crucial revelation, for it brings us back to the context of the Kammlerstab SS secret weapons "think tank" for the simple reason that all patents in the Third Reich were secretly scrutinized by a highly classified SS entity called Forschung, Entwicklung, Patente, which answered to an SS Obergruppen-führer Emil Mazuw, about whom more will be said in chapter four.

Project Lusty's revelation accordingly prompts a very serious question: did the American intelligence teams simply "blindly stumble onto" this treasure trove? Or were they led there? The last possibility seems more likely, as it is known that Kammler returned to Prague and the Skoda Works at Pilsen – headquarters of his "think tank" – in the last days of the war. As Nick Cook hypothesizes, Kammler did so to put the finishing touches on gathering up all his files and gathering them together to barter for his life.[17] Thus, if the Americans knew where to look, this information could only have come to them from some source inside the Kammlerstab.

It is well known that SS General Wolff undertook secret surrender negotiations with OSS station chief in Zurich, Allen Dulles, in the closing days of the war. What is little known, however, is that this process was taking place with the tacit blessing of none other than Adolf Hitler and Nazi Party Reichsleiter Martin Bormann, by then the real master of Nazi Germany. As Carter Hydrick has argued, the classic signature of

---

[15] Project Lusty, Frame 601, cited in Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 226.

[16] Project Lusty, Frame 597, § 9, cited in Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 226, emphasis Witkowski's.

[17] Q.v. Nick Cook, The Hunt for Zero Point, pp.

Bormann in all these late-war negotiations with the Americans was the exchange of technology for the lives of leading Nazis.[18] This permits one to speculate on a secret history that possibly underlies the strange constellation of events in southern and south central Germany, and Bohemian Czechoslovakia, at the end of the war. Among those events one must highlight the following:

(1) U.S. General Patton's rapid drive across southern Germany toward the Skoda Works at Pilsen in Czechoslovakia and similar Allied thrusts toward the Harz Mountain SS installations in Thuringia;
(2) The secret negotiations between OSS station chief Allen Dulles[19] and SS General Wolff;
(3) The disappearance of SS General Hans Kammler;
(4) The disappearance of Kammler's most highly classified research project, "the Bell," along with all its project documentation; and finally,
(5) The ironic – and some would say extremely suspicious – death of General George Patton shortly after the war's end.

A speculative pattern emerges, for if Wolff was secretly negotiating with Dulles with the tacit approval of Bormann – and Bormann's approval meant Hitler's as well – then it is likely that the collateral was the treasure trove of the Kammlerstab's documents, which would have included the secret patents of the Third Reich, seized and classified by the Forschung, Entwicklung, und Patente. The unerring precision with which late war American thrusts – largely by Patton's Third Army - toward the most secret centers and installations of Kammler's black projects empire were guided can only indicate that at some very high level the Americans were receiving "inside information" that came from an equally high level within the Third Reich: Kammler and Bormann. Patton may either have been the point man in some of these operations, or, as is more likely, was simply privy to a vast amount of first hand field intelligence reports that allowed him to piece together a thorough and nearly complete overview of the extent of Nazi black projects. One may speculate that Patton's field reports at this time constituted a kind of "Kammler Index" of the Third Reich's secret weapons projects. In either case, he would have been in a position to disclose a vast and hidden intelligence operation, not the least of which included a Faustian bargain for exotic technology and post-war cooperation between the Nazis and the western Allies, particularly with the United States.

---

[18] For the escape and role of Bormann in negotiating these high technology transfers, see Carter Plymtom Hydrick, Critical Mass, pp. 157-247.

[19] Dulles later became CIA chief, was dismissed by President Kennedy after the Bay of Pigs fiasco, and then later appointed by Lyndon Johnson to head the Warren Commission "investigating" the President's murder!

And what of the treasure trove itself? A glance at more unusual German secret weapons will demonstrate why General Patton in early 1945 – perhaps already "in the loop" on the secret negotiations taking place, and the "technological potential" the Allies faced if those negotiations were not successful – expressed serious private reservations about the Allies "still being able to lose this war."

2. Death Beneath the Seas: The Extraordinary Capabilities of the Type XXI U-boat

While Project Lusty concerned itself exclusively with Nazi aero-space technology, it is worth mentioning one of the deadliest potentials that was already coming into production as the war approached its end: the very new, and very lethal, German Type XXI U-boat. The Type XXI thus represented no mere prototype waiting to see production; it was not mere potential. It was a very real and present danger that would have presented the Allies with no end of difficulties at sea had the war continued even just a few weeks longer. And as I averred in Reich of the Black Sun, it is likely that the British had the misfortune of encountering a few Type XXIs before the end of hostilities.[20]

The Type XXIs possessed a novel propulsion system, the Walther turbine utilizing hydrogen peroxide, that allowed a speed of some 17.2 knots submerged, and according to the first trials information of the Kriegsmarine, were capable of a truly astonishing submerged depth of 330 meters![21] Some statements placed its submerged speed closer to 21 or 22 knots.[22] Moreover, the Type XXI could continue at this phenomenal underwater speed for some 340 miles before having to slow to recharge its accumulators.[23] Thus, the Type XXI, unlike the subs of every other navy or even its predecessors in the Kriegsmarine, was not merely a submersible; it was, in fact, the first truly modern submarine vessel, a vessel designed to do most of its traveling under water, not merely a vessel that could submerge when necessary. With its special "radar absorbent material" coating its newer streamlined schnorkel device, and its tremendous maximum possible submerged depth, the submarine managed to be undetectable to American surface vessels at a mere 200 meters away when the U.S. Navy conducted tests on one specimen in 1946![24] As Polish researcher Igor Witkowski puts it, the submarine "was a jump from the level of the 1940s into the 1960s."[25]

---

[20] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 243-244.

But even this recitation does not even begin to exhaust its truly deadly potential in naval warfare. If an Allied aircraft somehow managed to elude its on board radar and four 20 millimeter turreted anti-aircraft guns on either side of the boat's streamlined conning tower, the submarine could be completely under water in a mere 18 seconds.[26] But that is not all, for unlike any other submarine in any other navy, the Type XXI's captain would not even have to see his target to fire torpedos at it:

> The submarine possessed a completely revolutionary system of torpedo fire control, enabling it to carry out effective attacks even at complete submersion, the target positions being determined by creating three-dimensional co-ordinates of the noise's source through recalculating of delays received by various microphones placed on the submarine's hull. After an attack the Type XXI escaped at maximum speed, at which the enemy's sonar was totally ineffective (it maintained effectiveness up to approx. 12 knots).[27]

---

[21] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 126.

[22] Q.v. Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 242-245.

[23] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p.126.

[24] Ibid., p. 127.

[25] Ibid.

[26] Ibid.

[27] Ibid.

The potential of the Type XXI was thus not a mere "potential." It was a deadly reality.

One can only imagine what a Type XXI equipped with the new wire-guided or acoustic-homing torpedoes would have done to Allied shipping had it entered service in sufficient numbers. After all, a Type XXI with conventional torpedos was bad enough…

3. Death in the Air: The Sound Barrier Too?

The Project Lusty documentation referred to previously indicates that the Type XXI's deadly performance characteristics were matched, if not surpassed, by similar German developments in aerial warfare.

With the Allied and Soviet Air Forces' increasing dominance of the skies over Germany, it became increasingly vital for the Luftwaffe to pursue the unconventional avenue toward recovering mastery of the air over Germany. One such solution, the Focke Wulfe Triebflügel, is well-known to researchers. This "vertical take-off and landing" or VTOL fighter was a viable solution, since there was no need to try to take off or land on bombed and cratered airfield runways. Consisting of three rotating wings around a central fuselage, each wing was tipped with a ramjet engine. The wings could in turn be rotated to increase or decrease the angle of attack. With rockets to assist the ramjets to get started, the Triebflügel was in effect a vertical take-off and landing jet-airplane combined with a helicopter. Witkowski describes it as follows:

> (The) name could be translated as "propulsive wing", reflecting its unusual principle of operation. During take-off and landing the lifting surfaces performed the function of a helicopter's rotor, whereas during flight at high speed they "transformed" into wings…. Three ramjet engines were mounted on the wing tips, each with a maximum thrust of 840 KG. During take-off they were boosted by three Walter rocket engines, accelerating the wings to a speed enabling the ramjet engines to be started. [28]

---

[28] Witkoski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 204.

Prior to the publication in English of Witkowski's research, however, little was known about the performance capabilities of this unconventional aircraft, and it remained a curiosity.

Witkowski, however, managed to procure a post-war Polish report on the actual test results the craft managed to achieve:

> The maximum vertical speed did not exceed 124 km/h. After climbing to a sufficient altitude, the aircraft commenced horizontal flight with the adjustment of control surfaces and ailerons.(…) In horizontal flight the aircraft reached a speed of 1,000 km/h. The rotor operated at 520 rpm, which after conversion gave a rotational speed of the tips of 1,500 km/h.
>
> The initial rate of climb amounted to 7.5 km/min. Rotor working time -42 min., range 640 km. At an altitude of 11 km horizontal speed amounted to 800 km/h.[29]

Note that the speed of the craft at normal altitudes was 1,000 kilometers per hour, or approximately 600 miles per hour. Note also that the craft was apparently capable of reaching altitudes of some 11 kilometers, or about six and a half miles above the surface, far above the normal operational altitudes of most Allied and Soviet aircraft of the war.

The performance characteristics cited are made even more remarkable by the fact that the Triebflügel and similar craft were apparently brought to the United States as part of Project Lusty:

> A report reached Lt Col. O'Brien's party that a "strange aircraft" had been seen in a mountainous retreat near Salzburg. Investigation quickly determined that this "strange aircraft: was a jet-propelled helicopter, the only one of its kind in the world. The inventor and his entire staff, who had laboriously worked ten years to perfect it, were present, guarding his invention as one would a precious jewel. The helicopter was examined, and a preliminary superficial interrogation of the staff was sufficient to reveal its tremendous importance. It was carefully loaded in a large truck and taken to Munich. From there it was sent across Europe to France, placed on a boat and shipped to Wright Field,

---

[29] Ibid., p. 205, citing W. Kozakiewicz et. al. „Bron rakietowa" (Głowny Instytut Mechaniki, 1951).

> together with the confiscated notes, drawings, and meticulous records of experiments conducted by the scientist and his assistants.[30]

The Triebflügel and similar other projects were thus for the American military no mere curiosities. They represented significant technological advances over then existent American aerospace technology.

But now a question occurs: if the machine – and there was only one such of its kind in the world – was brought to Wright Patterson Airfield[31] and its scientists interred and papers confiscated, how did the post-war Polish Communist government know so much about its performance within six years of the war's end? The standard answer is, of course, that there were Soviet spies within the program, and that is the most likely explanation. But there is another possible answer that will loom ever larger as we proceed, and that is that it is possible that all these programs were continued after the war in a variety of host countries including Russia, and yet were independently coordinated from some hidden center, passing information back and forth between the cells in various host countries via a continuing "Nazi International".

The Triebflügel also points to another direction wartime German research pursued, and pursued with a vengeance: high performance ramjet-propelled aircraft. Indeed, when entering this area of inquiry, one is again entering one of those areas where the reality of wartime German accomplishments in secret weapons research was in diametric contradiction to the post-war Allied Legend, only in this case, the legend is not about the Allies having acquired the a-bomb while the Nazis remained incompetent nuclear bunglers, but about the fact that an American, Chuck Yeager, was the first human to pilot an aircraft through the sound barrier, an event that occurred after the war's end and the beginning of America's own black projects in exotic aircraft and space-based weapons.

---

[30] Project Lusty, frame 590, cited in Witkoski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 225.

[31] Thus, if one is to believe all the reports about Wright Patterson, it is home to a very odd collection of aliens – both extra- and sub-terrestrial – and Nazis!

The story begins with the acknowledged expert on ramjets, Prof. Dr. Alexander Lippisch, and his designs for a delta-winged P-13b ramjet aircraft. The goal of the project was to produce a super-sonic aircraft with a cheap, reliable propulsion system. Lippisch produced a number of designs, beginning with the P-12.

P12
LI-P12
FIN
ADJUSTABLE FLAPS
END SPAR (STEEL).
CENTER RIB END PLATE TANK
BURNER
SKID
DIFFUSOR
LORIN PROPULSED LI P12/13 MODEL (MAI 1944)

Lippisch's P-12 Design

Work on this aircraft was interrupted in May 1944, and Lippisch produced the design for the cleaner lines of the P13b.

1470
6900
7200
LI- P13 b.

Lippisch's P13b Design

The large air intakes for the ramjets and the disk-shaped combustion chamber are clearly evident. Wind tunnel trials soon showed the advantages of the pure delta shape for supersonic flight, however, and Lippisch produced his final design for the

P13b, the final design for which is described in a U.S. intelligence summary for April, 1945:

2
1
3
4
5
6
7
8
12
11
10
9

"Delta" Aircraft design is shown in this plan of the glider type, from prisoner's description, and clearly illustrates the radical triangular shape of these aircraft. The following components are annotated :

1. Cables to control surfaces.
2. Cabin.
3. Forward landing wheel.
4. Fuselage.
5. Spar to which wings are bolted.
6. Wing.
7. Main landing wheels.
8. Trimming rudder.
9. Elevator.
10. Aileron.
11. Landing flaps.
12. Rudder.

The Final Version of the Lippisch P13b According to a US Intelligence Summary of April 1945

The remarkable thing about the P13b development is that according to one version, the pure delta version, i.e., the final version seen immediately above, was the version that went through comprehensive trials in 1945. The design in fact, was completed by January 7, 1945.[32]

But did this fantastic supersonic fighter ever progress beyond the planning and wind-tunnel test stages? Enter Project Lusty once again. Frame 599 of the documentation lists the various actual aircraft that were brought to the Wright Airfield in the United States for "extended study and development."[33] As the documents state, "at least one, in some cases as many as ten, of the following, which represent only a fraction of the types (of aircraft), were located, some only after extensive searching throughout Germany."[34] The report then lists the types of aircraft, not just documents, that were seized:

> The Messerschmitt aircraft series 1101, 1106, 1110, 1111 and 1112, a series particularly interesting in that it illustrates a phase of co-ordinated aircraft design into which American aircraft are only now entering; seven rocket-propelled piloted aircraft specifically designed for anti-bomber interception work; a jet-propelled helicopter; Flettner-282 helicopter; Horton-9, a flying winged glider; Ju-188, a radar equipped twin-engine night fighter; Ju-290, four-engine long range transport; seven Me-163s, rocket-propelled interceptor fighters; ten Me-262s, twin jet-propelled fighter-interceptors; He-162, single place fighter powered by jet engines; flying bombs, type V-1 single and dual piloted; Lippisch P-13 Jager(sic)[35], a tailless twin rocket-propelled wing for supersonic speeds…[36]

The report clearly indicates that an actual aircraft, and not just a model, was brought to the United States, though it clearly has misidentified the fighter's rocket engines as the main propulsion unit. They were necessary only to reach sufficient speed to start the ramjets.

But the truly sensational bit of information concerning the P13b that emerges from the Project Lusty documents occurs in frame 601, where the top recorded speed for the P13b is stated as

---

[32] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, pp. 200-201.

[33] Ibid., p. 226.

[34] Ibid.

[35] "Jäger": fighter airplane.

[36] Project Lusty, frame 599, cited in Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 226.

Mach 1.85, "about 2100 km/h" or approximately 1200 miles per hour.[37] UFO researches will recognize that figure, because it appears often in newspaper accounts of UFO performance characteristics from the post-war period on into the 1950s. In any case, Polish military files indicate that the craft was prepared for, and successfully undertook, comprehensive trials ca. January-February 1945, and that indeed, the sound barrier had been broken by the Germans during that time, though no mention is made of the test pilot's name.[38]

The fact of the P13b's incredible speed and the uniqueness and simplicity of its combustion chamber, would have meant nothing less than an aerial warfare revolution had the war lasted a little longer and the aircraft had seen production. The reason is quite simple: it was cheap, impervious to Allied radar, and utterly beyond the performance capabilities of the proto-type British and American jet fighters only just beginning to be tested. Indeed, the performance characteristics of the P13b would only be matched by the "X planes" of the early American space program some years later.

As for Lippisch himself, he became something of a celebrity at Wright Airfield in Dayton, Ohio, since he was recognized as the leading authority on supersonic flight. Lippisch conducted seminars and lectures for his new American bosses.[39] More importantly, Lippisch had also completed designs for an orbiting space station capable of dropping nuclear bombs on any target on earth.[40]

---

[37] Project Lusty, Frame 601, cited, Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 226.

[38] Ibid., pp. 203-24. It seems worth mentioning that some sources indicate that Chuck Yeager was the first American to break the sound barrier, suggesting that someone, somewhere, knew something that the general public did not.

[39] Ibid., p. 222.

[40] Ibid.

4. Death on the Ground: Weapons of Mass Destruction in Use by the German Army on the Eastern Front in 1941

Beyond these deadly aerial and submarine developments of the late war, there were already indicators that something had long been afoot on the ground as well, as persistent rumors came from the Eastern Front that the German Army, on more than one occasion, had used some weapon of enormous destructive power on Russian military targets. In Reich of the Black Sun I indicated that this was most likely some early version of a fuel-air bomb, a device that the Germans had brought, by the end of the war, to enormous capability.[41] The sources for these strange allegations were none other than a secret Japanese communiqué from its embassy in Stockholm, Sweden, to an equally secret communication from the Soviets to the Nazis that if they did not "cease and desist" the Russians would resort to the use of poison gas.

Further corroboration of this is found in none other than celebrated SS commando Otto Skorzeny's memoirs. However, he recounts that their first use occurred not in the siege of Sevastopol in the Crimea in 1942, nor indeed with the prologue to the Battle of Kursk in 1943, but in the fierce Battle for Moscow during late November and early December of 1941!

> To our left is situated Khmiki, Moscow's port. From here it is only 8 kilometers to Moscow. On 30 November, without a single shot, the 62nd reconnaissance regiment belonging to Hoepner's Armoured Corps moves in here. It is not known why this opportunity was not exploited. Our motorcyclists retreated.
>
> Here begins the next mysterious episode in the battle for Moscow, which has escaped the attention of many historians. In order to oppose the horrifying rockets of "Stalin's organs" we applied a new type of rocket missile filled with liquid air. These were similar to enormous bombs and as far as my competence allows me to estimate – their effectiveness had no equal. Their use immediately had an impact on the enemy's defensive forces. The enemy used huge loudspeakers for propaganda purposes… By means of them several days after first using our missiles the Russians threatened to respond with gas attacks if we continued to use rockets filled with liquid air. From that moment, at > least in our sector, they were never used again. I don't think they were used on other stretches of the front as well.[42]

---

[41] Q.v. Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 191-192.

Witkowski confirms the assertion first broached by Renato Vesco that the research for these weapons of mass destruction – a large fuel air bomb has the same destructive effect as a small atom bomb – was undertaken by Prof. Dr. Zippermayer under the apt code name Hexenkessel or "Witches' Cauldron."[43]

SECRET

INFORMATION OBTAINED FROM TARGETS OF OPPORTUNITY IN THE SONTHOFEN AREA

Reported by

F/Lt H.H.G. Daniels and
F/Lt R.L. Bickerdike
MAP, RAE

BIOS Target Numbers
C 28/8.211, C 25/549, C 6/137, C 30/338,
C 4/268, C 22/2182, C 21/601

BRITISH INTELLIGENCE OBJECTIVES SUB-COMMITTEE
32 Bryanston Square, London, W.1.

---

[42] Otto Skorzeny, La Guerre Inconnue(Paris, Albin Michel: 1975), cited in Witkowski, p. 95.

[43] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 96.

4.

account of Allied bombing, although they were successful. The Ikonoscope was also going to be used in anti-submarine weapons, but this development had not yet started. Infra red rays collected from the target focussed on to a sensitive plate which caused an electrical mechanism to operate the steering mechanism of the projectile. Speer had ordered that Rambauschke should keep the details of this to himself, and should construct this part of the equipment personally.

(e) Artificial horizon

A self regulating artificial horizon for use in aircraft was invented by Dr. Knappstein, who had a factory in Berlin-Schoneberg. He worked in collaboration with Henschel, Berlin-Königswusterhausen. The horizon was not affected by any aerobatic manoeuvres.

(f) Microfilmed documents

An agency had been set up in Berlin for the microfilming of important technical and political papers under the control of Oberst Sauer who had his office at 88 Potsdamerstrasse. He came under the control of Speer's ministry, but also copied all the important papers of the S.S. Hauptamt. After the first heavy attacks on Berlin in 1943 it was decided to conceal three or more sets of the film copies at various dispersal points, probably in southern Germany. Gen.Ing. Herrmann and Oberst Diesing of the R.L.M. were thought to be responsible for the evacuation order. Manfred von Brauchitsch was charged with the transport of the films. Obersts Kneemeier and Diesing of the R.L.M., Oberst Geist who worked with Sauer and the head of the Beschaffungs and Rüstungslieferungsamt of the army should know the location of one or more of the hiding places. This information has been passed to Air Intelligence and they are dealing with the matter.

(g) Liquid air bomb

As the research on the atomic bomb under Graf von Ardenne and others was not proceeding as rapidly as had been hoped in 1944, it was decided to proceed with the development of a liquid air bomb. Experiments using ordinary powdered coal were not at all successful, but extremely good results were obtained from a mixture consisting of 60% finely powdered dry brown coal and 40%.

British Intelligence Report on Fuel Air Bomb

liquid air. The technical man responsible for this work was Dr. Zippelmeier. The first trial was made on the Döberitz grounds near Berlin using a charge of about 8 kg of powder in a thin tin plate container. The liquid air was poured on to the powder, and the two were mixed together with a long wooden stirrer. Kreutzfeld did this himself, and was present at the ensuing test. In an area of radius 500 to 600 metres trees etc. were all completely destroyed. Thereafter the explosion started to rise and only the tops of the trees were affected, although the intensive explosion covered an area 2 km. in radius. Zippelmeier then had the idea that a better effect might be obtained if the powder was spread out in the form of a cloud before the explosion. Trials were made with a paper container impregnated with some waxy substance. A metal cylinder was attached to the lower end of this container and hit the ground first, dispersing the powder. After a short time interval of the order of 1/4 second a small charge in the metal cylinder exploded and ignited the dark funnel shaped dust - liquid air cloud. The bombs had to be filled immediately prior to the departure of the aircraft. Bombs with charges of 25 and 50 kg. of powder were dropped on the Starbergersee, and photographs of the explosion were taken. Standartenführer Klumm kept a photograph of the result and showed it to Brandt (Himmler's personal adviser). The intensive explosion covered an area 4 to 4.5 km. radius, and the explosion was still felt on a radius 12.5 km. When the bomb was dropped on an airfield, much destruction was caused 12 km. away, and all the trees on a hillside 5 to 6 km. away were flat. On a radius of 12.5 km. only the tops of the trees were destroyed.

A Dr. Hahnenkamp was also concerned in this work with Dr. Zippelmeier, and both scientists were working for the R.L.M. in the laboratories of a research institute near Vienna. About the end of September 1944 Zippelmeier was moved to the Horn Gyroscopic compass factory in Plauen, Vogtland (Saxony), but was probably evacuated before the Russians occupied the area. The materials of the explosive were made by the specialists of the Nobel company.

C. Interrogation of Josef Ernst

In the course of interrogation it became clear, that

British Intelligence Report on German Fuel Air Bomb

Skorzeny also indicates the method of delivery was apparently through rocket artillery systems. In point of fact, SS panzer and panzer grenadier divisions often had a complement of so-called Nebelwerfer artillery units. These units were six-barreled rocket artillery pieces, ranging in caliber from 150mm (about six inches) to 280 mm (about eleven inches). The six barrels of a typical Nebelwerfer were arranged in a hexagonal pattern on an otherwise conventional split-trail artillery carriage. The 280mm Nebelwerfer units would have been the ideal delivery system for fuel air bombs.[44]

One can only guess what the effect of a battery of these weapons firing fuel air bombs on rockets, with their sirens screaming down on their targets, all synchronized to detonate simultaneously, would have had on a Russian unit. The phrase "carpet bombing" together with "tactical nukes" might, however, come close.

But in any case, it is clear why the Russians resorted to the threat of poison gas. And perhaps it is also clear why only recently the Russian government has revealed that its casualties during the war were far higher than anyone had previously imagined. Operationally competent as the German Army was during World War Two, the fantastic "kill ratios" it achieved on the Eastern Front could only have been due to the assistance of unconventional weaponry, and weaponry of mass destruction at that.

5. Beyond the Nuclear and Thermonuclear Bombs: Indications of a New Physics

Project Lusty also corroborates another sensational allegation that we shall encounter much later, namely, that the Nazis were engaged in research on various types of "death rays" or "anti-aircraft rays." This research apparently was undertaken in Vienna at number 87 Weimarstrasse.[45] But these were no ordinary lasers.

According to Polish researcher Igor Witkowski, the German government's archives indicate that

> In 1944 a special Luftwaffe research establishment received the task to develop such a weapon, situated in the town of Gross Ostheim. Materials relating to this work are currently located in a civilian > establishment – the Karlsruhe research centre (Forschungszentrum Karlsruhe) and were disclosed several years ago.[46]

---

[44] These bombs would not have been of the same colossal size as I reported on pp. 191-192 of Reich of the Black Sun, since the range of these rocket launchers was relatively short.

[45] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 227.

As was seen in Reich of the Black Sun, research was also conducted into exotic "Tesla" technology at the University of Heidelberg, where an underground bunker was discovered that housed a large artificial quartz parabolic dish which was used to fire high voltage pulses at targets some meters away to disintegrate them.[47] In this light it is perhaps worth mentioning that the giant German electronics firm, Siemens A.G., took out one of the first patents for an X-ray laser in the U.S.A. in 1955,[48] roughly half a decade before the first masers and lasers were "discovered." Did the Siemens patent in fact reflect work already undertaken by the Third Reich?

While this cannot be determined with certainty, it is perhaps significant that the Siemens firm seldom reveals the exact nature and extent of its research undertaken during the Nazi era. And it is perhaps also significant that Siemens might be trying to protect a patent or device previously filed during the Nazi era and subsequently confiscated as booty by taking out a patent for an X-ray laser in the United States.

Taken together, all these secret weapons projects – and they are only the tip of a very large, very deadly iceberg – indicate that Nazi Germany was aiming for supremacy on the ground, sea, and air. But it would be misleading to assume that this was the limit of their ambitions…

---

[46] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 92.

[47] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 221-222, 351.

[48] See chapter six for more discussion of X-ray lasers.

2.
"The Peenemünde Problem"

"...Germany's 'Amerika-Raket' was to be armed with a nuclear warhead. The report sounds utterly fantastic. But was the danger real?"
Friedrich Georg, Hitlers Siegeswaffen[1]

In August 1946, a highly placed department of the English War Office disclosed that "Hitler wanted the Moon."[2] In the race of "disclosure" after the war's end and before the iron vaults of "national security" slammed shut and the Allied Legend of atomic engineering superiority was born, such extraordinary revelations were commonplace. Indeed, one must wonder if there was not a psychological or disinformation operation being run behind these early post-war disclosures, to direct attention, particularly Soviet attention, away from areas of Nazi accomplishments that were not merely paper studies and fantasies. Even here, however, one must pause, for if Nazi Germany was successful, or even perilously close, in obtaining atom bombs prior to the war's end, as argued in the previous book on this subject, The Reich of the Black Sun,[3] then the comment cannot be brushed aside so easily. The War Office comment, and Consolidated Vultee's two page Life magazine advertisement disclosing the possible existence blueprints a 3,000 mile range rocket in an underground factory implies the existence at least of a rocket technology – and hence the delivery systems for a nuclear warhead – considerably more advanced than the puny V-2 with its limited lift and range. As German researcher Friedrich Georg notes, the comment points to the existence of Von Braun's A-14 moon rocket, a design for a five stage rocket to lift three astronauts to the moon and return them to the earth where they would then land in a version of Eric Sänger's "rocket plane."[4] And additionally, Consolidated Vultee's disclosure also prompts a question: how did they know there were blueprints for such a rocket? Blueprints imply something either ready to go into production or something already being built. Where did Consolidated Vultee get its information? The answer, as we shall see, is rather surprising.

---

[1] Friedrich Georg, Hitlers Siegeswaffen: Band 2: Star Wars 1947: Teilband B: Von der Amerikarakete zur Orbitalstation – Deutschlands Streben nach Intercontinentalwaffen und das erste Weltraumprogram (Schleusingen, Germany: Amun Verlag, 2004), p. 11, my translation.

[2] Ibid., p. 223.

[3] Joseph P. Farrell, The Reich of the Black Sun: Nazi Secret Weapons and the Cold War Allied Legend (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2004, pp. 1-158.

And if five-staged moon rockets to carry three astronauts to the moon and back, and orbital "space planes" sound uncomfortably familiar, they should, for it would seem that Von Braun's later Saturn V booster – the actual three stage booster of the three-manned Apollo moon missions – and the space shuttle itself, are but later developments of some prototypical Nazi design concepts for manned space missions.

A. The U.S.A. Gets the Crème de la Crème

Such disconcerting disclosures raise the other components of the Allied Legend, namely:

(1) that in the race to acquire Nazi secret weapons, scientists, and engineers and the associated technologies, the Western Allies in general and America in particular made off with the lion's share of the loot, the crème da la crème of the Third Reich's scientists and technology, enabling its successful Apollo moon program and likewise its early ICBM development;

(2) that the German "secret weapons" projects consisted mostly of the V-1 "buzz bomb", the V-2 rocket, and half-hearted and failed attempts at atom bomb research, and that after 1942, the Peenemünde scientists developed little else of practical value to realize the fantasies of the Nazi leadership.[5] No progress was made by the Nazis in long-range rocket bombardment beyond the V-2 besides paper projects that never were practically realized;

---

[4] Friedrich Georg, Star Wars 1947, p. 223.

[5] Friedrich Georg, Star Wars 1947, pp. 15-16.

(3) the Germans were incompetent bunglers when it came to nuclear bomb physics and nowhere close to obtaining the atom bomb, much less enough weapons grade uranium (and plutonium?) to make one work.

As my previous book The Reich of the Black Sun demonstrated, the Allied Legend as regards number (3) is in serious trouble given recent declassifications and research based upon them.[6] Indeed, one may say that the Allied Legend is in need of serious revision, if not of being disposed of completely.

We now turn to examine the first two components of the Allied Legend. However, this step may seem an odd place to begin a book whose principal subjects are not rockets and atom bombs, but (1) even more destructive and fantastic weapons and the technologies and science they imply, (2) their continued and possibly independent development, and (3) the possible implications of that development in the most famous political assassination in modern history, the cold-blooded murder of President John F. Kennedy. Even here, however, the actual state of affairs in German accomplishments in long-range rocketry are completely at variance with the Allied Legend. However, they also afford the best entry into a discussion of the physics and technologies associated with their most highly classified wartime secret weapons project, “The Bell.”

A moment’s reflection demonstrates why components (1) and (2) of the Allied Legend should be questioned, for if the U.S.A. got the crème de la crème of German rocket scientists – Von Braun, General Walter Dornberger, Hermann Oberth, Arthur Rudolph, et al. – then how does one account for the very early, and consistent, Soviet Russian lead in space achievements during the Cold War, right up to the Apollo moon landings? Soviet achievements indicate, as nothing else does, yet another very large hole in the Allied Legend.

---

[6] Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 1-158.

B. The U.S.S.R.'s Early Space Achievements

Sergei Korolëv, the brilliant engineering genius and mastermind of Russia's early ICBM and space exploration development, like his counterpart Wernher Von Braun in the U.S.A., laid a firm and lasting foundation for Russian space achievement. His influence persists to this day, if one considers that Russia's (and by implication, China's) Proton boosters are still the largest conventional chemical rockets in service, boosters that rely heavily on the basic concepts Korolëv pioneered. On the basis of his principles and accomplishments, Soviet Russia maintained an early lead over America, racking up the following impressive list of "firsts":

(1) It was the first to launch and orbit an artificial satellite, the famous Sputnik;
(2) It was the first to launch an animal – the little dog Laika – into space;
(3) It was the first to orbit and successfully return a man into space, Colonel Yuri Gagarin;
(4) It was the first to orbit and successfully return a woman into space;
(5) It was the first to land unmanned probes successfully on the Moon;
(6) It was the first to conduct successfully "extra-vehicular activity," i.e., a space walk, by humans in orbit; and last but not least,
(7) It was the first to place nuclear and thermonuclear warheads on an ICBM, the SS-6 and SS-7 "Sapwood."

Then, suddenly and quite inexplicably, the Soviet Union seemed to have "lost its drive" when the Apollo 8 mission successfully orbited, and the Apollo 11 mission successfully landed, humans on the Moon and returned them safely to the Earth. Inexplicably, the Soviet Union seemed to "just give up" and, as far as we know, never launched its own manned Moon mission, even though it was well within Russian capabilities. And perhaps equally inexplicably, the U.S.A., sighting "budget cuts" and public disinterest, discontinued its own Moon program, abandoning the scheduled Apollo 18 through 21 missions, and breaking up its remaining Saturn V boosters. The U.S.A. would not return to the Moon until the 1990s, with the Pentagon's unmanned "Clementine" orbiter. Then suddenly China orbited a human, and declared its intention to go to the Moon. Suddenly American interest seemed to change again, and the Bush Administration decided it would be a good idea for America to go back while on our ultimate way to Mars.

From World War Two to the present, space represents a strange cast of characters and a strange plot indeed: Hitler, the Soviets led by Korolëv and his team of German engineers, the Americans and their team of German engineers, the French-dominated European space agency and their team of German engineers, the Japanese, the Indians, and now the Chinese. China is significant for it underscores the actual Soviet achievement, for China's space technology is but re-worked Soviet technology updated with the latest American..

1. Booster and Lift Capabilities

All this implies that the Soviet Union developed very early on boosters with enormous thrust and lift capabilities, as the following comparative chart of American and Russian rockets from the 1950s and 1960s illustrates:

American Boosters:

Russian Boosters

As even a simple physical comparison demonstrates, in terms of raw boosting power, the Russians were consistently ahead of America throughout the earliest years of the Cold War, right down to the Apollo landings themselves.

Of course this is in part explained by the fact that the Russians had to develop rockets with greater thrust than America for two important reasons. First, they were less successful in miniaturizing components than the Americans, and consequently, pound for functional pound, their rockets tended to be heavier. But there is a much more important and obvious reason. Given its relatively more northern latitude, the Russians could not take advantage of the greater angular velocity of the earth as could the Americans, situated as they were at more southern latitudes. At the latitude of Cape Canaveral, the angular velocity of the earth is greater than at the Soviet Baikonur Kosmodrome, and hence, American rockets were not required to generate as much thrust to lift similar payloads.

But all this really only serves to underscore the Russian achievement all the more. Working under more restrictive conditions, they overcame them. How then was Korolëv and his design team able to achieve such early and stunning success with their boosters, especially since the U.S.A. was supposed to have gained the “crème de la crème” of German rocket scientists and engineers?

G-6 . R-15
"Cluster of G-4's"
3000 kg fission warhead
R-7 Initial Design
RD-105/106 Engines
3000 kg fission warhead
R-7 Final Design
RD-107/108 Engines
5500 kg thermonuclear warhead
R-7 / Sputnik 1
RD-107/108 Engines

The First ICBM: The Russian "Sapwood";
The Same Booster was used to Launch Mankind's First Artificial Satellite, the Sputnik

2. The First ICBMs and the Characteristic Russian "Bundle" Rocket

A closer glance at the first Russian ICBM, the same rocket used to launch and orbit Sputnik, with their typical "shape" distinctive of Russian boosters all the way up to the massive Proton booster, shows how. As the close-ups of the "Sapwood" show, the typical Russian booster is not so much a single rocket but a "bundle" of rockets fastened around a central shaft which is itself another engine.

C. What's Wrong with This Picture?

Clearly, something is wrong with this picture. The U.S.A. did get the best and brightest of Nazi rocket scientists and technology, yet, the Russians made away with scores of "middle" echelon scientists and engineers. How then did Korolëv hit upon the brilliant and simple expedient of the "bundle" rocket?

The standard explanation is that Korolëv while on a walk in the woods around his dacha in Moscow was inspired by the root systems of enormous trees. They suggested to him the distinctive shape and concept of the Soviet "bundle rocket" boosters.[7] In the light of the now known state of German wartime rocketry, however, this cannot be anything other than an attempt to deflect attention away from the real origin of the concept, for as a simple expedient to achieve quick heavy lift capability, it is a characteristic more of a nation at war – and in a hurry – straining to achieve a swift entry to space and long-range rocket bombardment capabilities. It is an expedient that – like the Nazi decision to pursue only a uranium-fueled atom bomb – fits the practical requirements of Nazi Germany.

D. The Real Origin of the Bundle Rocket: "Projekt Zossen"

Not surprisingly, then, the real origin of the "bundle rocket" booster concept was in wartime Nazi Germany, where the idea was born – in 1942! – to "bundle together" five V-2 rocket engines, and fire them simultaneously, to achieve greater lift and range capability. The plan was called "Project Zossen," a clue, perhaps, that the origin of the idea came from within the OKW's super secret underground communications and command bunker in

---

[7] David Percy and Mary Bennett note in Dark Moon, p. 192, that the names chosen for America's rockets might reflect a hidden occult agenda: " It is our contention that the codenames given to projects by the Americans reveal through word association (either intentionally or unintentionally) much about their function. The names of the rockets designed by (Werner Von Braun) at this times were the Redstone and Jupiter. Although the old arsenal in which he worked at Huntsville was called Redstone, it is an interesting coincidence that Mars is also the red plant. Jupiter, associated with war and victory, is the Roman name for the god that the Greeks called Zeus, who was the father of Apollo."

Zossen, a suburb of Berlin. In any case, the project was more than just a "paper project" for two designs were actually modeled and wind tunnel tests were performed on them, as indicated by the following pictures of German wind tunnel test models:

The Bundle Rocket Design Test Model:
The Rocket Model is in Front of a Larger Rocket inside the circle

Close-up of the German "Bundle Rocket"

This expedient had the advantage over designing, testing and building an entirely new rocket in that the V-2’s components and performance capabilities were known quantities, already tested, and in production. And clearly Korolëv’s boosters are but a streamlined second generation version of the earlier Nazi prototype. But was a full scale version of the rocket, or for that matter, any of the other intercontinental rocket designs the Nazis had proposed, ever tested? To answer that question, we return to Peenemünde, at the end of the war, and notice yet another “problem.”

E. SS Obergruppenführer Hans Kammlers “Evacuation” of Peenemünde and the Russian Arrival

Is there any indication that these early German ICBM “bundle rockets” or any other long-range strategic rockets went to actual construction and testing? If so, then the logical choice was Peenemünde, for in spite of the heavy attention of Allied bombers, it was the only place presumably with facilities large enough to achieve the task.

1. Strange Events at an “Empty” Site

General Walter Dornberger made it clear that as early as 1939 the ultimate goal of the Peenemünde center was to create a long range rocket capable of striking New York City and other targets on the east coast of the United States. Of course, this implies a capability to strike all of European Russia as well.[8] By July 29, 1940, at Peenemünde the engineer Graupe had already produced the first designs for a trans-Atlantic 2 stage rocket. Hermann Oberth began his own formal studies for the fuel and lift requirements for such a rocket in October of 1941,[9] as the Wehrmacht continued to liquidate the Red Army in Operation Barbarossa.

But more to the point is a letter from the Reich’s emerging “plenipotentiary for secret weapons development,” SS

---

[8] Georg, Star Wars, p. 29.

[9] Ibid.

Obergruppenführer Hans Kammler, dated October 1943, and stating that the development of the Amerikaraket continued apace.[10] Moreover, there exist estimates for cost, labor, and material for the "America Rocket" that strongly suggest that it had become more than a mere "paper project." As with anything else in Kammler's black empire of black projects, anything suggesting "labor" meant the slave labor of concentration camps, and to suggest that the project was merely a "paper project" is to diminish the human suffering that was involved in its very real flesh and blood actualization.

Another factor must be weighed. As indicated in my previous book on German secret weapons, The Reich of the Black Sun, there is a circumstantial case that the Nazis successfully tested an atom bomb ca. Oct. 10th, 1944, on the island of Rügen, or possibly some other island, standing along the German Baltic coast in the sea lanes running from Königsburg to Kiel.[11] This would imply that some time earlier in the summer of that year, the SS achieved some sort of breakthrough in its bomb program, perhaps finally acquiring enough critical mass to test in a bomb. In any case, the alleged Rügen test was successful, and as German researcher Friedrich Georg observes, the call then went out for "secure delivery systems."[12] It stands to reason then, that the Amerikaraket, given this alleged atomic bomb success and actual fuel air bomb success,[13] was much more than a "paper rocket." By the time of its successful testing in 1944, the paper studies and wind tunnel tests were already two years old! The rocket was, in other words, on the track to actual testing and production.

---

[10] Ibid., pp. 30-31.

[11] Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 70-80.

[12] Georg, Star Wars 1947, p. 36, my translation. This illustrates another facet of the German secret programs, one overlooked by most authors, namely, that unlike other countries, it appears that the Nazis gave the formal order for the development of these weapons after a test had been successfully completed. Thus, the order to "develop" such weapons should not be taken as an order to establish the research necessary to bring them to realization, but rather as the order to bring them to production. It is thus noteworthy that Hitler signs the order to "develop" the atomic bomb after the alleged test in Rügen occurs. The same, in fact, could be said of the V-2, for it is only after Hitler sees films of the rocket being successfully launched that he gives the order to develop it.

[13] See Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 191-193.

All this leads us to General Kammler's January 31, 1945 order to evacuate Peenemünde. According to the standard line, the explanation for this curious order is that the Red Army was expected to arrive at any moment. But the Red Army would not arrive at Peenemünde until May 4th![14] This poses a significant question: Was Peenemünde, as Friedrich Georg puts it, merely a "ghost town" for the three months from the evacuation order to the Russian arrival?[15] The order is even more curious given the fact that, since the massive British Royal Air Force raid in 1943 that all but destroyed the facility, the process had already begun of moving as much of the V-2 production to underground sites as possible. True, the process was slow and still continuing when Kammler's 1945 order came down, but nonetheless, it was already well under way. By early 1945 most of the V-2 production was at the massive underground factory of the notorious Mittelwerk at Nordhausen. Thus the problem: Why give an order for something already taking place?

One late war incident suggests, and suggests quite strongly, that this was not the case, for on March 9, 1945, a British twin-engine photo-reconnaissance Mosquito fighter-bomber was chased from Peenemünde by no less than three German Messerschmitt 262 jet fighters.[16] Of course, one possible explanation for the British presence at the site was that they were simply trying to confirm what their intelligence had probably already told them, namely, that Peenemünde had been evacuated.

But while that may explain the presence of the RAF Mosquito, it is not a good explanation for the – by that late date – relatively heavy presence of the Luftwaffe in the form of no less than three of its rare and valuable Messerschmitt 262 jet fighters. Three jets just to chase an unarmed British photo-reconnaissance plane from a "ghost town"? Clearly this makes no sense, and implies that something was still taking place at Peenemünde, something very secret and very important, something requiring all the protection the crumbling Luftwaffe could muster.

---

[14] Georg, Star Wars 1947, p. 75.

[15] Ibid., p. 76.

[16] Georg, Star Wars 1947, pp. 76-77.

Seen in this way Kammler's "evacuation" order of January 31, 1945 thus appears to be a clever ploy by the security-obsessed SS general, designed to throw Allied and Soviet intelligence off the trail of whatever was still going on there. Since most of the V-1 and V-2 teams were long gone from Peenemünde to their new underground facilities, something else must have been going on that merited such heavy protection.

But what was it?

Fortunately, there do exist reports that during the period from March to April (and perhaps as late as May) 1945 that there were at least four tests of a large rocket named "Thor's Hammer" or the Amerikaraket. These reports moreover name both Peenemünde and Ohrdruf – site of the second alleged German a-bomb test on March 4, 1945[17] - as the possible sites of these tests. It is unlikely that Ohrdruf functioned as a test site for such a large rocket, since there was present there none of the necessary facilities to assemble and launch such a vehicle. So one is left with Peenemünde, the most likely place. In any case, three of these tests were allegedly shots of the Amerikaraket into the Atlantic, and a fourth test was allegedly to see if orbit could be achieved![18]

But there is even further corroboration of mysterious goings-on at Peenemünde at the war's end.

2. The "Urals Incident"

Oddly, while Peenemünde was visited only lightly by the British RAF after its massive 1943 air raid, it was visited often, and heavily, by the Soviet Red Air Force right up to the war's end, suggesting that, if the British had fallen for Kammler's ruse, the [18] Georg, Star Wars 1947, p. 79. Geoffrey Brooks corroborates the test launch of some longer-ranged version of the V-2 from the Ohrdruf region in the Harz: The A-9 'winged V-2' project was resurrected in 1944/45. German testimonies allege that at least one successful test launch was made from the Harz in March 1945 and in mass production this rocket could have hit London from central Germany." (Brook, Hitler's Terror Weapons, p. 19).

---

[17] Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 80-88.

Soviets had not. It is an indication that they knew something that the Allies did not.

Late-war German long-range rocket activity is corroborated, in fact, by the Russians themselves. In the Spanish language edition of the Soviet Russian science magazine Sputnik there is a report of the destruction in 1945 – during the war – of a Russian munitions factory in the Ural Mountains near the river Tobol. Notably, the article ascribed the destruction to a "terror attack" of "fascist perfidy" much like "the later attacks of American B-52 bombers against the port city of Haiphong in Vietnam."[19] If the Russian report is accurate and not merely a typical Communist exercise in disinformation or blame-shifting for their own bureaucratic incompetence, then this most probably was a rocket attack, since by that late date in the war the Luftwaffe had little left by way of long range heavy bombers able to make the trip,[20] a trip that in any case had little prospect of success given the Red Air Force's mastery of the skies over eastern Europe. Only a rocket attack could guarantee success for such an operation.

Given all the foregoing, it is reasonable to conclude that the Nazis may actually have been successful in testing the first strategic ballistic missiles toward the end of the war, while falling just short of getting them into production.

….or is that too, yet another dangerous myth?

We shall answer that question in a subsequent chapter.

For now, we address another question. If the Nazis had indeed tested such long-range rockets, much less successfully fired one on Soviet Russia, then this implies that yet another phase of the Amerikaraket went beyond merely being a "paper study." The Nazis could have tested all the long range rockets they wished, but they would have been utterly useless without a means to guide them to target.

Thus, the existence of a credible long range and secure guidance system is also corroborative evidence that the Amerikaraket was not just a paper project. The question is, did the

---

[19] Ibid., p. 80.

[20] Most of the Luftwaffe's bombers capable of making the trip were being husbanded in Norway for an eminent operation against New York City. See Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 97-98.

Nazis have such means of guidance? The answer is yes, and they did not just exist on paper.

F. Over-the-Horizon Radars and the Amerikaraket

Successful German tests of long range rockets, much less an actual German rocket attack on Russian sites in the Urals, implies the existence of associated technologies and methods to guide such missiles accurately to their targets. Indeed, from the scientific and engineering point of view in the early 1940s, accurate guidance of such rockets was the principal problem that the Germans faced, not the actual rocket itself. A number of methods were therefore proposed to make the Amerikaraket accurate, some technological, others less so.

Given that the Amerikaraket was intended to carry "small atom bombs"[21] and "other weapons of mass destruction,"[22] and since the inertial guidance system of the V-2 would have been inadequate and inaccurate for attacking targets on the American east coast, the Nazis had to consider a variety of alternative modes for guidance. In other words, if the Amerikaraket was not a paper project, then one should expect the Germans to be working in each of the following areas:

(1) technological and secure means of guiding a rocket to targets at long range; or, failing that,
(2) alternative methods of guiding a rocket accurately to a target at long range; and,
(3) technologies of miniaturizing enough rocket and/or A-bomb (or H-bomb or fuel-air bomb)[23] components to enable a long range rocket to be able to carry such heavy payloads.

---

[21] Georg, Star Wars 1947, pp. 28-32, especially p. 31.

[22] Ibid.

[23] Q.v. my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 190-193.

Viewed in this way, the Amerikaraket was anything but a paper project, since the Nazis considered any number of methods, from "back-pack" piloted rockets, to enable a pilot to guide the rocket to target visually before bailing out at the last minute, to actually planting a radio transponder inside the Empire State Building for a rocket to home in on,[24] to much more sophisticated and ultimately much more secure technological means of guidance based on beam riding and radar interference. It is this last category that is of most interest to our purposes in this book, for it is this last area of development that points very clearly to Nazi interest in, and development of, areas of physics ultimately very different than those pursued by their Allied counterparts.

1. The German Proto-Transistor And Television Minaturization

Before examining German accomplishments in the technology of long-range rocket guidance, it is necessary to examine their success in the equally important area of miniaturization of components. Such a step was absolutely necessary if the Third Reich was ever to be successful in wedding its atom bomb – a notoriously heavy device in those days – to a rocket. Indeed, as I pointed out in Reich of the Black Sun, any and every method appears to have been pursued by Kammler's SS Sonderkommando, including techniques of boosting nuclear fission of atomic nuclei to lower the weight of the critical mass of a nuclear warhead.[25] But there were other successes in miniaturization.

It is well known that Nazi Germany, during the infamous 1936 Berlin Olympics, successfully created the first live television broadcast of a sports event for a general public. The following is a picture of one of the large and cumbersome television cameras – then "state of the art" – that were stationed at crucial locations around the Olympic stadium at Tempelhof Field in Berlin.

---

[24] Friedrich Georg, Star Wars, p. 175.

[25] Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 83-85.

1936 German Television Camera at the Berlin Olympics

Television sets were placed at various locations in the Olympic village and the environs of Greater Berlin to allow the visiting athletes, tourists and German citizens to watch the games as they occurred. Needless to say, for Dr. Josef Göbbels' Propaganda Ministry it was a propaganda coup of the first order, and a clear demonstration to the world of German technological prowess.

During the war, however, television quickly suggested itself to the Germans as a means of visually guiding a short-range missile to target by placing a television camera in the nose of a missile. Transmitting a picture back to an operator on the ground or in an airplane, the rocket could then be unerringly guided to target. And by war's end, they had successfully tested the first such "smart bomb."[26]

Obviously, placing a television camera of the size of those used in the 1936 Olympic Games inside a missile was impractical, and so the camera had to be considerably miniaturized.

By the war's end, the Germans had been hugely successful in this task, accomplishing an almost tenfold reduction in size, as this photo of a small television camera and receiver set, about the size of a large shoebox, attests:

---

[26] Q.v., Reich of the Black Sun, p. 184.

Miniature German Television Camera for Missile Guidance

Moreover, this miniaturization implies something enormously important, and its importance will become more and more apparent as we proceed in part two of this work, for such a tremendous reduction in size implies some sort of breakthrough in vacuum tube technology, if not in semi-conductor research itself.

The mention of semi-conductors is intentional, for they may have accomplished much more, as the following picture demonstrates:

Telefunken

German "Proto-Transistor" from 1940

The pictured klystron tube is the same approximate size as the last knuckle and fingertip of the reader's little finger!

In short, the Germans came exceedingly close, very early in the war, by virtue of competent research in semi-conductors, to achieving the transistor, for the Allied equivalent of this little tube at the end of the war is ten times as large! This little "proto-transistor", dating from 1940 (!), was used in 1941 in small radios that actually entered production for the German military, radios that were "as small as the later transistor radios of the 1950s and that also functioned with batteries."[27]

The mere existence of this little tube is the first glimpse of a very significant problematic that will preoccupy us in part three of this book, and that was mentioned in the last two chapters of my previous book on Nazi secret weapons, Reich of the Black Sun. The problematic may be glimpsed here as a kind of preview to part three, and it is best stated in conjunction with Lt. Col. Philip J. Corso's book, The Day After Roswell.

2. The Problem of the Miniature German Klystron Tube: Roswell, The E.T. Myth and the Nazi Legend Revisited

Lt. Col. Philip J. Corso (US Army, Ret.) was perhaps something of a Godsend to UFO enthusiasts, for he corroborated – at least on the surface – the whole Roswell UFO-and-ET-crash and recovery scenario in his well-known book, The Day After Roswell. Corso's thesis is familiar to most people who have investigated the UFO literature.

In his post as a top national security military officer, Corso maintains in his book that he was entrusted with some of the "recovered technology" from the "alien craft" that crashed at Roswell. His assignment was gradually to "seed" those aspects of "recovered ET technology" into American industry. Corso further maintains that among some of this "recovered and gradually seeded" technology were lasers, computers, fiber optics, and transistors.[28] Of course, after the book's appearance and Corso's own appearance on a popular overnight radio talk show, critical and historical analysis was all but suspended, and there was a further boost to the "ET" interpretation of the Roswell incident, all as a result of his book.

---

[27] Georg, Star Wars, p. 91.

[28] Philip J. Corso, (Lt. Col, US Army, Ret), The Day After Roswell, pp. 167-168.

Crucial to Corso's case was the transistor, and he spends a great deal of time in his book demonstrating that his thesis of its "ET-Roswell" origin has to be true by pointing out that the history of the discovery of the transistor by Bell Laboratories is obscure at best.[29] The reason? Very simple. The transistor had no prior "discovery history" because it was "ET" in origin.

But given what has now been demonstrated, we propose that, like the ambiguity in the MAJIC-12 documents themselves – vacillating between technologies clearly exotic though terrestrial and an "ET" cover story – there is another possible explanation for the origin of the transistor, one which, as we saw in Reich of the Black Sun,[30] it would appear that the highest authorities, including the military, wish to keep covered up. That other possible source for the transistor, one that would much more satisfactorily explain its obscure discovery history than the ET hypothesis, is wartime Nazi research and accomplishment in semiconductor research.

Simply put, Corso's work is, in this respect at least, pure obfuscation and disinformation, since one can only assume that a man of Corso's obvious intelligence could not have been unaware of German wartime scientific achievements, as plausibly demonstrated by the above miniature tube, fully seven years before the Roswell incident and its recovery of "advanced ET technology."

But there are other aspects of Corso's work that must also be called into question vis-à-vis the state of Nazi secret weapons research. It is well known that the Germans undertook and developed a wide range of infrared sites to enhance the night-fighting ability of their tanks and infantry. What is not generally known is the apparently high state of development of second and third generation technologies these infrared sites may have represented, for Polish researcher Igor Witkowski uncovered a certain amount of evidence in a recently declassified Alsos report that indicates preliminary work was undertaken in liquid crystals and something the Germans called "optical telephony."[31] This is an extremely intriguing discovery, because fiber optics is yet another technology that Col. Corso maintained was recovered from "ET" at Roswell and "gradually seeded" into American industry.

---

[29] Corso, The Day After Roswell, pp. 167-168. See also chapter seven for more details.

[30] Reich of the Black Sun, Chapter 16, "Roswell: The ET Myth vs. The Nazi Legend," pp. 274-330.

3. Over the Horizon Radars

One little known aspect of German wartime research is the area of over-the-horizon radars. While the Nazis were pursuing a number of options for the guidance of their intercontinental Amerikaraket, including a piloted version from which the pilot would eject at the last moment, the most preferred method was "beam riding," a method that would allow the rocket to be guided to target by a beam. One project consisted of placing a secret radio transmitter inside the Empire State building for the purpose![32]

But by far the most serious and promising – and technologically involved – methods were the various Over-the-Horizon Radars that the Germans were developing for the purpose, the sets Elefant, See-Elefant, and the mobile Freya unit. The Elefant set was developed by the Research Department of the Deutsche Reischspost, and was the world's first genuine over-the-horizon radar based on temperature inversions in the ionosphere.[33] The See-Elefant was a further development of this equipment, and was built in western Denmark and consisted of a sending antenna, approximately 100 meters high, placed between two permanent receiving antennae some distance to either side. It was a broadband antenna system, operating in the 23-29 MHz, 24-30MHz, and 30-38 MHz range.[34]

But the most advanced of these early over-the-horizon radars was the Freya unit, a "revolutionary system" that was "fully mobile."[35] The Freya unit's basic principle of operation is visible from this German schematic from 1945:

---

[31] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 158.

[32] Friedrich Georg, Star Wars, p. 175.

[33] Ibid., p. 95.

[34] Friedrich Georg, Star Wars, pp. 95, 97.

[35] Ibid., p. 98.

Bordgerät
Erstling
Abstand z. Leitebene
Lenkverfahren mit Freya-Erstling
Leitebene
Abb. 4
Empfangs-Antenne I
Sende-Antenne
Freya
Sende-u. Empfangs-Anlage
Empfangs-Antenne II
30m
30m
B 29/45

German Schematic of Freya's Basic Operating Principle

The basic idea is evident from an artist's sketch dated March 30, 1945, of the Freya unit emplaced and ready to transmit. The diagram labels each of these antennae the Sende und Empfangs-

Antennae, the Sende Antenna I and Send Antenna II.[36] Thus, the Freya unit represents a considerably newer and different principle than the Elefant or See-Elefant, with their single sending and two receiving antennae. The central sending and receiving antenna sends out a pulse, which is also sent as secondary pulses slightly later by the antennae to either side. This is a true phased array radar, able to shape and bend its signals around the curvature of the earth, or "over the horizon."

Freya Anlage
in Feuerstellung
① Freya-Sende-u.Empfangs-Anlage
② Stromversorgungswagen
③ Sende-Antenne II
④ Sende-u.Empfangs-Antenne
⑤ Sende-Antenne I
Abb.8

Artist's Sketch of Freya

Consequently, the Germans, in spite of some technical shortcomings of their radar operations during the war, were experimenting in areas that were quite advanced for the day:

(a) Broadband radar systems based on
(b) Phased array "signal shaping" for
(c) Over-the-horizon, or "action at a distance" operation.

As will be subsequently argued in chapter five, they were combining all these ideas with that of sending pulses of bursts of energy. All of this was, of course, for the long-range guidance of their projected intercontinental rockets.

---

[36] Georg, Star Wars, p. 97. See also chapter five of the current work for the diagram and its importance for the type of physics the Nazis may have been developing.

In any case, the accuracy of these types of systems had been brought to a high state by the Germans by October of 1943. By that time, the accuracy was such that it was able to guide aircraft at a distance of 105 kilometers, during a bombing run, to release their bombs within 600 meters of their target, even though it was not visible to them.[37]

However, as will be seen in a later chapter, the Germans may have discovered something while operating these sophisticated radar units that indicated they were a door beckoning to a whole new type of physics, one with a far greater promise than mere long-range rockets carrying atomic bombs.

The real question, the one that will now preoccupy us for the remainder of this book, remains: why would the military-industrial-national security complex be so concerned to deflect attention away from Nazi scientific achievements – an effort represented by Colonel Corso's The Day After Roswell - even at this late date, unless there is something it still wishes to hide? The answer is twofold. The most important part of the answer lies in what the Germans may have discovered with these radar sets, a part with which we shall have much to do when we finally turn to examine the exotic type of physics the Nazis may have been developing in part two.

For now we will turn to a less important reason, the reason that, if one pulled on the thread long enough and hard enough, would inevitably lead one to ask questions about the "public consumption" history of the race to the moon, the most visible aspect of the survival of Nazi research projects and their "creative financing" in the post-war world.

---

[37] Ibid., p. 99.

3.

"From Russia with Love:"

The Two Space Programs Hypothesis

"The Second World War was an air war; the Third World War will be a space war."
Reichsmarschall Hermann Göring, shortly before his suicide, from a letter of October 1946 to Sir Winston Churchill[1]

"Control of space means control of the world…. There is something more important than the ultimate weapon. That is the ultimate position – the position of total control over Earth that lies somewhere in outer space…"
President (then U.S. Senate Majority Leader) Lyndon Baines Johnson, Speech before the Senate Democratic Caucus, January 7, 1958.[2]

What do celebrated Face-on-Mars expert Richard C. Hoagland, conspiriologist Jim Keith, Apollo program "whistleblowers" David Percy and Mary Bennett, an anonymous Texas lawyer, famous New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison, "occult" author "Jan Van Helsing," and even Werner Von Braun himself all have in common? All of them believe, in some fashion, that there have been, for quite some time, two space programs, one for public consumption, and another deeply covert one with its own agenda.

And the idea is not confined to books or non-fiction. In the classic James Bond film Diamonds Are Forever, a young Sean Connery tracks down a plot for world domination by the sinister "independent villain" Ernst Stavro Blohfeld to a kidnapped eccentric multi-billionaire – played by country singer Jimmy Dean - who lives in a Las Vegas penthouse, and to his secret corporate headquarters somewhere in the Nevada desert. If all this sounds vaguely familiar, hang on.

Once having infiltrated the secret Nevada installation, Connery-Bond then exchanges brief remarks with a German scientist – Pr. Dr. Metz is the name of the character in the film – who is working with diamonds for use in a super-laser to be orbited in a satellite in space as the ultimate missile-destroying weapon, thus rendering America's nuclear arsenal useless. While on this world-saving mission, Bond manages to escape the compound through a television sound stage, a set which depicts a lunar landscape, complete with suited "astronauts" going through the slow-motions of a well-scripted lunar landing. These film facts have long led those who believe that the Apollo lunar landings were hoaxed to maintain that Ian Fleming, creator of the famous British spy character and himself an intelligence agent during the war, was leaking "inside information."

---

[1] Friedrich Georg, Star Wars, p. 9.

[2] Cited in Mary Bennett, David S. Percy, Dark Moon: Apollo and the Whistle-Blowers (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2001), pp. 165, 518.

Apparently Ian Fleming was not the only one involved in such "leaks," for another famous movie, Seven Days in May, this time by Rod Serling, celebrated creator of the famous Twilight Zone television series, told the story of an attempted right-wing military coup against a weak and apparently "liberal" President. The coup was centered on a secret military base somewhere in the desert of the American southwest. So real was Serling's screenplay that the release of the movie was actually delayed after the assassination of President Kennedy for fears that it might raise too many questions. And that may not have been entirely coincidental, for President Kennedy had indeed given actual assistance to Serling when he was writing his screenplay. Did Kennedy let Serling know, in so many terms, about Area 51?

And, to round out the picture, another famous movie contributed significantly in conspiracy circles to the view of "movies-as-deliberate-leaks". The movie was Capricorn One. In the movie, three astronauts are placed into a space capsule bound for Mars on mankind's first manned flight to the Red Planet. But, at the last minute, they are secretly taken off the rocket and flown to – you guessed it – a secret desert base in the American southwest where, before television cameras and a full sound lot movie mock-up set of the Martian surface, the three astronauts then act out their carefully scripted parts of the voyage to and landing on Mars. To round out the picture of conspiracy, the three astronauts, having pangs of conscience, decide to expose the whole farce, and orders are given to hunt them down and ensure the project's secrecy. Meanwhile, a curious ground member of the mission control crew, who has spotted anomalies in the data that do not square with a mission to Mars, is eliminated.

A. The Two Space Program Hypothesis

If anything emerges from these three famous "cult film" classics, it is a theme one encounters quite frequently in some "conspiracy" literature, aspects of which are as follows:

1. The Apollo Moon missions, or at least some aspects of them, were a hoax, and the Apollo missions did not happen in exactly the way we were told they happened;
2. As a corollary to this idea, there is the notion that there are two space programs, one for public consumption, and another hidden one, being controlled or coordinated by the military-industrial complex;
3. People have been murdered, or at least died under mysterious circumstances, who have attempted to expose this secret program and public hoax; and finally, if one adds Serling's plot into this mix,
4. There is some element or aspect of a coup d'etat hovering in the background.

We shall call these four elements the "Two Space Programs" Hypothesis. And as will be seen below as the main non-fictional versions of it are examined, there are indeed unusually cogent arguments that at least some version of the hypothesis may in fact be true.

1.The Torbitt Document Version

Perhaps the most famous and yet paradoxically least known version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis is that of the so-called "Torbitt" document on the assassination of President Kennedy. Well-known to JFK assassination researchers since its first appearance in photocopied "samizdat" form in the 1970s, the document is hardly known at all to the general public, even amongst those inclined to believe that some sort of conspiracy was involved in the assassination.

Such a response, however, hardly captures the document's singular importance. Indeed, as well-known "conspiriologist" Kenn Thomas notes, it is arguably "the pivotal document of JFK assassination research,"[3] if for no other reason than the sensational contents it contains, for its contents were in turn summarized from New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's famous (or infamous) investigation of the case. Its truly remarkable contents are even more explosive considering the fact that in almost no version of the JFK assassination conspiracy that make their rounds every few years when a new book is published on the subject, are the Torbitt Document's main characters ever mentioned. Indeed, not even Garrison dwelt too long on this particular aspect that his own investigators discovered, and Oliver Stone ignored this aspect of the story completely in his celebrated movie on the Garrison investigation, JFK. Nonetheless, the Committee on Assassinations in the 1970s took it seriously enough to entirely prohibit discussion or even mention of any possible Nazi connection with the assassination.

But what could have been so sensational about a single pseudonymously authored "samizdat" manuscript privately circulated in assassination conspiracy circles? Kenn Thomas once again summarizes some of its highly unusual contents:

> It makes connections to such then-unknown governmental spy agencies as Defense Industrial Security Command and Division Five of the FBI; it suggests that a former prime minister of Hungary was the infamous "umbrella man" seen in the Zapruder film; it introduces to the assassination lore such personalities as Fred Crisman (spelled Chrismon" by Torbitt) as one of the railroad tramps behind the grassy knoll.[4]

Just in case the reader does not know who these individuals are, nor why they should be significant, a brief word is necessary. The former Prime Minister of Hungary referred to is Ferenc Nagy, a man who was nothing less than a puppet of the Nazis during World War Two. What he should be doing on the grassy knoll clearly signaling someone by closing his umbrella just as President Kennedy’s limousine is driving by, no one knows. And as if that were not strange enough, the Crisman referred to is none other than Fred Chrisman, well known for his involvement in the infamous Maury Island UFO affair in 1947 in Seattle-Tacoma, Washington.[5]

---

[3] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: The Torbitt Document and the JFK Assassination , with Introduction by Kenn Thomas and Foreword by David Hatcher Childress(Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 1996), p. 6.

[4] Ibid..

Just what this oddball cast of characters should have to do with the Kennedy assassination not even the Torbitt document pretends to know, as no explanations or possible motivations are offered. But one can imagine the perplexity of District Attorney Garrison when he learned of Chrisman’s odd background prior to serving a subpoena on him!

In any case, a clue to it all is perhaps afforded by the reference to the “Defense Industrial Security Command”. What was this entity? Here, it is best to cite the Torbitt document itself, rather than Thomas’ introduction:

> The killing of President Kennedy was planned and supervised by Division Five of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a relatively small department within the FBI whose usual duties are espionage and counter-espionage activities.
>
> Actually, Division Five acted dually with the Defense Intelligence Agency which was acting on behalf of the Joints Chiefs of Staff (sic) in the Pentagon. Directly under the two-pronged leadership of Division Five and the DIA was the Control Group, their highly secret police agency – the Defense Industrial Security Command. The Defense Industrial Security Command has always been kept secret because it acts, in addition to its two official control organizations, on behalf of NASA, the Atomic Energy Commission, U.S. Information Agency, and the arms, equipment, ammunition, munitions and related miscellaneous supply manufacturing corporations contracting with NASA, the AEC, USIA, and the Pentagon….

---

[5] The Maury Island affair is one of the more unusual UFO-debris retrieval cases, long regarded by most UFOlogists as a complete hoax. Chrisman claimed to have recovered slag-like debris from a “malfunctioning” UFO while on a boat in Puget Sound. The debris was later examined and allegedly placed in a cereal box to be flown to an Air Force base. But the debris never made it to the base, as the twin engine bomber flying it inexplicably crashed.

> The Defense Industrial Security Command had its beginnings when J. Edgar Hoover in the early 1930's organized the police force of the Tennessee Valley Authority at the request of David Lilienthal. The police force covered the entire TVA from Knoxville, Tennessee through Huntsville and Florence, Alabama and into Kentucky and back through the eastern portion of Tennessee into southern Kentucky. This was one of the first federal agencies with a separate police force. This force grew and Lilienthal took it forward to cover the Atomic Energy Commission, thus tying it into the army intelligence service.
>
> ….A Swiss corporation, Permindex, was used to head five front organizations responsible for furnishing personnel and supervisors to carry out assigned duties (in the assassination).
>
> The five groups under Permindex and their supervisors were:
>
> 1. The Czarist Russian, eastern European and Middle East exile organization called SOLIDARISTS, (sic) headed by Ferenc Nagy, ex-Hungarian premier, and John DeMenil, Russian exile from Houston, Texas, a close friend and supporter of Lyndon Johnson for over thirty years.
> 2. A section of the AMERICAN COUNCIL OF CHRISTIAN CHURCHES headed by H.L. Hunt of Dallas, Texas.
> 3. A Cuban exile group called FREE CUBA COMMITTEE headed by Carlos Prio Socarras, ex-Cuban president.
> 4. An organization of United States, Caribbean, and Havana, Cuba gamblers called the Syndicate…. This group worked closely with a Mafia family headed by Joe Bonanno.
> 5. The SECURITY DIVISION of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) headed by Werner Von Braun, head of the German Nazi rocket program from 1932 through 1945.[6] Headquarters for this group was the DEFENSE INDUSTRIAL SECURITY COMMAND at Muscle Shoals Redstone Arsenal in Alabama and on East Broad Street in Columbus, Ohio.[7]

These are sensational allegations, indeed, so much so that one might be tempted to dismiss the document entirely, were it not for the fact that it is but a summary of the more unusual aspects of the Garrison investigation.

---

[6] This is an inaccuracy, since the Nazi government was not formed until President Hindenburg appointed Hitler Reich Chancellor and asked him to form a government on January 30, 1933.

[7] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: The Torbitt Document and the JFK Assassination, pp. 24-27.

However, it would be a mistake to dismiss the document out of hand, for careful examination of the components of the conspiracy – in its version of the event – reveal that with but one or two exceptions, it is the standard intelligence-military industrial complex-in-cahoots-with-the-Mafia scenario that are common themes among more popular versions of the conspiracy.[8]

But added to this there are a number of new players:

1. H.L. Hunt and an organization that is basically connected to fundamentalist-evangelical revivalist "Protestantism," in other words, big oil masking behind a missionary organization;[9]
2. A group of Eastern European exiles of right-wing political complexion, "headed by Ferenc Nagy."

Let us pause a moment to consider these new players on the scene.

Most JFK conspiracy literature does mention Lee Harvey Oswald's and Marina Oswald's connection to the Russian and White Russian émigré community in Dallas, and in turn the connections of that community to big oil. Nonetheless, not much is made of this connection. It is as if researchers do not really know what to make of it. About all that one typically encounters is the fact that the Oswalds' landlord, Ruth Paine, was involved in this community, and that her husband, Michael, worked for Bell Aerospace, the same Bell Aerospace that employed General Walter Dornberger, military head of Hitler's V-2 project in conjunction with Werner Von Braun. But here most assassination researchers stop, not really noticing that the Nazi connections would multiply like rabbits, if one cared to look for them, for the fact of the matter is, the various societies, organizations, and groups of this Eastern

---

[8] I should make it clear that I do not believe the Warren Commission version of the assassination, and do believe that a conspiracy was involved, one that most likely was composed of at least the elements outlined here.

[9] The American Council of Christian Churches did publish literature against theological liberalism as well as funded missionaries in Central and South America. However, it is known that some of its members used it as a front to train death squads and conduct assassinations in those areas. Some have alleged that the organization was actually established by the "intelligence community" for precisely this purpose, and to launder money into this country.

European émigré community were but the North American connections – the leftovers, so to speak – of the vast network of German military intelligence that operated on and behind the Russian front throughout World War Two.

This military intelligence group was called Fremde Heere Ost (Foreign Armies East) and was headed by General Reinhard Gehlen. We shall have much more to say both about this intelligence network and its commanding general later. For now, however, it is to be noted that the Torbitt document, by naming Ferenc Nagy as "head" of this émigré community, is perhaps speaking symbolically, pointing the finger to a very hidden Nazi presence in the assassination. We are now in a position to examine the last new player in the assassination that the document mentions:

3. NASA security, headed by Von Braun, working inside the Defense Industrial Security Command (D.I.S.C.!) at Redstone Arsenal in Alabama.

In other words, the third new player in the assassination is the space program, and the Torbitt Document further implies that it is an aspect of the space program that is not only relatively hidden from the general public, but also which is under the direct control of Werner Von Braun, yet another Nazi connection.

But what of the "Permindex Corporation" in Switzerland, the entity allegedly coordinating all this malfeasance for the FBI and DIA? Who was involved with it? What were its purposes? A glance at its Board of Directors indicates why it attracted the attention of District Attorney Garrison, for among those on its board were, of course, Clay Shaw, the man Garrison actually indicted for conspiracy to murder the president. But others included an Italian Fascist who had married into the family of Hjalmar Schacht,[10] Hitler's president of the Reichsbank and finance minister, and interestingly enough, also father-in-law to Hitler's favorite SS commando, Otto Skorzeny. But these men hardly exhaust the unusual characters. There was an uncle to

---

[10] NASA, Nazis, and JFK, p. 47.

Egyptian King Farouk,[11] the Italian minister of agriculture under Mussolini's government, and yet another Hungarian ex-Nazi besides Ferenc Nagy, H. Simonfay.[12]

As if that were not enough, the Torbitt Document then goes on to provide a rather thorough list of Permindex's principal financial backing, a list that reads like a veritable who's who of conspiracies and scandals that had not yet even happened:

> The principal financiers of Permindex were a number of U.S. oil companies, H. L. Hunt of Dallas, Clint Murchison of Dallas, John DeMenil, Solidarist director of Houston, John Connally as executor of the Sid Richardson estate, Haliburton Oil Co., Senator Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, Troy Post of Dallas, Lloyd Cobb of New Orleans, Dr. Oechner of New Orleans, George and Herman Brown of Brown and Root, Houston, Attorney Roy M. Cohn, Chairman of the Board for Lionel Corporation, New York City, Schlemley Industries of New York City, Walter Dornberger, ex-Nazi general and his company, Bell Aerospace, Pan American World Airways and its subsidiary, Intercontinental Hotel Corporation…

and last but by no means least

> …NASA contractors directed by the Defense Industrial Security Command.[13]

In reading this bizarre list, one cannot help but think of the scandals-to-come, the Hunts and their attempt to corner the silver market and create a silver-backed currency for Texas(H. L. Hunt), the numerous allegations of conspiracy involved in the death of Karen Silkwood and her exposure of Kerr-McGee(Senator Robert Kerr of Oklahoma), current allegations that the real motivation for war with Iraq was oil (Haliburton).

And that's not all. Even Senator Joseph McCarthy's ghost hovers over the list of Permindex characters in the form of his legal council Roy Cohn. As if that were not enough, one of the banks through which Permindex often allegedly worked or channeled funds was the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro of Italy, a bank linked to many other shady scandals, including that of the notorious Bank of Credit and Commerce International, or BCCI scandal. And, at the end of this list, as if to highlight its importance, is NASA and its contractors, who, notes the Torbitt Document, "are directed by the Defense Industrial Security Command," which is headed by Werner Von Braun.

---

[11] Ibid.

[12] Ibid., p. 48. The Torbitt Document is actually citing the well-known Garrison-based JFK conspiracy book, The Kennedy Conspiracy, by the flamboyant Paris Flammonde.

[13] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: The Torbitt Document, pp. 49-50, emphasis added.

But directed to do what? Why would Werner Von Braun possibly be involved in such an affair?

The answer, perhaps, lies in the Torbitt Document's stated purposes of the Permindex Corporation:

> 1. To fund and direct assassinations of European, Mid-East and world leaders considered threats to the Western World and to petroleum interests of the backers.
> 2. To furnish couriers, agents, and management in transporting, depositing and re-channeling funds through Swiss banks for Las Vegas, Miami, Havana and international gambling syndicate.
> 3. To co-ordinate the espionage activities of the Solidarists and Division Five of the FBI with groups in sympathy with their objectives and to receive and channel funds and arms from the financiers to the action groups.
> 4. To build, acquire and operate hotels and gambling casinos in the Caribbean, Italy and at other tourist areas.[14]

Permindex, in other words, was the "Murder Incorporated" referred to by subsequent American Presidents.

But what does all this mean? What do these "purposes" indicate about the real nature of Permindex and its "backers"? Note first of all the purpose of eliminating, by assassination, any threat to the "petroleum interests of the backers." In other words, big oil once again. Note also, that any alternative technology such as those represented by cold fusion, or "zero point energy" devices, would represent precisely such a threat. So one may safely assume that one is to take "the protection of the oil interests" in the widest possible sense, as not only eliminating foreign governments or parties that would threaten these interests' overseas investments, but also the elimination of anyone presuming to a develop a technology not dependent on oil for energy.

---

[14] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: The Torbitt Document, pp 48-49.

Points two and three, however, point to something even deeper, and that is not only a hidden intelligence connection – a group operating within or only in conjunction with established and official agencies of the U.S. Federal government – but also a means for the independent financing of such groups and means of laundering the money to do it: casinos, ideal vehicles for laundering vast amounts of money quickly. This would explain the Mafia connection and involvement: it was at a "low" level of the conspiracy, the level necessary only for ensuring easy access and flow of dirty money to finance these projects.

All this makes a very strange context in which to view the last component of Permindex's backers, "NASA contractors directed by the Defense Industrial Security Command." What possible connection could NASA's DISC under the direction of Von Braun have to do with this? One answer, perhaps, lies in the implied suggestion that Permindex may have conducted assassinations to protect more than just the oil industry.

The Torbitt Document later provides an indicator of just who might have really been pulling the strings in the "corporation" when it stated "Permindex in Switzerland, basically a NATO intelligence front using the remnants of Adolph Hitler's intelligence units in West Germany and also, the intelligence unit of the Solidarists headquarters in Munich, Germany."[15] Munich was, of course, also General Reinhard Gehlen's personal headquarters for his Gehlenorg,[16] the network of spies and "Solidarists" he continued to run both behind the Iron Curtain and elsewhere, ostensibly for the Central Intelligence Agency and the West German Bundesnachrichtendienst. The Gehlenorg and its many connections were even implicated in the Generals' Plot, the assassination attempt on French President Charles DeGaulle, an attempt DeGaulle's Sureté quickly and efficiently traced and eliminated.[17]

---

[15] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: The Torbitt Document, p. 75.

[16] Gehlen's headquarters was actually outside Munich, in the town of Pullach.

[17] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: the Torbitt Document, pp. 74-78.

But why, again, would Von Braun be involved in such a conspiracy? While the Torbitt Document ultimately does not provide much of an answer to this question, it does hint at an answer that, shorn of its Nazi associations, will become a standard theme in some conspiracy views on the assassination, most notably that of Oliver Stone in his famous movie on the Garrison investigation, JFK. The Torbitt Document raises the prospect of the immense profits to be made from war, namely, the war in Vietnam:

> The Nazi scientists are on management level also in the munitions and aerospace industry. Walter Dornberger, the Nazi general, left the space agency in the 1950's to become a high official in Bell Aerospace Corporation and he was followed by over thirty of the Nazi scientists to control level in the corporations manufacturing munitions and aerospace material. This still left well over sixty of the scientists at command level in NASA.[18]

Of course, in the 1950s the war in Vietnam was ending its French phase and only entering the American one, but in any case, the motive is clearly implied: there were big profits to be made in war.

Moreover, the positioning of these Paperclip Project Nazis in key American defense industries may be an indicator of something far different taking place: the extension of influence by means of interlocking personnel in many management positions. This may easily be understood by recalling a method noted by many other writers on conspiracy, namely, that the method whereby power was concentrated in fewer and fewer hands by such financial dynasties as Rockefeller, Morgan, Warburg, or Rothschild, was simply to insist, as part of a condition of receiving a loan or grant from their institutions, that those institutions themselves were allowed to seat a representative on the loan recipient's governing board. This was usually done by collateralizing the loan with stock in the company receiving the loan.

Here, a similar pattern is at least implied: these Nazi scientists may have been acting to extend their own independent network of power and influence throughout the American military-industrial complex by being seated in senior management positions in return for their expertise. We shall present evidence later that will corroborate this. In any case, viewed against the backdrop of General Gehlen's effective preservation of his spy network and its grafting and penetration into post-war American intelligence, the picture that now emerges from the Torbitt document is chilling in its potentialities.

---

[18] Ibid., p. 85.

Each of the Nazi connections alluded to in the Torbitt document indicate influential Nazi presence not only in America's space program, but moreover, strongly hint of Nazi influence in the awarding of contracts for the space program, Nazi influence in control of the security of the space program, Nazi influence in the intelligence organs of America and the West, Nazi influence in the defense and aerospace industries, and Nazi influence lurking in the background of Permindex, "Murder Incorporated." Indeed, Von Braun himself may be viewed as the best exemplar of the type of smiling, glad-handing "networking" that make such influence possible, for shortly after arriving in the United States, he made a point of befriending none other than J. Edgar Hoover, and the then Senator Lyndon Johnson.[19] And who was one of the individuals who helped expedite Von Braun's and Dornberger's repatriation to the United States? None other than Clay Shaw, the man Garrison would ultimately indict for conspiracy to murder President Kennedy.[20] The transfer of the Nazi Project Paperclip scientists was also aided by none other than General Gehlen.[21]

All we know about the pseudonymous William Torbitt was that he was a prominent attorney in South Texas politics in the 1960s and 1970s.[22] This makes the Torbitt Document's revelations all the more sensational. While some might be inclined to dismiss its many claims out of hand, a picture does emerge of quietly exercised Nazi influence behind the scenes, an influence working in conjunction with other interests – big oil, technology suppression, Mafia, gambling and money laundering, aerospace and defense – and working effectively at that.

---

[19] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: The Torbitt Document, p. 141.

[20] Ibid., pp. 142-143, citing New Orleans District Attorney Files: General Staff Files, U.S. Army European Command, OUISE Section.

[21] NASA, Nazis, and JFK: The Torbitt Document, p. 143.

[22] Ibid., p. i, from the Introduction, "NASA, Nazis, and JFK" by David Hatcher Childress.

Moreover, the Torbitt Document suggests, albeit only slightly and only on very careful reading, that there is some hidden aspect to America's space program, a hidden aspect represented by the mysterious Defense Industrial Security Command and its head, Werner Von Braun. It suggests that this was one of the many motivations represented by the various groups that whose interests coalesced in the murder of the President. But beyond that, it does not go. And this leaves a very disturbing question hovering in the air:

If there was some hidden aspect to the space program, and if its principals had some motivation for participating in the murder of the President, what was it? What did this hidden aspect of the space program have to gain? Or, alternatively, what about President Kennedy threatened it; what did it have to protect? Or was it some combination of both? To answer these questions requires an examination of some of the other versions of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis, even, as we shall see, the absurd ones.

2. The False Planetary Geology, Climate, and Archaeology Versions:

a. The Absurdist Versions

One may summarize the "absurdist" versions of the Two Space Programs very easily:

The Moon has an atmosphere and water, and even vegetation.

Venus, beneath its canopy of clouds, is not the carbon dioxide pressure-cooker and barren desert greenhouse we've been told, but rather, a temperate planet of rich vegetation, a veritable paradise. And, if one believes Adamski – and this author most decidedly does not – it is home to a wonderful race of peaceful, blonde-haired, blue-eyed, human space brothers who come in peace to bring earth-bound humanity a message of hope.

And Mars really does have canals, and, thankfully, isn't planning an invasion of Earth anytime soon.

But what has this to do with a hidden and public space program?

Very simple: according to the absurdist version the governments of the world that have space programs have hidden the truth about the planets of our solar system, carefully doctoring pictures to edit out any evidence that shows any of the above!

b. A Scientifically and Politically Plausible Version: The Hoagland Model

A much more serious model, and much more plausible one, has been argued in various ways over the years by Richard C Hoagland, best known for his association with the ongoing investigations of the anomalous Martian surface features in the Cydonia region of Mars, features he believes strongly suggest an artificial origin.

While an extended presentation of Hoagland’s views is not possible here – after all they have evolved over many years of continual research, requiring a scholarly study in their own right – there are certain stable features that one may point to as summarizing some aspects of his version:

1. The Brookings Report: Immediately after its formation, NASA commissioned a study of the possible impact of human contact with an extraterrestrial civilization in its explorations of the solar system, or alternatively, with human discovery of any artifacts of such a civilization. As Hoagland has pointed out on more than one occasion, the Brookings report indicated that there might be severe cultural implications and repercussions of such discoveries or events. Thus, Hoagland argues, the government may have adopted the policy, based on the Brookings recommendations, of concealing such discoveries.
2. In this context, one way of concealment is the alteration of photographic or other scientific data that indicates the presence of such contact or civilization artifact. Another method is the outright dismissal of evidence after-the-fact, such as NASA’s post-Viking dismissal of the Face on Mars as nothing but a “trick of light and shadow.” These and other tactics were subsequently employed by NASA down to the present whenever anomalous findings are returned by space probes.

3. A third component of Hoagland's view is that there is a "hidden space program", or better, group within NASA, exercising influence in an esoteric or occult direction over the scheduling, naming, and symbolism attached to missions. In support of this allegation, Hoagland has noted the high predominance of Masons in the astronaut corps, particularly in the formative days of NASA during the Mercury, Gemini, and Apollo programs. Additionally, Hoagland has also maintained that many missions are designed to align with significant celestial (astrological) correlations, as if space missions were deliberate acts in a vast system of ritual magic being done on a planetary scale via the space program itself.
4. The final and most important component in Hoagland's model is that the surface features of Cydonia on Mars encode a lost "hyperdimensional physics," a physics Hoagland sees in evidence in the planetary upwellings of energy at the "tetrahedral latitude" of 19.5 north or south degrees on every celestial body in the solar system.

While such assertions may sound fantastic, the fact that they are made by someone of Hoagland's stature is significant, and, as we shall see below, the more one digs beneath the surface of various versions of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis, and the more details one uncovers, Hoagland's version seems to pale into mundane normalcy by comparison.

3. The "Alternative Three" Version

Among the many versions of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis, none is more bizarre nor more famous than the Alternative 3 version.

Alternative 3 was a "documentary" produced for the British science series Science Report, which aired on Anglia television in the 1970s. Originally scheduled to air on April 1, 1977, the broadcast was delayed and did not air until June, though in the production credits April 1 is listed as the date. The "documentary" was one hour long, and makes interesting viewing.[23] Ostensibly the "documentary" begins by investigating the so-called "brain drain" that was affecting Great Britain during the 1970s, as many of her top scientists and engineers left the country for more prosperous and promising positions overseas, most notably in Canada and the United States, and to a lesser extent Australia and New Zealand. Moving quickly, the documentary "uncovers" the cases of three scientists who simply were never heard from again, despite attempts of their "families" to contact them. Finally, one scientist died in a mysterious automobile accident, allegedly after placing a telephone call from a remote country phone booth to a journalist friend of his, to whom he had sent a computer memory tape.

On the tape, when it was finally "decoded" by the indefatigable investigative journalists of Anglia Television, was a video recording of an alleged joint Russian-American Mars landing in 1962, complete with video recording of sub-surface life burrowing a furrow on the ground to the wild and thrilled cheers of the Russian and American ground control crews in the background!

With missing scientists and engineers, a mysteriously dead scientist, and a computer tape of an alleged Mars landing, the journalists learn of a hidden, secret joint space program being conducted by the Americans and Russians, a component of which was to persuade the best and brightest of the world's scientists to participate in the gradual, and very secret, colonization of the Moon and Mars. The purpose of this colonization? The world's elite had concluded that the planet was being destroyed by humanity, and that overpopulation had passed the point of no return, and that life on Earth was doomed. Three alternatives were discussed to save the situation. The first was to explode nuclear warheads in the atmosphere, in an attempt to create a "hole" which would bleed off the pollution. The second was to build vast underground installations in which humanity could survive when the surface became unviable. And the third, Alternative 3, was to seek new planetary homes on the Moon and Mars.

---

[23] The author has actually watched the "documentary" many times.

The secret space program was thus a modern-day Noah's Ark, and the most heinous crimes were being perpetrated to ensure the success of Alternative 3. There, more or less, is where the "documentary" ended.

But the story did not end. In fact, the network was flooded with calls from thousands of people who professed their belief in the whole wild scenario, and who in some cases added their own stories of encounters with the "hidden masters" of the project.

The problem was, the whole program was a complete hoax, an elaborate April Fools' Day joke, intended as such by the producers and authors of the teleplay, David Ambrose and Christopher Miles,[24] a fact that would have been evident from careful examination of the closing credits, with its very clearly stated date, and long list of cast which included professional actors.[25] The story would not die, however, and was soon followed by a badly-written book of the same title, about which more in a moment.

To one Canadian inquiring about the truth of the "documentary," co-author and producer Christopher Miles stated:

> "The idea for the film and subsequently the book, was something that David (Ambrose) and I dreamed up over a lunch together in London, as I was getting rather tired of the docu-drama on television and wanted to prove how easy it is to lead the general public up the proverbial garden path! I am sorry that you were one of them and if you look at the film or read the book, you will realize that there are hints of its unauthenticity all the way down the line.
>
> Of course it has a sprinkling of fact in it, but the basic show is a complete hoax and if you think a bit more yourself, you would realize this was the case."
>
> In an interview, however, Miles commented in a somewhat more mysterious fashion, saying, "Let's say that all the facts in the show were true and all the lies untrue."[26]

The documentary's inconsistent acting is mirrored in the book's incongruous slurry of wildly unconnected "data" all served up as “corroboration” of the secret space program and its nefarious activities:

---

[24] Jim Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3 (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2005), p. 11.

[25] It would likewise have been evident from the less-than-convincing performances of some of the same!

[26] Jim Keith, Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 14.

> The death of fifteen wild ponies in Dartmoor, England, is mentioned, an episode reminiscent of the cattle mutilations prevalent in the U.S. beginning in the mid-60s. Factual CIA MKULTRA mind control atrocities are also mulled over, but not in particular detail, and with no credible link to Alternative 3. Along the way instances of Russian-American cooperation in space are described, and we are offered accounts of the plights of several amnesia victims, but none of this has much to do with the core of the Alternative 3 thesis.[27]

At the end of it all – a book and a “documentary” – what does one make of Alternative 3? Jim Keith summarizes the whole episode this way:

> In summary, Alternative 3 is a teleplay and a book which utterly lack substantiation, and the book in particular is written in a style identical to the Weekly World News of “Two-Headed Space Alien Gives Birth to Elvis’ Lovechild” fame. What propels Alternative 3 along in the manner of a 1940s Amazing Stories extravaganza set in the vicinity of Fleet Street are the “secret documents,” the interviews with persons who do not exist and, more than that, the word of the authors who, while repeatedly maintaining “We are only interested in facts,” write a television show and book loaded with as many questionable conclusions as the latest Brad Steiger UFO masterpiece…..
>
> All the references to flights to Mars, “batch consignments” and so forth are found in the poorly rendered and unbelievable “secret transcripts” or created from thin Martian air by the authors.[28]

But, as Keith himself notes, one comes away from viewing the “documentary” and/or reading the book with an uneasy feeling, notwithstanding their clear and evident nature as hoaxes, and that uneasy feeling is that Alternative 3 and its various themes are quite close to the truth, that something like the odd goings on in the “documentary” actually are occurring.

In fact, Leslie Watkins, who co-authored the book version with the “documentary’s” producers for Penguin Books, wrote a researcher who had contacted the Penguin editor, that the book was

---

[27] Ibid., p. 17.

[28] Ibid., pp. 19-20.

"based on fact, but uses that fact as a launchpad for a high dive into fiction." And a little later in his letter, Watkins recounts the unusual events that befell him after the book version was published and in circulation: "For some time after Alternative 3 was originally published, I have reason to suppose that my home telephone was being tapped and my contacts who were experienced in such matters were convinced that certain intelligence agencies considered that I probably knew too much. So, summing up, the book is fiction based on fact. But I now feel that I inadvertently got very close to a secret truth."[29] But if Watkins, Miles, and Ambrose had come too close to "a secret truth" that would call forth electronic wiretapping in response, what exactly in the crazy quilt-work of the Alternative 3 universe was it?

The universe of Alternative 3 is clear enough: there is a secret space program involving both Russians and Americans in cooperation, being controlled by some entity that transcends their governments and uses them for its own ends, which is the secret colonization of the Moon and Mars. To this end, it persuades or kidnaps scientists, and "commoners" for manual labor. Those it cannot "persuade" or who threaten to expose the project, are murdered. So one has the following elements:

1. Several missing scientists, in great numbers;
2. Murdered scientists;
3. Several missing "common" people;
4. A secret space program existing inside of, or parallel to, the public programs in Russia and America;
5. Colonies on the Moon and/or Mars; and finally,
6. Some entity coordinating all the above.

Conspiracy researcher Jim Keith investigated these aspects of the case, and came to a rather provocative conclusion, a conclusion so provocative, in fact, that he seldom states it directly, though much of his book, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, implies this conclusion simply by virtue of the amount of time he spends exploring it.

---

[29] Jim Keith, Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 22, emphasis original.

We begin with point number 2 above: the deaths of scientists. Keith, like many other authors, noted the very strange fact that many European scientists, physicists, and engineers who were involved with, or otherwise might have something to contribute to President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, seemed to have unusually high suicide or "death-by-mysterious-circumstances" rates. And oddly, most of these scientists were from Western Europe. Proportionally fewer Americans, Canadians or Australians were involved in the unusual deaths.

Among those that Keith lists were: Keith Bowden, supercomputer expert; Roger Hill, a designer for Marconi Defense Systems (who allegedly killed himself by shotgun blast); Jonathan Walsh, digital communications expert for Marconi's parent firm, GEC; Karl-Heinz Beckurts, director of research for Germany's Siemens Company and his driver; and, notes Keith, "an SDI contractor allegedly linked to activities of Otto Skorzeny's Nazi International;" Vimal Dajibhai, an expert in computer guidance systems; Gerrold von Braunmuhl, a high advisor to West Germany's Defense Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher; Ashad Shariff, another Marconi employee; a Swedish professor, Svante Oden; an Italian electronics executive, Lando Conti; Aytar Singh-Gida, an SDI technology expert; Richard Pugh, British Defense Ministry contracts worker; John Brittan, computer expert; Swedish arms inspector Cal Frederik Algernon…and on and on Keith's list goes.[30]

Like the "mysterious deaths" of key witnesses and personnel that followed the assassination of President Kennedy, rather too many scientists and engineers were dying in too many suspicious ways for the whole episode to be entirely coincidental. Keith observes that:

> In July of 1986, Kurt Rebmann, Germany's Federal Prosecutor, told the New York Times that he believed the attacks were part of a "coordinated offensive" against the West and the SDI program.

---

[30] Jim Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, pp. 80-83.

> So, who killed the Star Wars scientists? In at least two of the cases, those of Beckurts and von Braunmuhl, the Marxist Red Army Faction (RAF) claimed responsibility. In Italy a note was found at the location of Griogieri's murder, stating that he "was struck down exclusively for his responsibility exercised following the Italian adhesion to the Star Wars project." And attributing the murder to the Italian Red Brigades. Of course, notes can easily be faked, and the fact that responsibility was claimed in only three cases is odd if two groups performed all the murders.[31]

One explanation, the obvious one, is that "it was apparent to the Kremlin that SDI, far from bring the defensive program that it was touted as by Ronald Reagan, had an awesome offensive capability."[32] This much is true, as we shall see in part two.[33] But in any case, Keith's conclusion is rational: the most obvious perpetrators of the strange deaths were the Soviets, who hoped to dissuade the West from deploying SDI.

But according to Keith, there was likewise another possibility: "It has also occurred to me that if there is in fact a secret flying disk technology on this planet, withheld for its surprise strike capability from some unknown quarter, then SDI might have been seen as a technology capable of pinpointing and shooting down such craft."[34] That is, if there was an "independent group" perfecting such advanced craft, then that group, too, would view SDI as a threat and seek to derail it, or, conversely, seek to acquire and deploy its technologies while denying them to its enemies.

It is this possibility that informs the bulk of Keith's book. Tracing the possibilities to a pre-war network of American and Nazi business contacts, he quickly comes to one locus of possibilities: the "surrender" of Germany's Foreign Armies East (Fremde Heere Ost) section of military intelligence to the OSS, a deal that was negotiated between General Reinhard Gehlen and OSS station chief in Zürich, Allen Dulles, later chief of the CIA and a member of the Warren Commission. But the "surrender" was only apparent, as many have pointed out. Keith's summary is apt:

---

[31] Ibid., p. 83

[32] Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 84.

[33] See chapters 4-6.

[34] Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 84.

> For reasons that will hopefully become apparent, I begin the search for Alternative 3 at what might appear to be an arbitrary moment in history: with men, most of whom died a long time ago. As we trace the actions and connections of these men, the conspiratorial web will radiate outward, and perhaps begin to take on a definite and ominous pattern.
>
> The study is taken up shortly after the collapse of the Third Reich, when General Reinhard Gehlen, Nazi spymaster and Knight of Malta-to-be began negotiations with Allen Dulles and the American OSS (Office of Strategic Services). Using Nazi intelligence networks as a hole card to provide for his own survival and the survival of his huge spy network, Gehlen made a separate peace with Dulles, resulting in the clean grafting of Nazi spy apparatus to the American clandestine services. This was the birth of the CIA and part of a nexus of betrayal that continues to this day.[35]

Indeed, as many others have pointed out, at the inception of the CIA, the agency's "Soviet desk" for all intents and purposes consisted almost entirely and exclusively of this Nazi spy network.[36] Gehlen's own words recalling this bargain are clinically chilling:

> I remember the terms of the agreement well…
>
> 1. A clandestine German intelligence organization was to be set up, using the existing potential to continue information gathering in the East just as we had been doing before. The basis for this was our common interest in a defense against communism.
> 2. This German organization was to work not "for" or "under" the Americans, but "jointly" with the Americans.
> 3. The organization would operate exclusively under German leadership, which would receive its directives and assignments

---

[35] Jim Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 28.

[36] Q.v. also Christopher Simpson's Blowback. Simpson and other commentators have often pointed out that one effect of this "Nazification" of American intelligence in the immediate post-war world was the over-estimation of Soviet military power and intentions. Another effect was the corresponding American military build-up and, to a lesser extent, the Marshal Plan itself. Yet another effect was the covert policy of "rollback", a policy designed to make use of Gehlen's fifth columns in Eastern Europe – and in North America! – of émigré White Russians, Ukrainians, Letts, Lithanians, and so on.

> from the Americans until a new government was established in Germany.
>
> 4. The organization was to be financed by the Americans with funds which were not to be part of the occupation costs, and in return the organization would supply all its intelligence reports to the Americans.
> 5. As soon as a sovereign German government was established, the government should decide whether the organization should continue to function or not, but that until such time the care and control (later referred to as "the trusteeship") of the organization would remain in American hands.
> 6. Should the organization at any time find itself in a position where the American and German interests diverged, it was accepted that the organization would consider the interests of Germany first.[37]

In other words, one whole department of the American Federal government – indeed, one of its most sensitive departments – was being run by agents of the Third Reich in a classic Trojan Horse operation![38] With the thousands of agents in Gehlen's "Organization," and its extensive network of "émigré exile" groups and fronts, historian Carl Oglseby noted that the Gehlenorg "substantially pre-empted the CIA's civilian character before it was ever born…Thus, whatever the CIA was from the standpoint of law, it remained from the standpoint of practical intelligence collection a front for a house of Nazi spies."[39]

The importance of these observations cannot be pondered too long, for as many other researchers and commentators have noted, there appears to be a "rogue element" operating somewhere inside the U.S. Federal government and inside its intelligence community. Keith's observations, and similar ones made by others who have researched the incredible bargain struck between Allen Dulles and General Gehlen, give a historical background and foundation to these fears: There not only is a rogue element within the American intelligence community, but it has been there since the end of World War Two. And it was Nazi in its personnel, aims, and methods.

---

[37] Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, pp. 46-47, emphasis added.

[38] Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 43.

[39] Ibid., p. 47, emphasis added.

Moreover, as Keith also points out, the Dulles family itself had long business associations with Germany.[40] And there was an ideological connection:

> With man, as with every other form of life, there is this same tendency for the birth rate to far exceed the death rate, with the inevitable result of an overcrowded population in which some must be eliminated. Who those eliminated are depends upon who are weakest and who are strongest in the competition which necessarily ensues.[41]

If that sounds vaguely like an anti-Jewish rant of Hitler at a Nuremburg party rally, think again. The words are those of Allen Dulles' brother, John Foster Dulles, who would later become the American Secretary of State under President Dwight Eisenhower.

In any case, Gehlen's bargain with Dulles was but one aspect of the creation of a vast post-war "Nazi International," an organization with massive amounts of money, and, as has been seen, its own intelligence network.

> Maintaining close ties to each other and other escaped Nazis, this network evolved into what has been termed the Nazi International, run by Otto Skorzeny and headquartered in Madrid. The Nazi International would be key in the establishment of worldwide arms, terrorist, and drug trafficking networks, although these crimes pale in comparison with the subversion of American intelligence, in collaboration with Allen Dulles, the result of which may be said to have been the creation of the Cold War and the continuing destruction of democracy in America.[42]

Skorzeny most likely was a front man for other more high-ranking Nazis, since he was the son-in-law to former Reichsbank president Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht.

But if Nazi penetration of America's post-war intelligence and national security apparatus was a Trojan Horse operation under the banner of a "united front against Communism", what of the dispersal of Nazi scientists and technology? Could the notorious Operation Paperclip - America's secret post-war program to recruit top Nazi scientists and engineers - have also been viewed, at least on the German side, as a similar operation?

---

[40] Jim Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 28.

[41] Ibid., p. 29.

[42] Ibid., pp. 45-46.

While the evidence is scanty, it is nonetheless provocative. It begins with America's High Commissioner in Germany in the immediate post-war period: John J. McCloy. When Werner Von Braun refused to work for the American space program without his former army boss, General Walter Dornberger – who had in the meantime been sentenced by the war crimes tribunals to be hung – it was McCloy who stepped in and granted Dornberger a full pardon.[43] In fact, McCloy pardoned over seventy thousand Nazis accused of war crimes.[44] Perhaps this is not surprising, since McCloy was a "lawyer in the employ of I.G. Farben" after World War One, and had shared a box with Hitler himself during the 1936 Berlin Olympic games.[45] And last, but not least, McCloy, like Allen Dulles, also served on the Warren Commission.

Once in the U.S., the Nazi scientists were, of course, watched closely….but not, it seems, too closely. As Keith notes, "Walter Jessel, an interrogator of the German rocket scientists for the army, claimed that there was a conspiracy between von Braun, Dornberger, and Dornberger's chief of staff to withhold information from U.S. officers."[46] Given the fact that Von Braun's rockets successfully became the backbone of America's space program, up to and including the Apollo moon rockets, as well as became the backbone for America's intercontinental ballistic missiles, an important question thus occurs: what possibly could Von Braun and Dornberger have been withholding?

They may have been withholding technical information, since this was not an isolated instance. As the following incident indicates, three other German scientists brought to the USA > were found to have illegal mail drops in El Paso, Texas, where they received money and coded messages from foreign sources. Other instances of Nazi scientists receiving money from unknown sources were not investigated by the military, including an instance when one third of the German Paperclip group simultaneously bought expensive

---

[43] Jim Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, p. 50.

[44] Ibid.

[45] Ibid., pp. 50-51.

[46] Ibid., p. 51.

> cars that they were reportedly unable to afford on their salaries. There were also repeated suspicions that rockets were being sabotaged, and that components were missing from recovered missiles.[47]

If so, then the Gehlenorg offered the perfect means to spirit any developed technology out of America and into “the right hands”.

Keith concludes his scenario with the following observations:

> The controlling reins of German technologies such as rockets, advanced aircraft, and atomics were never fully surrendered; inner circle control, through knowledge obtainable only in the inner circle, was retained by Nazis and their sympathizers.
>
> ….It is in this environment of extensive collaboration and infiltration by Nazis and fascists, a collaboration that involves a long-term continuance of Nazi goals separated from earlier German territorial goals, and an overall shepherding and betrayal by international monied interests, government and intelligence agencies, that America’s descent into totalitarianism, genocide and mind control becomes understandable, and the Alternative 3 template first becomes visible.[48]

Keith’s scenario is clear enough, and it is the same one – in broad outline – adopted here, namely:

(1) That with the dispersal of Nazi technology, scientists and engineers into post-war Allied, Soviet, and possibly into covert and independent research programs more directly under Nazi control, and

(2) That with the grafting of Gehlen’s Fremde Heere Ost with its extensive espionage network inside the Iron Curtain into American intelligence, a powerful clandestine organization was created, an organization with international reach, ambitions, and finance behind it.

Only such an organization could attempt to maintain two space programs, one for public consumption, and another, entirely off the books, to further the interests, agenda, and power of the elite that controlled it. Only such an organization could attempt to coordinate the otherwise independent "public" space programs of the two superpowers.

---

[47] Ibid.

[48] Jim Keith, Mind Control and UFOs: Casebook on Alternative 3, pp. 58-59.

Seen in this light, it is easier to see why there was such a heavy Nazi presence in the web of relationships involved in the assassination of President Kennedy, for with his threat to "smash the CIA into a thousand pieces," he was taking deliberate aim at one of the power structures for this international rogue element. To ensure its continued survival and the survival of its projects and agenda, Kennedy had to go.

4. The William Lyne Version

Also at the bizarre end of the spectrum of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis is the version of New Mexico author and conspiriologist William Lyne, who outlines his version in three books, Pentagon Aliens (formerly entitled Space Aliens from the Pentagon), Occult Ether Physics, and Occult Science Dictatorship. Many dismiss his work, simply because of an abundance of very bizarre and oftentimes outlandish assertions, while overlooking some significant insights and hints that also characterize his works, oftentimes sandwiched between assertions that either repeat the standard "Nazi Legend" of the UFO or of "Hitler Survival" while liberally adding new elements.

For example, Lyne asserts – without any substantiation – that Adolf and Eva Hitler not only survived the war, but were flown out of Germany in a flying saucer piloted by the famous German pilot Hanna Reitsch and German Luftwaffe ace Hans Ulrich Rudel![49] As if that were not enough, he adds that they lived happily ever after in Kassel, Germany, protected by a secret NATO agreement,[50] and that on the invitation of President Lyndon Johnson, visited the San Antonio World's Fair in Texas,[51] where later, apparently, Adolf, exercising as ever his attraction to art, and lovely wife Eva visited a west Texas art show where Lyne happened to be sitting sketching pictures! And Lyne leaves no detail to chance, for he even describes the visit by burly security personnel, combing through the art show booths, prior to the arrival of the Führer! If one can imagine an elderly and sweltering Hitler hobbling along in his ever-present double-breasted suit(sans swastika, of course) and porkpie hat with wife Eva dutifully in tow and perhaps filming the whole visit for her famous home movies, one has an appreciation for why many dismiss out of hand the entirety of Lyne's other assertions and claims.

---

[49] William Lyne, Pentagon Aliens (Lamy, New Mexico: Creatopia Productions, 1999), p. 49.

[50] Ibid.

[51] Ibid.

For example, Lyne also asserts that

> During the war, German scientists bypassed development of the "atom bomb", and built and tested the neutron bomb. German field Marshall (sic) Erwin Rommel and the Afrika Korps were originally sent to North Africa to test the neutron bomb, as well as Tesla's "death ray" (which freezes whole armies); this technology was acquired by American corporations, held chiefly by David Rockefeller, and was later sold in part back to the U.S. government and tested in the '60s, and the same technology was again sold to the U.S. government in the '70s and '80s as "Star Wars"("SDI" or "Strategic Defense Initiative Technology."[52]

While the assertion sounds wild and fantastic, and indeed, your author does not believe any neutron bomb was ever tested by the Nazis in Africa or elsewhere, in fairness to Lyne it should be recalled that the alleged Ohrdruf test of a nuclear device that took place on March 4, 1945,[53] was of a device with a small critical mass, an event that – if it indeed happened – could only have occurred via the process of "boosted fission," whereby a neutron-emitting source is added to the critical mass assembly, allowing more neutrons into the initial chain reaction and accordingly a lower critical mass. This is one step away, in a certain sense, from the neutron bomb. Likewise it should be pointed out that when Lyne's assertion was first made in July 1993 in the first printing of Pentagon Aliens (under its former title Space Aliens from the Pentagon) the allegations of the Ohrduf test and other German nuclear tests during the war were just beginning to surface, making it unlikely that Lyne based his assertion on these German sources.

---

[52] Ibid., pp. 48-49, emphasis added.

[53] See my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 80-88.

Lyne's assertions do not end there, however. He adds even more anecdotal detail to the mix:

> (When) prisoners from Rommel's Afrika Korps were brought to Roswell, New Mexico (!) they carried some rather strange post cards apparently printed by Rommel's field lithographers, showing New York City being destroyed by a mushroom cloud. The camp commandant, Dave Dunn, who later became an engineer with Union Oil Company of California in their Midland, Texas Office, and who prepared the U.S.G.S. for President John F. Kennedy in 1962, thought these were humorous, and showed me one he had saved as a souvenir. The fact was, however, that Rommel's main mission in the Libyan desert, was testing the neutron bomb. The post cards carried by his troops were a 'morale builder', which superimposed the photolithograph of the mushroom cloud of the bomb they had actually tested and photographed, over a photolithograph of New York City, in a composite. The claims by Manhattan Project members, that they built the first ATOM bomb – from German plans – was true. Einstein had brought the stolen plans to us with the firm belief that we would use the A-bomb on Germany. Since the Allies had already succeeded in obtaining the German plans for he A-bomb, Werner Heisenberg merely sidestepped the A-bomb, and built the N-bomb. The question to me was not "if", but "how" (did the Germans make their neutron bomb)?[54]

This passage is classic Lyne, interlarding details and insinuations that, in the light of the research of German authors Meyer, Mehner, and others, make sense, along with details and insinuations that make no sense. For example, Lyne claims that David Dunn found the postcard of New York City being a-bombed (or n-bombed), "humorous." One has difficulty imagining how any rational human, much less an American, could find such a postcard humorous. This detail casts a pall of dubiousness once again over the whole passage, as does the assertion that any a-bomb plans existed at the time Einstein emigrated from Germany to the USA, much less that Einstein actually managed to steal them from the security- and Jew-obsessed Nazis. Yet, in these bizarre assertions, Lyne is also clearly insinuating a connection between Nazi science, its actual accomplishments, and the Manhattan Project, and all that again in a book published prior to that of Meyer, Mehner, or Friedrich Georg in Germany, or Carter Hydrick in the USA, works which are heavily referenced and researched, and by no means the merely “anecdotal” character of Lyne’s Pentagon Aliens.

---

[54] William Lyne, Pentagon Aliens, p. 99.

To round out the picture even more, Lyne also points out the mysterious substance “red mercury”, or mercury antimony oxide, which, like Lyne’s work itself, is a substance with its own ambiguous and dubious legend:

> Dr. Sam Cohen, inventor of the American neutron bomb, traces the production and sale of a mysterious substance called “red mercury” to Russia. Red mercury is mercury antimony oxide, specially prepared by irradiation and pressured into a gel to increase its density to create the necessary precondition for a neutron explosion. A small quantity of it can then be used as a nuclear trigger/igniter to detonate a small amount of heavy hydrogen producing the deadly neutrons for a ‘clean bomb.’[55] In February, 1992, Russian president Boris Yeltsin signed Directive No 75-RPS, authorizing Preomekologia, a Russian company headed by Yeltsin’s ecological advisor, to “manufacture, purchase, store, transport, deliver, and sell for rubles and foreign currency” ‘red mercury’ in amounts up to ten tons per year. The order was rescinded a year later because of criticism within Russia of export of such a “valuable raw material”. In a spring, 2004 documentary on Britain’s Channel Four (“British PBS”), a Russian nuclear chemist confirmed he had worked with red mercury since 1965, that it is currently produced in a factory in the central Russian town of Ekaterinburg, and that fusion weapons have been made in Russia from it. Cohen believes red mercury represents one of the greatest threats for potential terrorists to produce ‘baseball bombs’ from it….If the Germans indeed tested a neutron bomb in North Africa, I would bet that is was produced with red mercury, since the Russians employed German metallurgists and nuclear chemists in their nuclear program, and it was they who produced Germany’s WWII supply of plutonium purer that any ever produced….[56]

---

[55] It should be pointed out that part of the legend of “red mercury” is that it can be used as a detonator for a fully-fledged thermonuclear fusion, or hydrogen, bomb, replacing the need for an atomic bomb as a detonator to create the necessary heat to get heavy hydrogen (deuterium and tritium) atoms to fuse. The Russians allegedly developed it as a means of detonating hydrogen bombs without the need for an a-bomb, thus creating a “clean” hydrogen bomb, still capable of taking out large cities in an enormous explosion, but leaving a much smaller radiation fallout signature.

[56] Lyne, Pentagon Aliens, pp. 99-100.

Again, one encounters Lyne's typical mixture of the seemingly outlandish and bizarre with actual fact, for indeed, Dr. Sam Cohen, the inventor of the neutron bomb, did express such fears and reservations concerning red mercury, while other scientists loudly dismissed the substance and its reputed ability to initiate thermonuclear fusion as a complete hoax. And the substance does resemble a mysterious substance also used in The Bell.[57]

As was seen, Lyne ends his "red mercury" foray with another fantastic claim, that during World War Two the Germans managed to manufacture plutonium of great purity, an assertion that calls into question the Allied Legend in a very direct way, since to manufacture plutonium of any purity one must first possess a functioning nuclear reactor, which the Germans were not supposed to have achieved during the war.

But again, one cannot be too hasty in dismissing his assertion, for as was detailed in my previous book Reich of the Black Sun, the alleged Nazi test of an a-bomb in 1945 at Ohrdruf was of a high yield device of a critical mass of no more than 100 grams, a fact which, if true, is only possible with very pure plutonium and boosted fission. That is to say, Lyne once again has made a claim that, oddly, has been paralleled by similar and subsequent allegations originating from post-reunification Germany, and the much more substantial research of German researchers who, in addition to citing anecdotal stories from elderly witnesses or relatives of witnesses, also seek to corroborate their stories by documentation or other means.

Lyne's tail of a neutron bomb test thus also begins to pry open the door to his version of the Two Space Program Hypothesis, for it clearly indicates that one primary element is what the Nazis actually accomplished versus what we have been told that they accomplished. Yet another primary aspect of Lyne's version of the Hypothesis also emerges from this strange account, and that is the secret development of a science and technology otherwise suppressed. And this brings us, at last, to Lyne's version of the Hypothesis itself. There are three aspects to his version: (1) Public Consumption Relativistic Physics Versus Occulted Aether Physics,

---

[57] See chapter four of the present book, as well as Reich of the Black Sun, p. 335.

(2) The National Security Act and Scientific Suppression, and (3) The Role of Nazis in the above.

a. Public Consumption Versus Occulted Aether Physics

Lyne outlines his case for an occulted physics and technology in a series of clearly stated and provocative questions, and then an equally clear and provocative answer:

> Is it possible that an entire area of physics has been declared virtually “occult” and “off-limits” to the public or to private individuals, by a powerful group, so that all science education or data generally available to the public has been “screened” to eliminate references to it? Is it possible that the actual science involved in “electro-propulsion”, has been replaced with a “bogus science”, which has been promoted and promulgated to the extent that no one except the ‘esoteric elite’ knows the truth? And if so, has the “occult” science become the exclusive province of a very few specially selected corporate/government “priests”?
>
> …..The high priests of this occult knowledge are the elite owners of the coercive monopolist corporate banking, industrial, mineral and related interests, who in turn allow the initiation of certain scientists, military and government officials into their secret teaching only insofar as it is necessary, to execute and maintain a conspiracy of giant proportions, so that the technology can be classified as a “state secret” which can be controlled and enforced by means of unconstitutional “national security laws”, military and civilian legal authority, and police. These measures are intended to protect the archaic technology and resources controlled by the elite, from the competition of a truly free market society.[58]

Note the insinuation that the national security apparatus of any nation is involved in this conspiracy. We shall return to this aspect of Lyne’s version of the Hypothesis in a moment.

For Lyne, the suppression of “occulted aether physics” requires a program consisting of two central elements: (1) the suppression of exotic physics that at one time or another entered the public record, regardless of how obscure the record or how limited the public may have been. As will be seen in a moment, this includes various tactics to make it difficult to reconstruct the suppressed physics. (2) The second element is the creation of an alternative version of physics for "public consumption" or as Lyne puts it – also clearly delineating where he thinks the blame lies for the dead end of physics in the 20the century – giving the public "relativistic bromides" packed with exotic phrases like "the 'fabric' of 'space-time'" and "frame-dragging," all of which, he says, suggest the idea of what "they" wish to suppress, namely "the existence of an ether (sic, et passim),[59]" even though that aether is an erroneously conceived "relativistic" aether.[60] The reason is deceptively simple: "'Ether Physics', by its very nature and name, is subatomic physics."[61] Relativistic physics, on the other hand, is the physics of the very large. And as numerous physics texts and popularizations have reiterated countless times, the quest of physics since relativity and the advent of quantum mechanics has been to somehow squeeze the two theories together. So much for the second element; it is clear that Lyne believes Einstein's relativity theories to be a crucial component of the creation of a "public consumption physics," a physics guaranteed to dead-end.

---

[58] William Lyne, Occult Ether Phsyics: Tesla’s Hidden Space Propulsion System and the Conspiracy to Conceal It(Lamy, New Mexico: Creatopia Productions, 2003), pp. 1-2.

But what of the first element? How does one suppress things that are already part of the public record, even if that record is for a relatively small public, such as the professional community of scientists or scientific historians?

Lyne's answer to this question is hidden in his – for once – well-documented though brief history of the aether, and it is worth citing his remarks at length:

> After some difficulty, I accessed a copy of the classic, A History of the Theories of the Aether and Electricity, by Sir Edmund Whittaker (1951 revised and enlarged second edition, Vols. I and II). The 1910 first edition of this book was probably the most comprehensive book ever published on ether theory as it existed in 1910, but the 1951 revision merely clarified "acceptable" ether physics. The first edition was printed in Scotland, under the title A History of the Theories of the [59] Over the next few pages the spelling of "aether" varies. I prefer "aether" but I have preserved the source's preference for "ether" in the spelling.

---

[60] Ibid., p. 3.

[61] Ibid., p. 10.

> Ether and Electricity, from the age of Descartes to the close of the nineteenth century. The second edition incorporated "new material" related to quantum mechanics. Classical theory was in Vol. I, while Vols. II and II gave the origins of relativity and quantum theory up to 1926. Neither the 1910 first edition nor the 1951 revision mentioned Tesla, but the chronological sequence appeared to be "skewered" in the revised edition, with little or no attempt to point out what the scientists were actually aiming at….[62]

That is, two effective tactics in suppression of the public record are simply to scramble the chronological sequence of, and delete the practical motivations behind, the theory in question.

A third tactic is evident in a later remark:

> Though it was said by Whittaker that the Hall Effect, like the magnetic rotation of light, occurs only in ponderable bodies and not in the "free ether", this statement was patently false, since the effect actually depends on the conductivity of a medium. This was a definite lie on Whittaker's part, probably "required" under the 1951 revision. The fact that the effect occurs in "ponderable bodies" and "conductive media" however, is all-important for electropulsion, since it shows the reaction between such bodies and media and the underlying "etheric framework" which is accessed in the process.[63]

In other words, when all else fails, simply lie, or leave out part of the truth. Note also that Lyne is clearly implying that Whittaker was "required" to do so, i.e., that some pressure was exerted on him. This fact will become much more significant, since one of Whittaker's early 1903 papers was one of the founding papers of "scalar" physics, a non-linear form of aether physics, as we shall see in a subsequent chapter. Whittaker and the two editions of his classic history of the aether is thus a pivotal though (to the general public) still largely unknown figure in the story.

At any rate, Lyne concludes that "Whittaker's 1951 edition intentionally skewered important facts concerning electropulsion….By reorganizing Whittaker's material into more proper order, I discovered much 'new' ('old') documentation, that 19th century scientists were in pursuit of electropropulsion."[64]

---

[62] William Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 29, emphasis added.

[63] Ibid., pp. 56-57, emphasis added.

(1) Lyne's History of Aether Physics

In order to appreciate Lyne's version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis fully, it is necessary to see its centerpiece – the work of Nikola Tesla and its alleged continuation under the Nazis – within the wider context of the reconstruction of "aether physics" that Lyne undertakes. Accordingly, this section will perhaps seem somewhat long and perhaps a bit technical. Nevertheless, it is essential to Lyne's argumentation that Tesla was an aether physicist par excellence.[65] As Lyne puts it, "It was my intent to examine known theory leading up to Tesla, to see what he contributed to their discoveries, and to determine what happened since that time to obscure, misinterpret and ultimately conceal it."[66]

Central to this reconstruction is the work of 19th century physicist J.J. Thomson, discoverer of the electron.

> Thomson had theorized, based on Maxwell's earlier theory – that a charged spherical conductor moving in a straight line must produce displacement current in the medium (Phil. Mag. Xi (1881), p. 229). In 1893, twelve years later, he claimed to have discovered "electromagnetic momentum", saying "… in an electromagnetic field there is stored in every unit volume an amount of mechanical momentum, proportional to the vector product of the electric and magnetic vectors." (J.J. Thomson, Recent Researches in Electricity and Magnetism [1893], p. 13.) Thomson also was said to have developed the theory of moving tubes of forces – which harked back to Faraday's earlier work – saying in 1891 that molecular structure is closely connected with tubes of electrostatic forces, with magnetism regarded as a secondary force. He stated that "…the aether itself is the vehicle of [64] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 30, emphasis added. "Electropulsion" is Lyne's aptly coined term for propulsion methods relying on electrical charge differentials.

---

[65] This much is certainly true, as any examination of Tesla's writings will demonstrate. What is unique in Lyne's interpretation is the driving and unifying motivation that he claims to detect in Tesla's work. As we shall see, Lyne argues his case well.

[66] Lyne, op. cit., p. 30.

> mechanical momentum, of amount (1/4 π C) [D-B] per unit volume." (*Phil. Mag.*xxxi [1981], p. 149; Recent Researches in Electricity and Magnetism [1893], chap. 1).[67]

Note that the basic motivation for the experiment, and the basic discovery or theory, is that of electro-propulsion or momentum. And this, claims Lyne, is the single unifying factor of much 19th and early 20th century experimentation.[68]

But chronologically and empirically, this makes no sense, as Lyne points out, and with this next observation, the central figure of his version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis arrives on the scene: Nicola Tesla:

> J.J. Thomson's theory, which linked electromagnetism with momentum in a mathematical and unified way, on paper, somewhat repeated Tesla's earlier lecture of 1891, proven by his earlier experiments, but Tesla's theory was different from Thomson's whose theory was incorrect. Thomson's electromagnetic momentum could be created instantaneously only with Tesla's contrivances, which existed before Thomson's "discovery", only in Tesla's laboratory, so there is no way that Thomson could have reduced "his" theory to practice or experimentally verified it.[69]

Equally important to Lyne's argument that electrical momentum and propulsion was a central unifying motivation to the scientific pursuits of the 19th century, was the work of another Thomson, this time William Thomson (Lord Kelvin).[70]

---

[67] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 31.

[68] See Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, pp. 48-66. See especially the important remark Lyne makes on p. 58, in the context of the discussion of Tom Bearden's views on "scalar" or "quantum potential" physics in chapter five. Lyne states "There was already a sort of battle brewing between the proponents of classical electrodynamics, and the proponents led by Maxwell of an electromagnetic theory of light. To the former, conductivity occurred in metal wires, etc., while with Maxwell, it occurred in the surrounding dielectrics and ether-filled space, with the conductors serving only to 'guide' the action." (Emphasis added). This is to say that electrical circuits are not closed systems but open systems, and act as local "structurers" and transducers of the medium and its energy, a view well in keeping with Bearden's insights.

[69] Ibid.., pp. 31-32, bold emphasis Lyne's, italicized emphasis added.

[70] For the sake of clarity, I will refer to William Thomson as Lord Kelvin, so as not to confuse him in the reader's mind with J.J. Thomson.

Lord Kelvin asserted in 1856 in the prestigious Proceedings of the Royal Society[71] that magnetism possessed rotational characteristics that were bound up with the heat and thermal motions of a body. Kelvin's work is significant precisely because Tesla "made many references…to his work as a prelude to his own discoveries and applications."[72] By 1870, Kelvin had performed some experiments that, as Lyne summarizes them, "seemed to indicate that 'gravitation action' could be induced by spheroidal bodies oscillated by electrical currents or mechanical pulses."[73]

Then came a more provocative discovery.

> (Kelvin) found that ponderomotive forces act between two solid bodies immersed in an incompressible fluid, when one of the bodies is immobilized and made to oscillate with a force which acts along a line between its center and that of a much larger sphere which is free. The free sphere was attracted to the small (immobilized) sphere, if its density was greater than the fluid, while a sphere of less density than the fluid was repelled or attracted, according to the ratio of its distance to the vibrator in relation to a certain quantity.[74]

Lord Kelvin's experiments were expanded upon by C.A. Bjerknes between the years 1877 and 1910.

> Bjerknes showed that when two spheres immersed in an incompressible fluid were pulsated, they exerted a mutual attraction which obeyed Newton's inverse square law if the pulsations were in phase, while if the phases differed by a half wave, the spheres repelled. At one quarter wave difference, there was no action. Where pulses were non-instantaneous at distances greater than a quarter wavelength, attractions and repulsions were reversed.[75]

---

[71] Proceedings of the Royal Society, viii [1856], p. 150, cited in Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 54.

[72] Lyne, op. cit., p. 54.

[73] Ibid., citing F. Guthrie, Phil. Mag. xli [1871], p. 405.

[74] Ibid., citing Phil Mag xli [1871], p. 405, letter of Lord Kelvin to F. Guthrie, p. 427. Lyne also makes the trenchant observation that Lord Kelvin's experiments were "analogical ones," being designed to "use mechanical and electrical wave methods to construct a model to probe the gravitational, inertial and momentive reactions of solid bodies in the ether." (pp. 54-55).

[75] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 55, citing Repertorium d. Mathematik I [Leipzig, 1877], p. 268 and Proceedings of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, iii [1879], p. 276; iv [1880], p. 29.

Note again that the motivation of the experiment is the investigation of the inertial and gravitational properties of the aether via an analogical experiment of spheres in an incompressible fluid. Likewise note an even more important fact, one whose importance, again, will become apparent in the chapter examining “scalar physics,”[76] the behavior of the spheres is due to the fact of longitudinal waves in the medium, in this case, the incompressible fluid.[77]

(2) Lyne’s Version of Tesla Physics

It is in this wider context that we now come to the centerpiece of Lyne’s reconstruction of physics and his version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis: the work of Nicola Tesla, and what Lyne believes was its hidden and ultimate motivation all along. As Lyne points out, the articles he cites in Occult Ether Physics were available to Tesla “during his student days at the Polytechnic Institute in Graz, Austria.”[78] Moreover, Tesla’s admiration for and use of Lord Kelvin’s work in his own experiments is well known.

Nikola Tesla is almost the raison d’etre of suppressed physics. No other single scientist or engineer has contributed so much to modern society and culture and yet, no other scientist or engineer has been subject to such a “long and thorough eradication of (his) name from encyclopedias and books on science, invention and technology” to the extent of Tesla.[79] So thorough has this been that he is almost “the ‘invisible man’ of science history.”[80]

> The conspicuous vacuum created where the mention of Tesla should have been, as one who made such important contributions to science,

---

[76] I.e., chapters five and six.

[77] The selection of such fluids for these experiments is due to the fact that many physicists of that era viewed the aether itself as an ultra-fine version of such incompressible fluids.

[78] Lyne, op. cit., p. 55.

[79] William Lyne, Occult Science Dictatorship: The Official State Science Religion and How to Get Excommunicated (Lamy, New Mexico: Creatopia Productions, 2001), p. 24.

[80] Ibid.

> technology, and the quality of our lives, raises ominous questions as to why his memory became virtually stricken from history almost the day after his death. What did Tesla discover which threatened the powers that be? Since we already know about the many patented inventions, my assumption has always been that the unknown, still classified works were far in advance of the published ones, and were in realization of projects which Tesla had previously announced or had already tested and developed, but had not yet "…given to the world."[81]

These inventions and ideas, "the very existence of which is categorically denied by establishment and corporate scientists,"[82] were, according to Lyne, centered on five things:

1. exotic flying machines based on electrodynamic propulsion methods;
2. discoveries implying that that energy could be extracted from the medium, or environment;
3. transmutation of the chemical elements;
4. an "alternative 'ether' physics and science";
5. Tesla's "Dynamic Theory of Gravity."[83]

Lyne believes that the first of these elements was the real unifying motivation to much of Tesla's lifelong research, particularly in his later years, and the other four elements were made in aid of the first.

Citing an article in the September 22, 1940 edition of the New York Times by William L. Laurence, Lyne notes that Tesla claimed to have discovered a new force which he called the "teleforce." Expanding on his famous Colorado Springs experiments, Tesla explored this force in discoveries and experiments between 1900 and 1940, claiming to have found a new way to create waves in the atmosphere, a "'new' way to create a 'very great electrical force,'" as well as a new way to magnify that force, and a new means of electrical propulsion.[84] Indeed, Tesla had maintained this vision of an electrical flying machine since the 1870s, when it first occurred to him as a student. Lyne observes that it was to realize this machine that was the reason Tesla “said he originally entered the field of electrical science in 1875 in the first place.”[85] In other words, Lyne believes that the creation of an electrical flying machine is the unifying theme and ultimate motivation of all of Tesla’s life’s work.

---

[81] Ibid.
[82] Ibid., p. 25.
[83] Ibid.
[84] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 27.

In a lecture in 1938, Tesla stated that the central theory of all the above five elements – his “dynamic theory of gravity” – had been worked out by 1893.[86] In that lecture, Tesla referred to two significant discoveries that he planned to “give to the world” when he had completed “his secret developments.”[87] Those two discoveries, according to Lyne, were the Dynamic Theory of Gravity and idea of “environmental energy,” i.e., the idea that “there is no energy in matter other than that received from the environment.”[88]

Lest Tesla’s assertions be thought to be merely quirky restatements of relativity, it must be remembered that

> Tesla considered his theory wholly inconsistent with the theory of relativity, and with the modern theory concerning the structure of the atom and the mutual interconversion of matter and energy. Tesla continuously attacked the validity of Einstein’s work; and until two or three years before his death he ridiculed the belief that energy could be obtained from matter.[89]

In a certain sense this is due to Tesla’s habit of thinking in terms of nineteenth century aether physics, but in another, it is due to the nature of the discoveries he was making since his Colorado Springs experiments, discoveries that took him into the most avante garde areas.

While clearly derived from his Colorado Springs experiments, Tesla’s Dynamic Theory of Gravity did not get any public airing until that 1938 lecture, given to the Institute of Immigrant Welfare on May 12, 1938. This, in Tesla's own words, is all that is publicly known of that theory:

---

[85] Ibid., p. 4.

[86] Ibid., p. 61. 1893 is significant because that was the year Tesla began his experiments in Colorado Springs that led to his discovery of electrical standing waves and wireless broadcast of power.

[87] Ibid., p. 67.

[88] Ibid.

[89] John J. O’Neill, Prodigal Genius: The Life of Nikola Tesla (Las Vegas: Bortherhood of Life , Inc., 1994), p. 249.

> During the succeeding two years (1893 and 1894) of intense concentration I was fortunate enough to make two far reaching discoveries. The first was a dynamic theory of gravity, which I have worked out in all details and hope to give to the world very soon. It explains the causes of this force and the motions of heavenly bodies under its influence so satisfactorily that it will put an end to idle speculation and false conceptions, as that of curved space….
>
> Only the existence of a field of force can account for the motions of the bodies as observed, and its assumption dispenses with space curvature. All literature on this subject is futile and destined to oblivion. So are all attempts to explain the workings of the universe without recognizing the existence of the ether and the indispensable function it plays in the phenomena.
>
> My second discovery was of a physical truth of the greatest importance. As I have searched the entire scientific records in more than a half dozen languages for a long time without finding the least anticipation, I consider myself the original discoverer of this truth, which can be expressed by the statement: There is no energy in matter other than that received from the environment.
>
> …. It applies rigorously to molecules and atoms as well as to the largest heavenly bodies, and to all matter in the universe in any phase of its existence from its very formation to its ultimate disintegration.[90]

The idea of "environmental energy" may seem obscure, but the radical nature of Tesla's assertion may be appreciated if one considers his lifetime's preoccupation: electricity. What Tesla is in effect saying through his (always) carefully chosen language is that in any electrical circuit or conductor, it is not so much the power "source" that produces the power, but rather that such a source, along with the parameters of the circuit itself, is an open system transducing power from the medium. This is a revolutionary statement to make, especially in 1938.

But there is a hint of Tesla's advanced views on the aether and what his "dynamic theory" of gravity may have entailed, if his 1938 statements are viewed in the wider context of previous developments in general and especially the experiments of Lord

---

[90] John J. O'Neill, Prodigal Genius, p. 250.

Kelvin in particular. This is his clear allusion to the motion of heavenly bodies and to the fact that his twin observations are scale invariant, i.e., applicable to all sizes of matter from atomic to planetary scales. Thus it would seem that Tesla appears to be viewing the aether in not only a dynamic sense, but as a structure of rotation, of vortices.[91] These are significant indicators that Tesla was already thinking in terms of higher order topologies than relativity theory.[92]

To see Tesla as a conventional 19th century aether physicist in his late life is, however, to massively distort the picture. Tesla wrote an unpublished article toward the end of his life called "Man's Greatest Achievement," in which he states some very unusual, very new, and, as it turns out, very old,[93] views of the aether:

> Long ago (man) recognized that all perceptible matter comes from a primary substance, or a tenuity beyond conception, filling all space, the Akasa or lumeniferous ether, which is acted upon by the life-giving Prana or creative force, calling into existence, in never ending cycles, all things and phenomena. The primary substance, thrown into infinitesimal whirls of prodigious velocity, becomes gross matter; the force subsiding, the motion ceases and matter disappears, reverting to the primary substance.
>
> Can Man control this grandest, most awe-inspiring of all process in nature? …
>
> If he could do this, he would have powers almost unlimited and supernatural….He could alter the size of this planet, control its seasons, guide it along any path he might choose… He could cause planets to collide and produce suns and stars…
>
> To create and to annihilate material substance… would be the supreme manifestation of the power of Man's mind, his most complete triumph over the physical world, his crowning achievement, which would place him beside his Creator, make him fulfill his ultimate destiny.[94]

---

[91] Lyne also observes that in Tesla's view "the ether is thrown into 'infinitesimal whirls'" or "'micro helices'" at velocities near the speed of light. (Occult Ether Physics, p. 68).

[92] It may indicate that Tesla was thinking ahead of the five and six dimensional theories of Kaluza-Klein or Vaclav Hlavaty.

[93] See my The Giza Death Star Destroyed (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press), chapters five and nine.

[94] John J. O'Neill, Prodigal Genius, pp. 253-254.

As will be seen in chapter five, Tesla's views eerily echo those of "scalar" physicist Tom Bearden.[95] Tesla's view of the aether shows his thinking to be far from the inert and static aether of nineteenth century physicists, or even the kind of aether envisioned by Max Planck and other physicists, who envisioned a quasi-hydro dynamic aether that was "drug along" with planets. As this passage makes clear, Tesla envisioned it as a transmutative aether analogous to electrical carriers "immersed in an insulating fluid" whose properties varied according to the local environment.[96]

But what does all this mean?

Here, it is best to cite Lyne's catalogue of Tesla's own statements, followed by Lyne's own summary of their implications. Lyne assembles a series of quotations by Tesla to demonstrate eight points:

1. "The most probable medium filling space is one consisting of independent carriers immersed in an insulating fluid."
2. "In his experiments he dwells first on some phenomena produced by electrostatic force, which he considers in the light of modern theories to be the most important force in nature for us to investigate."
3. "He illustrates how mechanical motions are produced by a varying electrostatic force acting through a gaseous medium,"
4. "One of the most interesting results arrived at in pursuing these experiments, is the demonstration of the fact that a gaseous medium upon which vibration is impressed by rapid changes of electrostatic potential, is rigid."
5. "If through this medium enormous electrostatic stresses are assumed to act, which vary rapidly in intensity, it would allow the motion of a body through it, yet it would be rigid and elastic, although the fluid itself might be devoid of these properties."
6. "…on the assumption that the independent carriers are of any configuration such that the fluid resistance to motion in one direction is greater than in another, a stress of that nature would cause the carriers to arrange themselves in groups, since they

---

[95] Tesla also shows himself quite familiar in this quotation with ancient metaphysical and esoteric doctrines of the materia prima with his reference to Akasa, or the Akashic field, a kind of eternal ephemeral "Hall of Records."

[96] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 69. For the significance, and ancientness, of this view of the aether, see my Giza Death Star, chapter three;; and Giza Death Star Destroyed, chapters five and nine.

would turn to each other their sides of the greatest electrical density, in which position the fluid resistance to approach would be smaller than to receding."

7. "If in a medium of the above characteristics a brush would be formed by a steady potential, an exchange of the carriers would go on continuously, and there would be less carriers per unit volume in the brush than in the space at some distance from the electrode, this corresponding to rarefaction."
8. "If the potentials were rapidly changing, the result would be very different; the higher the frequency of the pulses, the slower would be the exchange of carriers; finally, the motion of translation through measurable space would cease and, with a sufficiently high frequency and intensity of the stress, the carriers would be drawn towards the electrode, and compression would result."[97]

Lyne summarizes the practical nature of these insights as follows:

1. Mechanical motions can be produced by varying electrostatic force acting through a gaseous (ether) medium, which thereby becomes rigidified, yet allows solid bodies to pass through.
2. Under influence of stress in one direction… the carriers may group together, forming tubes of force, creating greater ease of movement in that direction.
3. When a (direct current) brush is created by a steady potential, a continuous exchange of carriers is created corresponding to ether rarefaction, as the tubes of force are drawn into the conductor.
4. With a sufficiently high frequency and stress intensity in the opposite direction, carrier exchange is blocked by ether compression, forcing the tubes of force to dissolve in the conductors of the ship, imparting electromagnetic momentum. The system, using the two kinds of potentials (direct current and alternating current), is known as "p2".[98]

The last point assumes a particular significance in the light not only of Tesla's quest for an electrically propelled flying machine, but also, as we shall see, in the light of the known design and operating principles of the Bell.

Lyne, summarizing Tesla's views on the aether and electrical circuits as open systems, notes that electrical motive force is not due merely to "varying currents" but to "rarefaction and compression of the ether" brought about by rapidly varying and different kinds of currents.[99] The implication was that, while as early as 1884 Tesla had done calculations for his flying machine when he first immigrated to the United States,[100] he later claimed that his "dirigible torpedo" could achieve speeds of 300 miles per second, or an incredible 1,080,000 miles per hour![101]

---

[97] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 70, bold face emphasis Lyne's, italicized emphasis added.

[98] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 71, emphasis added.

The idea of the compression and rarefaction of the aether via electrical stress caused by two types of electrical potential, coupled with the idea of the structure of matter being nothing but vorticular motion in that aether, makes Tesla's views far ahead of their time. Indeed, by discovering the twin characteristics of the aether as longitudinal compression and rarefaction, as well as vorticular motion, Tesla laid the foundations of "scalar physics" as we shall see when we examine the work of Tom Bearden. Tesla actually went so far as to discover the "endothermic explosion" (cold explosion) uses of such wave phenomena:

> Tesla discovered that by using a low frequency beam-directed pulse, he could cause, at the quarter wavelength, the eruption of a large electromagnetic pulse which could, by carrying a much higher exciting wave, excite the atmospheric gases in a region, to explosively expand them, followed by a tremendous implosion and the absorption of a great amount of heat in the area, causing immediate freezing. This process would create an initial explosive shock wave followed by the implosive return wave, similar to nuclear detonation. For example, by using a low frequency of 60 (cycles per second), with a wavelength of 3,100 miles, directed by carrier-beam, a pulse could be made to erupt at one-quarter wavelength – 775 miles, corrected to 751 miles by velocity factor. By superimposing an exciting frequency of say 50 megahertz or so, the atmospheric gases could be excited to cause a "cold implosion" which absorbs heat. By altering the wavelength and the direction of propagation, the results could be delivered to any terrestrial point.[102]

---

[99] Ibid., p. 71.

[100] John J. O'Neill, Prodigal Genius, p. 66.

[101] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 72.

[102] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 25, emphasis added. Lyne also notes that the frequency characteristics of the aether in Tesla's view are that the aether is of an "ultra-hyper-high frequency" nature, if I may be permitted that clumsy expression for the sake of emphasis. Tesla himself stated that he viewed the basic wave structure of the aether as longitudinal and acoustic in nature, with the "sound" waves traveling at the velocity of light. Moreover, Tesla also viewed

Keep in mind this “cold explosion” and “explosive atmospheric heating” at a distance, for these will be seen to be significant signatures of scalar weapons deployment. Indeed, Tesla chose his name for his new force – “teleforce” – very carefully, for that very name designated the application of “force at a distance.”[103] And as will be seen in the next chapter, the electrical stress of the medium via two types of potential, in addition to high frequency pulsation, and vorticular motion, appears to be the very principles in operation in the Bell.

From what has been stated, it is obvious that Lyne views Tesla’s theoretical and practical work as a prototypical “unified physics” that can develop a technology with a variety of applications, from propulsion to weaponry of planet-busting potential.

b. The National Security Act and Scientific Suppression

Tesla’s post-Colorado Springs discoveries were deemed “not fit for public consumption.” And this required, of course, an entity to coordinate and monitor the suppression of such physics and to coordinate any further secret development of it, to promulgate a “public” version of physics destined to proffer untestable theories publicly while privately developing entirely different paradigms, and to coordinate the secret development of exotic physics and associated technologies. That entity Lyne believes was created, or perhaps better put, was sanctioned by the National Security Act of 1947.

To corroborate this, Lyne observes that Tesla’s contemporary, friend, and biographer, John J. O’Niell, who wrote the classic biography Prodigal Genius: The Life of Nikola Tesla, attempted no less than three times to publish the book, all in the same month! Lyne quips:

---

radioactivity as environmental and hence a dynamic phenomenon, and not as an “inherent” property of certain types of unstable matter. (Lyne, op. cit., p. 74.)

[103] Ibid., p. 28.

> In case you are wondering, the three publishings in the same month were not due to landslide sales at the bookstores, but rather to O'Niell's having been threatened and censored by the FBI, and forced to republish several times because of their deletion and censoring of material which to this day is still classified.[104]

Tesla, contrary to government disinformation, was a careful note taker. As Lyne puts it, "the notes on his Colorado Springs experiments alone were enough for a large-format book of 433 pages."[105] And over his entire lifetime, Tesla managed to produce more than a railroad boxcar full of material, most of which was confiscated by the FBI on his death, as only 150,000 documents were released to his Serbian relations in Yugoslavia.[106]

(1) Strange Nazi Parallels

At this juncture Lyne's version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis begins to take its final shape. Lyne states that after the arrival of Von Braun and other Project Paperclip scientists in the US after the world war, the military-intelligence community from Air Technical Command at "Wright-Patterson Air Force Base hurried up to the warehouses of the Custodian of Alien Properties, and took possession of all the Tesla materials. They removed them to Wright-Patterson, and every bit of them have been classified at the highest level ever since, the government having declassified NONE of them."[107] In other words, the Air Force had discovered something in the Nazi research that was based upon and a further elaboration of some aspect of Tesla's work.

c. The Nazi Role in Occulted Aether Physics

(1) Roswell, MJ-12, and Disinformation

Lyne believes that the answer to that question is very specific, and that part of the answer lies not only in the creation of the National Security apparatus of the United States in 1947, but in the undue influence that the Paperclip Nazis continued to exercise within that community. For example, Lyne quite openly states that the entire Roswell incident was "an SS hoax", perpetrated by the Paperclip Nazis in New Mexico who were, in fact, SS officers.[108] As a result of the American confiscation of the most sensitive Nazi scientific documents, Lyne believes unhesitatingly that not only is most UFOlogy manipulated by the CIA or other intelligence agencies, but also that the MAJIC-12 documents are an elaborate disinformation campaign hatched within the bowels of the intelligence community,[109] possessing partial truth, and partial falsehood. Similarly, and for our purposes, more importantly, Lyne points out the obvious fact that since such Nazi documentation as concerned itself with such exotic physics, weapons and propulsion systems was confiscated by America (or, equally plausible, remained under German control or at least influence), then the so-called "plans" and "documents" of the SS supposedly detailing Nazi flying saucers are also fakes, part of an elaborate disinformation campaign.[110]

---

[104] Lyne, Occult Science Dictatorship, p. 25.
[105] Ibid., p. 27.
[106] Ibid., p. 26.
[107] Ibid., p. 27.

But oddly, and most chillingly, Lyne points out that the two largest and most notorious agencies established by the National Security Act, The Central Intelligence Agency and The National Security Agency, are but direct English translations or metaphrases of Reichsicherheithauptamt, the infamous R.S.H.A, which may be literally translated as "National Security Agency" and loosely also connotes a central, or main, clearing office, or "central intelligence" or "security" agency.[111]

---

[108] William Lyne, Pentagon Aliens, p. vii. This should be kept in mind when the Carol Rosin affidavit is considered later, since it concerns direct statements allegedly made by Von Braun himself that imply a vast "extraterrestrial" hoax being played out on mankind in order to weaponize space with the next generation of post-thermonuclear strategic offensive weapons.

[109] Ibid., p. 118.

[110] Ibid., pp 2-3. Lyne also believes the Schauberger component of the Nazi UFO Legend to be a component of this disinformation.

[111] Lyne, Occult Ether Physics, p. 8.

(2) Von Braun's Alleged Pre-War "P2" Project in New Mexico

Given all that Lyne alleges concerning Tesla's views and his "p2" lecture in London demonstrating electromotive properties of two plates with different types of potential (alternating and direct current), it is a short and, one must admit, believable step for Lyne to maintain that this work quickly came to the attention of the Nazis, who like the Soviets a generation later, were searching for areas of anomalous or exotic physics to exploit, elaborate, and develop. Thus, Lyne maintains that before the war, Werner Von Braun and a small and select team of German scientists went to New Mexico and there performed preliminary experiments on Tesla's ideas, a project Lyne calls the "p2" project, after Tesla's two different potentials.[112]

Having assured themselves of the viability of Tesla's science, Lyne asserts that Von Braun and company returned to Germany where the work was continued in great secrecy and behind a number of "camouflage" black projects, such as rockets and "aerodynamic saucers." The cover-up continued after the war under the aegis of the National Security Act and the Nazi-influenced CIA, which had taken over the whole of German military intelligence on the Eastern Front, General Reinhard Gehlen's Fremde Heere Ost (Foreign Armies East). These combined government, military, corporate, and Nazi entities conspired to conceal the aether physics behind Relativity. This Teslian "aether physics", according to Lyne, is the "'classified science' that the government conceals pursuant to the National Security Act."[113]

What is one to make of Lyne's version?

First, while certainly possessing its outlandish and fantastic elements, it is clear that many aspects of it resonate with other researchers' more recent inquiries. In fact, it was Lyne who first connected Tesla, exotic Nazi technology, the Nazi influence in the post-war American military-industrial complex, and the notion of hoaxes and disinformation in the UFOlogy community.

---

[112] Lyne, Pentagon Aliens, pp. 6-7, 48-49, 102.

[113] Lune, Occult Science Dictatorship, p. 8.

Second, Lyne clearly believes that there is a suppressed, or occulted, physics, developed in secret, but recoverable if one carefully sifts the published physics papers and views them in a certain way, along the lines of the aether paradigm. This, as will be seen in chapter five, is quite similar to Tom Bearden's belief in a similar such repressed – but reconstructable – physics.

Third, Lyne has indicated certain signatures of the application of that physics when weaponized: atmospheric heating or, alternatively, "cold explosions." Moreover, Lyne has clearly indicated the planet-busting potential of such weapons.

While most of Lyne's version of the Hypothesis sounds like the sheerest fantasy, this aspect, at least, is also shared by Bearden, a highly credentialed and widely published scientist.

5. Both Feet In Atlantis: the "Jan Van Helsing" Version

On the decidedly bizarre end of the Two Space Programs spectrum are the curious allegations of the pseudonymous "Jan Van Helsing," a researcher into the occult basis of exotic Nazi technology. Like the other pseudonymous source "William Torbitt" examined previously, Van Helsing outlines a scenario of a coordinated "private" group of secret societies behind the Nazis pursuing exotic weapons technologies. Unlike Torbitt, however, Van Helsing also displays evident sympathy for some of these societies and by implication for the Nazis themselves. Nonetheless, Van Helsing's allegations are too important to be ignored.

Van Helsing published his views in a work entitled Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, a work not easily available except in an excerpted version on the internet.[114]

Van Helsing repeats many of the themes of the Nazi UFO Legend, including those that place the beginning of Nazi secret weapons research in very secret pre-war projects of these secret societies, namely, the so-called "Vril Gesellschaft," named after the "vril" or aetheric energy of Sir Edward Bullwer-Lytton's famous novels of a long-lost subterranean civilization that had preserved the secrets of this mysterious energy, and the more famous or infamous Thule Gesellschaft, the secret society that actually helped to midwife the Nazi Party into existence. These ideas are nothing new in the lore of the Nazi UFO legend. What is new with Van Helsing are the odd details that he adds to the mix.

---

[114] Q.v. www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril1.html.

For example, Van Helsing states that the Vril Society "was mainly occupied with the building of UFOs. They had, next to Viktor Schauberger and Dr. W. O. Schumann, also Schriever, Habermohl, Miethe, Epp and Belluzo working for them."[115] In other words, Van Helsing makes the astonishing claim that all of the alleged "flying saucer experts" that were associated with the development of these exotic technologies since Rudolf Lusar first broke the story in the 1950s were members initially of a secret society whose primary purpose was the building of such craft. All the Nazis did, apparently, was to continue the project under their own occult-inspired jurisdiction: the SS.

But beyond this, Van Helsing also makes two other assertions with this remarkable statement, one very blatant, and the other only implied. In the first case, he baldly asserts that world-renowned scientist and physicist W.O. Schumann, discoverer of the so-called "Schumann Resonance" of the earth, was himself an initiate into this society, and was cooperating on these projects. In the second case, Van Helsing is clearly implying by his unsubstantiated allegation that some group inside Germany was involved in the secret development of an "off-the-books" physics and technology long before the Nazis came to power. In this, his allegations are similar to those who believe that the 1890s "airship" flaps in the USA were brought about by a secret group that had covertly designed, perfected, tested, and flown the first "airships".

Were these the only allegations that Van Helsing makes, it would be fairly easy to simply dismiss them with a smile and a chuckle, and move on. However, Van Helsing also couples his allegations to the known occult doctrines of these secret societies as the primary motivation behind the Nazi projects, and in so doing, proposes his own "Nazi" version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis. The importance of his allegations lies, therefore, in its odd corroboration of Richard Hoagland’s belief that many NASA launches and mission “logos” were coordinated in reference to occult doctrine and practice, particularly to celestial alignments.

---

[115] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril1.html, p. 1.

This strange history begins, according to Van Helsing, in 1917, during World War One, when

> The occultist BARON RUDOLF VON SEBOTTENDORFF, the Gurdjeff (sic) disciple KARL HAUSHOFER, the ace pilot LOTHAR WAIZ, PRELATE GERNOT of the secret “Societas Templi Marcioni” (The Inheritors of the Knights Templar) and MARIA ORSIC, a transcendental medium from Zagreb met in Vienna. They all had extensively studied the “Golden Dawn”, its teachings, rituals and especially its knowledge about Asian secret lodges. Sebottendorff and Haushofer were experienced travelers of India and Tibet and much influenced by the teachings and myths of those places. During the First World War Karl Haushofer had made contacts with one of the most influential secret societies of Asia, the Tibetan Yellow Hats (dGe-lugs-pa). This sect was formed in 1409 by the Buddhist reformer Tsong-kha-pa. Haushofer was initiated and swore to commit suicide should his mission fail. The contacts between Haushofer and the Yellow Hats led in the Twenties to the formation of Tibetan colonies in Germany.
>
> The four young people hoped that during these meetings in Vienna they would learn something about the secret revolutionary texts of the Knights Templar and also about the secret fraternity DIE HERREN VOM SCHWARZEN STEIN (“The Lords of the Black Stone”).[116]

Again, there is, on the surface, nothing new about Van Helsing’s allegations; one encounters the familiar names – Von Sebottendorff and General Haushofer, Hitler’s “geopolitics” guru – in connection with familiar themes: the fascination for the Orient and for its “secret wisdom”.

But, again, Van Helsing imparts new information – again without the slightest substantiation – that is unique to him, namely, that the Vienna meeting was for a twofold purpose: (1) to acquire knowledge about some apparently (very) secret Templar texts, and (2) to acquire knowledge about an even more secret fraternity, the Lords of the Black Stone. And of course, lest it be forgotten, the words Black Stone, in German, are schwarzen Stein, abbreviated as

---

[116] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, p. 1, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril3.html.

"SS". It is not long, therefore, before Van Helsing couples this new twist to another ancient occult doctrine, the "Black Sun" (schwarze Sonne) of illumination, also abbreviated "SS."[117]

Then in September of 1917, Baron Von Sebottendorff allegedly met with leaders and members of this mysterious "Lords of the Black Stone" fraternity in "Untersberg to receive the power of the 'Black-Purple Stone' after which the secret society was named."[118] Again, no substantiation or evidence of this assertion is offered. However, perhaps a very indirect corroboration exists in the form of the famous traveler-explorer-occultist Nicholas Roerich, an advisor to President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Roerich, of course, had a similar preoccupation with "magic stones", namely, the celebrated chintimanti stone of Mongolia.

In any case, whatever happened in September 1917 appeared to have been successful, for in 1918 a group formed around Von Sebottendorff in Bad Aibling, which would become the notorious Thule Society. It is here that "scientific magic, astrology, occultism and Templar knowledge as well as 'Golden Dawn' practices like Tantra, Yoga and Eastern meditation" were all combined."[119] And among this potent mix was also a tincture of messianism, for the Thule Gesellschaft also "believed, following the Revelation of Isis, in a Coming Saviour (German: Heiland = the Holy One), the 'Third Sargon' who would bring to Germany glory and a new Aryan culture."[120] In other words, the program was a total one: the goal of the secret society not only continued to be to (re-)discover and (re-)construct a lost and exotic technology of hegemony, but it also sought to place its ideas and agendas into power. Once in power, it would maintain itself in authority by the very technological means it was seeking to (re-) discover. Thus, by implication Van Helsing is saying that one of the hidden or "occulted" agendas of the Nazi Party since its inception was always technological and occult in nature; it was committed to the (re-) discovery of a lost and buried technology of hegemony, in short, to the creation of exotic and massively destructive weapons. It was, so to speak, the one political party in the world with an occult-weapons agenda that could be called "Atlantean." It was the one political party in the world with both feet planted firmly in Atlantis.

---

[117] Ibid., p. 2.

[118] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twnetieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril3.html, p. 3.

[119] Ibid., p. 6.

[120] Ibid.

To drive home this point, Van Helsing cites the famous work of Dietrich Bronder, Befor Hitler Kamm (Before Hitler Came), which lists the following people as members of the Thule Gesellschaft:

1. Baron Rudolf von Sebottendorff, Grand Master
2. Guido Von List, Master
3. Jorg Lanz Von Liebenfels, Master
4. Adolf Hitler, later Reichschancellor, and "SS Superior"
5. Rudolf Hess, later Deputy Führer and SS Obergruppenführer
6. Hermann Göring, Reichsmarschall and SS Obergruppenführer
7. Heinrich Himmler, Reichsführer SS and Reichsminister
8. Alfred Rosenberg, Reichsminister and NSDAP Reichsleiter
9. Hans Franck, NSDAP Reichsleiter and later Governor General of occupied Poland
10. Juilius Streicher, SA Obergruppenführer
11. Major General Prof Dr. Karl Haushofer, occultist and geopolitician, considered to be the architect of Hitler's Lebensraum doctrine
12. Prof Dr Gottfried Feder
13. Dietrich Eckart, poet, occultist, and Editor in Chief of the Völkischer Beobachter newspaper
14. Bernhard Stempfle, confidant of Hitler
15. Dr. Theo Morell, Hitler's personal physician
16. Franz Gurtner, Munich police president
17. Rudolf Steiner, founder of the Anthroposophic society
18. Prof Dr W.O. Schumann of the Munich Technical University
19. Trebisch-Lincoln, occultist and Tibetan traveler

20. Countess Westrap.[121]

This list is illuminating in a number of respects.

First, it provides a general context from which to view the possible occult influences at work behind the Nazi Antarctic expedition in 1938-1939, for that expedition was under the patronage of Reichsmarschall Göring. Second, it provides a similar context from which to view the allegations of some that Hess was privy to whatever secrets that expedition found, and that these were the ultimate motivation for the Allied Powers keeping him – or his imposter – imprisoned for so long after the war. Finally, it provides an interesting context from which to view the Third Reich and its secret weapons black projects themselves, projects which included a heavy admixture of occult doctrine and experimentation. From a glance at the list, it is apparent that the SS itself is the visible extension of the Thule Gesellschaft into the Third Reich. Or, to put it differently, via the National Socialist Party, an occult secret society had seized the reigns of authority in one of the world's great powers, and could thus direct the entire energies of that state into the overt and covert pursuit of its agendas.

Among the doctrines held by the Thule Gesellschaft that lay behind the Nazi ideology were an "Ayro-Germanic construction of religion…by the philosopher Guido Von List… a leaning towards the anti-Old Testament" views of an early Christian heresy known as Marcionism.[122] This was augmented by the "esoteric history" of the Aryans believed by the Thule Gesellschaft, a history reconstructed from ancient German and Scandinavian myths. Chief among these was the belief in "Hyperborea," the continent populated by the "ancient Aryans," with its capital city of "Ultima Thule," both of which were located in "the highest north". Moreover, these "ancient Aryans" were space travelers from a planet in the star system of Aldebaran, the main star in the constellation of Taurus.[123]

---

[121] Jan Van Helsing, Secrfet Societies: Their power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril3.html, pp. 6-7.

[122] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril3.html, pp. 7-8.

According to this myth, the continent sank during the last ice age, whereupon, with customary Teutonic preparation, the ancient Ayrans were supposed to have burrowed into the earth and "settled under the Himalaya region" in huge subterranean cities bored out with huge machines.[124] This in turn forms the rationale for the "two large expeditions" that were "sent by the SS to the Himalayas to find those entrances. Further expeditions searched in the Andes, the Matto Grosso mountains in the North and the Santa Catarina mountains in the South of Brazil, in Czechoslovakia and parts of England."[125]

As Van Helsing also mentions, Hitler's geopolitician, General Karl Haushofer, had his own personal dualistic twist to this doctrine, claiming that

> Thule was actually Atlantis and – contrary to all other researchers of Tibet and India – he said that the surviving Thule-Atlanteans were separated into two groups, a good one and an evil one. Those who called themselves after their oracle Agharti – were the good and settled in the Himalaya region, the evil ones were the Shamballah – who wanted to subjugate humanity and they went West. He maintained that the fight between the people of Agharta and Shamballah had been going on for thousands of years and that in the Third Reich, the Thule Gesellschaft as Agartha's representative – continued it against the representatives of Shamballah, the Freemasons and the Zionists. This perhaps was his mission.[126]

Haushofer allegedly then went on to found in 1919 "a second order, the 'Brüder des Lichts' (sic)(Brothers of the Light)," the society that later became the Vril Gesellschaft.[127] According to Van Helsing this new secret society united the society known as Die Herren vom Schwarzen Stein (The Lords of the Black Stone), which allegedly emerged from the old Teutonic Order, and the Schwarze Ritter (Black Knights) of the Thule Society and the SS elite of the Schwarze Sonne, or Black Sun.[128]

---

[123] Ibid., p. 8.

[124] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril3.html, pp.7-8.

[125] Ibid., p. 10.

[126] Ibid., p. 9.

[127] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril4.html, p. 2.

The occasion of this founding was apparently a meeting in which members of these various secret orders met in a rented forester's lodge near what would later become Hitler's lair, in Berchtesgaden. The meeting was also attended by two mediums, who had "mediumistically received transmissions in a secret Templar script – a language unknown to her – with the technical data for the construction of a flying machine. According to Vril documents these telepathic messages came from the solar system Aldebaran which is sixty-eight light-years away in the constellation Taurus."[129]

As part of this message, the mediums were "informed" that the non-white races were in "lower (stages) of spiritual development," and that "the more the races intermixed, the lower the spiritual development of these people sank."[130] They were also "told" that the "divine" people of "Aldebaran" had colonized "the planet Mallona (also called Maldek, Marduk or – by the Russians – Phaeton) which existed in the area of today's asteroid belt, then between Mars and Jupiter."[131] Of course, the idea of the asteroid belt having been a former planet that had exploded is an old hypothesis, first entertained in the early nineteenth century by astronomers after the discovery of the second asteroid, and as they sought to explain why Bode's Law predicted a planet should be in the orbit of the asteroid belt.[132]

What is crucial to notice, however, is that Van Helsing's allegation makes it clear that someone inside of Germany had connected the astronomical theory of an exploded planet to certain ancient Sumerian myths, most likely that of the Enuma Elish, an ancient war epic that describes the destruction of the now missing planet by means of an ancient weapon of mass destruction.[133]

---

[128] Ibid.

[129] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril4.html, p. 3.

[130] Ibid.

[131] Ibid.

[132] See the last two books of my Giza Death Star trilogy, The Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 12-20, and The Giza Death Star Destroyed, pp. 31-37.

But Van Helsing does not stop there, for he also connects these occult practices, secret societies, astronomical theories, with the secret development of a new science and new technology:

> We cannot know whether these statements about Aldebaran were based on facts, but the construction plans and the technical details that the Vril telepaths received – wherever they came from – were so accurate that they led to the most fantastic idea men ever begot: the construction of a Jenseitsflugmaschine, a "flying machine for the other side."[134]

Let us pause to consider exactly what these statements mean.

First, Van Helsing supplies considerably more detail in what is otherwise the old story that the Vril Society receives UFO plans from mediums, namely, he supplies the secret societies that came together, and names the mediums involved,[135] the time,[136] and the place, a forester's lodge near Berchtesgaden! But secondly, as the remarks immediately above make clear, his interest is not so much these allegations, but rather that they led to the development of an entirely different technology and science by a secret society founded for the purpose by the very man later to be Hitler's geopolitician!

As if that were not enough, Van Helsing then goes on to make the following statement:

> During this early phase of "alternative science" Dr. W. O. Schumann of the Technical University in Munich, both a Thule and a Vril member, held a speech a section of which is reproduced here:
>
> "In everything we recognize two principles that determine the events: light and darkness, good and evil, creation and destruction – as in electricity we know plus and minus. It is always: either – or…..The coming new age will be an age of a new, positive, divine technology!"[137]

---

[133] See my The Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 12-23.

[134] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril4.html, p.4.

[135] Ibid., p. 3, the mediums were allegedly Maria Orsic and another one "only known as Sigrun."

[136] Ibid., p. 2: December 1919.

[137] Ibid., 5.

Van Helsing then notes that these remarks – one of the few that he "substantiates" - are drawn from "the German SS secret archives."[138]

According to Van Helsing, the first "saucer" was secretly built by the Vril Society in 1922.[139] He follows this up with even more specific information. For example, he alleges that this machine was tested for two years before it was "dismantled and probably stored in the Augsburg works of Messerschmitt."[140] Moreover, there were entries in the financial records of German aviation companies "under the codename 'JFM' (for Jenseitsflugmaschine)" that showed "payments towards financing this work." [141]

But it is when Van Helsing arrives at World War Two and the continuation of these projects under the Nazis that his fantasia knows no bounds. For example, he alleges that "at the beginning of 1943 it was planned to build in the Zeppelin works a cigar-shaped mother ship," a machine called the "Andromeda Device", with a length of around 150 yards, capable of storing "several saucer-shaped craft in its body for flights of long duration,"[142] or perhaps better stated, flights of Adamski-esque imagination.

But immediately after these sensational and highly questionable allegations, Van Helsing again comes up with more unsubstantiated specifics:

> By Christmas 1943 an important meeting of the Vril Gesellschaft took place at the seaside port of Kolberg. The two mediums Maria Orsic and Sigrun attended. The main item on the agenda was the Aldebaran Project. The mediums had received precise information about habitable planets around the sun Aldebaran and one began to plan a trip there. At a January 22, 1944 meeting between Hitler, Himmler, Kunkel (of the Vril Society) and Dr. Schumann this project was discussed. It was planned to send the Vril 7 large-capacity craft through a dimension channel independent of the speed of light to Aldebaran. According [138] Ibid. I have been unable, as of this writing, to track down the exact reference.

---

[139] Ibid., p. 6.

[140] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril4.html, p. 6.

[141] Ibid.

[142] Ibid., p. 13.

> Ratthofer a first test flight in the dimension channel took place in the winter of 1944. It barely missed disaster…[143]

In addition to all this, Van Helsing also states that these exotic craft "should create an extremely strong field around itself extending somewhat into its surroundings which would render the space thus enclosed including the machine a microcosm absolutely independent of the earthbound space."[144]

All of this exotic research was conducted under the Nazis, according to Van Helsing, by a group "within the SS" that was "studying alternative energy, the SS-E-IV," or SS Entwicklungstelle IV (SS Development Group IV). Here Van Helsing is on more solid ground, for there was indeed such a group in the SS, whose top secret brief was precisely to research "alternative energy." But Van Helsing adds his customary occult twist, for he calls this group "Development Group IV of the Black Sun," or Schwarze Sonne, abbreviated "SS". The doctrine of the Black Sun (Schwarze Sonne) or Black Stone (Schwarze Stein) was the secret doctrine of the SS known only to Himmler's highest SS generals.[145] The purpose of this group was "to render Germany independent of foreign oil."[146]

What emerges from all this is that there were two space programs already in existence in Nazi Germany, a "public" space program, that was in fact the "secret" rocket program of Von Braun and the Peenemünde scientists, and a much more secret, and much earlier, one, that begun by the secret societies and later continued by the SS, a program with a completely different physics and technology.

While most of Van Helsing's fantasia inevitably strikes one as absurd, certain aspects of it fit the broad outlines one has come to expect with Nazi secret weapons development: an undercurrent of occult inspiration, development in utter secrecy, the search for a new physics and new technology, the evident reliance upon and knowledge of ancient myths in the reconstruction of that science and technology, and the fusion of these with other occult doctrines – "root races", extraterrestrial human origins, and so on – and a genocidal political agenda.

---

[143] Ibid., pp. 13-14, emphasis added.

[144] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril4.html, p. 8, emphasis added.

[145] See my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 161-180.

[146] Jan Van Helsing, Secret Societies: Their Power and Influence in the Twentieth Century, www.galactic-server.net/rune/vril4.html, p. 11.

If, as Van Helsing suggests, this dual track program was in fact begun by pre-war secret societies, then one method of testing his allegations might be to see if there is any indication that after the war the same or similar groups continued the lines of exotic and esoteric research the SS was pursuing during the war.

In any case, Van Helsing's is not the last word in the Two Space Programs Hypothesis. Indeed, if David S. Percy and Mary Bennett are correct, then not only were the Two Space Programs that were begun by the Nazis during the war continued after the war both by the Soviet Union and the United States, they moreover exhibited much more coordination between them than the space programs of alleged rivals should really exhibit, especially at the height of the Cold War where the ultimate prize – the Moon – promised rich benefits in prestige and military position to whomever got there first.

6. The Dark Moon Version

British authors David S. Percy and Mary Bennett are the latest in a long line of researchers who question the historical record of the Apollo manned Moon missions. This is not to say that they are of the typical "Apollo-was-entirely-hoaxed" genre. Quite the contrary. As they put their own case, the purpose of their book, Dark Moon: Apollo and the Whistleblowers, is "to question the entire validity of the official record of mankind's exploration of the Moon especially the Apollo lunar landings. We are not however claiming that astronauts from Earth have never walked on the Moon."[147] That is to say, they believe mankind went to the Moon, but that it did not happen in the way we have been told it happened.

---

[147] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon: Apollo and the Whistleblowers, p. 1.

Like many researchers who question the official explanation of the Apollo program and its celebrated Moon landings, Bennett and Percy offer a compelling case that many of the Moon photographs allegedly taken by the astronauts while on the Moon were in fact photographs that were taken on a set. Like many others, they cite the usual discrepancies in lighting, varying angles of shadows within single frames, light sources from areas supposedly in shadow, and so on. Unlike many others, they do not cite these anomalies as proof that we never went, but only to raise questions about the official version of the way we went. And the Two Space Programs Hypothesis is crucial to their reconstruction of what they believe actually happened.

On their view, the Two Space Program Hypothesis takes on the following outline:

> - The foundations for the grand space project were laid down during WWII.
> - The project was conceived and designed as a collaboration between two superpowers.
> - The Cold War was a convenient cover under which aspects of this project could be implemented and hidden.
> - All these machinations were orchestrated at the very highest level, with only a select and hidden few ever knowing the overall objectives of the project.
> - These objectives have not yet been achieved in full. We are referring to a project that has been around at least since 1947 – and it divides into several sections.
> - Put another way, NASA’s Apollo phase, seen by the public to be the end result of a decision made in the 1960s by President Kennedy was in fact only a small (but significant) part of a greater plan.
> - Whatever humanity has experienced concerning the rivalries between the super powers of this world, today, at some very high but invisible level, our attitudes are being molded to suit an agenda which does not necessarily have all our interests at heart.[148]

What is of interest here is the clear connection of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis to the famous events of 1947 – Kenneth Arnold’s first “UFO” sighting in Washington state and the later even more famous “Roswell incident” with all its attendant corollaries – but more importantly, to the events of World War Two. In this respect, Bennett and Percy are unique.

---

[148] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 201.

Moreover, they repeatedly hint at a Nazi connection, or at least, implication to their approach, for "without the remnants of Hitler's war machine, our first steps into space would probably have occurred decades later."[149] According to Bennett and Percy, the deceptions that became so much a part of the public policy of NASA – deceptions already noted in this chapter in connections with other versions of the hypothesis – were already in place well before the agency had even been established. The policy decisions leading to these deceptions began, as they point out, in the "pre- and post-war period in Germany."[150] The deceptions originate, in fact, with a deliberately muddied picture of Operation Paperclip. As Bennett and Percy quip:

> Now follows some interesting arithmetic. We are told by (David) Baker that the German scientists began arriving at Fort Bliss in October 1945 (that is the advance guard of Von Braun and his small team of five) and by March 1946 their numbers had peaked – at the grant total of thirty nine.
>
> (Paperclip scientists) Stuhlinger and Ordway inform us that there were three shipments and a total of 118 men arriving in America between November 1945 and February 1946. So by 1946 the American Army have already lost 85 scientists. Were they declared AWOL or were they housed elsewhere, and not at Fort Bliss? Were some of them at Almogordo perhaps? From 127 total German rocket scientists allowed into America under Operation Paperclip we have a total of 6 + 118 = 4.[151]

But their suspicions predate even Operation Paperclip and the inability of the historical record to come up with anything like a consistent number of German scientists and technicians actually brought to the USA.

The Two Space Programs may have actually begun, at least on the Allied side of things, during the war itself. In evidence of this allegation, Percy and Bennett proffer the R.A.F's massive 600 bomber raid against the Peenemünde facility in 1943.

---

[149] Ibid., p. 165.

[150] Ibid.

[151] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, pp. 181-182.

> Thanks to information from Germany supplied by Paul Rosbaud, codenamed ‘Griffin’, the British put Operation Hydra into action, designed to eliminate 1) the engineer’s residential quarters 2) the missile pre-production facility and 3) the R&D laboratories/offices. From nine minutes past midnight on August 18 and over forty seven minutes, 600, yes six hundred, Royal Air Force aircraft marked targets and then dropped 1,593 tons of high explosives and 281 tons of incendiary bombs onto Peenemünde. However, from the beginning the start point of the bombing run was altogether mis-identified – the northern peninsular (sic) of Peenemünde being lit by the target indicators rather than the designated Ruden Island situated two miles further north. As a result of this initial ‘blunder’, the air raid failed in two-thirds of its avowed objectives…. Instructions from the highest level, it seems, had been to target personnel and certainly not the V-2 rocket production facilities.[152]

Indeed, even in targeting personnel the raid was not much of a success, since “of the eight hundred personnel on the ground who did die about half were from the prisoner labor force (mostly Soviets) and the other half were technicians and their families.”[153] The important scientists – Kurt Debus, Werner von Braun, Hermann Oberth et al – survived.

So this raises the specter of a last minute change in the operational plan of the raid, a change effected at the highest level. The RAF, not noted for inaccuracy or incompetence on its bombing raids over Nazi Germany, received faulty information on the coordinates for the starting point for the bombing run itself. Such an alteration “would have ensured that the advance pathfinders placed the marker flares ‘too short’ and/or ‘too long’, thus ensuring the safety of the individuals and rocket technology desperately needed by those that knew – the ‘masters of infinity’.”[154] Simply put, Bennett and Percy believe, on the basis of this singular and unique failure of the RAF to deliver its customary knockout punch to a target, that crucial areas of Peenemünde were deliberately spared in order to capture its technology and scientists after the war.

---

[152] Ibid., p. 173.

[153] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 173.

[154] Ibid.

But immediately after the war, things became even stranger. After careful consideration of the various accounts, Bennett and Percy concluded that both the Soviets and Americans arrived at the notorious Mittelwerk – the underground factory for building V-2s using concentration camp slave labor, constructed by SS General Kammler- at the same time and moreover cooperated in divvying up the booty![155] Such glaring discrepancies

> Most certainly uphold our theory that this entire period was being organized as a cohesive whole and was not just a 'race' against time to see who could bag the bigger haul of documents, materials and men. This plan was surely a precursor to the 'space race' story, which was also designed to look like one thing but actually to function in a completely different way.[156]

While the USA was shipping a few hundreds of German scientists to the USA, along with Von Braun and the precious documents he brought with him, the Soviet Union rounded up over three thousand technicians who had worked on the rockets, and whose new job for their new Soviet masters "was to re-establish the documentation taken by von Braun."[157] It was a convenient division of the spoils.

And perhaps a bit too convenient.

Bennett and Percy point out that in 1958 a British publisher, Robert Maxwell, attended symposia in Moscow for the international geophysical year. While there, Maxwell returned to his hotel room one day with a sixty three page manuscript containing what were supposedly "book titles" and asked his wife to photograph the pages quickly, as the papers absolutely had to be returned before lunch. His wife recounts how > by page thirty two she noticed that they were not book titles at all, but were "Die deutschen Firma, deren Einrichtung demontiert und zur Ausführ nach der Sowjetunion bestimmt sind." Which translates as: "German firms whose equipment is to be dismantled and transported to the Soviet Union." …It is significant that this Soviet shopping list was written in German.

---

[155] Ibid., p. 177.

[156] Ibid., pp. 177-178.

[157] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 178.

> Why was is not in Russian?[158]

One answer to this disturbing question is, of course, that the divvying up of the "booty" had been decided before the end of the war, and by the Nazis themselves. We shall see in a moment how this idea actually – and most curiously – is able to explain and unite the various versions of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis.

Bennett and Percy's version of the Hypothesis now reaches its final and full development. Noting that the Soviet Union began to return these German technicians in three drafts, beginning in 1952, and ending in 1954 when the last of the technicians were repatriated to Germany, they make clear one crucial difference between the Soviet Union's use of Nazi scientists, and the American one. In the Soviet Union these technicians were principally employed teaching Russian university students, which students in turn gained practical hands-on experience by working in the Russian space program while they were still students.[159] In this one may detect the steady hand of Sergei Korolëv, as well as appreciate the reason for the early Soviet successes in space achievement. The Soviets at least appeared to be serious about freeing their program from undue Nazi influence as quickly as possible.

And this brings us, finally, to Bennett's and Percy's version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis:

> Most conveniently, at the end of WWII the political globe had been divided into two – one 'public sector' in the West and one private sector in the East. What could be more simple than to exploit this division and lower the iron curtain in exactly the same way as the safety curtain comes down in the theatre. This ruse enabled the organizers of the space project to go to work in relative obscurity.
>
> In the sense that two teams were targeting the Moon there was always a space race. In reality the objectives were not those of competition. These two teams, while wearing different colours, were in truth on the same side. And even if many of the key players were unaware of the real script, it is likely (in our view) that at least both Korolëv and von Braun were aware of the true situation.[160]

---

[158] Ibid.

[159] Ibid., p. 194.

[160] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 198.

Thus, in the Bennett and Percy version of the Hypothesis, the two space programs are precisely that of the US and NASA, the program for "public consumption", and that of the USSR, the covert program which carried on the secret agenda of its hidden masters. Indeed, as they point out, control of these two programs was vested in no more than "a few score men" who also "controlled the services of some of civilization's most highly trained specialists" and "the large funds appropriated for armaments."[161]

But to assert that the two superpowers' space programs were carefully contrived along "public" and "private" lines is to suggest a degree of coordination between them that hitherto was hardly ever seriously suggested. However, this, Bennett and Percy urge, is precisely what the record seems to indicate. "The American/Soviet space timetable demonstrates how carefully progress in space had been shared between them, with alternating monthly flights in some cases. This can only have been the result of close planning and continuous liaison at the very highest levels."[162] In support of this suggestion, they produce the following launch schedules of the respective programs:

Agency	Date	Mission
USSR	Jan 2, 1959	Luna 1
USSR	Sept 12, 1959	Luna 2
USSR	Oct 4, 1959	Luna 3
USA	Aug 23, 1961	Ranger 1
USA	Nov 18, 1961	Ranger 2
USA	Jan 26, 1962	Ranger 3
USA	Apr 23, 1962	Ranger 4
USA	Oct 1962	Ranger 5
USSR	Apr 2, 1963	Luna 4
USA	Jan 30, 1964	Ranger 6
USA	Jul 31, 1964	Ranger 7
USA	Feb 20, 1965	Ranger 8
USA	Mar 24, 1965	Ranger 9

---

[161] Ibid., p. 197.

[162] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 162.

„From Russia with Love“

Agency	Date	Mission
USSR	May 9, 1965	Luna 5
USSR	June 8, 1965	Luna 6
USSR	July 18, 1965	Zond 3
USSR	Oct 24, 1965	Luna 7
USSR	Dec 3, 1965	Luna 8
USSR	Jan 31, 1966	Luna 9
USSR	Mar 31, 1966	Luna 10
USA	June 2, 1966	Surveyor 1
USSR	Aug 24, 1966	Luna 11
USA	Sept 20, 1966	Surveyor 2
USSR	Oct 22, 1966	Luna 12
USSR	Dec 21, 1966	Luna 13
USA	Apr 20, 1967	Surveyor 3
USA	July 14, 1967	Surveyor 4
USA	Sept 11, 1967	Surveyor 5
USA	Nov 10, 1967	Surveyor 6
USA	Jan 10, 1968	Surveyor 7
USSR	Apr 7, 1968	Luna 14
USSR	Sept 14, 1968	Zond 5
USSR	Nov 10, 1968	Zond 6
USA	Dec 21, 19681	Apollo 8
USA	May 18, 1969	Apollo 10
USSR	July 13, 1969	Luna 15
USA	July 16, 1969	Apollo 11
USSR	Aug 7, 1969	Zond 7
USA	Nov 14, 1969	Apollo 12
USA	Apr 11, 1970	Apollo 13
USSR	Sept 12, 1970	Luna 16
USSR	Oct 20, 1970	Zond 8
USSR	Nov 10, 1970	Luna 17/Lunikhod
USA	Jan 31, 1971	Apollo 14
USA	July 26, 1971	Apollo 15
USSR	Sept 2, 1971	Luna 18
USSR	Sept 28, 1971	Luna 19
USSR	Feb 14, 1972	Luna 20
USA	Apr 16, 1972	Apollo 16
USA	Dec 7, 1972	Apollo 17

Agency	Date	Mission
USSR	Jan 8, 1973	Luna 21/Lunikhod 2
USSR	May 29, 1974	Luna 22
USSR	Oct 1974	Luna 23
USSR	Aug 9, 1976	Luna 24[163]

But why the secrecy? And why the apparent coordination between the two programs? Bennett and Percy pull no punches: "We propose that the secret and subtle aspect…was the certain awareness by the authorities of the existence of extraterrestrial intelligence."[164]

Moreover, "this awareness of ET was the driving force behind their mission to land on the Moon. However, the Moon was only a staging post to their avowed destination – a manned mission to a location on the plains of Cydonia, Mars."[165] While Bennett and Percy do not offer much to elaborate why they believe these things, what should be noted is the clear implication of their remarks, namely, that this "ET awareness" was the real hidden agenda driving both space programs since the end of World War Two, and the real hidden goal of both was a manned flight to Mars, again, since the end of World War Two.

While not offering much to substantiate this astounding assertion, they do offer a couple of clues, namely, that in addition to a public and private consumption space program, there was also a public and private consumption physics that accompanied the two programs. First, they note that during the era when both superpowers were still conducting atmospheric tests of hydrogen bombs, these tests curiously produced auroral displays in the opposite hemisphere from that in which the detonation took place. That is, hydrogen bombs are partially harmonic devices.[166] Very little is ever publicly discussed in physics texts about this phenomenon. The question is: why?

---

[163] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 543.

[164] Ibid., p. 201, emphasis in the original.

[165] Ibid.

[166] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, pp. 240-241. Also see my The Giza Death Star, p. 157.

The second phenomenon, and one which clearly indicates an attempt by NASA to suppress serious and extended public discussion, is a much more serious one.

> There is a significant phenomenon concerning the alleged outward journey to the Moon during 'Apollo 11' which has to our knowledge never been elaborated upon, explained, or indeed mentioned in relation to any of the subsequent Apollo 'trips' – a phenomenon which may have assumed gigantic proportions for NASA and the space scientific community. So much so that (as far as we can tell) it has been 'locked down' in an attempt to sweep any discussion or knowledge of it under the carpet.
>
> To what are we referring?
>
> It is the neutral point, which is also called the equigravisphere. This location is just what it says it is:
>
> - The point between two planetary bodies where the gravitational 'pulls' between the two bodies cancel each other out.
> - Once this point is space is passed, a craft is no longer affected by the gravity of the planetary body which it (is) leaving but is now progressively under the influence of the planetary body towards which it (is) moving.[167]

The "Neutral Point Discrepancy" is one of the glaring features of the Apollo programs and their published data, and it raises a number of very important questions.

It was Sir Isaac Newton who had first calculated the Earth-Moon neutral point using his theory of gravitation. That theory gave him an average Earth-Moon distance of 238,900 miles, and the neutral point thus occurred at approximately 23,900 miles from the Moon.[168] This of course gave the now familiar figure that the Moon's gravitational attraction was about 1/6th that of the Earth.

But then came a 1969 edition of Time magazine, an interview with Werner Von Braun himself, and the beginning of a persisting mathematical mystery concerning the Earth-Moon dual planetary system. Time reported that "43,495 miles from the Moon lunar gravity exerted a force equal to the gravity of the Earth, then some 200,000 miles distant." And that, note Percy and Bennett, "gave a total distance to the Moon of 243,495 miles."[169] And it means something more, which Bennett and Percy do not mention, namely, if this neutral point figure is correct, then the Moon is much more massive than any standard view of celestial mechanics will allow. The difficulties that this poses – which Bennett and Percy never adequately address – will be seen in a moment.

---

[167] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 390.

[168] Ibid., p. 392.

In any case, Bennett and Percy note that a mere two weeks after the Time magazine article, Werner Von Braun quite suddenly resigned all his NASA posts and took a position as Vice President of Engineering for Fairchild Industries, leading them to ask a question many other researchers have asked in regard to the Neutral point Discrepancy: "Could that Time magazine article…have anything to do with Wernher von Braun's somewhat hasty departure for pastures new?"[170] It is my opinion that it definitely did, and the possible reasons – once again – will be seen in a moment.

Whatever else the Time article may have done for the space science community, at the minimum it began, according to Bennett and Percy, a process of "arithmetical obfuscation" that can only be seen as deliberate, since to view what happened next as not being deliberate would be akin to charging NASA with gross mathematical incompetence. For example, in the 1981 edition of Baker's Space Technology the Apollo 11 distance to the Moon is given as 253,475 miles. But in 1989 the book Apollo 11 Moon Landing gave the distance as just under 250,400 miles. Then in 1996, Baker's Spaceflight and Rocketry gave the neutral point as 38,925 miles from the Moon and 214,550 miles from Earth, giving a total distance to the Moon of 253,475 miles. Then, to really complicate matters, George Pinter assured authors Bennett and Percy that the neutral point really was exactly what Von Braun told Time magazine, namely, 43,495 miles.[171] Yet, prior to the Time article, and according "to the majority of references" the old Newtonian figure was still being used to calculate the neutral point.[172]

---

[169] Ibid., p. 393.

[170] Ibid., p. 394.

[171] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 393.

[172] Ibid., p. 392.

The question is of prime importance, since either figure for the neutral point gives very different gravities for the Moon, and consequently, very different trajectories for any craft going there, and, more importantly, very different fuel and thrust requirements for any rocket-powered craft lifting off from the lunar surface, such as the LEM (Lunar Excursion Module). Obviously, this also raises a significant set of questions. "Is it not interesting," Bennett and Percy ask, "that no sources agree on the exact distance of the Moon's orbital path?"[173] Moreover, in order to trajectory any craft to the Moon, both NASA and the Soviets would have had to know this average distance "to the last inch,'. So why is it so difficult for NASA to confirm some set figure? "Why is the Earth/Moon centre-to-centre distance missing from the published Apollo information? Where one can find the craft's trajectory, the Earth/Moon distance is often missing or vague. Where one can locate the Earth/Moon distance, the craft's trajectory is often missing or vague."[174] To confound matters even further, "space experts at NASA or elsewhere, do not state whether they are using planetary surface-to-surface or centre-to-centre measurements. Nor do they always state whether they are using nautical miles or statute miles. Nor do they stick to any one system."[175] In short, "the only consistency in the Earth/Moon measurement scenario is the inconsistency of the data emanating from official sources."[176]

Percy and Bennett's way out of this impasse is to posit that the 23,900 mile figure – the Newtonian figure – is correct, and that the figure revealed by Von Braun to Time magazine is the "experienced" neutral point. Their reasons for doing so are plain:

> NASA and the Soviets used the Moon's 1/6G as part of the calculations for their successful slingshot manoeuvres around the Moon and also for the calculations relating to energy requirements for their crash lander and soft lander probes, including those that actually returned samples to the then Soviet Union. If the evaluation of the lunar gravity had been

---

[173] Ibid., p. 391.

[174] Ibid.

[175] Mary Bennett and David S. Percy, Dark Moon, p. 391.

[176] Ibid., emphasis added.

> incorrect, then surely none of these manoeuvres would have been successful.[177]

But what if the reverse was true?

It hardly stands to reason that Von Braun was "resigned" from NASA for having made a whopping mistake in his interview to Time. Nor does it stand to reason that he was "resigned" from NASA for having deliberately lied to Time. The only scenario that makes sense is that he was forced to resign because he revealed something that he should not have.

If one assumes that the 43,495 mile neutral point was accurate and not merely an "experienced" neutral point as Bennett and Percy would have it, then this raises a number of significant points:

1. This neutral point calculation was clearly made much earlier in both the Soviet and American space programs than it was publicly revealed by Von Braun. If, as Bennett and Percy state, the Newtonian figure had been used for early probes, these would have either crashed into the Moon or careened off into space. Telemetry data would have eventually given scientists a correct neutral point calculation.
2. But this raises a new question. For the above scenario to have occurred, then probes would have had to have been launched to the Moon much earlier than the public record shows. The question thus is, when was the 43,495 mile neutral point figure actually known, and who discovered it?
3. The Time magazine neutral point also raises another signal difficulty, and that is that with a neutral point of 43,495 miles, the gravity of the Moon would be a whopping 60% that of the Earth![178] As Bennett and Percy rightly point out, this dramatically increases the energy, and hence the fuel, requirements for any craft landing on the Moon's surface and subsequently taking off again from it.

---

[177] Ibid., p. 395.

[178] This neutral point figure raises another difficulty, one to which I averred in my book The Giza Death Star, pp. 219-220.

4. This in turn raises a significant question regarding the LEM (Lunar Excursion Module) of the Apollo missions, the craft that actually landed on and then blasted off from the surface of the Moon. Many researchers have pointed out that the LEM has little blast signature from a rocket when it is taking off from the Moon to return the astronauts to the command module. This, so many say, is evidence of a hoaxed Moon shot. I do not believe this explanation to be plausible or credible. For one thing, a rocket exhaust in a vacuum leaves little visible plume. But what the lack of blast signature may also indicate, I believe, is that the rocket was not the primary lift component of the LEM. In other words, if – and it is a very considerable if - the gravity of the Moon is considerably higher than the public has been told, then this would account not only for the unusually "heavy" movements of the astronauts while on the Moon, but also would tend to indicate that the primary lift component of the LEM was not a chemical rocket at all, but another form of technology altogether. And that means a secret technology, and a significant aspect of the space program that is also secret,

In other words, Von Braun had let something slip, something whose significance, if followed through to its logical conclusion, pointed not so much to the Apollo missions as having been hoaxed, but as having occurred by means of a science and technology vastly different from the public version.

Von Braun's remark plus the lack of much of a rocket blast from the LEMs when lifting off from the Moon may indicate the existence of an off the books planetary science – the Moon's actual versus its publicly-stated gravity – and an off the books technology.

B. Conclusions and Speculations

A glance at the basic features of the several versions of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis is now in order:

1. The Torbitt Version has the following features:

   (a) A worldwide network of dummy corporations exists to further and protect big oil interests. These entities are a literal "Murder Incorporated" since they are not above using assassination and other illegal methods to protect their interests;
   (b) This network is intertwined with a network of Eastern European émigré communities, which are in turn mostly the creatures of German military intelligence on the Eastern Front during World War Two, and were thus directly answerable to General Reinhard Gehlen and possibly his successors;
   (c) These business and émigré networks are intertwined with the American intelligence community via the FBI, CIA, and NASA security via the organization known as the Defense Industrial Security Command (DISC) under the direction of Werner Von Braun;
   (d) By implicating Von Braun, the Torbitt Document implicates the wider Nazi connections associated with the Gehlenorg and with Operation Paperclip, though the motivations for Nazi involvement in the Kennedy assassination are never clearly spelled out. One is left to surmise that at some level the policies of the Kennedy Administration threatened some hidden technological and/or policy agenda of the space program.

2. The Hidden Planetary Geology, Climatology, and Archaeology Version:

   (a) In any version – the "absurdist" or the more plausible models of Hoagland and others – the common feature is that NASA (and by implication the Soviets) know of artifacts on the Moon and Mars, relics of a long-lost technologically sophisticated civilization;
   (b) NASA and associated agencies have suppressed this information, or, when it is already available to the public, has attempted to sway public opinion to the view that such photographic evidence is either a “trick of light and shadow” or artifacts of faulty computer image enhancement and processing;

(c) At the same time, NASA has released deliberately tampered photographs and other data to mask possible artifacts on the Moon and Mars and any evidence that might indicate contemporary life forms on Mars;

(d) NASA further shows repeated evidence of having scheduled launches for significant missions on dates and times that possess astrological and occult significance, and moreover has consistently employed Masonic and other esoteric symbolism in its mission logos. This in turn suggests a hidden space program or agenda is being manipulated and planned around occult lines. It should be stressed that all of the above points are stated only with regard to the American space program, and are not made of the Soviet space program.[179]

3. Jim Keith’s Casebook on Alternative Three Version has the following characteristics:

(a) The actual television “documentary” and the book by the same name, Alternative 3, are elaborate pranks and hoaxes;

(b) Nonetheless, the broad outlines of the scenario probably contain some truths;

(c) The USA and USSR have conducted a highly secret joint space program coordinated by some unknown entity;

(d) The USA’s intelligence community was deeply penetrated in a classic “Trojan Horse” operation by General Gehlen’s Fremde Heere Ost, subsequently known as the Gehlenorg, under the guise of “fighting Communism”; the Gehlenorg maintained extensive human intelligence networks in

---

[179] To my knowledge, no such “occult” or “esoteric” analysis of Soviet launches, such as what Hoagland has undertaken for NASA, has ever been made. If this were found to be true of the Soviet program as well as the American then this would constitute evidence of secret coordination of both programs along the same ideological inspiration, whatever that inspiration may be.

Eastern Europe, and its analyses became the basis for America's postwar assessments of Soviet military strength, doctrines, and intentions;

(e) Similarly, the American space program was deeply penetrated by Nazi scientists brought into it under the aegis of Operation Paperclip;

(f) Finally, a number of mysterious deaths and disappearances of physicists, computer scientists, and other technicians of benefit to the American SDI program began to occur, which Keith clearly attributes to one of two sources: the Russians, anxious to prevent the obsolescence of their nuclear arsenal, or to an unknown independent entity whose technology and interests would be threatened by SDI. In the context of the overall argument of his book, it seems clear that Keith had in mind that this entity had some ties to the postwar "Nazi International."

4. The William Lyne Version:

For our purposes, Lyne's version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis is significant for three reasons:

(a) Lyne deliberately connects the covert suppression of alternative physics and its secret development to Nikola Tesla whose ideas, he maintains, were subsequently taken up by the Nazis, expanded upon, and developed. In Lyne's view, the secret suppression and development of this technology is directly linked to facets of Nazi ideology that favor "corporate fascism";

(b) In Lyne's view, this covert development of "Tesla technology" concerns mostly the development of new energy and propulsion sources and technologies that make the "public consumption" technology of space exploration by chemical rockets entirely obsolete;

(c) This covert "corporate-fascist" development of alternative technology was begun by the Nazis before the war and continued by them – under various corporate and U.S. Government agency sponsors – after the war.

5. The Jan Van Helsing Version contains perhaps the most interesting – if unsubstantiated – features:

(a) German research into exotic physics and propulsion systems began long before World War Two under the direct inspiration and auspices of various secret societies;
(b) These societies in turn held doctrines that were later to become part of the ideology and belief system of the Nazi Party, among them the doctrine of racial purity, and the extra-terrestrial origin of the “Aryan” race;
(c) Similarly, these societies maintained that this race and its high culture had “sunk” or disappeared beneath the earth in vast subterranean cities under the poles and the Himalayas;
(d) These societies in turn helped midwife the Nazi Party into existence, and their most hidden doctrines – The “Black Stone” and the “Black Sun” – became the hidden doctrines of the upper echelon of the SS, which also continued their research into exotic physics.

6. The Dark Moon Version:

The Dark Moon version is in many ways the most subtle of the versions, with the exception of Richard Hoagland’s, for authors Mary Bennet and David Percy are far from maintaining that there were no Apollo moon landings. They question, rather, the details of the record and the technological and political implications that those details seem to suggest:

(a) Central to one of their arguments is the Neutral Point Discrepancy between the Earth and the Moon. As has been seen, Bennett and Percy use this discrepancy to argue – in my opinion erroneously – for an “alternative physics”. While the Neutral Point Discrepancy does point in that direction, I believe that it may be taken as a significant indicator that what Von Braun let slip in his Time magazine interview was in fact a piece of information that implied the existence of a very advanced technology of propulsion in the LEM (Lunar Excursion Module) in addition to – or perhaps in place of – its conventional rockets. The existence of such a technology points to the existence of a covert space program;

(b) In Bennett and Percy's version, the two space programs of the USA and USSR in fact represent the public and covert aspects, respectively, of one program being coordinated and manipulated behind the "public consumption events" of the Cold War. This of course implies some entity or agency of coordination existing both within the Soviet Union and the United States;

(c) In their version this coordination was planned during World War Two, implying that the Nazis and their space scientists were somehow linked to, or were identical to, the hidden agency coordinating the Two Space Programs after World War Two and during the Cold War.

7. Combining The Versions:

If one now combines the common features of these various versions of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis a rather interesting picture begins to emerge.

(a) Two of the versions – Lyne's and "van Helsing's" – maintain that the origin of the Two Space Programs occurred before the war, and that both of them occurred in conjunction with independent entities conducting exotic research;

(b) Two of the versions – Hoagland's and "Van Helsing's" (!) – maintain that some aspect of the hidden program and agenda is dominated by occult and esoteric themes;

(c) Two of the versions – Jim Keith's and "William Torbitt's" – connect this hidden space program to a carefully hidden and extensive Nazi network of intelligence agents and scientists, and imply a "Trojan Horse" deep penetration of the post-war American intelligence, military-industrial, and aerospace communities;

(d) All of the versions either explicitly or implicitly imply the existence of an off-the-books development of a new technology and an underlying framework in a theoretical physics that is very different from that found in texts “for public consumption;”
(e) One version – Lyne’s – explicitly offers a “hidden history” of physics to buttress its claims, offering an interpretation of some of Tesla’s late work;
(f) One version – Hoagland’s – also explicitly states that there is a new type of “hyperdimensional physics” connected with the discovery of artifacts on Mars;
(g) One version – Bennett and Percy’s – explicitly states that there was a covert element of cooperation between the USA and USSR in early space exploration, though it does not clearly name the entity for coordinating such cooperation;
(h) One version - again Bennett and Percy’s – also suggests an element of suppressed physics and planetary mechanics by exploring the problems surrounding the Earth/Moon system’s Neutral Point Discrepancy, and this implies the possibility that an alternative and secret propulsion technology may have existed in the L.E.M.(Lunar Excursion Module).

Viewed in this way it is clear that no matter how one approaches the data, there does appear to be a solid case that much more was and is afoot in the American and Russian space programs than has been publicly revealed.

Additionally, it seems clear that at least some of this hidden component involves the planetary physics that has been carefully hidden from the public, or, when that fails, the data so hopelessly obfuscated that any mathematical or physical calculation becomes problematic, since it is dependent on the already obfuscated data released by the space agencies.

This also implies the prospect that at some level there may exist a hidden technology at work. The television footage of the LEM takeoffs from the Moon, which this author believes to be genuine and not hoaxed, suggest one of two things: first, the standard explanation: a rocket lift-off from a low gravity surface, with a barely visible flame plume because of the vacuum. Or it may represent the possibility of the existence of an exotic propulsion technology. The relative lack of an exhaust plume, plus the almost steady rate of ascent might point to the existence of a very different means of getting off the moon than we have been told.

8. Possible Entities and Requisites for Coordination

This picture raises yet another significant question: What entity or entities would be capable of coordinating such a massive venture and such an equally massive "public relations" campaign, including the suppression of alternative science and technologies and their covert development? If one excluded a high-level and very top secret diplomatic collusion between the United States and the Soviet Union at least in the version of Bennett and Percy, then that still would not explain the other versions of the Hypothesis, those of Hoagland, Lyne, or those who maintain NASA has suppressed significant facts about planetary geography.

So, if one views these various versions as somehow related, as disparate glimpses of the same two-track space program, again, what entity could possibly coordinate it all?

To answer that question, one must assume that such an entity have certain features:

1. Adequate financial power and backing;
2. An international base and extension both inside the West and the Soviet bloc;
3. Adequate penetration at various decision-making levels in the USA's and USSR's space programs (and anyone else's that might come along);
4. An ideological and heavy financial commitment to the development of off-the-books technologies;
5. A thorough knowledge of the occult, ceremonial magic, and astrology, and the demonstrated willingness to schedule space missions according to those occult parameters;

6. An ideological commitment to the exploration and military exploitation of space; and finally,
7. A willingness to resort to and the ability to use “active measures” to coerce compliance to its goals when necessary.

Seen in this way, there really are only four possible entities in the world that posses various combinations of the above, and only one of them possesses all of them:

1. International banking and finance; this group lacks only a clear and consistent connection with number 5 above. That is, a consistent, demonstrable, and significant correlation to occult activity and practice;[180]
2. International fraternities, such as the Masons; this group lacks only numbers 2 and 3 above, since the extent of its activities behind the Iron Curtain during the Cold War is largely unknown;
3. The Vatican; certainly not lacking in international extent, financial power or knowledge of esoteric doctrines, this entity obviously lacks only numbers 6 and 7 above;
4. The Nazi International; this is the only entity that exhibits significant measures of possession of all the above characteristics, though it should be pointed out that the Soviets repatriated most German scientists by 1954, and that the KGB was – as far as is known – relatively successful in infiltrating the Gehlenorg’s Eastern European networks and shutting many of them down.[181] Nonetheless, the heavy reliance of the Soviet program initially does raise the remote prospect that recruiting may have been done by

---

[180] It does not lack a clear connection to Nazism either before, during, or after the war, as will be seen in a subsequent chapter.

[181] It goes without saying that not much at all is known of Germany’s Bundesnachrichtendienst. It alone, of all the major intelligence agencies of the world, unlike the Israeli Mossad, the Soviet KGB, the British MI-6, the French Surete or even Chinese intelligence, has had next to nothing written about its successes and/or failures, other than General Gehlen’s own memoirs.

> the expatriate Germans while working inside the Soviet Union.

Seen in this way, it becomes a remote possibility that one of the key assignments of the post-war "Nazi International" was precisely the hidden coordination of that part of the space programs of the USSR and USA visible to the public. A means of corroborating this hypothesis will be to see if there is any indication that wartime research begun by the Nazis was continued by them for a period after the war, and to see if this research was carried out in apparent conjunction either with the US or with USSR's space programs, or in conjunction with both.

But if there are two space programs and if there is a suppressed physics and technology, all of which dating from the Second World War and in some sense stemming from it, then what might that physics and technology be? Would it be worth killing – even a president – in order to protect it?

Part Two:
"The Bell":
Nazis and Occulted Physics

"'What I believe,' Stanford said, is that the Canadian and American governments, quietly backed by the British, have been working jointly since the end of World War II on the development of supersonic flying saucers, that they now have a limited number of such machines hidden away in the wilds of Canada or in the White Sands Proving ground, and that those saucers are based on aeronautical projects that originated in Nazi Germany – but aren't related to the vast majority of UFO sightings. What I also believe is that the U. S. Government knows the origin of the more extraordinary saucers, that it is frightened of what the capability of those saucers might represent in military and political terms, and that its building of its own saucers is a race against time and its secrecy a means of avoiding national panic.'

"'The Canadian government has flying saucers. The U.S. government has flying saucers. But someone, somewhere*, has flying saucers so advanced we can't touch them. Those saucers don't come from space. They aren't figments of imagination. They are real and they are right here on earth and their source is a mystery.'"*

The character Stanford, from W. A. Harbinson's novel, Genesis, pp. 398-399.

"The irritating evidence of French success in the American zone was compounded by intelligence reports that the Germans already in France were working independently of their French controllers and maintaining secret contact with other scientists in Germany."

Tom Bower,
The Paperclip Conspiracy: The Hunt for the Nazi Scientists, p. 181.

4.

"Das Laternenträgerprojekt":

The Bell and Igor Witkowski

"...how did it happen that scientists from the 1940s understood exactly where they were heading? They had applied after all ideas from XXI century physics.... What arguments did they lay down (before the launch of work) that caused them to win the race for funds...? ...The unusualness of all this is summed up by the fact, that descriptions of mercuric propulsion had appeared as long ago as in ancient times – in alchemy and old Hindu books...It may prove that an explanation of all the technical questions related to work from the time of the war, will reveal a far greater mystery..."
Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe[1]

A. Igor Witkowski on the Bell

It is due to the research efforts of Polish military journalist Igor Witkowski, and the best-selling book by British author Nick Cook, The Hunt for Zero Point, that anything at all is known of the Bell. And until the publication of Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, Nick Cook's book was the only book in the English language that contained any information at all on the Bell, summarizing Witkowski's years' of investigation.[2] With the publication of Witkowski's research in English, however, one is in a position to see why the Bell was given the Third Reich's highest classification. Indeed, one can see why some may have resorted to a program of murder to protect its secrets.

To appreciate this object's true significance, however, it is necessary to understand what it was, what it did, what the physics behind it may have been, and, thereby, what the Germans were possibly hoping to achieve with it. We will begin with a survey of

---

[1] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, translated from the Polish by Bruce Wenham, (Farnborough, England: Books International and European History Press, 2003) p. 284.

[2] It should be pointed out that Geoffrey Brooks' book, Hitler's Terror Weapons, also contains information about the Bell. Though little of it adds to the data from which to interpret its possible physics, Brooks' book does add to the speculation concerning its whereabouts, and SS General Kammler, after the war, as we shall see.

Witkowski's research and his own speculative reconstruction of the Bell's operating principles in this chapter, and on the basis of his and other evidence, offer our own reconstruction and speculations of its possible significance and theoretical basis.

1. The Significance of the Story of the Bell

Before proceeding to summarize Witkowski's lengthy and weighty research in his chapter on the Bell from his book on German secret weapons, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, a word is necessary about its significance.

As is well known to UFOlogists, the "Nazi Legend" of UFO origins has been around since the end of the Second World War and the publication afterward of Major Rudolf Lusar's book on German secret weapons, where the first brief mention is made of the subject, accompanied by the first "schematic" of an alleged "suction-type" German saucer. As many have pointed out, the story rests on few sources, which, when traced back, seem to lead nowhere, except to those sources' own questionable connections, associations, and agendas.

With Witkowski's research on the Bell, however, one has something entirely different. The story is significantly different from the stories surrounding the "Nazi legend" and its familiar names of Habermol, Miethe, Schriever, Epp, Schauberger and so on. With the Bell story, one has, as will be seen, clear descriptions of its design, mode of operation, and effects, as well as clear indications of known personnel involved with the project and clear corroborative evidence in the form of installations and residual physical signatures.

To put it succinctly, the story of the Bell is the actual probable basis of the Nazi UFO legend.

2. An Obvious Question and a Not So Obvious Answer

For Witkowski, the investigation all began in August of 1997, when he was asked a very obvious question, a question that in fact hovers over every author who has ever investigated the mystery of wartime Nazi secret weapons research: Just exactly what was the so-called "Wonder Weapon", or Wunderwaffe? For Witkowski, the journey began when a Polish intelligence officer, who had access to Polish government documents regarding Nazi secret weapons, first made him aware of the Bell.

> Among other things he asked me if I had ever come into contact with a device developed by the Germans, which was code-named "the Bell", and made a sketch of it. On a circular base was some kind of bell jar, cylindrical in shape with a semicircular cap and hook, or some other clamping device at the top. The Bell jar was supposed to be made of a ceramic material, resembling a high voltage insulator. Two metal cylinders or drums were located inside.[3]

Nothing about the description of the object aroused any interest in Witkowski, but he could not let the subject drop, since the individual who had approached him impressed him with his knowledge. "This was no amateur living in a dream world. Of that I was sure."[4]

But what had really piqued Witkowski's interest were the individual's descriptions of the Bell's "quite simply unearthly effects" when it was in operation, effects that conjured in Witkowski's mind the final scene from Steven Spielberg's Raiders of the Lost Ark, effects that were "absolutely shocking."[5] This description, plus the man's evident sincerity and expertise, made the question he asked Witkowski even more significant:

> (He) asked me the outright disarming yet seemingly trivial question: if I was able to state with full responsibility that the "Wunderwaffe" – that "wonder weapon", was the V-1 or V-2, as was often mentioned. If in any German documents or in any original sources in general, I had come across information unraveling what the "Wunderwaffe" was. He stated that after all it could not have referred to the V-1 or V-2, since firstly these weapons had been from a military point of view not very effective (and therefore not "wonder") and secondly that the term "Wunderwaffe" had begun to appear in earnest already after the "V" Weapons had been deployed in combat. This was indeed intriguing. Later from the point of view of this, I looked over various volumes

---

[3] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 231.

[4] Ibid.

[5] Ibid.

> from my library and in actual fact it appeared that some kind of unusual weapon had existed, practically unknown till this day.[6]

In other words, Witkowski had come across one component of the Allied Legend – that the Wunderwaffe referred to the V-1, V-2 and various other rocket projects of Nazi Germany – and to nothing more.

But the historical record suggested otherwise, as Witkowski notes; the term Wunderwaffe clearly began to be applied by the Nazis to something that was not any kind of rocket, even if that something was only a figment of Dr. Göbbels' Propaganda Ministry. But the uniqueness of the Bell and the revelations of the intelligence man continued to preoccupy Witkowski:

> My aforementioned informer strongly emphasized that what was involved was a uniquely classified project, the most secret research project ever realized in the Third Reich! Therefore it is surely clear that regardless of the scale of difficulty it was worth verifying such a statement.[7]

In other words, beyond atom bombs, hydrogen bombs, fuel air bombs, advanced rockets, stealth materials, guided missiles, sound cannon, wind and vortex cannon, electromagnetic railguns, laser beams, nuclear powered aircraft, and all the other exotic weapons technology the Nazis were developing, there was one project so important in its scope and terrible promise that it – as will soon be seen - merited its own unique classification, and that project was the Bell.

Witkowski began to research the story, and uncovered what is perhaps the most important story to come out of World War Two.

3. The Personnel and a New SS Player on the Scene: the Forschungen, Entwicklungen, Patente

When Witkowski was able to assemble at least a partial list of scientists and military personnel involved with the project, a very odd picture emerged. To appreciate the oddity of the picture, one must examine each of the individuals Witkowski uncovered in their turn.

---

[6] Ibid., emphasis added.

[7] Ibid., p. 233, emphasis Witkowski's.

a. SS Obergruppenführer Emil Mazuw

Witkowski was quickly led to the SS, and to one of its departments that was responsible for vetting patents in the Third Reich, and classifying those that seemed to possess potential for further development:

> The whole project was co-ordinated by a special cell co-operating with the SS armament office, subordinate to the Waffen-SS. This cell was designated "FEP", which was an abbreviation of the words "Forschungen, Entwicklungen, Patente" – research, development work, patents. The chief of this "FEP" cell was a certain Admiral Rhein, while the described project was co-ordinated by a quite mysterious individual – namely SS-Obergruppenführer (Four Star General) Emil Mazuw. Why mysterious? Simply because despite possessing one of the highest general's ranks in the SS, practically nothing is known about him. I got hold of his dossier in the USA in 1999, but through this he became in my eyes an even more obscure figure. It followed both from his dossier as well as cards from the course of his service, that Mazuw had been at the very top of the SS elite. He was promoted to the rank of SS Obergruppenführer on 20 April 1942, in other words he had possessed the highest possible SS rank at that time (in 1944 the SS Oberstgruppenführer rank was further established, four people being promoted to it). He was awarded with the Honorary saber of Reichsführer SS (Ehrendengen des RFSS) and honorary SS ring with skull and cross-bones (SS Totenkopfring). Such a ring was given by Himmler for special service to the organization. Their bearers constituted the highest caste of SS-men, given admittance to the greatest secrets. Each ring was personally dedicated by Himmler….Mazuw already had it in 1936. He was therefore one of the powers behind the throne of the Third Reich, almost unknown to this day.[8]

What is interesting here in the light of my own, and other's, previous research into the secret weapons think tank of SS Obergruppenführer Hans Kammler's, is that the Bell project appears to be under the mysterious "F.E.P.", which in turn is under an

---

[8] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, pp. 236-237, emphasis Witkowski's.

Admiral, implying a Kriegsmarine connection with whatever exotic technology and physics the Bell represented. The significance of this fact will be examined below.

SS Obergruppenführer Emil Mazuw
Picture from Igor Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe

A second unusual feature of Witkowski's revelations is that the Bell project itself was not directly coordinated by Kammler, but by the enigmatic Emil Mazuw, though, as Nick Cook and Witkowski both indicate, Kammler's connection with the project was direct, since he seems to have been involved in Bormann's secret "evacuation command" structure that was apparently used to fly the Bell, scientific papers, and perhaps Kammler himself, out of Europe at the war's end.[9]

Witkowski, in answer to a personal correspondence from me, explained the odd relationship of the F.E.P. to the Kammlerstab and other agencies in the following way:

---

[9] Q.v. my Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 115-130; Nick Cook, The Hunt for Zero Point, pp. 182-190. See also my Reich of the Black Sun, p. 333,

> As far as I know, Mazuw wasn't tied with the Ahnenerbe. The situation was such that apart from Kammler's office (Rüstungsstab) – which, what has to be emphasized, wasn't directly responsible for the R&D activities as such but for armaments projects in general, there were "specialized" R&D authorities within the SS (the best proof that they were really important is that it would be virtually impossible to find anything in the literature about it … It was: the "R&D group" at the armament office of the Waffen-SS, headed by SS-Brigadeführer Heinrich Gärtner and the second was the FEP/Waffen-SS cell, headed by Mazuw…it was theoretically responsible for the protection of inventions in the period when the normal patent law was effectively suspended.[10]

Note that this conflicts with the story of the Kammlerstab first broken by British journalist Tom Agoston, as recounted in my Reich of the Black Sun.[11] Agoston, relying on the confidential statements of former German weapons expert Dr. Wilhelm Voss, clearly implied that it was Kammler himself, plus his "think tank" staff inside of the engineering division at the Skoda Works in Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, that headed research and development. But this may only be an apparent contradiction. At the rarefied levels of SS Obergruppenführers, contact between Mazuw and Kammler – both involved in sensitive black projects – would have been inevitable. And we know for certain that Kammler himself was in charge of Bormann's special evacuation command at the end of the war, the command which it appears successfully evacuated the Bell from Lower Silesia via a Junkers 390, about which more in a moment.

But what of Witkowski's statement that he knew of no direct or known association of Mazuw with the SS' "occult bureau", the Ahnenerbedienst? The answer, as in Kammler's case, must be speculative. However, given that, at its highest level, Himmler intended for his SS to be a kind of "black knights of the round table", and given that his chosen twelve "black knights" with access to the "SS occult center" at the castle of Wewelsburg had to be of at least Gruppenführer (general) rank, then again, it would seem unlikely that Mazuw did not know of the SS' occult activities and interests.

---

[10] Igor Witkowski, personal correspondence with the author, July 23, 2005.

[11] See Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 99-116.

That a four star SS general, about whom almost nothing is known, is not only involved with the Bell project, but actually the overall director of it, raises as many questions as it answers. Did he, like Kammler, disappear into the bowels of some Allied country's post-war classified projects or perhaps – an equal possibility – simply disappear, to continue the project independently? And the presence of a navy Admiral in the parent organization, the F.E.P., raises a further question: why the indirect connection to the German navy? Does this relationship perhaps indicate something about the nature of the Bell itself?

b. Prof Dr Walther Gerlach

Unlike Emil Mazuw, Prof. Dr. Walther Gerlach was and is quite famous, and for any number of reasons. As Nick Cook noted in his Hunt for Zero Point, Gerlach was a Nobel laureate for his work in spin polarization. A first class physicist, Gerlach went on to specialize in gravitational physics, on the basis of his pioneering experiment[12] that earned him the Nobel prize. But as any researcher of the German atom bomb project knows, Gerlach was also nominally the head of atom bomb research in Nazi Germany by war's end, and was one of the scientists interred by the British at Farm Hall in England, where the scientists' conversations were secretly recorded.

Gerlach was also expert in two other obscure topics, both of which, as we shall see, are closely associated with the Bell: the transmutation of elements, and the "fluorescence of mercury ions in a strong magnetic field, in other words, referring to the behaviour of mercuric plasma." Gerlach had evidently been involved in the topic "for a long time, because as far back as January 1925 he wrote to Arnold Sommerfeld about the spin…of ionized mercury." In such matters, Gerlach was "faultlessly well-informed."[13]

---

[12] The Stern-Gerlach experiment. This experiment, along with Einstein's experiment on the photo-electric effect which earned him the Nobel prize, and the well-known Michelson-Morley experiment, are perhaps three of the most important experiments in the development of modern physics.

Even more mysteriously, Gerlach, one of the world's premier gravitational physicists before the war, never returned to the subject after the war. Nick Cook comments in his well-known book The Hunt for Zero Point that Gerlach thus acted as if "something had scared him beyond all reason."[14] While Cook meant his comment in a speculative sense, there is perhaps some truth to it. If he was genuinely frightened, and if this is the reason for his curious post-war silence about spin polarization and gravitation, then this could be due to two causes.

First, as the lead scientist involved with the Bell project, and as a loyal Nazi, Gerlach would have been privy to the curious and strange results of the Bell's operation and possibly have even personally witnessed some of these effects. As we shall see, these effects would have frightened any rational human. So, one explanation – the one that seems to be implied by Nick Cook, in fact – is that Gerlach saw or witnessed something in the very project he headed that had frightened him into post-war silence.

But there is a second, and I think, more plausible explanation for Gerlach's apparent fright-into-silence. Indeed, it is an explanation that would seem to give a factual basis to Cook's speculation that Gerlach was "frightened" into post-war silence on these admittedly esoteric topics. As Cook himself notes, following Witkowski's research, the SS shot the sixty-some scientists and their assistants who worked on the project, rather than let any of them fall into Allied or Russian hands.[15] As we shall see, there appear to be only a few scientists, two of them well-known in their way, that survived the SS' massacre: one was Kurt Debus (about whom more below), and the other was Walther Gerlach.

This allows us to undertake something of a reconstruction, speculative though it will have to be. First, it would appear that the SS, by murdering the project's scientists with the exception of

---

[13] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 254, emphasis added.

[14] Nick Cook, The Hunt for Zero Point, pp. 182-190 See also my Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 115-130 and Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 333.

[15] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, pp. 242-243.

Debus, Gerlach (and one must assume, possibly others), is intent on preserving the project's independence by preventing its secrets from falling into any Allied hands. That this is the most rational conclusion is evident from the fact that if the SS had bargained with the Allies or Soviets to exchange this project in return for their lives, then the process would be self-defeating, if the Soviets or Allies were denied the very technicians that made the project possible. Such scientists and technicians would have been in the Soviet's or Allies' "intelligence targets acquisitions and booty" list, so to speak. By its actions, in other words, the SS is clearly signaling that it has no intention of letting the project fall into Soviet hands, and it is equally possible that it has no intention of letting it fall into Allied hands either.[16]

So why did Gerlach and Debus escape? They escaped simply because of their sheer notoriety and value to the project.[17] For the SS to have murdered these men, and dumped them unceremoniously into an unmarked mass grave in Silesia, would have inevitably attracted Allied and Russian interest……and questions, after the war. And those questions, in turn, would have inevitably led back to the Bell. Gerlach and Debus, moreover, represented a level of expertise and involvement beyond the mere day-to-day testing and experimentation involved in the project. Gerlach, in particular, was the theoretician, capable of formulating the "big picture" of whatever it was the Nazis had discovered with the Bell. Such men would be needed after the war if the project were to be continued and advanced. Indeed, as will be seen later in this chapter, it may have been Gerlach or someone in his close circle of friends and associates in the physics community, that initiated the Bell project.

---

[16] I was delighted to discover that Witkowski had come to similar conclusions regarding the real operational purposes for General Patton's Third Army objectives late in the war as I had: "Simultaneously from this period – from mid-April 1945 comes the last known photograph of the Ju 390 – taken in Prague, during preparations for flight. Then the trace comes to an end – there was no aircraft, and no Kammler. Although he was intensively hunted after the war, he completely 'vanished'. The opinion prevails that only one of the superpowers could have so effectively hidden a high-ranking SS general. It is known from other sources that the Americans (Patton's Army) drove a wedge deep into Czechoslovakia among other reasons to reach the employees and documents of Kammler's 'department' and lengthily interrogated all of them. These materials are to this day kept top secret. This is very intriguing and once again points to the 'American trail.'"(The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 289, emphasis added).

[17] Witkowski observes that Debus was crucial in the project for the "separation of magnetic fields component," (The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 238). This is highly significant, given Debus' subsequent post-war employment by NASA at the Kennedy Space Center, and given the allegations of some that there are two spaces programs, one a very covert one employing exotic – and suppressed – technology.

So what frightened Gerlach? Very simply: perhaps the SS "allowed" Gerlach and Debus – and any other big name scientist that might have been involved with the project – to witness the executions of their comrades. Or perhaps the SS communicated their fates to Debus and Gerlach in some other fashion. In either case, the message was clear: "keep quiet on this subject, and keep cooperating." If that was the message to the two men, then it certainly worked, for Gerlach never even intimated in the Farm Hall Transcripts of his involvement with any project during the war that involved his specialty: gravitation.[18] And as for Kurt Debus, he apparently never mentioned the more exotic technologies to his new employer after the war, as we shall see below. In any case, I believe the SS murders of the Bell's scientists are the best explanation for Nick Cook's observation that Gerlach never touched the subject of spin polarization and gravity after the war, acting as if "something had scared him beyond all reason."

---

[18] Witkowski does mention that according to his sources, Gerlach did speak a great deal in the Farm Hall Transcripts about magnetic fields, atomic nuclei, the earth's gravitation, and "extraterrestrial space." (The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 255). If this is true then it puts a whole other perspective on the classification of the Farm Hall Transcripts and why they remained classified for so long. Perhaps Gerlach's comments also caused him to be brought to this country after his internment in England, since as has been seen, he was subsequently interrogated in the U.S.A., where his wartime research diaries remain classified to this day. This would clearly imply that the U.S.A. knew something about these subjects – more than it was willing to share with its British ally – and brought Gerlach over to flesh out a full picture of the Bell.

Prof. Dr. Walther Gerlach at Farm Hall

c. The Mysterious Dr. Elizabeth Adler

So far, we have encountered in Witkowski's list of Bell personnel two rather well-known scientists, and one very obscure four star SS general. But there is yet another expert involved, and here, one is confronted again with something of a mystery:

> Within the context of one of the people (involved in the project) the problem of "a simulation of damping of vibrations towards the centre of spherical objects" appeared. In this case it concerned Dr Elizabeth Adler, a mathematician from Königsberg University (this name appeared only once). [19]

Who was Dr Elizabeth Adler? What was her specialty in mathematics? No one seems to know. My own attempts to find out by contacting the University of Kaliningrad, modern day Königsberg, ended in a wall of stony silence.

But her presence – even if she is only mentioned in connection with the Bell once – is in itself a significant indicator of something.

---

[19] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 235, emphasis added.

Since Gerlach was himself a capable mathematician and theoretical physicist, Adler's presence must indicate a very rarefied form of mathematical expertise was required at some point. This in turn means that the Bell represented no ordinary project. For the SS to have apparently "consulted" a mathematician outside the project must indicate that Elizabeth Adler's mathematical skills were unique. Find her area of mathematical expertise, and one will have a significant clue into the nature of the physics that the Germans were investigating with the Bell.

d. Otto Ambros of Auschwitz „Buna" Fame

As if this list of personnel was not already strange enough, Witkowski, in the same context in which he mentions the involvement of Dr. Elizabeth Adler, then recounts how another name, again one well-known and somewhat imfamous, was involved at some stage in the project:

> In descriptions of "the Bell's" effect on living organisms on the other hand the notion of "ambrosism" ("Ambrosismus") occurred. This was perhaps invented to honour one of the scientists, who admittedly was not a member of the research team, but was in some sense connected with the whole project. It concerned Dr Otto Ambros – then chairman of the so-called "S" committee, responsible for chemical warfare preparations in Speer's Armament Ministry.
>
> I must admit that from the beginning the plot connected to Ambros was totally belittled by myself, as not matching the whole picture. As it was to become evident a few years later, this was a big mistake – although there was never any doubt that chemical weapons were not responsible for "the Bell's" operation, or any kind of chemical agent.[20]

This is the same Otto Ambros that was also appointed by I.G. Farben director Karl Krauch to oversee the construction and operation of its huge "Buna" synthetic rubber plants at Auschwitz, a plant that Carter Plymton Hyrick has quite persuasively argued was not a Buna plant at all, but a huge uranium enrichment facility.[21] Thus, while Witkowski does not seem to be aware of the state of recent German and American research into the actual state of German A-bomb development, his mention of Ambros in this context is for that very reason all the more significant.

---

[20] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 235.

[21] Carter Plymton Hydrick, Critical Mass: pp. 72-80. See also my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 25-35 for a summary of Hydrick's arguments.

If Ambros was intimately involved with the SS in the enrichment of uranium, and presumably in the recovery of other exotic isotopes, then he would certainly be involved in the Bell project if any aspect of that project required the use of radioactive isotopes. This last condition, radioactive isotopes, I believe is one of the significant clues into the nature of the device and what the Germans were hoping to accomplish with it, as will be seen subsequently in this and later chapters. The fact that his position at the Farben "Buna" plant also placed him in the orbit of secret SS research and security jurisdiction of the Auschwitz camps is also another connection that would seem to corroborate Witkowski's revelations that Ambrose was somehow involved with the Bell project.

BASIC PERSONNEL RECORD
(Alien Enemy or Prisoner of War)

DEBUS, Kurt H.
(Name of internee)

Male
(Sex)

Height 5 ft. 8½ in.
Weight 156
Eyes blue
Skin ruddy
Hair dark blond
Age 37
Distinguishing marks or characteristics:
Radiating scar on left cheeck and chin.

RIGHT HAND

P. P. C.*
Reference*
INVENTORY OF PERSONAL EFFECTS TAKEN FROM INTERNEE
1.
2.
3.
4.
5.
6.
7.
8.
9.
The above is correct
K. Kurt H Debus
(Signature of internee)

Dr. Kurt Debus' POW Card

e. Dr. Kurt Debus

Debus and Von Braun at NASA

From the standpoint not only of the various scientific disciplines but also from that of the various post-war relationships and themes explored here, Dr. Kurt Debus is the most interesting big name scientist allegedly involved with the Bell, not the least because he is one of the high profile scientists brought to the United States as part of Operation Paperclip. Due to this fact, Debus is also perhaps an indicator that if any of the Allied powers became privy to the secrets of the Bell, then it most likely was the United States, since Debus, curiously, became a director of the Kennedy Space Flight center at Cape Canaveral!

Debus' involvement with the Bell project is made the more curious because of the fact that he was intimately involved with the Peenemünde team of Wehrner Von Braun and, as has been mentioned, continued to be deeply involved with post-war rocket projects in his sensitive position in America’s space program. So what, then, is a rocket scientist doing in a project like the Bell?

According to Witkowski’s meticulous research, Debus was not a rocket scientist at all, but rather, was interested in the extremely avante garde notion (even for today) of magnetic fields separation.[22] Moreover, he had apparently designed the power supply for the Bell.

> His parent institution was the institute of High Voltages at Darmstadt Polytechnic (Technische Hochschule). In 1942 he was transferred to the research institute of the AEG consortium in Berlin – Reinickendorf, in addition he also co-operated with the centre in Peenemünde. He was the author of several publications and patents regarding high voltage measurement technology. He developed among other things instruments for high pressure measurement and high voltage discharge parameters measurement. At the AEG research institute he constructed a power supply unit, supplying over 1 million volts current and took part in the equipping of a supersonic wind tunnel. He also took part in the development of measurement instruments for the V-2 test launch pads.[23]

Needless to say, such interests would not only have made Debus an invaluable contributor to the Nazi rocket program, but more importantly, such experience in the measurement of high voltage discharge parameters would have made him an expert in phenomena of a wholly different nature, a phenomena that one might qualify under the broad label of “Teslian.”

But it was Debus’ character as a loyal Nazi, much like Gerlach, that led Witkowski to discover and corroborate one of his informer’s crucial pieces of information: that the Bell was considered to hold such potential that it was given its own unique classification among all the Third Reich’s admittedly exotic secret weapons projects. Debus, according to Witkowski, had informed on one of his co-workers at AEG, one Richard Crämer, to the Gestapo, in 1942. Crämer was sentenced to two years in prison.

But Crämer was apparently no ordinary German, much less an ordinary engineer, for the chairman of the AEG Research Institute, Prof Dr. Carl Wilhelm Ransauer, wrote a letter to the Gestapo:

---

[22] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 256.

[23] Ibid., emphasis added.

> Mr. Engineer R. Crämer from the AEG transformers factory in Oberschöneweide is developing together with the AEG Research Institute a project concerning high voltages (Hochspannungsprojekt), which was contracted to AEG by the Ground Forces Armament Office (Heereswaffenamt) and is being realized under the code-name "Charite-Anlage", as a secret device important for the war. The realization of this project is in half dependent on Mr. Crämer, who as the sole employee of AEG possesses necessary qualifications, concerning this special field of electricity. Without the co-operation of Mr. Crämer further realization of this project is not possible. The research and development work must be carried out with full energy, at least until the end of the war.
>
> The "important for the war" or "decisive for the war" importance of this project results from the following issues:
>
> 1. The project is realized under special priority SS/1040, which is only granted in special cases.
> 2. Mr. Ministerial Director Prof. Dr. E. Schumann, director of the Research Division of the Ground Forces Armament Office has granted this project the highest level of urgency, which has been described as "decisive for the war" (compare the protocol from the briefing of 21.07.42, which may be submitted upon request).
> 3. The Plenipotentiary of the Marshal of the Reich for Nuclear Physics, councilor of State Prof. Dr. A. Esay, President of the Physical-Technical Reich's Office (Physicalisch-Technische Reichsanstalt)… has explained the signing below, that in addition he will prove the necessity of carrying out this work in the interest of the war.[24]

Thus, were it not for Debus' ardent Nazism and denunciation of Crämer, one would never have known even of the existence of the classification "decisive for the war," or Kriegsentscheidend, at all.

(1) „Kriegsentscheidend"

As for the term Kriegsentscheidend, Witkowski notes that this term was highly unusual. While the term "important for the war" (Kriegswichtig) was a technical term implying a lifting of administrative restrictions in order to procure necessary war material,[25] the term “decisive for the war” (Kriegsentscheidend) occurs only in this document and only in connection with whatever research the A.E.G., Dr. Debus, and Mr. Crämer, were conducting. Witkowski notes that he “personally analyzed in depth cubic meters of German documentation referring to technology and never came across this term in a different context – as an official designation of any other research project or activity.”[26]

---

[24] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 257, emphasis Witkowski's.

What is significant in this context, however, is the fact that none other than Martin Bormann, whenever he corresponded with Gerlach, mentioned the Wunderwaffe.[27] Gerlach also wrote Bormann at the end of 1944 that the project on which he was working would be “decisive for the war!”[28] But most importantly, Witkowski uncovered the work of a Polish historian, Herbert Lipinski, who had some access to the Farm Hall Transcripts in their pre-declassification form. From Limpinski’s descriptions of the transcripts, as compared to their “public consumption” declassified version, “something completely different followed” whenever Gerlach was present and the subject of conversation turned to physics. For “the topics of conversations were most often: ‘atomic nuclei’, ‘extraterrestrial space’, ‘magnetic fields’ and ‘the earth’s gravitation.’”[29] Clearly, Gerlach and Company were involved in something more rarefied than mere atom bombs.

Debus’ involvement with the Bell raises yet another disturbing series of questions. What was such an ardent Nazi doing as a director of the Kennedy Space Flight center in Cape Canaveral, a post which he was appointed to in 1963? And why would he even be interested in mere rockets when the Bell held so much more potential not only for propulsion, but for so many other things? Why did someone, whose expertise was in the distinctively Tesla field of high voltage electricity discharge measurement, not only find himself involved both in the semi-secret V-2 program and the much more secret Bell project during the war, but after the war why was this electrical engineer involved as a director of the Kennedy Space center?

---

[25] Ibid., p. 256.

[26] Ibid.

[27] Ibid., p. 255.

[28] Ibid.

[29] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 255.

4. Dr. Hermann Oberth Takes a Trip with some Friends

Dr. Kurt Debus is not, however, the only Nazi "rocket" scientist who was involved with the Bell. Another is the well-known Dr. Hermann Oberth, who, like the Russian Konstantin Tsiolkovsky and American Robert Goddard, is one of the three founding fathers of modern rocketry. Oberth's involvement remains a mystery, for some time between September 15th and September 25th 1944 he apparently took a "business trip," along with other "Bell" project scientists Herbert Jensen, Edward Tholen, and the enigmatic Dr. Elizabeth Adler, from Prague, to Breslau, and eventually to the region where the Bell itself was being tested.[30] Of course, readers familiar with Tom Agoston's work on the Kammlerstab,[31] or with my previous book on Kammler's super-secret black projects "think tank,"[32] will recognize immediately the significance of Prague as the home of a number of Nazi secret weapons projects, and its significance for its close proximity to the headquarters of Kammler's secret weapons "think tank" at the Skoda Works in Pilsen. And readers familiar with the "Nazi Legend" of the UFO will likewise immediately recognize Breslau as the home of the alleged secret "flying saucer" research being conducted there. So it is indeed curious, from a prima facie standpoint alone, that Oberth, a relatively well-known figure, should be accompanying an obscure mathematician whose specialty is unknown, and two other scientists of relative obscurity, on what is apparently a "fact-finding" mission to the centers of the Third Reich's most sensitive – and still unknown – secret weapons projects!

But Witkowski's commentary on Oberth's involvement is perhaps even more unsettling:

---

[30] Ibid, p. 257.

[31] Tom Agoston, Blunder! How the US Gave Away Nazi Supersecrets to the Soviet Union

[32] Joseph P Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 95-116.

> Like earlier in the case of professor Gerlach this information reveals to us a certain unusual and significant fact – significant for the work being carried out. Namely that in principle it is unknown what Prof. Oberth was engaged in during the war. One could have the impression that this is some kind of light at the end of the tunnel, which until now has been cloaked in the darkness of night. After all it is known for sure that Oberth was not connected with the centre in Peenemünde, since in this case he would have undoubtedly held at least one of the positions of command, in other words the fact of his engagement would have been known (thousands of specialists employed there worked after the war in other countries, from the USA and USSR to even Egypt and so is out of the question that a possible secret of this kind could not be kept hidden). So it seems that some kind of alternative program had existed, being carried out for a long time, and quite a serious one at that.[33]

That is, Oberth's presence on this trip, particularly in the company of the mysterious Dr. Elizabeth Adler, whose only known connection to German secret weapons projects is to the Bell, implies the presence already in Nazi Germany of two "space" programs, the one for "public consumption" represented by the V-2 and various other rocket projects, and the other, represented by the Bell. Oberth was perhaps the world's then-leading theoretician of the problems and solutions for long term manned space flight. His presence in the circle of scientists involved with the Bell, such as Dr. Adler, Dr. Gerlach, and Dr. Debus, is yet another clue as to the possible principles of its operation and the possible purpose of the project.

We may summarize the possible clues represented by these individuals and organizational relationships surveyed by Witkowski as follows:

Individual or Organization	Area of Expertise
F.E.P.	Patents Research and DevelopMent
"Admiral Rhein"	Connection to the Kriegsmarine
A.E.G.(Allgemeine Elektricitäts Gesellschaft) and the HWA (Heereswaffenamt)	High Voltage High Frequency Research, Army Ordnance Bureau
SS Obergruppenführer Emil Mazuw	Security??? Ahnenerbe connection???

---

[33] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 259, emphasis added.

Prof Dr. Walther Gerlach	Spin Polarization, Magnetism Gravity
Dr. Kurt Debus	High Voltage Discharge Parameters and Measurement, High Voltage Power Supply
Dr. Elizabeth Adler	Mathematician (specialty unknown) Univ. of Königsberg
Dr. Hermann Oberth	Space Flight Theorist and Rocket Engineer

From this list of personnel and their known areas of expertise and research preoccupations, it is fairly easy to draw the conclusion that the Bell may have represented some revolutionary prototypical device for very advanced space flight propulsion that was not based on the inefficient reaction-driven chemical rockets. Indeed, such an interpretation would explain the nominal though tacit involvement of the German navy, for manned spaceflight would require the construction of pressure vessels for outer space flight that would entail similar types of expertise as used in the construction of submarine pressure hulls. Additionally, the German navy would clearly be interested in exotic propulsion for its U-boats, to allow them greater underwater cruising time as well as speeds.

In any case, the presence of Debus, A.E.G., and the Army Ordnance Bureau (Heereswaffenamt) that also hovers in the background would seem to indicate a more exclusively "weapons" preoccupation with the project. This indication, while mentioned by Witkowski, is, in my opinion, given rather too short shrift in favor of the "propulsion" explanation he seems to prefer. However, as the next two chapters will seek to demonstrate, one must not be too quick to dismiss this aspect of the project.

In any case, the interpretation of the Bell as a breakthrough "field propulsion" device of some sort is clearly the favored theory of British Jane's Defense Weekly author and journalist, Nick Cook,[34] and the "propulsion" theory is clearly that favored and implied by Witkowski.

---

[34] See Nick Cook, The Hunt for Zero Point, pp. 182-192.

B. The Operation of the Bell and Its Effects: Witkowski's Reconstruction of the Bell

In outlining Witkowski's presentation of the known operating parameters, construction parameters, and effects of the Bell, I shall attempt to be as thorough as possible in citation of his research, since much of what he says bears directly on my own admittedly more speculative interpretations of some aspects of the Bell. In doing so, I maintain, in concert with Witkowski and Cook, that at a minimum the Bell represented such a breakthrough in "field propulsion," but I maintain that the Bell represents much more than that. I believe that a propulsion breakthrough was the motivation of the project, but I also believe, that along the way and perhaps even near the very beginning of the project before the full-sized "Bell" was built, that the Germans also encountered some un-anticipated effects that also became principal areas of investigation for the project. As I will attempt to show, in the light of contemporary models and experimentation, the Bell exhibits many hallmarks of a device deliberately designed to cohere or "tap into" the Zero Point Energy, and of a device designed to do so not only for propulsion purposes, but for weaponization. It is thus best seen, perhaps, as a prototypical "scalar" device, a prototypical technology of an extremely unified physics. With this in mind, we turn now to Witkowski's survey.

1. Where it All Happened

According to Witkowski, the principal laboratories for the work on the Bell were in Lower Silesia, in the town of Neumarkt (modern day Sroda Slaska), and Leubus (modern day Lubiaz), disguised inside the facility Schlesische Wekstätten dr Fürstenau. The corporate backing was provided by A.E.G. (Allgemeine Elekticitäts Gesellschaft) and the giant Siemens electrical firm.[35]

Yet another underground facility existed at the Schloss Fürstenstein (Fürstenstein Castle) in lower Silesia, as well as disguised in a coal mine at Waldenburg, where the Bell may have been initially tested.

---

[35] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 239

Castle Fürstenstein: Note the Hilly and Forested Terrain
(From Igor Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe)

A Wartime Tunnel Beneath Fürstenstein Castle (From Igor Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe; Mr. Witkowski is Visible in the Picture)

A little further away, there is another complex that is a part of the project, the Wenceslas Mine at Ludwigsdorf (modern day Ludwikowize). Here in a very remote valley, again disguised in a coal mine, the SS built a rat's run of tunnels, bunkers, and a very odd object that looks like a large concrete henge, self-evidently a test rig of some sort.

The "Henge" At Ludwigsdorf (Ludwikowice)
(From Igor Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe)

This "henge" stands inside a pool or basin, around which there are ports for heavy electrical cabling.

Witkowski's Sketch of The Henge in its Basin or Pool
(From Igor Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe)

Witkowski also provided this author with more information that was not available when his book was published. Rainer Karlsch, a German historian who recently published a book in Germany on Hitler's nuclear program, also

> Mentioned in his book that a team of physicists from a German university (in Giessen) has carried out a lot of research in Ludwikowice[36], namely in (the Henge). The result is such that there are

---

[36] Ludwigsdorff.

> isotopes in the construction (in the reinforcement), which can only be the result of irradiation by a strong beam of neutrons, thus that there must have been some kind of device accelerating ions, rather heavy ones. It could be calculated what was the intensity of the radiation in 1945 and generally it was very high.[37]

In other words, whatever had been tested at the Henge – and there is every indication that it was the Bell – it not only required a sturdy structure to keep it down but also it gave off strong, heavy, radiation.

2. The History and Code-Names of the Project

While experiments on the Bell first appear to have been undertaken in May and June of 1944,[38] the project itself was conceived some two and a half years earlier, meaning that it required that long to bring whatever theory that underwrote it to practical and technical manifestation.

> The entire research project as such was created in January 1942 – under the code-name “Tor” (“Gate”), which functioned until August 1943. After this it was renamed or rather divided into two “sub-projects”. The code-name “Tor” was replaced by the code-names: “Chronos” and “Laternenträger”. Both referred to “the Bell”, but the project had been divided into physical and medical-biological aspects. It was not established which code-name corresponded to a given aspect of the work. The system powering “the Bell” probably received the code-name Charite-Anlage”.[39]

The code-names are suggestive, since “Chronos” means “time” in the Greek, and “gate” is suggestive enough. Both taken together suggest that at least part of the intention behind the product was to engineer time. If so, it is another indicator that the Nazis had abandoned Special Relativity with its locally flat space. Indeed, they were perhaps experimenting in a kind of “hyper-relativity” or a locally-engineered space-time curvature. The significance of the code names, then, points to a very radical and exotic physics, one that, while based upon some of Witkowski's speculations, far exceeds them.

---

[37] Igor Witkowski, personal correspondence to the author, July 23, 2005.

[38] Witkowski*, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe,* p. 234.

[39] Ibid., p. 235.

But what of the other code-name, Laternenträger? Literally, it means a "lantern bearer" or "lantern carrier," i.e., the individual who lit gas street lights in the era before electric lights and photovoltaic cells dispensed with the need for such lamp-lighters. But there may be something more significant in the choice of this particular code-name, as Witkowski notes: "(One) can look at this from yet another angle. It could be, as it was suggested to me, a not too literal translation of a certain ancient name – the name of 'Lucifer', i.e., 'he who carries the light.'"[40]

In any case, the important points for our purposes are not only that the code-names may be indicative, at least in a general way, of the exotic physics the project was to investigate, but also that the project was apparently underway for at least two years before a practical technology – the Bell itself – resulted. This implies a high degree of theoretical background work was its inspiration, and that in turn means we must investigate the clues very carefully in an attempt to reconstruct what that theoretical basis might have been.

3. The Last Flight of the Ju 390

So what happened to the Bell and its research team? As detailed in two of my previous books Reich of the Black Sun and The Giza Death Star Deployed, most of the scientists and technicians were murdered by the SS, and the project hardware itself was evacuated. Indeed, there is now strong evidence that "Project Lantern Bearer" (or if one prefer, Project Lucifer) was evacuated in April of 1945 by a six-engine Junkers 390. This is intriguing, since one of the last pictures of the Junkers 390 was taken at approximately the same period at an airfield in Prague. Since at the end of the war there was only one Ju 390 left in existence, this means that it flew from Prague to near Ludwigsdorf (probably the aerodrome at Opole, in Poland), picked up its additional cargo there, and then, according to an SS officer who was involved in the project and his interrogation records which

---

[40] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, pp. 235-236.

Witkowski found in the Berlin Document Center, it was flown to Bodo airbase in Norway, after which, like the Bell and General Hans Kammler, it simply disappears.[41]

The Last Known Picture of a Ju 390,
Coincidentally Taken in Prague in 1945.
(From Igor Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe)

In Reich of the Black Sun I followed Nick Cook's hypothesis that Kammler had not, in fact, died in Czechoslovakia at the end of the war, but that he had either made his way into post-war America's secret black projects along with the Bell as part of a comprehensive bargain struck between the United States and various high ranking Nazis, including Martin Bormann, or that he simply disappeared with it into an independently-run and continuing Nazi secret weapons project.

Witkowski has uncovered certain circumstantial information that appears to corroborate the "American scenario." Among the many other scientists involved with the Bell, there was one Herbert Jensen, whom we have not mentioned until now. Jensen accompanied the well-known Hermann Oberth, and the very mysterious Elizabeth Adler, on their "business trip" from Prague to Lower Silesia. Oberth and Jensen were some of the main "prizes" sought by the USA after the war, along with Kurt Debus. In other words, behind the mad scramble to acquire the Peenemünde rocket scientists and pry open the secrets of the Nazis' atom bomb project, a concerted effort also seems to have been underway to reassemble as much of the personnel as were involved in the Bell as possible.[42] Given the extremely secret nature of Project Lantern-Bearer, one must assume that the knowledge of the personnel involved with the project, as well as the knowledge of who escaped the SS' execution of various scientists and technicians involved, could only have come from within the SS itself.

---

[41] Ibid., p. 242.

As for Gerlach and Debus, we have already speculated that their high profiles perhaps saved them from the SS' death squads. Perhaps this is also why Gerlach, having been thus "warned off" the subject of spin polarization and gravity research, never publicly returned to these subjects after the war. In this regard it is also noteworthy that Gerlach, after his internment by the British at Farm Hall, was also the only Farm Hall scientist who was subsequently transferred to the United States for further intensive interrogation. In my view it is extremely significant that his wartime work diaries were appropriated by the American OSS, where they remain classified in the CIA archives. Almost nothing is known of their contents.[43] The fact that Gerlach was singled out for such interrogation and that his wartime diaries were placed under tight classification speaks volumes.

Witkowski also entertains the notion that the Ju 390, which was one of the first aircraft in the world equipped for mid-air refueling,[44] a technique pioneered by the Luftwaffe, might have flown its contents to Argentina to continue its research independently of the prying eyes of the Allies, and under the watchful protection of the Peron government. Indeed, Peron had built a modern laboratory for some of the exiled German scientists for research into plasmas and high voltage at Bariloche.[45]

Unlike Witkowski, Geoffrey Brooks unequivocally maintains that the Bell, General Kammler, and the missing Ju 390, made their way to Argentina and eventually to the plasma and high voltage laboratory at Bariloche as part of their super-secret strategic evacuation plans known as Operation Regentröpfchen (Raindrop), in which the Gauleiter of Lower Silesia, Karl Hanke, played a significant role. In the light of Carter Hydrick's thesis that Martin Bormann actually aided the United States in the surrender of the U-234 and its valuable cargo of fissile uranium and atom bomb components, Brooks' remarks again underscore the significance and importance as a "decisive war-winning weapon" that the Bell had for the Nazis:

---

[42] Ibid., p. 260.

[43] Ibid.

[44] Ibid., p. 280.

[45] Ibid.

> The Nazis were particularly anxious to protect documents containing the highest classifications of secret knowledge designated Geheime Reichssache relating to the development of arms, aircraft and submarines. The most important of all these, files relating to a super aviation fuel and advanced aircraft, went by long-range Junkers Ju 390 transport aircraft directly to Argentina.
>
> From the point of view of the US Government, the 260 tons of strategic material aboard the German U-boat U-234 escorted into Portsmouth Navy Yard, New Hampshire, on 19 May 1945 is so absurdly secret that the fact that it is classified as top secret is a secret, as are the documents pertaining to Dr Heinz Schlicke and the nature of the assistance he afforded the Manhattan Project in the three months after his capture. The most secret item of cargo aboard U-234 remains the eighty small cases of uranium powder which have never appeared on any USN Unloading Manifest and which will have been the fissile material for a rudimentary atomic explosive. But as far as the German High Command was concerned, the voyage of this U-boat with its extraordinary cargo of war materials and passengers did not rate so highly as to fall within the ambit of the General Plan of Evacuation.[46]

According to Brooks, whose information in this regard corroborates Witkowski's own discovery of the Bell's classification as Kriegsentscheidend, the Bell rated higher than the atom bomb in the German High Command's estimation. While this may seem odd or unusual, it should be recalled that a similar classification scheme has been alleged for captured "UFO" technology in the post-war USA, rating it higher than the hydrogen bomb.

In any case, Brooks then adds significant detail about the Bell in Argentina.

---

[46] Geoffrey Brooks, Hitler's Terror Weapons, p. 2, emphasis added.

> A leftist correspondent of a leading Neuquen daily newspaper active in exposing Nazi war criminals in the Bariloche area of Argentina and who prefers anonymity for that reason has stated in writing that he inspected official documents confirming that the German anti-gravity experiments SS-E-IV and SS-U-13, together with the notorious Bell… arrived aboard a Junkers Ju 390 long-range transport aircraft which flew non-stop from Norway to Gualeguay aerodrome in Entre Rios province, Argentina, at the war's end. If true, this might be seen by some as suggestive that the SS anti-gravity aircraft project was the post-war utmost priority for the National Socialist scientific elite.[47]

If Brook's scenario is correct, then it is sobering in its implications, for it indicates that an independent and on-going Nazi development of exotic weapons technologies continued after the war. As will be seen in the final chapters of this book, this prospect is chillingly corroborated in yet a different fashion. And it highlights the Two Space Programs Hypothesis in yet another fashion, for "one would also think it safe to assume that if the USAF had been able to make head or tail of German anti-gravity, they would not have bothered with the same old rocket propulsion methods at Cape Kennedy three decades afterwards."[48] Or perhaps, as was seen in the previous chapter, there was a space program within the space program, developing and utilizing an exotic technology, and wrapping it in rockets for show.

4. The Design of the Bell and Its Effects in Operation

Witkowski's anonymous intelligence informant aroused enough interest in the Polish journalist in subject of what really constituted the so-called Wunderwaffe that he began to search for references to it. The quest began with yet another characteristic statement from Propaganda Minister Dr. Josef Göbbels relayed by his wife, Magda, to her sister-in-law. The Nazi propaganda minister, it seemed, had seen a weapon "so visionary" that it would guarantee ultimate victory.[49] Such statements were, of course, standard fare for the beleaguered Reich. But Witkowski soon uncovered odd corroboration from another source, this time from the aide to the well-known SS commando, Otto Skorzeny: Karl Radl. Radl disclosed, in documents Witkowski uncovered at the American archives' Berlin Document Center, that Skorzeny had engaged in numerous acts of sabotage behind Russian lines in 1944 because he had "come into contact with the 'wonder weapon' and as a result (had) 'been possessed' by the idea of 'Sonderkampf' ('Special Warfare'), regarding the use of this weapon, to such an extent, that he considered it the only sure way to win the war."[50] But the matter did not rest there.

---

[47] Brooks, Hitler's Terror Weapons, p. 3, emphasis added. SS-E-IV is the designation of "SS Entwicklungsstelle IV" the super-secret SS unit investigating the properties of vacuum flux or Zero Point Energy, one aspect of which would have been the investigation into the control of gravity.

[48] Ibid., p. 9.

After the war, according to reports in the Spanish press that were soon followed by similar articles in the American press, Skorzeny had attempted to sell the secrets of this unknown Wunderwaffe to the Americans. These articles "mentioned that among other things what was involved was some unusual flying object, with 'electromagnetic' propulsion, which simultaneously had been 'responsible for a wave of flying saucer observations over North America that summer.'"[51] The article went on to state that these "saucers" were built in Spain by exiled German scientists, and that their flight principle was based on the gyroscope.[52]

His curiosity now definitely piqued, Wikowski again arranged for further meetings with his anonymous informant. From these meetings, the following picture of the Bell emerged:

> That mysterious device – "the Bell" ("die Glocke") seemed at first glance relatively simple, although the unusual effects of its operation contradicted this. The description was admittedly incomplete and non-scientific, since it had originated from military personnel, who had not had access to all of the data, but even then it included, many valuable details. The main part of "the Bell" was made up of two massive cylinders-drums around one meter in diameter, which during the experiment span in opposite directions at tremendous speeds. The

---

[49] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 231

[50] Ibid., pp. 231-232.

[51] Ibid., p. 232, emphasis Witkowski's.

[52] Ibid.

> drums were made of a silvery metal and rotated around a common axis. T*he axis was formed by quite an unusual core, with a diameter of a dozen or so, to twenty centimeters, with its lower end fixed to "the Bell's" massive pedestal. It was made of a heavy, hard metal.* Before each trial some kind of ceramic, oblong container was placed in the core (it was defined as a "vacuum flask"…), surrounded by a layer of lead approx. 3 cm thick. It was approx. 1-1.5 m long and filled with a strange, metallic substance, with a violet-gold hue and preserving at room temperature the consistency of "slightly coagulated jelly". From the produced information it followed that this substance was code-named "IRR XERUM-525" or "IRR SERUM-525" and contained among other constituents the thorium oxide and beryllium oxide (beryllia). The name "Xeron" also appeared in the documentation. It was some kind of amalgam of mercury, probably containing various heavy isotopes.
>
> Mercury, this time already in pure form, was also present inside the spinning cylinders. Before the start of each experiment, and perhaps also for its duration, the mercury was intensively cooled. Since information appeared about the use of large quantities of liquid gas – nitrogen and oxygen, it appeared that it was precisely these that were the cooling medium. The entire device, i.e., the cylinders and core was covered with the aforementioned ceramic housing, of a bell-like shape – a cylinder rounded at the top crowned with some kind of hook, or fastening. The entire device was about 1.5 m in diameter and about 2.5 m high….
>
> The person in conversation with me had in any case emphasized that not once had the term "weapon" been uttered in relation to the described device.[53]

At this juncture, it is necessary to pause and consider the details, since they differ somewhat from Nick Cook's summary of them in Hunt for Zero Point and my own earlier descriptions in The Giza Death Star Deployed and Reich of the Black Sun.

---

[53] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, pp. 232-233, boldface emphasis Witkowski's, italicized emphasis mine.

Igor Witkowski's Sketch of the Bell
(From The Truth About the Wunderwaffe)

1. The Bell consisted of
    - a. Two counter-rotating cylinders on a common axis, which cylinders were apparently filled with or coated with pure mercury;
    - b. The axis itself consisted of a heavy metal core, presumably hollow, since it was the receptacle for the mysterious thorium-beryllium-mercury compound known as Xerum-525;[54]
    - c. The outer casing was made of a ceramic material.
2.. The mercury, and presumably the interior of the Bell, was tremendously cooled by (presumably liquid) nitrogen and oxygen;
3. The Bell was approximately (according to this latest research of Witkowski) 2.5 meters high (about eight to nine feet

---

[54] Geoffrey Brooks notes that "By 1944 Germany had cornered all available European stocks of thorium, but, on enquiring the reason, the US Alsos mission was unable to establish a satisfactory answer." (Hitler's Terror Weapons, p. 138)

> high) and about 1.5 meters in diameter (or about four to five feet), smaller in size than initially reported by Cook.

This last detail is perhaps significant, since I drew comparisons between the Bell and the UFO recovered at Kecksburg in my previous book, Reich of the Black Sun. There, relying on Nick Cook's dimensions of 12-15 feet high and 9-12 feet wide, and similar dimensions for the object that crashed at Kecksburg, I drew the speculative conclusion that they were perhaps one and the same object. While the new dimensions tend to weaken this connection, I nevertheless maintain my speculations advanced in that book: that it may have been the Bell or some such similar device that crashed at Kecksburg.[55]

In any case, the above list raises certain important questions:

1. What was the purpose of the counter-rotating cylinders?
2. Were these cylinders arranged one inside the other, or one on top of the other?
3. What was the purpose of using mercury in these cylinders?
4. What was the purpose of using the obviously radioactive compound of Xerum 525? Was Xerum 525 some isotope of mercury, or an isotope of mercury in compound with other elements?
5. What was the purpose of the ceramic housing?

As will be seen, Witkowski has his own very plausible explanations for some of these questions. We will examine these in due course, and tender our own speculations as well.

But Witkowski's meetings with his informant revealed much more information not only regarding the device itself, but its experimental operation:

> Each such experiment was carried out in a specially prepared chamber – a pool. In most cases it was located underground. Its surface was > covered with ceramic tiles and the floor also with heavy rubber mats. The mats were destroyed after each test (!), while the tiles were washed – deactivated with a pink liquid resembling brine. In the case of tests conducted inside the chamber of an inactive mine, in 1945, such a chamber was always destroyed (blown up) after two-three tests….

---

[55] In this regard, I did initially speculate in my Reich of the Black Sun, without having had access to Witkowski's work, that the Bell's mysterious Xerum-525 was a radioactive isotope of mercury or of some other elements or compounds. Q.v. Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 335.

>
> First of all “the Bell” itself was prepared along with the considerable power supply installation accompanying it. A whole set of cameras, movie cameras and probably also some measuring devices were placed on a special rack in the research chamber itself. Then a series of samples or objects were placed nearby, on which the effect of the emitted energy was tested. These were animal organisms (live lizards, rats, frogs, insects, snails and in all probability also….people – prisoners from KL Gross-Rosen)[56] plants (mosses, ferns, horsetails, fungi, moulds) as well as a whole series of substances of organic origin such as: White of an egg, blood, meat, milk and liquid fats. These preparations were of course carried out by scientists and technicians…as well as by a commando of prisoners from Gross-Rosen concentration camp, specially assigned to this work. It numbered up to 100 people….Just before the experiment the entire personnel was removed to a distance of 150-200 m, at the same time employing individual, rubber protective suits and helmets or hard hats distinguished by large red visors.[57]

Thus, we may add to our previous list the following points:

5. The experiments were conducted in an underground chamber, part of which consisted of a pool;
6. The chamber was insulated with rubber mats covering ceramic bricks;
7. The effects of the Bell during its operation extended some 650-700 feet beyond the device;
8. The chambers had to be destroyed after only a few tests, due apparently to the strong residual effects of its operation;
9. The effects of the device on living organisms and organic material was apparently a crucial area of inquiry;

---

[56] “KL”: Konzentrationslager: concentration camp.

[57] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, pp. 233-234, emphasis added.

10. Even at some distance from the object, its technicians had to be in rubber suits (which suggests that they could not be electrically grounded while the Bell was in operation); and,
11. The eyes had to be protected with red visors.

The effects of the Bell when in operation lived up to this odd list of extreme precautions, giving off both "short-term and long-term effects – and perhaps also those about which we do not know."[58] With respect to the short-term effects, these > became immediately perceptible after the power had been switched on. These were: a characteristic sound, which could be described as something extremely similar to the humming of bees sealed in a bottle (hence the unofficial name "The Hive" – "Bienenstock" was also used in relation to "the Bell") as well as a series of electromagnetic effects. These consisted of the following: surges in surrounding 220 V electrical installations (bulbs "blowing") observed in the case of ground tests at distances exceeding 100 m, a bluish phosphorescence (blue glow) around "the Bell" – obviously a result of the emission of ionizing radiation, as well as a very strong magnetic field mentioned in the statements. In addition participants of the experiments felt disturbances of the nervous system's operation, such as formication ("pins and needles"), headaches and a metallic taste in the mouths.[59]

Clearly, the Bell's operation induced some very odd, and very extreme effects, and as many readers will recognize, the "metallic taste" in the mouths of participants is one characteristic associated with those who come into close proximity to UFOs.[52]

---

[58] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 234.

[59] Ibid., p. 234, emphasis added. The metallic taste is a signature of some close encounters with UFOs. UFOlogist Timothy Good produces the following account of such an encounter by a German UFOlogist, Dr. Peter Hattwig, and his wife: "Suddenly, we heard a clear humming sound coming from the sky. After three or four seconds this noise, which seemed 'metallic', as though produced by a centrifugal force, grew louder….our bedroom and terrace outside was lit by something even more powerful than the moonlight – a bluish-white colour like neon lighting. At the saem time we both felt a strange metallic sort of taste on our tongues." (Timothy Goode, Unearthly Disclosure: Conflicting Interests in the Control of Extraterrestrial Intelligence [London: Arrow Books, 2000], 48).

The long term effects were equally peculiar. Participants would suffer sleep loss, problems with their balance and equilibrium, memory problems, muscle cramps and ulceration. The Germans apparently later “succeeded in radically limiting these unfavourable effects.”[60]

But it was the effect of its operation on organic materials that was the most peculiar, and deadly. The various plants, animals, and presumably hapless concentration camp victims suffered “various types” of damage, the most dominant form being “the disintegration of tissue structures, gelation and the stratification of liquids (among others blood) into distinctly divided fractions and others.”[61] In fact, during the first series of tests, apparently conducted from May to June of 1944, “these kinds of side-effects caused the death of five out of seven scientists engaged in them. As a result, the whole first research team was dissolved,” and it became a high priority for the project to limit these effects.[62] In other words, the deadly effects of the Bell were not, at least initially, what the Germans were apparently after. Its purpose was something different. As we shall see subsequently though, such results and its potential for a deadly new type of weapon could not have been lost on the Germans. Indeed, while Witkowski tends toward the view that the Bell represented a secret project in propulsion of some sort, its classification as Kriegsentscheidend and its clear claim to the title of “Wunderwaffe” would seem to call for more speculation in this direction, based on Witkowski’s disclosures. We will return to this subject momentarily.

The oddest changes in organic materials “were observed in the case of green plants.”

> During the first phase, spanning about five hours after the test had been completed, the plants paled or became grey, suggesting chemical decomposition or the decay of chlorophyll. Extraordinary is that despite this, such a plant lived normally, by all appearances, for a further period – the order of a week. This was followed by immediate, almost rapid or cascade (8-14 hours) decomposition to a greasy substance, “with the consistency of rancid fat,...enveloping the entire plant. This

---

[60] Ibid.

[61] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 234.

[62] Ibid.

> decomposition was devoid of all features characteristic of bacterial decomposition – among other things of smell. Besides, it was too rapid, giving the impression that all structure had decayed.
>
> At the same time the formation of undefined crystalline structures was observed in the liquid organic substances….[63]

From this one can surmise what had happened when the device was first used, causing the deaths of five of the scientists and technicians that ran it. Unwary, they were exposed to its unusual effects, and the cellular structure of their bodies and fluids broke down completely. As we shall see, such effects are one clear signature of a "scalar" device.

But these were not the only strange effects associated with the Bell. In the region of Lower Silesia around Ludwigsdorf (modern day Ludwikowice) where the project was based, survivors from the project, or inhabitants of the area during the war, contacted Witkowski, and reporting seeing "objects vertically landing and taking off," objects that some described as "flying barrels".[64]

5. Witkowski's Reconstruction of its Possible Physics

Obviously, the above list of the device's construction, its operation, and effects, paints a very unusual picture. What sort of physics lies behind all of it? What were the Germans attempting to accomplish with this bizarre device? Obviously, to have such a complex device in operation by the end of the war would have required some initial testing, planning and designing, taking years of research in its own right. So what were they looking for? What might have been the inspiration? And finally, why would such a device, beyond all the other exotic weapons in the Third Reich's arsenal - an arsenal that included fuel-air bombs, guided missiles, deadly chemical and nerve gases, and possibly even the atomic bomb – be uniquely classified as Kriegsentscheidend, as "decisive for the war"?

Witkowski set out to answer these questions, and in the process learned that two phrases stood out in the reports concerning the device. These were "vortex compression" and "separation of magnetic fields."[65] Clearly they meant something, and something rather exotic, since the mysterious Dr. Elizabeth Adler from the University of Königsberg had to be consulted on the arcane matter of "a simulation of damping of vibrations towards the centre of spherical objects."[66] But the Bell, obviously, was not a sphere, nor were its high-speed rotating drums "vibrating."

---

[63] Ibid., pp. 234-235.

[64] Ibid., p. 263.

The mystery deepens…

As Witkowski puts it, the Bell "possessed so many characteristic features that finding some kind of unequivocal explanation seemed to be attainable."[67] According to him, these are:

- The employment of very high voltages.
- An emphasis of the phenomenon of "magnetic fields separation".
- The occurrence of "vortex compression".
- The fact that the device generated very powerful magnetic fields.
- The spinning of masses / bulky elements as a means to achieve the above effects (directly or indirectly)
- As a result: the generation of powerful radiation.
- The continuous character of "the bell's" operation – i.e., non-pulse
- The reference about transforming mercury into gold.[68]

This list is interesting, especially as regards the second to last point, the hypothesized "non-pulsed" nature of the Bell's operation. This is, of all the material in Wikowski's research, the one item that lacks any corroboration. While Witkowski is correct that this was its most likely mode of operation, there is one clue that the Bell may also have been a pulsed device, and the clue comes from Witkowski himself: the description of its sound like a hive of bees. Such a sound is characteristic of a rapidly opening and closing high voltage direct current switch, such as the type Tesla used in his Impulse Magnifying Transmitter experiments with direct current. The "buzz" sound is characteristic of such devices.

---

[65] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 235.

[66] Ibid.

[67] Ibid., p. 245.

[68] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 245, emphasis added.

The last point brings up yet another oddity in the long list of oddities associated with the Bell, and that is transmutation of elements. It will be seen in the next chapter that there was a curious reference in the Farm Hall transcripts on two separate occasions to a "photochemical process" of isotope separation. I speculated that it might be some analogue or derivative to cold fusion. But here one encounters the reference in the context of a project having little to due with "photochemistry" except in the loosest of senses.

As for the reference to transmutation, this is a partly solved problem, for there exists in the Frankfurter Zeitung und Handelsblatt, for the evening edition of Friday, June 18, 1924, an article on precisely the transmutation of mercury into gold – long before the discovery of nuclear fission – by none other than Prof. Dr. Walther Gerlach![69] Gerlach speaks of such transmutation being possible through the bombardment of a target with "rays" of an unspecified nature, and then goes on to speak of the scientific feasibility of alchemy!

Seeking to piece all of these pieces together, Witkowski contacted Polish physicist Marek Demiański, a specialist in gravitational physics. Outlining the Bell's peculiar properties, Demiański concluded that vortex motion might be a key to generating gravitation, and then added that mercury would "best suit this purpose" as being "a substance of high density and simultaneously as a liquid."[70] Indeed, if the Germans "had succeeded in aligning the axes of nuclei rotation in one direction, with the aid of a strong magnetic field" then perhaps they had achieved some sort of gravitational breakthrough.[71]

Witkowski next tackled the problem of the apparent high voltages used in the Bell. "It must have led to a discharge, and consequently it must have been a question of plasma physics." If indeed it was the case as Demiański suggested that the active substance in such a device be characterized by low viscosity, then gas would be of a lower viscosity than liquid, and plasma lower than gas.[72] Plasmas created through an electric current create vortices known as plasmoids, in which “the lines of magnetic field force are almost completely closed.”[73] Under these conditions a plasma vortex is almost completely isolated from its surrounding environment. This in turn creates a kind of local “space time continuum” or localized space curvature.

---

[69] Ibid., p. 257.
[70] Ibid., p. 247.
[71] Ibid.

During the period he was formulating these observations, Witkowski visited the Institute of Plasma Physics and Laser Microfusion in Warsaw, where he was met with an incredible site, a plasma trap, having all the characteristic appearance of the Bell!

The Plasma Trap and Focus Device from the Institute of Plasma Physics and Laser Microfusion in Warsaw (From Igor Witkowski’s The Truth About the Wunderwaffe)

Incredibly, the same ceramic and rubber-mat shielding was also necessitated by the device, just as they were with the Bell.

---

[72] Ibid., p. 249.

[73] Ibid., emphasis added.

Compelled by the evidence, Witkowski concluded that the Bell represented some sort of “trap for a plasma vortex.”[74] But the Bell was different from the modern device Witkowski saw in one important respect. “It became evident that it was simply the spinning that was missing.”

> Yes, plasma sometimes creates a kind of vortex, but this is usually a side effect. Nobody yet, nobody after the war – has built a “plasma focus” device chiefly for the fast spinning of heavy ions…the internal construction of every plasma is purely static. The conception of rotating or counterrotating cylinders remains unknown. Nobody has struck upon the idea of doing this![75]

Thus, Witkowski was led to his final reconstruction of the Bell, and the principle of its operation and the reasons the Germans chose this peculiar method of designing a “plasma focus”:

> I imagined a large, metal drum, in which a small amount of mercury was present. The drum would then be accelerated to a speed of say tens of thousands of revolutions per minute. Under the influence of the centrifugal force the mercury, as a liquid, would cover the walls of the drum creating a thin layer. After achieving the target speed a high voltage electrical discharge would be created between the circumference of the drum (the mercury layer) – and its axis - the core. Theoretically this would accelerate the ions of mercury towards the core, with a speed of many kilometers per second. But since the mercury would already possess a certain torque, in due measure of approaching the core its angular velocity would increase … thus developing an increase in rotational speed. In the case of the drum with mercury this would lead to an overlapping of the two speeds – created by a preservation of the torque and a result of the flow of electric current. From my approximate calculations it followed that by this means it would be possible to achieve a speed of the ultimate “compressed” vortex of the order of even hundreds of thousands of revolutions per second.[76]

And with these tremendous speeds of rotation with a plasma whose axes of rotation were all polarized (lined up in the same direction), it followed that enormous kontrabaryc (anti-gravitational) effects might result, since the recent physics literature indicates precisely such a connection between mass and rotation.[77]

---

[74] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 250.

[75] Ibid.

[76] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 251.

But what of the transmutation part of it? Sensing that such vorticular structures are an inevitable template of matter itself, Witkowski “recalled the work of the Russian scientist Genadiy Shipov and works of the German physicist, Professor Burkhard Heim (working during the war at the Goettingen University). In all their works there was reference to changes being created in the structure of materials by artificially generated gravitational waves.”[78] As will be seen subsequently, this is a signal clue that much more was involved in the Bell than a mere plasma focus trap, even one incorporating the insightful concept of rotating the active substance to achieve maximum spin polarization, a concept well in keeping with Gerlach's interests. Except for one further observation, which we shall get to in a moment, further than this Witkowski does not go.

---

[77] Wikowski cites Japanese experiments in this regard, but one might also point to the various experiments of physicist Di Palma.

[78] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 253. Burkhardt Heim was a well-known and respected physicist and peace advocate in Germany before his death. Almost nothing is said about him in this country, but it is significant that his work was mentioned by Leonard G. Cramp in his well-known UFO classic UFOs and Anti-Gravity: Piece for a Jig-Saw (Kempton: Adventures Unlimted Press, 1966), pp. 94, 110.

Gravitational research is, in one respect, obviously the motivation and purpose of the Bell. In his recent July 23, 2005 correspondence with the author, Witkowski also makes another connection that is well worth pondering. Connecting the idea of “magnetic fields separation” with atomic spin polarization, Witkowski then goes on to state:

> “We know from contemporary references that the ‘separation’ may be achieved in various ways, like by a superconductor or through a so called pinch in plasma. As I interpreted this, it may refer to a relativistic isolation of a “reference frame”. It’s an idea that has been derived from Einstein’s theory, before the Second World War. NASA has launched the Gravity Probe B spacecraft last year (which has fast spinning balls surrounded by a material superconducting in this temperature, in order to isolate the magnetic field, therefore to basically verify the same effect only that without plasma.) They quoted a different reference however: the theory developed in Germany and Austria before the war mostly by Hans Thirring, a theory of spacetime and gravity which takes into account such a “separation” – if not for NASA, the work would be largely forgotten.”

Witkowski also mentions in his letter that Thirring was a close associate of Dr Walther Gerlach.

6. A Story from the Neo-Nazi Fringe

Amazingly, there is a story from the Neo-Nazi fringe element in North America that oddly corroborates many details of Witkowski's reconstruction. The story is made the more remarkable for the fact that it appeared prior to the publication either of Nick Cook's Hunt for Zero Point or of the research on which its revelations on the Bell were based: Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe. The story emanated from notorious "holocaust revisionist" Eric Zündel's Samizdat Press in Canada. The story allegedly came from a "Prof. Dr. Friedrich Kuhfuss, who died in Barcelona, Spain, in exile, having never been captured by the Allies."[79]

> Deep among the near-primeval, dark and foreboding forests, somewhere in one of the many hilly areas of Germany, there was a secret base simply called X. To the outside world it looked like an ancient hunting lodge, perched atop a small hill. Only two meandering winding roads led up to the "Jadgschloss" as German woodsmen and small farmers of the nearby village (about 8 km distant) would simply call it…. (Their) forest area had been declared a restricted area. They were told that for the duration of the war the entire area was under the direct control of the S.S. All villagers were issued with special passes, with photographs; no outsiders were allowed to visit them and they were sworn to secrecy…. They observed… bus loads of people driving through their village, usually sombre looking men, very few women, but many of them uniformed and an exceptional number of higher rank officers.
>
> Since there was only one Inn in the village, The Gasthaus zum Goldenen Ochsen (The Golden Oxen) occasionally some of the heavy Mercedes and Opel automobiles would stop and their occupants lunch or partake of snacks. The men behaved in a most peculiar manner.

---

[79] Friedrich Mattern, UFO's: Nazi Secret Weapon? (Toronto, Ontario: Samisdat Publishers, Ltd. No Date. P. 110

They all took their briefcases with them to lunch, many of these cases being of a size larger than the usual German briefcase….

There was relative quiet for a number of weeks and then one day S.S. men asked the local burgermaster to call together the local inhabitants. An officer was introduced, he announced that close to the Jagdschloss an auxiliary to a concentration camp was to be set up and that the inmates were war plant workers engaged in extremely important work. Nobody was to fraternize with these people and all strangers or strange happenings were to be immediately reported to the S.S. Ortskommandatur….A few days later, truck after truck loaded with construction equipment of every conceivable description rolled through the village….

Soon loud and frightening blasts could be heard day in and day out, reverberating through the valleys. After a few months they ceased. Then huge, slow-moving, flatbed trucks began to arrive carrying loads, covered with tarpaulins all chained to the platforms and guarded by soldiers. This went on for many, many weeks. By now the whole village was rife with the most unbelievable rumours.

One night, the entire village was awakened and terribly frightened by sound of such high pitch and frequency that had commenced only as a hardly audible humming, that it was soon realized that something very unusual was happening. They rushed outside and to their utter amazement and bewilderment they saw a brilliantly illuminated “thing” hovering in the air in the general direction of the Jagdschloss. Then, just as violently as it had announced its arrival the sound died down, the light faded and the strange “thing” settled behind the treetops, out of the sight of the relieved, yet still shaken local people….Soon several of these strange vehicles, each a little different from the other, were flying about, at first slowly but later at such fantastic speeds that it was difficult to follow them with the naked eye….Sometimes, when flying so fast, they made frightful noises, big bangs, that reverberated around the valleys rather like heavy thunderclaps.

…..So, the months became years, then one day long columns of trucks clogged the roads. Since there were two roads into and out of the Jagdschloss it was difficult to know what was transpiring, but soon they knew. Less and less flying “things” were seen and soon the camp was only a shadow of its former self. One day all work ceased, tremendous explosions ripped, once again, through the valley, smoke rose from the area of the Jagdschloss and a few weeks later the Russians rode into town, unopposed, raping and looting everything in sight….Little did (the Russians) realize that in those caved-in caverns, with electrical cables and wires dangling from now damp ceilings, on the debris-littered floors, in seemingly endless halls, with strange burn marks on the concrete floors, walls and ceilings, had taken place one of the wonders of the world…only worthless bits of pieces of metal, nuts, bolts, steel rods, rubber tires, some leather and some strange-looking > and feeling “slacklike,” grayish substance was to be found amongst all the rubble.[80]

There are a number of things that would tend to indicate that this story is pure fantasy.

First, and most importantly, the idea of SS officers openly carrying briefcases of secret research in the local Gasthaus is utter nonsense. For the loyalty-and-security obsessed SS such breaches would have been unthinkable; but, if committed by any member, swiftly and ruthlessly dealt with. Secondly, as Witkowski stated in a personal letter to this author, neither the more modern Schloss or the mediaeval castle at Fürstenstein were ever used as hunting lodges.[81]

But there are also a number of things to notice here that corroborate Witkowski’s reconstruction of the Bell in a general fashion, and that therefore tend to indicate that the story contains some elements of truth; indeed, it contains many elements in common with Witkowski’s history of the Bell project, a coincidence made more compelling for the fact that it predates Witkowski’s published work, and for the fact that it comes from a source with profoundly pro-Nazi sympathies. The latter point would, in fact, tend to indicate that someone, somewhere, and independent of any government, knew all about the project and what it had accomplished.

First, the story concerns a heavily forested and hilly area of Germany, which Schloss Fürstenstein certainly qualifies for. Secondly, the area, and hence the project reported by the story, were under SS jurisdiction. Thirdly, there was a concentration camp involved to supply slave labor for the construction and presumably for the project.[82] Fourthly, the story indicates that a great amount of blasting occurred, which strongly suggests that a great deal of underground construction took place. As Witkowski notes, there are clear indications that the whole complex of Fürstenstein was full of tunnels and galleries constructed during the war. Fifthly, very obviously the object reported by the village inhabitants in the story gave off strong field effects, a similarity with the Bell that is all too palpable. Sixthly, it is also clear from the story that heavy electrical cabling was involved, yet another connection with the story of the Bell. Seventhly, there is the report of a "slacklike" gray substance found among the rubble, clearly recalling the reports of blackish or grayish goo that resulted from the Bell's tests on organic materials. Eighthly, the story recounts the burning and scorching of concrete and stone walls, tending to support the idea that whatever was involved put out strong radiation, another parallel with the Bell as recounted by Witkowski. Finally, the story records the fact that the site was apparently quickly and thoroughly evacuated by the SS, along with more blasting, an indicator, perhaps, that some of the tunnels and galleries were sealed by the SS to prevent whatever that remained from falling into Russian hands. Here again, the broad outline is consistent with the story of the Bell, with the SS' removal of the object and execution of some of the scientists and technicians involved.

---

[80] Friedrich Mattern, UFO’s” Nazi Secret Weapon? pp. 110-113.

[81] Witkowski, personal correspondence to the author, July 23, 2005.

[82] Witkowski makes it clear that this slave labor came from the nearby Gross-Rosen concentration camp.

However, one must weigh this against the unbelievable elements of the story. It is not only unlikely but entirely ludicrous that SS officers involved in a top secret black project would, on their "off hours," glibly be carrying about secret papers in their briefcases or talking more or less openly about their work at the local Gasthaus.

7. Mercury Vortex Engines…Again

As was mentioned previously, Witkowski does not take his analysis of the Bell any further than to imply that it was a uniquely designed plasma vortex trap that perhaps achieved extraordinary kontrabaric effects. Those effects, if one is to believe the reports of inhabitants of the region who spoke of "flying barrels" or even if one is to credit the story from the Neo-Nazi source above, would have been so sensational that the Nazis would have given the device extreme classification.

But Witkowski is alive to the fact that the Bell might represent much more. Ending the section of his book that surveys the Bell, and indeed, ending his entire incredible book, Witkowski asks a question that leads him to consider an unlikely source of inspiration for the whole project:

> (Yet) one more issue remains – how did it happen that scientists from the 1940s understood exactly where they were heading? They had applied after all ideas from XXI century physics. How is it, that they were conscious of bringing about a major turning-point? What arguments did they lay down (before the launch of work) that caused them to win the race for funds with the great and influential armaments consortiums? And they won decisively.
>
> It seems that the whole issue is something more than just a technical problem. The unusualness of all this is summed up by the fact, that descriptions of mercuric propulsion had appeared as long ago as in ancient times – in alchemy and old Hindu books – one can easily check this. The "Samaranganasutradhara" a book at least 2,000 years old, said for example: "By means of the power latent in the mercury which sets the driving whirlwind in motion, a man sitting inside may travel a great distance in the sky in a most marvelous manner."[83]

Witkowski is clearly suggesting that the inspiration for the project might have come from the SS' preoccupation with the occult, and from its investigations of the possible scientific underpinnings in various occult and esoteric treatises.

We have encountered this theme before, and, as regards the so-called "mercury vortex engines," shall have more to say in chapter six.

But here Witkowski ends his reconstruction of the Bell and his own speculations as to its operation and the actual goals the Germans hoped to achieve with it. In doing so, a number of significant questions remain unanswered.

It will be recalled from the foregoing presentation that Witkowski rightly understands the importance of the rotation of the mercury or Xerum-525 substance in the device. But, having once mentioned it, he never considers what the Germans may have been hoping to accomplish by counter-rotation of the same substance. In short, the kontrabaric effects of the Bell are explained by one rotating cylinder. So why were there two cylinders on a common axis rotating in opposite directions? Equally important: what was their configuration? Was one cylinder inside the other? Or was one cylinder on top of the other?

---

[83] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 284, emphasis Witkowski's.

A related question is this: beyond the possible esoteric and occult inspirations, what in the physics literature of the day might have formed the basis of the Lantern-Bearer Project? As we shall see, the Germans had a number of scientists other than Gerlach who realized the importance of vortices for the very building blocks of matter. Once this idea is stated, one inevitably sees the implication, for if vortices constitute the fundamental building blocks of matter, then they also constitute a template of action for the transmutation of one form of matter into another, as well as a template for a variety of other actions as well.

Yet another question to be at least speculatively answered is why the device was enclosed in a ceramic, bell-like shell? Was this choice of material, and its shape, significant?

Similarly, the characteristic sound the Bell made while in operation was like a beehive. This sound could be indicative of a rapidly opening and closing switch to pulse the device with high voltage (most likely, direct) current.

Finally, the Bell’s effects on living organisms – whatever its extraordinary kontrabaric and “temporal dilation” effects might have been – surely could not have been lost on the Germans either. Clearly they were in the presence of a phenomenon that could be applied in a variety of ways, as a means perhaps of propulsion, perhaps even of communication, and perhaps also as a weapon.

The phenomenon the Nazis had accessed via the Bell was a unified phenomenon and pointed to an underlying unified physics. The question is, what is that phenomenon? What were the Nazis after? Did they know what they had accessed?

Why does the figure of Gerlach keep popping up? Why, for example, is an expert in spin polarization, gravitation, transmutation of elements, and mercury plasma, placed in charge of Nazi Germany’s public atom bomb project? Why are his diaries still classified? Why would an anti-gravity device suddenly become a Wunderwaffe? What possible type of physics could underlie all these things?

Witkowski himself points the way to the theme that will guide us in the next few chapters: vortices.

5.

"Working in Fields of Physics that were Monstrous on a Daily Basis"

"(Scalar) weapons are the most powerful and flexible weapons on earth. Nothing else can stand against them. Any nation not possessing (scalar) weapons is already a second-rate power, regardless of how many nuclear missiles, bombers, and submarines it possesses, or how many high-energy lasers and high power microwave weapons it possesses"
Tom Bearden, Fer De Lance: Briefing on Soviet Scalar Electromagnetic Weapons[1]

A. Strange Claims and Quotations: Indicators of Wartime German Research in "Scalar" Weapons

When approaching the more extreme claims advanced in some exotic literature for Nazi secret weapons developments, one has the impression of some dark mediaeval alchemists' laboratory, with the alchemists dressed in the black uniforms of the SS, cracking whips on the backs of emaciated concentration camp slaves to perfect their dreadful machines of power and annihilation. It has all the elements – were the scope of human suffering involved not so real and so enormous – of a bad Hollywood "B" movie, with a gaunt Boris Karloff orchestrating an oddball cast that includes Bela Lugosi, Peter Lorre, Vincent Price and Sydney Greenstreet, all playing larger-than-life villains conspiring to conquer the world.

But the situation is not helped by the strange quotations from reliable sources which, if one really pays attention to them, should give one pause. Consider two examples from the Farm Hall Transcripts, the transcripts of the conversations of the German atom-bomb scientists interred at Farm Hall, secretly recorded by the British and declassified by them only in 1992. The two examples, which I cited without extensive commentary in my previous book on Nazi secret weapons, Reich of the Black Sun, concern artificial rubies, and an unknown "photochemical process" of isotope enrichment. I will cite both sets of quotations and my remarks concerning them from that book directly.

---

[1] Tom Bearden (Lt. Col., U.S. Army, Ret), Fer De Lance: Briefing on Soviet Scalar Electromagnetic Weapons(Santa Barbara, California: Cheniere Press, 2002), p. 84.

1. The "Artificial Rubies" Passage from The Farm Hall Transcipts (Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 142-132)

On pages 142 and 143 of Reich of the Black Sun I observed that one of the interred Farm Hall scientists made a rather astonishing statement, a statement made astonishing not only for its "matter-of-fact" passing nature and brevity, but also because it called forth almost no comment from the editor of the transcripts:

> Then, on July 21, 1945, the handsome and cynical Horst Korsching, discussing the prospects for making a living with Diebner and Bagge, offers a curious observation:
>
> "BAGGE: For the sake of the money, I should like to work on the uranium engine; on the other hand, I should like to work on cosmic rays. I feel like Diebner about this.
>
> "KORSCHING: Would you both like to construct an uranium engine?
>
> "DIEBNER: This is the chance to earn a living.
>
> "KORSCHING: Every layman can see that these ideas are exceedingly important. Hence there won't be any money in it. You only make money on ideas which have escaped the general public. If you invent something like artificial rubies for the watch making industry, you will make more money than with the uranium engine."[2]

I then commented as follows:

> Artificial rubies? Of course, such things were used in watchmaking before the invention of quartz movement. But in 1945, the idea was fantastic. Of course, by the time of the declassification of these transcripts, the world's first laser, which did in fact use an artificial ruby as the main component of the lasing optical cavity, was history, having been invented in 1961. But in July 1945 the idea was more than a little ahead of its time. Is this another possible, though slight, indication that something else was going on inside Nazi Germany? Later in the conversation, Korsching expresses his desire to return

---

[2] Bernstein, Hitler's Uranium Club, p. 99, emphasis added.

> Hechingen to collect his telescope, lenses and prisms, an indication that he was perhaps involved in optical as well as nuclear research.[3]

The mention there of the connection between lasers and artificial rubies was not accidental, for on page 104 of Reich of the Black Sun, I cited the following quotation from former British intelligence officer-cum-journalist Tom Agoston, who first broke the story of the Kammlerstab, the SS's secret weapons think tank, to the West in the 1980s:

> Its purpose was to pave the way for building nuclear-powered aircraft, working on the application of nuclear energy for propelling missiles and aircraft; laser beams, then still referred to as "death rays": a variety of homing rockets, and to seek other potential areas for high-technology breakthrough. In modern high-tech jargon, the operation would probably be referred to as an "SS research think tank." Some work on second-generation secret weapons, including the application of nuclear propulsion for aircraft and missiles, was already well advanced.[4]

What is interesting is the juxtaposition of these two quotations, for while Agoston offers no evidence for his assertion that the SS was working on the development of lasers during the war, he nonetheless clearly states that this was an avenue of research being pursued.

Thus, the subsequent appearance of the Farm Hall Transcripts in the early 1990s oddly corroborates Agoston's assertions with Korsching's very curious reference to artificial rubies, a then costly and time-consuming process that surely would have merited more than merely making rubies for watches. Since the transcripts had not yet been declassified by the British government when Agoston wrote his book, we can only assume that Agoston did not know the contents of the still secret Transcripts and was basing his assertions on his confidential talks with Dr. Wilhelm Voss, who first disclosed the story of Kammler's black projects secret weapons think tank.

---

[3] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 142-143.

[4] Agoston, Blunder! How the U.S. Gave Away Nazi Supersecrets to Russia (New York: Dodd, Mead and Company, 1985), p. 65, emphasis added.

This juxtaposition argues very strongly, though only circumstantially, that the SS was indeed involved in researching lasers. While we do not yet know how far they pressed this research, nor to what degree of success, it is in any case not of immediate concern, since the theoretical possibility of lasers already existed within quantum mechanics at that time.

But what is of real interest is the type of physics that Agoston's and Korsching's remarks - made decades apart and independently of each other – indicate about the nature of the physics concepts the Germans were investigating, in this case, aspects of quantum mechanics and coherence. As was seen in Reich of the Black Sun, Nazi ideology itself, with its rejection of "Jewish" relativistic physics, would have naturally turned to the home-grown, "purely Aryan" and equally successful, quantum mechanical theory as a conceptual basis from which to pursue its advanced projects. We shall return to this all-important though brief clue, coherence, in a moment. For now, let us turn our attention to a second odd quotation, another weird glimpse into the possible areas of physics the SS was investigating.

2. The Farm Hall Transcript's Indications of a German Photochemical Process of Isotope Separation and Enrichment

As recounted in Reich of the Black Sun, once the interred German scientists had learned of the Allied a-bombing of Hiroshima, they then begin to debate how the Allies could have "done it so soon," a discussion that naturally quickly turns to the question of separating and enriching enough uranium 235 isotope. In one short exchange between Karl Wirtz and Otto Hahn, the discoverer of nuclear fission, the deduction is quickly made by Hahn that the Allies could only have achieved the production of a uranium a-bomb with such processes, a sentiment quickly echoed by Wirtz with his comment "They have it too,"[5] a short admission pregnant with implications that methods of isotope separation were clearly known and available to the Germans during the war.

---

[5] Bernstein, Hitler's Uranium Club, p. 144, cited in Reich of the Black Sun, p. 144.

But as I noted in Reich of the Black Sun, "a short, but astonishing, exchange between Hahn, Weizsäcker, Harteck, Wirtz, and Diebner" then follows:

> HAHN: I think it's absolutely impossible to produce one ton of uranium 235 by separating isotopes.
>
> WEIZSÄCKER: What do you do with these centrifuges?
>
> HARTECK: You can never get pure "235" with the centrifuge. But I don't believe that it can be done with the centrifuge.
>
> WIRTZ: No certainly not.
>
> HAHN: Yes, but they could do it with mass spectrographs. Ewald has some patent.
>
> DIEBNER: There is also a photochemical process.[6]

As Reich of the Black Sun goes on to indicate, this little exchange is a sign that perhaps the scientists are playing out a farce on their British captors, and that the farce may even be continuing by the British themselves in their declassification of the transcripts.

What do I mean by this? What I mean is that the British declassification is significant for when it occurs, and I only explored a few of the possible reasons in the previous book:

> Note that the transcripts are declassified by the British after the German reunification in 1989, an oblique admission, perhaps, that there was no more purpose in maintaining whatever secrets they still held, since there would now be other sources available to tell the story that had been long suppressed: that the Nazis had been either perilously close to, or had actually acquired the atom bomb before the Allies.[7]

To see what the "farce" being played out by the interred German scientists and the British government's declassification may be, one needs to examine a significant question that I only hinted at in various places in Reich of the Black Sun: What is this "photochemical process"?

---

[6] Bernstein, Hitler's Uranium Club, p, 118, emphasis added, cited in Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 144-145.

[7] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, p. 145.

A second reference to this mysterious unknown photochemical process occurs a little later in the Transcripts, during a brief but very suggestive interchange between Hartek and Wirtz:

> HARTEK: They have managed it with mass spectrographs on a large scale or else they have been successful with a photochemical process.
>
> WIRTZ: Well I would say photochemistry or diffusion, ordinary diffusion. They irradiate it with a particular wavelength (all talking together).[8]

I then commented as follows:

> At this juncture, Bernstein[9] again observes that "it is not clear" what this photochemical process is.[10] In any case, whatever the process was, Wirtz's mention of it and of irradiation with a particular "wavelength" appears to have provoked a burst of conversation from the other scientists. Were they intentionally trying to drown him out and mask his statements so as not to be recorded? We will never know.[11]

But perhaps we really do know what this mysterious though unknown photochemical process of isotope enrichment is.

A clue is again afforded by the timing of the declassification of the Farm Hall Transcripts: after German reunification. But their declassification also occurs after another significant event, the discovery and publication of the first cold fusion experiments by Pons and Fleischmann. Most do not associate cold fusion with isotope separation and enrichment, but the fact of the matter is, by very easily engineered processes that might best be called precisely "electrolytic" or "photochemical", nuclear transmutation of elements has been observed in laboratories all over the world since then, and using materials relatively easily obtained, and able to be engineered in any competent high school or in a garage laboratory bench. The literature covering these cold fusion transmutations is easily available on any internet search.[12]

---

[8] Bernstein, Hitler's Uranium Club, p. 148, cited in Reich of the Black Sun, p. 148.

[9] Jeremy Bernstein, the editor and annotator of the transcripts.

[10] Referring to Bernstein's comment on p. 120, n. 38, of Hitler's Uranium Club.

[11] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, p. 148.

If this or something similar is indeed what the Germans meant by a "photochemical process," then the contents of the Farm Hall Transcripts are nothing less than revolutionary, for it means that we have a second indicator, in a very different way, that the Germans were researching the phenomenon of quantum coherence of the medium in a variety of systematically pursued ways.[13] On this view the timing of the release of the transcripts is significant in a dual way, as occurring (1) after German reunification and (2) after the first public release of cold fusion experimental data.

The implications of the transcripts' two allusions to such a photochemical process by interred German scientists in 1945 is staggering, for if they had actually discovered and conducted such experiments – and there was certainly ideological impetus from the Nazi government in its pursuit of "energy independence" to do so – and if they had advanced from an initial "Pons and Fleischman" apparatus to a more sophisticated version that accomplished the transmutation of elements at room temperature, as in the recent Japanese experiments, then we have a second, though still tenuous, indicator that the SS was pursuing some very extraordinarily advanced physics conceptions indeed. And there would have been little if anything required in such experiments that did not exist in some form available to the Germans during the war.

---

[12] Q.v. the crucial paper on permeation methods for transmutation by Yasuhiro Iwamura, Mitsuru Sakano, Takehiko Itoh, "Elemental Analysis of Pd Complexes: Effects of D_2 Gas Permeation," Japan Journal of Applied Physics, Vol. 41 (2002) pp. 4642-4650, Part I, No 7A, July 2002. As for the SS and fusion research, German researcher Karl-Heinz Zunneck states that fusion energy was one area of the SS's investigations, though he does not indicate how far it had pressed this research (see Karl Heinz Zunneck, Geheimtechnologien, Wunderwaffe und die irdischen Facetten des UFO-Phänomens, Schleusingen, Germany: Amun Verlag, 2002), p. 151.)

[13] I realize that at this juncture the term "quantum coherence" seems to have little to do with cold fusion, but will expand the term to a more accurate description later. Suffice it to say that the only viable explanations for the anomalous excess energy present in cold fusion experiments is that some aspect of the vacuum energy has been cohered and entered the experiments via mechanisms not yet fully understood.

Small wonder then, that when Wirtz begins to talk of irradiation at particular wavelengths that the other scientists appear to begin talking all at once, as if to drown out his comments from the British recorders, an effort that, if one takes Bernstein's editorial mystification as any indicator, was entirely successful.[14]

What do we have, then, at this juncture?

First, we have allusions, from the same source, to two different phenomena – lasers and a "photochemical process" of nuclear transmutation - involving quantum coherence at some level. Second, in the case of the reference to artificial rubies and their implied use in lasers, we have further corroboration from an independent source of research, Agoston, whose corroboration of the "laser" side of the story comes prior to the release of the Transcripts themselves and Korsching's passing remark about artificial rubies. Finally, the declassification and release of the Farm Hall Transcripts themselves may be significant with respect to timing in a dual sense, as occurring after German reunification, and after the first public release of cold fusion laboratory data by Pons and Fleischmann.

3. Back to Roswell and the Majestic 12 Documents: Another Odd Corroboration of Possible Nazi Knowledge of Cold Fusion

This last point, and the reference to cold fusion, is highly significant for yet another reason. In Reich of the Black Sun I also attempted to subject some of the Cooper-Cantwheel Majestic-12 documents to an analysis of their technical descriptions of the crashed and allegedly "extraterrestrial" vehicle(s), with a view to determine if the technical data warranted a conclusion that the crashed and recovered vehicle(s) was necessary piloted by "ET" and if the technical data as summarized in the documents conclusively demonstrated a non-terrestrial origin for the craft.[15]

---

[14] Bernstein would certainly know of cold fusion, so his mystification may reflect rather his own adherence to that school of "public consumption physics" that rejects a priori any validity to cold fusion claims, since they represent an "open systems" paradigm and approach to COP > 1 systems.

[15] Q.v., Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 287-309.

The conclusion that I reached was, that while exotic, the described technologies were not exotic enough to warrant such a conclusion.

One of the objects recovered and described in those documents was a circular plastic tube, about one inch in diameter, through the center of which ran a copper tube. A liquid solution appeared to exist inside the tube, which the document implies is “water.” At this juncture, as I noted in Reich of the Black Sun, the Nazi “Project Paperclip” rocket scientists were brought in to examine the craft and make a pronouncement. Two of the scientists who allegedly examined the craft were Von Braun and Von Karman, “who were unable to identify” the craft as a Nazi V-Weapon. However, they were able to hypothesize that its propulsion was via “a very radical form of propulsion via a charge differential, a fact that suggests that while they may not have been able to identify it, they at least may have had their strong suspicions.”[16]

Additionally, the almost

> Single-mindedly “terrestrial” nature of the technology described should be clearly obvious: a simple plastic tube, approximately an inch in diameter, filled with a substance that is apparently water, in the center of which is a rod wrapped with a coil of “what appears to be…copper material.” Moreover, apparently enough examination or analysis and speculation had been done for the investigators to conclude that the doughnut reactor was somehow a “heavy water” reactor, and that the German scientists are already thinking in terms of a fusion rather than a fission reactor. This is perhaps significant, for the equipment described, in the context of fusion, suggests the same apparatus set up, in some respects, as the process later known as cold fusion.[17]

Why would the scientists Von Braun and Von Karman have even been thinking in such terms in 1947? Clearly, one reason is that if the Majestic-12 documents are indeed genuine, and therefore describing real events, then any hot fusion reaction would simply have disintegrated any such “plastic doughnut” in a matter of nanoseconds. Consequently, this means that the Nazi rocket scientists are thinking in such unconventional terms that it compels the possibility that they might have seen or heard of such technology before. This is another indicator, from yet a totally different quarter that a very different habit of "physics thinking and conceptualization" may have been very common currency within the bowels of the Third Reich's secret weapons projects. It may further indicate yet again that much more was being done at Peenemünde during the war than research into mere rockets.

---

[16] Ibid., p. 306.

[17] Ibid., pp. 306-307.

We now have an extremely odd assortment of statements indeed. One group of German scientists are talking about "photochemical processes" of isotope separation and enrichment, which sounds an awful lot like cold fusion, while yet another group of German scientists from a wholly different weapons project is talking about more or less the same thing, and yet a third scientist from the first group is found making one short but highly provocative statement about artificial rubies.

Taken together these are strong indicators that within the "reach" of SS Obergruppenführer Hans Kammler's black projects empire the idea of quantum coherence was apparently a central research preoccupation, and that a variety of avenues were being pursued to make the "coherence" of the zero point energy – and weapons based upon it - a practical possibility.

But there is yet a final quotation that we must examine with regard to whatever exotic and unifying conceptual foundations the Nazi physicists and engineers may have been seeking.

4. A British Intelligence Agent's Statement on the Monstrous Areas of Physics being Developed by the Kammlerstab

As recounted in Reich of the Black Sun, a statement was made to German atom bomb project researchers Edgar Meyer and Thomas Mehner by an anonymous British intelligence source, an individual who had been a part of the British and American intelligence teams sent in to vacuum Kammler's Black Reich-within-the-Reich of every patent and secret weapons project they could find. The man referred to a "fourth team" within SS Obergruppenführer Hans Kammler's secret weapons "think tank," The fact that he chose to remain anonymous speaks for itself; clearly, there is something extraordinary and much more dangerous than nuclear or thermonuclear weapons in the SS' bag of "alchemical physics:"

> Yes, and then there was also the fourth team, about which we heard rumors during the last phase of the war. This was certainly so shadowy and fantastic, that one could only construe it as a ploy. But after the war it became evident that the world had avoided a colossal catastrophe by a hair's breath…. This fourth team worked in a field that was monstrous on a daily basis. And when I say this, I meant thereby that they experimented with things that a well-informed public would to this very day think them to be unthinkable and unbelievable, and thus imaginary. I mean to imply that these specialists worked in conceptions that totally abandoned conventional physical laws.[18]

While this quotation clearly pointed in the direction of some of the more exotic weapons projects that were subsequently outlined in Reich of the Black Sun, the fundamental question it poses nonetheless remains: just exactly what type of strange physics were the Germans actually up to with their “implosion engines”, “bladeless turbines,” radar absorbent materials research, and even the Bell itself?

Were all these projects merely indicative of some mad, insane hodge-podge of a desperate Reich trying to save an increasingly disastrous military situation by snatching at any means to achieve it whatsoever? Clearly such an explanation would explain much of the case, but not everything, and particularly not the quotations being examined in more detail here. So is there an underlying conceptual foundation for all these things, a conceptual foundation that would call forth such a sobering evaluation from a British intelligence agent implying monstrous areas of physics and the destruction of the world in a context that clearly implies he is not referring to mere atom or hydrogen bombs?

To answer this important question, one must examine the statements of Lt. Col. Tom Bearden (US Army, Ret.)[19] and his claims of what exactly constitutes “scalar” physics, and his account of its history. In doing so, we shall discover some significant indicators that he has missed, or perhaps that he has intentionally left unstated, indicators that imply that the story of weaponized scalar physics begins earlier than post-war Soviet Russia.

---

[18] Mayer and Mehner, Das Geheimnis der deutschen Atombombe, p. 89., emphasis added. Cited in The Reich of the Black Sun, p. 96. Again, Karl-Heinz Zunneck also corroborates the German interest in development of a new physics. (See Karl-Heinz Zunneck, Geheimtechnologien, Wunderwaffe, und die irdischen Facetten des UFO-Phänomens,,p. 59).

[19] In my previous books I mistakenly indicated that Lt. Col. Bearden was retired for the U.S. Air Force. He is, instead, retired from the U.S. Army.

B. Bearden's Reconstruction of the History of Scalar Physics

Lt. Col. Tom Bearden has been a consistent proponent of the possibility of accessing the so-called "Zero Point Energy" or ZPE by means of what he calls "scalar physics" for almost two decades.[20] More importantly, one consistent aim of his works has been to point out the extreme power and danger of such physics when it is weaponized. Indeed, much of his writing was initiated by the concern to alert the West and America to the dangers of an on-going Soviet quest to perfect scalar weapons. I recounted much of the history of the Soviet development of such weapons in my book on the Weapon Hypothesis of the Great Pyramid, The Giza Death Star Deployed.[21] That history is reprised, and expanded, here.

To understand why the Soviet Union would have developed such awesome weaponry – and their potential power will be discussed below – one must go back to the end of World War Two, the beginning of the nuclear age, and the Cold War. One must comprehend the geopolitical and military situation of that time not only from the Russian point of view but from Stalin's point of view. Fully one half of the fifty million military and civilian casualties of World War Two were suffered by the Russians.[22]

---

[20] More recently, Col. Bearden has also used the term "energetics" – coined by the Soviets themselves – and "quantum potential weapons" to refer to this type of physics. Q.v. his last two comprehensive books on the subject, Fer De Lance: Briefing on Soviet Scalar Electromagnetic Weapons(Santa Barbada, California: Cheniere Press, 2002), and the highly technical tome Energy from the Vacuum: Concepts and Principles(Santa Barbada, California: Cheniere Press, 2002). The latter work is a superb introduction, by a credentialed scientist of great intellectual caliber, to the physics of cohering the Zero Point Energy.

[21] Q.v. Joseph P. Farrell, The Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 104 – 112.

[22] More recently, even this figure must be called into question, because the Russian government, in the wake of the collapse of the Soviet Communist state,

World War Two would not have been won, and most certainly have been lost, without them. For the German Wehrmacht, the sheer scale of operations on the Russian front dwarfed all others; all other fronts, the Italian and French theaters, were for the Nazi military colossus a mere sideshow. The barbarity of that campaign and the enormous loss of life it caused were the result, not of a conflict between good and evil, but of two barbarous, genocidal and paranoid regimes intent on their own survival and the utter annihilation of the other. After a three-month campaign in 1941, the Wehrmacht came within a hair's breath of doing just that, and the Red Army, after clawing its way back with rivers of its own blood, over the next three and a half years, finally succeeded.

Consequently, by the end of the war, Soviet Russia was in tatters. Not only had she lost approximately sixteen percent of her pre-war population, but the cities of European Russia were piles of rubble; her workforce, industry, and infrastructure were severely dislocated and strained. Her manpower reserves were exhausted, her economy was a shambles, and her people understandably war weary. To make this dismal military picture even more bleak, America had successfully developed the atomic bomb and deployed it in war.

To the Western Allies, therefore, the picture looked as if the Red Army – superbly equipped and competently led – was poised to roll over Western Europe. But to Stalin and his marshals the situation was bleak. He needed to demobilize, but in effect, could not, since the Red Army was his one credible bargaining chip. Only its sheer size, its quality of arms and its leadership, offset the American atomic monopoly. Therefore, much to the chagrin of Soviet economic planners, they had to do the impossible. They had to maintain their devastated economy on a war footing, while simultaneously rebuilding the infrastructure of European Russia, and they had to acquire and deploy atomic bombs in sufficient has released classified documents that indicate that Russian casualties, as a direct consequence of military operations, may have been nearly double the 25,000,000 that is usually mentioned. This tends to corroborate in a general way the view argued in my previous book Reich of the Black Sun that the Germans may have used some type of weapon of mass destruction during their military operations on the Eastern Front.

---

numbers to be a credible power vis-à-vis the United States and its allies.

By 1949 Russian spies and scientists had indeed achieved the impossible. They had delivered the a-bomb into Stalin's hands. And a few months after the first American H-bomb, the Soviet Union would acquire its own thermonuclear capability. There was just one problem. The Soviet Union could never hope to out produce America in thermonuclear weapons.

It is in this total context that Bearden's reconstruction of the Soviet secret project to acquire scalar weapons should be seen. As he puts it:

> As one aftermath of the U.S. development and use of the atomic bomb, Stalin – ever the total dictator – lashed his Soviet Academy of Sciences furiously. Undoubtedly he pointed out that the destiny of communism had been frustrated by this great technical breakthrough made by the Americans (with help from the British and from political European refugees).

Indeed, as Reich of the Black Sun argued, it is extremely doubtful that the American Manhattan Project would have been successful during the course of the war at all if it were not for the surrender of enriched uranium 235 for its uranium bomb, and infrared bomb fuses for its plutonium bomb, by Nazi Germany. Stalin at this point "informed his scientists in no uncertain terms that the next such breakthrough had better be Soviet."[23] Indeed, Stalin's exact words could have left no doubt: "The destiny of communism has been frustrated by the U.S. development of the atomic bomb. That is not the last great technical breakthrough. The next one will be Soviet! You will provide me with that great new technical breakthrough at all speed, or I will have your heads. Do I make myself clear, comrades?"[24] Stalin thus > planned to do exactly what the U.S. had done: Find a new area for a great technical breakthrough and superweapon, put the entire resources > of the nation behind it, develop it in great secrecy, and thrust it upon the U.S. and its allies at the eleventh hour….[25]

---

[23] Bearden, "Historical Background of Scalar EM Weapons," Analysis of Scalar/Electromagnetic Technology (Tesla Book Company), p. 12.

[24] Bearden, Fer de Lance: Briefing on Soviet Scalar Electromagnetic Weapons(Cheniere, 2002), p. 6. Bearden offers no source for the quotation.

As a result of Stalin's threats, "the entire Soviet scientific community was galvanized into a most intensive review of all physics."[26] This was the most massive scientific scavenger hunt in history, a Manhattan Project-sized effort, all designed simply to scour through western scientific journals for a clue that might suggest an area for such a technical breakthrough for a superweapon.

> Large review institutions were quickly set up, staffed with the best Soviet scientists and support translators and teams. One such search institute involved some 2,000 PhDs along with their support staffs. Soviet ships brought in shiploads of copies of all the scientific journals of the West – from the beginning - , and they were reviewed paper-by-paper, page-by-page. Anything novel and implying new scientific possibilities, or anything that had not been adequately followed up, was laid aside in a 'select' pile for further review and decision by the best Soviet theoreticians available.[27]

Soviet science was scouring the forgotten or discarded and in some cases even the exotic and esoteric avenues of Western science. Soviet physics in particular was, due to Russia's isolation and communist ideology, in almost the same situation as physics had been in the Nazi Reich.

Bearden's argument now takes a decidedly speculative turn, but one that is very convincing. Arguing that the Soviet have scalar weapons because certain events and physical anomalies in post-war history bear the clear signature of scalar physics, he then poses the question of how and why the Soviets were led to develop such weapons. The answer is the scenario already outlined. Bearden then inquires what specifically they might have found as the "scientific scavenger teams" sifted through scientific journals. Was there anything in the scientific, peer-reviewed literature that would serve as the theoretical foundations for the development of a "superweapon" more powerful than Russia's or America's own hydrogen bombs?

---

[25] Bearden, "Historical Background of Scalar EM Weapons," Analysis of Scalar/Electromagnetic Technology (Tesla Book Company), p. 12.

[26] Bearden, Fer De Lance: Briefing on Soviet Scalar Electromagnetic Weapons(Santa Barbada, California: Cheniere Press, 2002), p. 7.

[27] Ibid.

His answer is astonishing. The Russian physicists discovered not only a basis for the unification of physical fields that was pre-relativistic, but they found one that could be reconciled with quantum mechanics that would allow them to tap into, or "cohere," the limitless "Zero Point Energy" or "quantum potential."[28] It was thus practical and weaponizable. Moreover, as will be seen below, it was a very flexible weapons platform, capable of a variety of uses and effects, and capable of use in varying degrees of destructive power, up to and including gigantic regional devastation and, as we shall see, even capable of planet-busting potential.

But what exactly is scalar, or "quantum potential", physics? To answer that question, one must look at Bearden's examination of classical electromagnetic theory and the implicit assumptions that have been the basis of "public consumption" physics since Maxwell in the nineteenth century. His examination is another component of the history of scalar physics.

1. Bearden on the State of Electromagnetic, or Electrodynamic, Theory, and the Elements of Scalar, or Quantum Potential, Physics

a. Classical Electromagnetic Theory as a Perpetual Motion Machine

According to Bearden, contemporary theoretical and experimental physics has been on the wrong track since at least the nineteenth century since Heaviside editted the brilliant work of James Clerk Maxwell in unifying the magnetic and electric fields. In fact, physics has been so wrong that electromagnetic theory itself is the single best example of a fundamental violation of one of the foundational laws of physics: the conservation of energy. This is because, unbelievably, standard electromagnetic theory, as it is taught to this day in universities in the West, has no solid explanation for the origin of electric charge in two of the most fundamental particles in nuclear physics and quantum mechanics: the proton, and the electron:

---

[28] Strictly speaking, "zero point energy" and "quantum potential" are not the same thing, even though the terms tend to be used indiscriminately even by physicists to indicate the energy of the medium or vacuum.

> Let us put it bluntly: Every charge in the universe already freely and continuously pours out (electromagnetic) energy in (three dimensional space) in all directions, without any observable energy input. That is the well-concealed source charge problem, known but ignored by the leaders of the scientific community for a century. All (electromagnetic) fields and potentials and their energy come from those source charges, according to electrodynamics itself. Either we must give up the conservation of energy law entirely, or else we must accept the fact that unobservable virtual (electromagnetic) mass and energy are continuously absorbed from the vacuum by the source charge, transduced into real observable (electromagnetic) energy, and then re-radiated in (three dimensional space) in all directions as observable (electromagnetic) energy, creating the associated fields and potentials reaching out across the universe.[29]

The result of this absurd situation is that the engineering models and devices based on this standard electrodynamics continue to assume “that the charge freely creates real (electromagnetic) energy out of nothing at all, in total violation of the conservation of energy law.” Thus, physics faculties, government grant and funding agencies, and corporate research laboratories “unwittingly advocate perpetual motion machines on a scale unparalleled in history. They continue to support an electrical engineering model and a classical electrodynamics model which do not even model the active vacuum and its exchange with every charge, much less a broken symmetry in that exchange.”[30]

In case this is not clear enough, Bearden, who has a bachelor of science degree in mathematics, a master of science degree in engineering, and a PhD in science, puts the miserable state of “public consumption physics” and its electrodynamics in no uncertain terms:

---

[29] Bearden, Energy from the Vacuum: Concepts and Principles(Cheniere, 2002), p. xx, italicized emphasis mine, bold and italicized emphasis Bearden’s.

[30] Bearden, Fer De Lance, pp. 6-7, n. 5.

> There is not now, and there never has been, a single electrical engineering department, electrical engineering professor, or electrical engineering textbook that teaches what powers an electrical circuit. Yet the basis for it has clearly been in particle physics since 1957, as certified by the award of the Nobel Prize to Lee and Yang. What powers every electrical circuit and system is the broken symmetry of the primary power system's source charges and source dipole (i.e., the broken symmetry of the opposite charges on the ends of the dipole) in its fierce energy exchange with the seething vacuum, once that dipole has been made. … Further, any dipole will freely extract (electromagnetic) energy from the vacuum, convert it into real, usable, observable (electromagnetic) energy, and pour out real, usable (electromagnetic) energy continuously and indefinitely, so long as the dipole remains intact.[31]

Or to put it more simply, all electromagnetic devices and circuits "are already powered – though in an inappropriate fashion – by (electromagnetic) energy freely extracted from the vacuum."[32] All electrical circuits, in other words, are already "zero point energy" or "quantum potential" devices.[33] They are just massively inefficient ones for reasons that will be seen shortly.

Since classical electrodynamics viewed charge in a most unscientific manner as a "perpetual motion machine" getting energy from literally nowhere, the next error inevitably followed: electrical circuits and electromagnetic systems were closed systems.

But how, then, would classical electrodynamics explain the Coler coil, the curious circuit reproduced in Reich of the Black Sun?[34]

---

[31] Bearden, Energy from the Vacuum, p. xxii, emphasis added.

[32] Ibid., p. 584. Bearden calls this statement "the central message" of his long and quite technical tome.

[33] Q.v. Energy from the Vacuum., pp. 22-23, for some disturbing questions and implications of this insight.

[34] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 226-228.

B
A
C
D
G
N
S
I (Right)
IV (Right)
VI (Left)
(Left) III
II (Right)
(Right) V
OUTER (Right).
INNER (Left).

The Coler Coil

As mentioned there, this odd hexagonal arrangement of coils and magnets had absolutely no source of power and yet it managed to produce power.

Clearly, this circuit, understood in the wider context of the other issues examined in this chapter, would have spurred the German scientists to seek an explanation within the context of the ideologically approved physics of the Nazi regime, i.e., in quantum mechanics and its prediction of a vacuum flux, or “zero point energy.” In understanding such a circuit, in understanding any circuit, one will thus find it necessary – if one is to avoid the “perpetual motion machine” of standard electrodynamics – “to think in terms of the supersystem, defined as having three components, which are (i) the physical power system itself, (ii) the active local vacuum, and (iii) the active local curvatures of spacetime."[35] Any electrical circuit is thus not a closed system but an open system.[36]

We now have the first three fundamental components of scalar physics and technologies:

(1) the medium, aether substrate, or "active local vacuum",
(2) the local curved dynamic of space,[37] and
(3) an understanding of circuits as open systems, rather than closed perpetual motion machines.

Moreover, as the Coler Coil seems to imply, some circuits are more efficient at transducing this "active vacuum" energy than others, and one may reasonably assume, therefore, that this efficiency is a function of its circuit parameters, i.e., of its geometry and "electrical topology," of its shape.

b. What the Soviets (and Nazis) Found in their Scavenger Hunt: E.T. Whittaker's Decomposition of Scalar Potentials into Bi-Directional Longitudinal Waves

So, with these observations in mind, it is time to ask the important question: What exactly did the Soviets find during their scavenger hunt? And more to the point, what might the Germans have concluded and carefully classified from their examination of the Coler Coil? To answer this, it is necessary to take up Bearden's reconstruction of the history of scalar weapons where we left it off.

---

[35] Bearden, Energy from the Vacuum, p. xix. Note that Bearden is implying something quite different from Special or General Relativity: a local curvature or dynamic of space that is engineerable.

[36] For a rigorous discussion of the standard versus "scalar" definitions of closed and open systems in thermodynamics, see Bearden, Energy from the Vacuum, p. 6, n. 9. See also Fer De Lance, pp. 110-111.

[37] Bearden notes that "the fact that general relativity falsified much of the present foundations of classical thermodynamics seems to have been either ignored or missed by most of the scientific community, although we still (are able to) quote leading Russian scientists who have noticed it and are aware of it." (Energy from the Vacuum, p. 7.)

Bearden maintains that in scouring the West’s scientific journals the Soviets would have come across three relatively obscure, highly mathematical, entirely pre-relativistic, and immensely unusual papers. Two of them were by the well-known mathematician and theoretical physicist E.T. Whittaker, and one was by a physicist named Barus. Of the three, the Whittaker papers are breathtaking in their implications, not the least of which because they can be made to work within the context of the later-developed quantum theory.

The first paper, a lengthy and highly mathematical tome, is a masterpiece whose full implications – in spite of its benign and somewhat intimidating title “On the partial differential equations of mathematical physics” – are spelled out by Whittaker in the conclusion of the paper(I have italicized the significant portions that bear directly on Bearden’s analysis which follows):

> It is clear from the foregoing that the field of force due to a gravitating body can be analyzed, by a “spectrum analysis” as it were, into an infinite number of constituent fields; and although the whole field of force does not vary with time, yet each of the constituent fields is of an undulatory character, consisting of a simple wave-disturbance propagated with uniform velocity*….* In each of these constituent fields the potential will be constant along each wave-front, and consequently the gravitational force in each constituent field will be perpendicular to the wave-front, i.e., the waves will be longitudinal.[38]

The significance of this short paragraph may be missed unless one remembers that E.T. Whittaker was also a physicist who believed ardently in the aether, i.e., in a medium or mechanism of electromagnetic energy propagation. Indeed, he is the same Whittaker who wrote a classic history of the concept of the aether. Note also that this paper was originally published in Germany, and therefore, the Germans could hardly have been unaware of its existence or of its importance as a non-relativistic physics as they sought to explain the curious anomalies of the Coler Coil or their late war radar experiments. Indeed, their experiments with radar, and even the Bell itself, are evidence that they were pursuing this "scalar physics" with a vengeance.

---

[38] E.T. Whittaker, “On the partial differential equations of mathematical physics,” Mathematische Annalen, Vol 57, 1903 (333-355), p. 355, italicized emphasis mine, bold and italicized emphasis Whittaker’s.

To understand what Bearden means by "scalar" waves in the medium or vacuum, we must now go further into the history of where public consumption physics went wrong. According to Bearden, it began to make its first massive wrong turn after Maxwell. Maxwell first formulated his equations in a mathematical language all but extinct today, a mathematical language called quaternion geometry. This mathematical language differs significantly from the standard "linear algebra," "tensor calculus" and "vector analysis" in which the standard electromagnetic theory is usually couched in textbooks and physics lectures. In short, the equations one learns in physics textbooks and physics courses today as Maxwell's equations are not Maxwell's original equations! They are edited equations. But to understand what effect this simple change of mathematical language – from quaternions to vector analysis – had on physics, we need to understand a few simple concepts.

First, there are two type of effects that electromagnetic fields can have on charged particles: (1) translation, and (2) stress. There are two types of translation, or movement. The first type is simple translation in a straight line, producing the electrical, or "E" field itself. The second type of movement is that of a spiral, mathematically symbolized as the "B" field. We will not be dealing with the "B" field immediately.

Now let us assume there are two vectors, E_1 and E_2, acting upon a particle as shown:

The result is a translation in the direction of vector E_3 as the two vectors are added together to get a result, which is called aptly enough, a "resultant" vector. Thus, in systems where a large number of translation vectors are involved, "the entire system can be replaced by a single vector," the resultant, which describes the actual translation that results from the original vectors.[39]

Now observe that if no translation occurs, the resultant is a "zero vector." However, one must always recall that one is dealing with geometry and not simply mathematics or numbers. One can therefore envision a multitude of multi-vector systems resulting in a zero translation vector, and yet which have profoundly different internal stresses and geometries:

---

[39] Bearden, "Maxwell's Original Quaternion Theory was a Unified Field Theory of Electromagnetics and Gravitation," Proceedings of the international Tesla Society, 6/24-6/68, p. 6/24.

If one were trained to think only in terms of the conventions of linear algebra to replace multi-vector systems with a resultant vector, then in each of the three cases or systems above, one will replace the entire system with a zero resultant vector. This means that the internal stresses of the systems and their rotational characteristics – each obviously quite different – are all replaced by a zero vector, and thus the three systems are erroneously reduced to physical equivalence by a mathematical convention!

Now we are in a position to see what a scalar is, and why Maxwell deliberately chose quaternion geometry to write his equations, for he had in mind when he did so precisely the types of physical stress situations that are simply represented by the vortices in the above diagram.

In standard linear algebra, each of the arrows in the above system would be mathematically represented like this:

v(vector) = ai + bj + ck.

Thus, if the total sum of all such vectors is no translation, then one will replace all such mathematical expressions with a zero vector. But as we have seen, each of these systems contains an internal rotation or stress, so something remains. The question is, how to represent it mathematically?

In quaternion geometry, a quaternion is simply a “scalar” plus a “vector,” and a “scalar” is simply a pure magnitude, a “number” that has no direction. It simply “is.” Thus, a quaternion (q) is a scalar(s) plus a vector (v):

$$q = s + v$$

Substituting our previous expression of a vector into this, we get

$$q = s + ai + bj + ck.$$

Thus, for the hexagonally shaped system above, one would have six different expressions resembling $q = s + ai + bj + ck$. Now imagine we multiply each of these vectors. According to the special rules in linear algebra for multiplying such things, we know that zero times zero is zero. So in linear algebra one would end up with nothing once again, a zero vector, since no translation has occurred. But in quaternion geometry the scalars, which are not zero, all multiply, and give – according to the rules of quaternion multiplication – the following result:

$$q \times q = s^2 + t^2 + u^2 + w^2 + x^2 + y^2 + 0_v,$$

where 0_v is the zero vector and the squared quantities are the multiplied scalars. Thus, in quaternion geometry the internal stress is preserved even though there is zero translation occurring. The scalars thus represent pure magnitudes of force “locked within” a structure possessing no “direction” or “translation.”

Now we are in a position to understand what scalar physics is: it is not standard vector or “linear” physics in any sense, but is the non-linear physics of internal stresses in the local medium.

We are likewise now in a position to understand the enormous implications of the end of Whittaker’s paper quoted above, implications that Bearden’s analysis makes quite clear:

> (The) interference of scalar potentials – each of which is actually a set of longitudinal (electromagnetic) waves, and not a scalar entity at all, but a multivectorial entity – produces (electromagnetic) fields and waves and their dynamics. Hence we hypothesize that the Whittaker > interference of the propagating reordered (electromagnetic) energy entities, continuously occurring at any point in space, generates the zero-point (electromagnetic) field energy fluctuations of the vacuum itself. Indeed, (a) paper by Evans…has already shown that just such "scalar interferometry" produces transverse (electromagnetic) fields and waves in the vacuum at a distance.[40]

In other words, one must imagine each of the scalar entities accompanying the vectors in the diagrams above as being composed of bi-directional longitudinal or "acoustic" waves in the medium. Thus, Whittaker "decomposes" the scalar entities into pairs of such pressure waves or "stresses" in the medium. Combining, or "interfering" such waves thus causes the standard electromagnetic fields and waves observed in standard physics. And most importantly, this can be done "at a distance."

But what does this mean?

Simply put, since every atom and every type of atom consists of particles with charge and/or mass, then every atom has its own peculiar "scalar signature" or "resonance" (recall the diagrams above and imagine the mathematical notations that would describe each in quaternion geometry). Thus, to produce an effect on any one of these systems, one simply has to "work backwards" as it were, and configure its scalar signature, decomposing each of the scalars into its own pair of bi-directional longitudinal pulses and waves.

One may thus envision the innumerable types of "zero sum vector systems" like the diagram above as also being a kind of template for action, or what Bearden calls a "causal system robot," or CSR, a template for producing a desired outcome in a system at a distance by means of configuring resonance to its "scalar signature":

> With sufficient theoretical development, one can "work backwards" to obtain a desired causal system…corresponding to some physical system…. One thereby creates a deterministic set of spacetime curvatures and impressed dynamics, which we call an "engine."...By > building in scalar interferometry functions, the CSR can be given "weapons" capabilities, etc.[41]

---

[40] Bearden, Energy from the Vacuum, p. 145, bold and italicized emphasis Bearden's, italicized emphasis mine.

That is, one reproduces the "scalar" topological signature of the system one wants to influence (or destroy), and loads the appropriate information into it:

> (By) assembling the desired (longitudinal) wave biwave subsets, the two scalar potentials and their resulting interference-produced carrier wave are internally structured as desired. This is the use of the so-called internal information content of the field. We speak of a deliberately structured potential, field, or wave as having been conditioned, dimensioned, or activated. If these terms are deemed inappropriate, just use the more generic term "internally structured."[42]

By the well-known mass-energy conversion mechanism, mass and inertia are thus "the direct result of – and are – trapped scalar resonance." But what is "trapped scalar resonance"? "The trapping mechanism is the spin of the particle,"[43] that is, the peculiar internal rotating stresses or vorticies in the medium of various systems, diagramed in our simple example above![44]

More than anything else, it is this ability to configure a template based upon the scalar signature and its long distance resonance effects in the medium that allows one to produce an action at a distance that best fills the bill for the "monstrous area of physics" that the British intelligence agent disclosed to German researchers Mayer and Mehner. It is, indeed, a very sophisticated form of magic, and sympathetic magic at that.

For the result of this new physics is that space itself has structure and content; the medium or "aether" may be viewed as nothing but a vast set of scalar potentials, which can be decomposed into longitudinal wave pairs.[45] And since a "scalar" represents an internal rotational stress – as per our diagrams above – scalar physics is also not only non-linear, but vorticular physics.

---

[41] Bearden, Fer De Lance, p. 27. For more on CSRs, see pp. 15-16.

[42] Ibid., p. 112, bold and italicized emphasis Bearden's, italicized emphasis mine.

[43] Ibid., p. 173.

[44] I am acutely aware of over-simplifying so much of Bearden's (and others') thinking here.

[45] Bearden, Energy from the Vacuum, p. 244.

2. Bearden's Claims for "Scalar" Physics and its Weaponization

a. The Dangers of Scalar Resonance: Planet-Busting "Doomsday" Implications

In addition to a superb defensive capability, there is a far more ominous offensive capability. Since, as has been seen, "scalar waves pass through the electron shells of an atom and interact with the nucleus" directly, this means that "they are continually absorbed and emitted by all nuclei in the universe." Consequently, "any large collection of nuclei – such as a star or a planet – is a strong absorber and radiator of scalar wave radiation."[46] One cannot ponder this too long nor overestimate its importance, for it means that any large mass such as a planet is a natural resonator of such waves, and this means any scalar weapon has a planetary-sized potential destructive power:

> (This) scalar coupling of the solar system provides a major check on unrestricted use of the large Soviet strategic scalar EM weapon systems. If significant scalar effects are produced on earth in a "pulse" mode, pulsed disturbance of the earth-sun and earth-moon system results. Here a danger exists that one or more natural resonances of the coupled systems may be excited. If the feedback stimulation of the Sun is not insignificant, for example, large sunspot activity may result sometime thereafter, say in a day or two. If too much or too sharp stimulation occurs on earth, the coupled resonant response from the sun could be disastrous. Indeed, a solar response could be stimulated so that the Sun would violently belch and destroy our biosphere, among other effects. The simplest doomsday stimulation would be for a violent expulsion of Solar (electromagnetic) energy and particles to occur. If this were due to resonance, the expulsion of Solar (electromagnetic) energy and particles would continue during some decay time. In that case, fiery destruction of the earth, strongly indicative of Biblical prophecy, would result….
>
> Accordingly, use of huge scalar (electromagnetic) weapons is a double-edged sword. Unless carefully employed, use of the weapons

---

[46] Bearden, Fer De Lance., p. 209.

> could cause a terrible backlash to the user as well as the victim, and even accidentally cause the destruction of the earth itself.[47]

One may even envision the use of a scalar weapon to acoustically oscillate an entire planet beyond its ability to damp the enormous cascade of quantum potential energy to the point that it would explode.[48] Bearden himself is quite alive to this disturbing potential for the weapons:

> (If) the discharge happens to tickle the Sun and Moon’s feedback loops the wrong way, you’ll get convulsions of the earth, mighty burps of the sun raining fire and brimstone on the earth, and a violent increase in the interior heat of the earth’s molten core, with a concomitant eruption of that core right up through the mantle….
>
> (Whenever) one activates a large scalar (electromagnetic) weapon, one immediately places the entire earth in deadly peril. The slightest misstep, and it’s curtains for everyone. And it’s curtains for the earth as well.[49]

It takes only a little imagination to see that this principle could be pressed even farther, to the inability of the planet to damp its violent, scalar-induced acoustic cavitation. The planet would consume itself in a violent explosion making a hydrogen bomb look like a firecracker.

But in any case, as Bearden makes abundantly clear, scalar weapons possess planet-busting potential.

This in turn corroborates yet another seemingly fantastic assertion that German researchers Mayer and Mehner made in their own investigations of the Nazi atom bomb. Commenting on the allegations of the anonymous British intelligence agent that tipped them off that the SS was working on far more than mere a-bombs and h-bombs, but in areas of physics that seemingly “totally abandoned conventional physical laws,"[50] they then go on to comment on this revelation as follows:

---

[47] Ibid., pp. 209-210, emphasis added. Readers of my Giza Death Star trilogy will recall that I indicated that one characteristic of a scalar weapon of “mass destruction” planet-busting potential was precisely that it be coupled to the base solar system that it is in. Q.v. my Giza Death Star, pp. 251-252. The reason for this requirement, once again, is that large masses are natural resonators to scalar waves.

[48] See my Giza Death StarDeployed, Giza Death Star Destroyed.

[49] Bearden, Fer De Lance, p. 408, emphasis is Bearden’s.

> This could only mean that there was a weapons system that possessed enormous range and degree of efficiency that lay beyond that of nuclear weapons technology. Did the Third Reich really prepare the Doomsday Weapon? And if so, where is this technology today? Was it discovered by the Allies or does it lurk secretly deep in the earth waiting for its rediscovery? Is such an Ultimate Weapon has already been in existence for more than fifty years, then it is a legitimate question to ask what today's military really, actually possesses.[51]

Such planet-busting potential over the vast stellar distances of the solar system would seem to be the best and most viable candidate to fulfill this role for it is the only physics that lay within the possibilities of the then existent technology that had the requisite destructive power and enormous range. Additionally, as will be argued subsequently here, there is every indication that this type of physics is exactly what is being presented in the technology of the Bell and various other experiments the Nazis were conducting.

b. The Scalar Template and Weapons Applications

It will be recalled that any physical object, from an atom of any particular element, to planets, has a "scalar signature" that is unique to it. Thus, the notion of a "template" containing information loaded into that scalar signature – or one might say "modulated by it" – means that scalar physics is an extremely flexible physics. Depending on the configuration of the signature and the amount of power used, one might induce beneficial biological or psychological effects at a distance, as well as being able to induce disease, disordered or traumatic psychological states, alter weather, or, indeed, draw energy out of a target and "freeze" it to death, or slowly load energy into it and cook it, or instantaneously blow up an entire region of an enemy country. The template is a kind of "scalar magician's" pentagram, with its incantations and formulas (equations) producing the desired action from a distance from the system one wishes to influence.[52]

---

[50] Mayer and Mehner, Das Geheimnis der deutschen Atombombe, p. 91, q.v. also my Reich of the Black Sun, p. 96.

[51] Ibid., see also Reich of the Black Sun, p. 96

3. The Implications of Bearden's Reconstruction of the History of Scalar Physics

Thus far, Bearden's speculative history of Soviet scalar weapons development is clear enough, and the reason for Stalin's motivations in pursuing them are clear and plausible. But as I noted in The Giza Death Star Deployed, there was also another source feeding the Soviet interest. This source raises certain questions about the actual Soviet capabilities, and where they actually came from. In his seminal work on the subject of scalar weapons, Fer De Lance, Bearden states that "Beside Russia, two other nations – Brazil and (a) 'little friendly nation' – also had developed quantum potential weapons."[53] A little further on, he adds the following very significant details:

> Brazil implemented an energetics weapons program after it employed the repatriated Dr. Hellmann, a German scientist taken to Russia after WW II along with the German radar team. Years after being taken to Russia, Hellmann was repatriated and made his way back to Germany. In a news interview Hellmann reported that he had worked directly on the development of Soviet secret EM weapons which could suddenly freeze large areas of the ocean surface. That of course is a scalar interferometry weapon, producing negative (converging) EM energy rather than a positive (diverging) EM energy in their distant interference. Also, when the U.S. made David Bohm persona non grata in the McCarthy witch-hunts, Bohm was later employed in lecturing and teaching in Brazil for some time. At the time our own scientists continued to pontificate as to whether they liked or could tolerate Bohm's quantum potential and his hidden variable interpretation of quantum mechanics. Meanwhile, the KGB weapon scientists and the Brazilian Hellmann project seized upon Bohm's hidden variable theory with alacrity as soon as he published his seminal paper. Those two weapon groups were already familiar with the [52] Bearden is quite clear and consistent throughout his writings that scalar physics can be used in any number of beneficial or malign ways, including the biological and psychological uses indicated above.

---

[53] Tom Bearden, Fer De Lance, pp. 40-41. Bearden sometimes refers to scalar weapons by the alternate term "quantum potential weapons."

> internal longitudinal EM wave structuring of potentials, fields, and waves (Whittaker 1903), and immediately saw the fantastic weapons implications of a deliberately structured quantum potential, containing a specific "engine" as desired. Most of our scientists still are unaware of it to this day, and are unaware of its formidable weapon implications when combined with Whittaker's 1904 superpotential paper, his 1903 potential decomposition, and quantum field theory.[54]

A number of very important points emerges from this series of revelations:

1. Hellmann was apparently one of the Nazi scientists, a part of a "radar team" brought to the Soviet Union in their own "Operation Paperclip" style use of former Nazi scientists to fuel their own secret weapons projects after the war;
2. Hellmann disclosed that he had been involved in development of Soviet electromagnetic weapons that could freeze large areas of the oceans' surface, a clear signature of scalar weaponry in its "endothermic energy extraction" mode of deployment; finally, and most importantly,
3. Bearden implies that not only were the Soviets aware of Whittaker's mathematical papers and their profound implications, but that the Nazis were as well.

This is a clear indicator that the Nazis may have been behind the initial development of the theory of scalar electromagnetic physics and the first prototypical scalar devices and weapons.

While Hellmann's claims about freezing vast areas of the oceans' surface sound wild and fantastic, what is even more important is the fact that similar research was undertaken by the Nazis during World War Two into the development of a "cold bomb," a "bomb" that would in effect drain the energy from a region.[55] This clearly implies a theoretical basis in scalar electromagnetics, but even more importantly, this implies that the

---

[54] Bearden, Fer De Lance, pp. 52-53, italicized emphasis Bearden's, boldface emphasis added.

[55] To the best of my knowledge, the first comprehensive survey of German research into the "cold" or "endothermic" bomb in English was the German Research Project of Henry Stevens.

theoretical and initial experimental research were already begun by Nazi Germany. Thus, the Soviets did not, after all, achieve their breakthrough. They borrowed it from the Nazis. Moreover, as was indicated in Reich of the Black Sun, the Nazis had expressed an interest in Dr. Nowak's "molecular bomb", a bomb of great explosive power brought about by supercooling matter and then suddenly heating it.[56] Scalar electromagnetics would be the best and most efficient way of accomplishing both the necessary cooling and sudden heating and explosive expansion of matter. Finally, as I reported in my second book on the "scalar" weapon hypothesis for the Great Pyramid, The Giza Death Star Destroyed, there was an event that occurred in early 1943 on the Eastern Front, during the German retreat from Stalingrad, where an entire German regiment was wiped out after the appearance of a strange "energy bubble" over the unit. The "bubble" exploded all the ammunition in the German regiment, wiping the unit out to a man. As I noted there, the circumstances of this strange event have all the hallmarks of a German secret weapons test of a decidedly scalar weapon, for needless to say, the "energy bubble" clearly has all the signatures of a scalar weapon.[57]

Such "bubbles" or glowing plasmas of ionized atmosphere are clear signatures of "scalar" weapons at low power usage, as Bearden clearly states:

> (There) is another incident of a gigantic test of a Soviet scalar EM howitzer deep within the Soviet Union.
>
> This is a CIA report, released under the Freedom of Information Act. One can be quite sure that the incident occurred as stated.
>
> The phenomenon was seen from two aircraft approaching Mehrabad Airport in Teheran, Iran on June 17, 1966 and reported by their pilots.
>
> On the far horizon deep within the Soviet Union, an intense spherical ball of light appeared, "sitting on the horizon" so to speak, the globe of light increased to enormous size, dimming as it did so, literally

---

[56] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun: Nazi Secret Weapons and the Cold War Allied Legend, p. 190.

[57] Joseph P. Farrell, The Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 109-111. The reason that the test had to have been German and not Soviet is due to the fact that the regiment in question had prepared a secret ambush for a Soviet unit. Its location therefore was known only to the German High Command.

> filling an arc of the distant sky as it expanded. The sighting was shielded from most ground observers' view at the airport itself due to an intervening mountain range that masked most of the phenomenon from the ground.
>
> The silent, expanding globe was observed for four or five minutes before it faded away.
>
> Again, this is positive evidence of the testing of a giant scalar EM interferometer, in the "midcourse ABM globe" type of action.
>
> However, note the date – mid 1966! The Soviets have therefore been testing such scalar weapons of enormous size and power for at least two decades. This implies that development must have started at least a decade earlier, or in the mid '50s.[58]

By "'midcourse ABM globe type of action'" Bearden is referring to the ability of scalar weapons to create a highly charged "bubble" that would scramble or knock out the electronics of any vehicle or missile entering it. This alone would have made scalar weapons an invaluable prize to the Soviets – or anyone else for that matter – for it would render one's opponent's missiles and nuclear warheads so much dead and useless mass, and accordingly, give all that much more weight to one's own nuclear deterrent.

But this is only a circumstantial argument that the Nazis were after scalar weapons. To make such a case stronger, one would have to find evidence that Nazi scientists and their conceptions were the feedstock to this Soviet scalar weapons project. Bearden confirms the worst by offering the following information:

> One of my close colleagues has validated that the German radar team had some severe instrumental anomalies while still in Germany. We think this is what they were:
>
> In WWII the Germans invented radar absorbing materials, to coat their submarine snorkels and prevent Allied antisubmarine warfare bombers from tracking the snorkels and destroying the subs. A wide variety of highly nonlinear, doped materials were investigated. In addition to single beam radar cross section, the Germans also examined the materials in multi-beam illumination circumstances.
>
> It appears that, in some multibeam experiments with some materials, conditions were just right so that the multi-illuminated absorbing material acted as a pumped phase conjugate mirror (PCM), and wave-to-wave interactions emerged. This meant that > the absorber material PCM would suddenly gather up all the energy in the pumping beams, use one of the other beams as a signal input beam, wrecking the experiment and creating havoc in surrounding equipment.

---

[58] Bearden, Fer De Lance, pp. 266-267.

>
> When the German radar team went to Russia, their knowledge of these anomalies went with them. In the desperate Russian scientific climate to find just such anomalies, this startling and anomalous phenomenon would have been exhaustingly examined and studied, once the German radar engineers got to Russia to their new laboratories.
>
> In short, it appears that the Russians quickly came up with what today is called "nonlinear phase conjugate optics," but first in the radar band rather than optics. So before 1950, it appears that the Russians already had working phase conjugating pumped phase conjugate mirrors for the radar bands and in other bands.[59]

Now observe carefully the implications of Bearden's remarks.

First, the phenomenon of phase conjugate mirrors was a direct result of late war German radar experiments on highly non-linear radar absorbent materials (RAM) that they had invented during the war for their U-boats.[60] This is as much as admitting, in a round about fashion, that it was not the Soviets that came up with it, but the Nazis.

Secondly, it is to be noted that Bearden clearly implies that the Nazi radar team stumbled across the phenomenon accidentally. We shall offer evidence – when we turn to a consideration of the speculative physics of the Bell itself – that the Nazis were not blindly stumbling about in quest of a breakthrough, but rather, pursuing all available means to acquire scalar technology and weapons. Their discovery was therefore not accidental. They were looking for it.

Thirdly, if it is the case that the Nazi radar team's observed anomalies were merely the result of happenstance, then there is an implicit contradiction between Bearden's remarks here, and my earlier remarks implying that both the Soviets and the Nazis were surely aware of E.T. Whittaker's 1903 paper describing the decomposition of the scalar potential into two opposing longitudinal waves.

---

[59] Bearden, Fer De Lance, pp. 68-69, italicized emphasis original, boldface emphasis added.

[60] Q.v., Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 184-187.

In other words, if Bearden's case that the Soviets developed scalar weapons is based upon

(1) Strange installations or devices having no conventional explanation;
(2) Strange effects being observed that can only be signatures of a scalar physics and its associated technologies;
(3) The crucial role of wave-mixing on non-linear materials such as in the late war German radar experiments;
(4) The equally crucial role of rotating non-translational vorticular systems in scalar physics theory;
(5) A speculative reconstruction of the history of scalar physics based upon probable reconstructions of forgotten physics papers such a Whittaker's, surely known to the Nazis as well as the Soviets; and,
(6) Research and Review Institutions or "think tanks" in the Soviet Union scouring western physics journals for an area for breakthrough and weaponization into a post-nuclear super-weapon, then by the same token, and as should be now equally apparent, all these things are equally true of the wartime situation of Nazi Germany, and clearly signatures of Kammler's special "think tank." But one must go further than this: every observed effect of scalar devices finds an earlier echo in events during the Second World War, and the only known experiments that could be construed as having scalar characteristics were conducted by the Nazis. In my opinion then, this means that the case for a Nazi origin of scalar weapons is much stronger than for a Soviet one.

So, might the Nazi radar team's experiments have been deliberately looking for such an effect? Might the radar team have been yet another component of the same project represented by the Bell? While there is no direct evidence, there are a number of factors that would seem to argue persuasively that this is indeed the case. To understand why, we need only look more closely at the Nazi radar absorbent material itself, and what the radar team was initially looking for, and the theory of radar that it implied the Germans were working with. As we shall see, it is a theory profoundly different from the standard theory of radar as a “bounce” of a signal from a reflecting target.

As was described in Reich of the Black Sun, some of this radar absorbent material consisted of rubber, into which small iron and zinc balls of specific diameter had been pressed during molding. These balls were resonant to certain frequencies known to be used by British and American radar. In the earliest materials, only certain frequencies would be “absorbed” by the material. The Germans knew that eventually the Allies would change their frequencies, and thus the material would be useless. Hence it became necessary that the newer radar absorbent material be absorbent to a wider band of frequencies, and hence the need to test several frequencies on this material. But now notice that the German team is interfering several beams of different frequencies on this material. This means, in short, that they have realized two things that are not part of the theory of radar in any standard text to this day: (1) that radar is not a “bounce” as much as the target itself is a “secondary transmitter” resonant to certain frequencies. The radar signal thus stimulates a current within the target via resonance, and this then is transmitted back to the radar antenna where the amplifier amplifies it; (2) by interfering several frequencies on the same target composed of radar absorbent material capable of absorbing different frequencies, they are trying to determine if nonetheless a secondary transmitter effect results, nullifying the material’s stealth properties. In short, this means that they were expecting some sort of “anomalous return” to their antennae. What exceeded their expectations, in other words, was not the result, but its intensity. This further implies that they might also have been aware of the role of longitudinal waves as a means to achieve the phenomenon.

To sum up, the nature of the experiment’s configuration suggests that the Nazis were well aware of “scalar physics” and its peculiar properties, for they clearly perceived radar as a “resonance-and-secondary-transmitter” effect, and not merely a “bounce.” In other words, even to have conceived of such an experiment, the Nazi radar research team had to have known that all material, including highly non-linear material, has a resonance. Thus no "stealth" material is really "stealthy" if one knows how to induce a secondary transmitter effect through resonance and interferometry. This is about as far from "public consumption physics" as one can get.

a. Back to "Freya" and "See-Elefant:" The German Over-The-Horizon Radars

The Germans were developing, very early on, a number of early, proto-typical over-the-horizon long range radars capable of guiding their intercontinental missiles to target. The following are diagrams of the Freya system from the German Museum in Munich:

Bordgerät Erstling
Abstand v. Leitebene
Lenkverfahren mit Freya-Erstling
Leitebene
Abb. 4
Empfangs-Antenne I
Sende-Antenne
Freya Sende- u. Empfangs-Anlage
Empfangs-Antenne II
30m
30m
B 39/45

Schematic of the Envisioned Use of Freya for Rocket Guidance

Freya Anlage
in Feuerstellung
① Freya-Sende-u.Empfangs-Anlage
② Stromversorgungswagen
③ Sende-Antenne II
④ Sende-u.Empfangs-Antenne
⑤ Sende-Antenne I

Artist's Conception of the Mobile Freya Unit Deployed

Note now that in the artist's conception of the radar unit, the central antenna, labeled number four in the drawing, is labeled a Sende-u.Empfangs-Antenna, a sending and receiving antenna, while two other Sende antennae are located to either side of this central antenna (the antenna on the left is obscured in the reproduction, being barley visible in the black smudge on the center of the picture). In other words, Freya had three sending antennae, one of which doubled as a receiving antenna. This system is somewhat obscured in the schematic of the drawing, which, if one studies it closely though, also indicates that the radar unit's two "side" antenna are sending pulses.

Why is this three-antenna sending system so important? And what does it have to do with scalar weapons? First, such plural sending antennae would have been necessary for a simple, prototypical phased array radar. If each antenna sends out a pulse slightly out of phase with the pulses from the other antenna, the result is that the signal of the whole apparatus can be caused to "bend" or "shape" itself in a certain way, and hence, one can bend the signal to look "over the horizon."

But as has been noted already by Col. Bearden, the other thing such radar sets can do is interfere electromagnetic waves on non-linear material, creating the longitudinal or scalar wave in the medium. Thus, such radar devices are potential proto-typical scalar weapons, as the following diagram of Bearden of a scalar device sending out two pulses, not only out of phase but indeed, at different times and velocities. The pulses only overtake each other on the target, producing the longitudinal wave:

T2
T1
T0
SLOW WAVE
ΔL1
FAST WAVE
ΔL2
T2
T1
ΔL3
T3
$\frac{\Delta L_3}{c} = \Delta T_3 \Rightarrow EM_3$
TESLA HOWITZER
(SCALAR INTERFEROMETER)

Bearden's Diagram of a Scalar Weapon Pulse

As any cursory examination of Bearden's diagram with the wartime German schematic of Freya will attest, there is little basic conceptual difference between the two types of operation.

While this is not to suggest that Freya was a scalar weapon, it is clear that such phased array radars constitute the first elements in such a system, for by simple reconfiguration, one may advance from the idea of out-of-phase pulses to out-of-phase pulses fired at different times and arriving on target at the same time. In other words, it is not the hardware that changes, it is the template for action that changes. It would have been a small step for the Germans to make the change, and, as has already been indicated, this appears to be exactly what happened in their late-war radar experiments on radar absorbent material (RAM).

But is there any other corroboration of the claims of this chapter?

b. An Odd Allied Intelligence Report Indicating the Nazi Operation of Scalar Weapons

The destruction of a German regiment on the Russian front in 1943 by what appears to be a scalar weapons test[61] remains speculative. But there is again another indicator from a declassified American intelligence document. The document was uncovered by German researcher Friedrich Georg:

> SECRET
>
> PW INTELLIGENCE BULLETIN no 2/32
>
> 13. Fantasia; German Secret Weapons
>
> Preamble. The following stories are from sources of doubtful reliability and may well be pure products of the imagination. However, in view of the striking similarity between them, they are printed for what they are worth.
>
> First Story
>
> Around 15 Sept 44, CP of 1127 Gren Regt 559 Inf Div was in REINANGE at GSGS 4416/U1/912797. It was a warm sunny day with a few scattered clouds and no wind. About 1600 PW[62] was standing near the church in REINANGE and observed a formation of Allied aircraft pass, flying from SW to NE, low enough to be recognized as four-motored planes. He counted up to 30 planes. They were flying in close formation.
>
> While PW watched them pass by, he saw what he believed to be a small fighter plane (grey color, no identification marks) climb and approach the Allied formation from an easterly direction. PW states that the “fighter plane” was flying at abnormally high speed at that it penetrated into the midst of the formation apparently without being fired at. Suddenly there appeared, where the "fighter plane" had been before, a red ball of fire, somewhat larger than the plane itself. A split second later, the ball of fire turned into a rapidly expanding red circle (parallel to the ground). This circle was bluish-red at its edge, and as its diameter increased, the interior of the s\circle became an empty space. As the circle enveloped the planes, they just seemed to disappear. In a matter of seconds the entire formation of Allied planes had disappeared, and the sky was just as it had been before.

---

[61] Georg, Star Wars, p. 116. Compare this document with the original Russian story of the German regiment in my The Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 109-111.

[62] PW: the prisoner of war originating the story being recounted.

PW discussed the incident with several others who witnessed it, including a Hptm[63] of 1559 Arty Regt.[64] This officer (who was subsequently killed) told him that the "fighter plane " in question was a wooden miniature plane with a speed of over 1000 km per hour and which was operated by remote control. The name of the plane is KOMET. The Hptm told him that he had lived near an airfield where such planes were tested and that he had recognized it at once.

(Source: Werner LUTMER, UFFZ. HQ 1127 Gren Regt)

HITLER's Plans. About 10 Oct 44, the CP of 1127 Gren Regt was visited by the 1st general staff officer (I-a7) of XIII SS Corps (an Oberstlt, name unknown). PW talked for about 10 to 15 minutes to this officer's driver, a Rottenfuehrer, who told him the following:

He, the Rottenfuehrer, had overheard a conversation between the general staff officer and HITLER and HIMMLER, who had nvisited the XIII SS Corps HQ a few days before. During the conversation he had overheard HITLER say that "the new secret weapon" would not be employed until a 24 hour mastery of the air and sea could be guaranteed. HIMMLER is supposed to have added that another prerequisite was a temperature of 10 degrees below 0.

(Source: ibid)[65]

---

[63] "Hptm," probably "Hauptman" or "captain," indicating that the PW in question was probably regular German Army.

[64] "Arty": artillery.

[65] George, Star Wars, p. 116, emphasis added.

SECRET

PW INTELLIGENCE BULLETIN No 2/32

13. Fantasia; German Secret Weapons

Preamble. The following stories are from sources of doubtful reliability and may well be pure products of the imagination. However, in view of the striking similarity between them, they are printed for what they are worth.

First Story

Around 15 Sept 44, CP of 1127 Gren Regt 559 Inf Div was in REINANGE at GSGS 4416/U1/912797. It was a warm, sunny day, with a few scattered clouds and no wind. At about 1600 PW was standing near the church in REINANGE and observed a formation of Allied aircraft pass, flying from SW to NE, low enough to be recognized as four-motored planes. He counted up to 30 planes. They were flying in close formation.

While PW watched them pass by, he saw what he believed to be a small fighter plane (grey color, no identification marks) climb and approach the Allied formation from an easterly direction. PW states that the "fighter plane" was flying at an abnormally high speed and that it penetrated into the midst of the formation apparently without being fired at. Suddenly there appeared, where the "fighter plane" had been before, a red ball of fire, somewhat larger than the plane itself. A split second later, the ball of fire turned into a rapidly expanding red circle (parallel to the ground). This circle was bluish-red at its edge, and as its diameter increased, the interior of the circle became an empty space. As the circle enveloped the planes, they seemed to just disappear. In a matter of seconds the entire formation of Allied planes had disappeared, and the sky was just as it had been before.

PW discussed the incident with several others who had witnessed it, including a Hptm of 1559 Arty Regt. This officer (who was subsequently killed) told him that the "fighter plane" in question was a wooden miniature plane with a speed of over 1000 km per hour and which was operated by remote control. The name of the plane is KOMET. The Hptm told him that he had lived near an airfield where such planes were tested and that he had recognized it at once.

(Source: Werner LUTHER, Uffz. HQ 1127 Gren Regt)

HITLER's Plans. About 10 Oct 44, the CP of 1127 Gren Regt was visited by the 1st general staff officer (I-a?) of XIII SS Corps (an Oberstlt, name unknown). PW talked for about 10 to 15 minutes to this officer's driver, a Rottenfuehrer, who told him the following:

He, the Rottenfuehrer, had overheard a conversation between the general staff officer and HITLER and HIMMLER, who had visited the XIII SS Corps HQ a few days before. During the conversation he had overheard HITLER say that "the new secret weapon" would not be employed until a 24 hour mastery of the air and sea could be guaranteed. HIMMLER is supposed to have added that anothe

The Allied Intelligence Report Indicating Possible German Use of Scalar Device

What is one to make of this remarkable document?

First, the attitude of the American preparing the report is clear: it is pure “fantasia,” purest fiction.

Secondly, if it is nothing but pure “fantasia,” then why keep it classified until April of 1998? Either it remained classified through simple bureaucratic inertia and the sheer mountain of material at the U.S. National Archives awaiting declassification review, or there was a reason to keep it declassified for so long. In my opinion, it is the latter, and that brings us to the third thing about this document.

Note that the final anecdote about Hitler and Himmler having an idle conversation about secret weapons and the need to ensure a 24 hour mastery of the air and sea occurs at approximately the same time as the alleged Nazi a-bomb testing the Baltic, ca. 10-11 October 1944. At that point, successful delivery of an a-bomb to any Allied strategic target could only have been accomplished by a Luftwaffe bomber, since the V-2 and V-1 would not have had the ability to lift such a heavy weapon, nor the range to deliver it to any worthwhile Allied target. Hence, the last anecdote makes sense.

But it is the first story that contains the reason for keeping this document under wraps for so long. Notably, two elements are not "pure fantasia," since the Messerschmitt 163 "Komet" was in fact a small rocket plane capable of great speeds. Moreover it had a distinctive shape that, once an individual had seen one, would have allowed it to be readily identified. So this element rings true.

The second element that is not "pure fantasia" is the "cloud" apparently fired by the "fighter plane" at the Allied formation. This has all the hallmarks of the "Kugelblitz" system first detailed by Renato Vesco, a gas that was used to ignite or neutralize Allied ignitions.

But here the connections to known German secret weapons projects end, for the "cloud" then behaves in a most un-gas-like manner. It neither explodes, nor do the Allied planes' ignitions explode or simply stop. There are no planes falling from the sky, no crashes on the ground, no debris, no nothing. However, the signatures of the "gas cloud" are remarkably similar to the glowing globes that apparently annihilated a German regiment on the Eastern Front in 1943, and remarkably similar as well to similar globes spotted by various pilots near the former Soviet Union and adduced by Bearden as demonstrations of scalar weapons systems by the Russians.[66] The report is clear: the Allied planes simply disappeared. So we have, from an unlikely source, yet another indicator that Nazi Germany most likely was developing scalar physics and scalar weapons as a component of its most sensitive and secret weapons projects.

---

[66] See my Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 109-111. The appearance of such globes of light is one piece of evidence that Bearden often cites as a signature of scalar weapons in their various defensive modes of operation.

4. Conclusions and A Post-War Scalar Postscript: the “Scalar Weapons” Nations and Germany

It is significant that Bearden initially maintained that in addition to the Soviet Union there were three other nations possessing scalar weapons. More recently, Bearden maintains that

> A friendly little foreign nation does have such weapons including (quantum potential) weapons that operate in multiply connected spacetime…. That little nation has been responsible for our continued survival and has continued to deter the planned KGB strategic energetics strikes upon the West. There are indications…that at least one – and possible two – other friendly Western nations also possesses such weapons.[67]

One can only surmise – though it is rather obvious – that the “friendly little nation” Bearden refers to is Israel.

The reason why it most likely is Israel requires some explanation. In my second book on the Great Pyramid Weapon Hypothesis, The Giza Death Star Deployed, I argued that these three nations were most likely France, Japan, and the then West Germany.[68]

As argued there, West Germany would have pressing geopolitical and military reasons for developing such weapons, since it could never hope to offset the American and Russian – not to mention French and British - preponderance in nuclear and thermonuclear weapons, even if it chose to develop its own atomic and hydrogen bombs. Additionally, West Germany had outstanding treaty obligations against the development of atomic weapons.[69] Scalar weapons were not covered in these treaties, and thus afforded the fastest and cheapest method for Germany to acquire strategic weapons that would level the super-power dominated playing field. Their existence in the contemporary German arsenal would also explain two recent events: first, the recent decision of the German government to take all of its nuclear power plants out of commission, since the "left over plutonium" would no longer be needed for any bombs;[70] and secondly, the sudden "reunification" of the two Germanies after a series of devastating earthquakes hit the Soviet Union in 1989.[71] In other words, Germany may have sent the weakened Soviet Union a clear "scalar message" not to interfere in the reunification.[72]

---

[67] Bearden, Fer De Lance, pp. 15-16

[68] Q.v. Joseph P. Farrell, The Giza Death Star Deployed, pp. 99-104. Bearden makes the astonishing, and quite disturbing, assertion in Fer De Lance that the notorious Japanese yakuza – the Japanese “mafia” with its own neo-fascist and neo-imperialist ideology – has recently acquired scalar weapons. In effect, this means that Japan has, since the yakuza is intimately connected to the mainsprings of Japanese economic and governmental power.

But all these were merely circumstantial arguments and speculations. Is there any hard evidence to suggest that Germany actually is one of the early "scalar weapons" powers?

---

[69] In the previous book on Nazi Secret weapons, however, I mentioned that it is my strong belief, based on the evidence presented in Zdenek Cervenka's and Barbara Rogers' book The Nuclear Axis: the Secret Collaboration Between West Germany and South Africa, documenting that it was in fact West Germany that was the technological source behind South Africa's and Israel's development of the atom bomb.

[70] Of course, this is not the official German government explanation for its decision. The official explanation is couched in the politically acceptable currency that the decision was taken for "environmental reasons." This is not to say that this was not a genuine factor in the German government's decision, but only to say that it was probably not the ultimate motivation.

[71] Earthquakes, it will be recalled, are a signature of the use of a scalar weapon in its lowest thresholds of destructive potential.

[72] That Germany seems the obvious choice only requires a moment's reflection. Other than Russia, one cannot honestly maintain that France or Great Britain would have been in a terrible hurry to see Germany reunified. Japan, China, and the U.S. would have been most likely indifferent to it. Israel would have been implacably hostile but probably ultimately acquiescent, and South Africa apathetic or perhaps mildly hostile. Only Brazil may have had some sympathy for the reunification, given its own reliance on German scientists in its own scalar program. But in the final analysis, if those unusually destructive earthquakes were induced, then the finger points to scalar weapons, and to Germany, as to no other.

Indeed there is, and it comes from Bearden himself. Very early on in his research, Bearden "upped" the number of nations possessing scalar weapons, or what he called "Triad" nations, from three to approximately ten nations:

> Some 10 nations, for example, now have scalar interferometry weapons, and even the Japanese Yakuza has them and also has their own facilities for producing them in Japan, including small portable units developed for use in assassination and terrorist type warfare within a targeted nation – the United States of America.[73]

For now the enormous implications of an independent criminal syndicate possessing such weapons must be put aside. We shall return to the subject when we consider the problem of independent Nazi survival and continued independence of their black projects.

For now, it is to be noted that the number of "scalar deterrent" nations has considerably expanded, and this in turn leads us to consider the South African, Israeli, and West German a-bomb program. Indeed, Bearden himself points the finger in this direction:

> According to (syndicated newspaper columnists Jack) Anderson and (Lee) Van Atta, a South African navy contingent was "in the area" (of the test) at the time of the 1979 Vela (satellite) detection, and Israel and South Africa were cooperating on an atomic bomb project as early as 1966. Apparently U.S. announcement of an impending South African atomic test in the Kalahari Desert in 1977 led to such outcry that the test was suspended. Anderson and Van Atta cite succeeding visits to South Africa by Israeli scientists, technicians, and defense officials. However, since the actual Vela detections showed some deviations from what would be expected from nuclear tests, one can speculate that Anderson and Van Atta have presented evidence for the development of scalar electromagnetic weapons by two additional countries.[74] One may further speculate that this could reveal what has been checking the Soviets from simply moving against the West with scalar electromagnetic weapons. [75]

---

[73] Bearden, Fer De Lance, p. 35.

[74] Namely, Israel and South Africa.

[75] Bearden, Fer De Lance, pp. 353-354, emphasis added.

While columnist Jack Anderson knew that there was a hidden "third partner" in the Israel-South Africa project, he was never able to pin down who it was with any certainty. But with the research of Zdenek Cervenka's and Barbara Rogers' book The Nuclear Axis: the Secret Collaboration Between West Germany and South Africa, we now know that this hidden partner was West Germany.

Thus, if Bearden is correct, that the Vela satellite detected not an atomic explosion, but an explosion brought about as the result of a scalar weapons test, then the conclusion follows that Germany was, from that point on, a "scalar weapons power."

If this is the case, then one is confronted with a disturbing pattern, for it would appear that scalar weapons research was begun by Nazi Germany at some point prior to or during the World War, and essentially continued by the same personnel – in various countries and at their expense, including Germany itself – after the war. This in turn permits one to speculate that perhaps all these disparate "scalar weapons" projects and its "not for public dissemination" physics were coordinated from some hidden center.

In any case, we are now in a position to summarize why Bearden's historical reconstruction of the development of scalar weapons must be amended to show their origin, not in post-war Soviet programs, but in wartime Nazi Germany's secret weapons black projects.

(a) First, there are the references to Nazi Germany's interest in building a "cold bomb," and Hellmann's assertions that the Soviets were constructing a weapon to freeze portions of the ocean. Such "endothermic" weapons are clear signatures of a scalar weapon being used in its mode of extracting energy from a distant point.

(b) Secondly, there is the report of the annihilation of a German regiment by an "energy bubble" on the Eastern Front during World War Two. As was indicated, this too is the signature of a scalar weapon in yet a different mode of deployment.

(c) Thirdly, there is the peculiar nature of the late war German experiments in multi-wave interference of radar waves on non-linear material, an experiment that strongly indicates that they have understood the significance of resonance effects on non-linear material for scalar physics.

(d) Fourthly, there is the presence of one of the chief scientists involved in these radar and scalar weapons projects, Dr. Hellmann, both in the German, Soviet, and subsequent Brazilian programs.

Taken together these things outline a strong circumstantial case that Nazi Germany was the true origin of scalar weapons, and that during the war the Germans were indeed “working in areas of physics that were monstrous on a daily basis,” pursuing the ultimate planet busting doomsday weapon. And significantly, it appears that West Germany, at least, vigorously pursued such weapons after the war.[76]

---

[76] This permits another speculative reconstruction of history. It is known that Chancellor Adenauer agreed to re-arm West Germany and undertook by treaty with the United States, France, and Great Britain, not to build atomic, biological, or chemical weapons on German soil as a condition of re-armament. What is little known, of course, is that Adenauer made it very clear to the other Western Allies that Germany, as a sovereign nation, would not hesitate to develop such weapons if the international situation required it. Might the motivations for Adenauer’s acquiescence, then, have been that the West German government already knew of the possibility of weapons far more destructive and far cheaper than atomic and thermonuclear weapons? Clearly it did, for it strains credibility to think that with so many former Nazis in his government, not to mention General Reinhard Gehlen’s extensive left-over-from-the war spy network, that they were totally oblivious to the possibilities, nor oblivious to the accomplishments of SS General Kammler’s black projects “think tank.”

It likewise strains credibility that any self-respecting German government would rely on the good graces of Britain, France, or the United States to ensure its security. As Cervenka’s and Rogers’ book on the West German bomb makes abundantly clear, the West German government very early on undertook the quiet and very secret development of its own independent nuclear deterrent under the very nose of the NATO Alliance while at the same time presenting a posture of perfectly correct “nuclear weapons abjuration” and, when the German media came too close to these projects, outright denials in the teeth of clear evidence to the contrary. Similarly, the Schmidt government heavily financed the private German firm OTRAG’s “corporate Area 51” preserve in Zaire to the tune of several millions of Deutschmarks (q.v. Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 268-269). The purpose of this preserve? What has been admitted is that it was to research biological weapons and cruise missiles. One can only assume that this is the tip of the iceberg.

This is a strong though still circumstantial case. Is there any other indicator that "scalar physics" was the destructive beast hidden deep within the belly of SS Obergruppenführer Hans Kammler's black projects empire? Indeed there is.

The Bell itself.

So, in the end, Bearden may be right that the Vela satellites detected not an atom bomb test, but a scalar weapons test. He merely missed the ultimate political significance of the test, namely, that behind Israel and South Africa, there was a much more powerful hidden player: Germany.

6.

“For Whom the Bell Tolls”: Scalar Physics, Zero Point Energy, and the Vorticular Aether: A Speculative Reconstruction of the Physics of the Bell

“The mythology and true history of beamray technology properly begins with the Egyptians, whose awareness of vitalistic solar energies prompted a pagan devotion to “Ra” the sun-god.”
Gerry Vassilatos, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI[1]

A. US Declassified Patents from the Cold War and SDI

In an obscure but nonetheless remarkable book, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI, science and patent researcher Gerry Vassilatos outlines an incredible array of exotic weaponry that exists in recently declassified United States patents. Vassilatos’ own introduction to this highly technical material is itself worth the price of the book, for in it, he details a number of little known advances in experimental physics well worth study, and moreover, that bear directly on some aspects of the Bell and its operation.

Obviously, the subject of Vassilatos’ investigation is the field of SDI, President Ronald Reagan’s well-known Strategic Defense Initiative,[2] and more particularly, the exotic directed energy weapons that were envisioned as being capable not only of defensive action against enemy ICBMs, but ultimately, of replacing them as the new generation of post-thermonuclear strategic offensive weapons.

---

[1] Gerry Vassilatos, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI: Companion Study Guide for “Secrets of Cold War Technology” (Bayside, California: Borderland Sciences, 1997), Section 1.1. (The Introduction to Vassilatos’ extremely valuable compendium of declassified Cold War SDI patents contains no pagination. Accordingly, citations will be made to the section headings from which quotations or references are taken.)

[2] As we shall see later, some MAJIC 12 documents indicate that the original meaning of the acronym was the “Space Defense Initiative.”

Work had already begun during World War Two on the use of X-rays and gamma rays in "burst" devices that would fire a sudden extreme pulse of the deadly high frequency radiation at a target. But in the aftermath of the war and the advent of the nuclear age, particularly after the Soviet Union acquiring its own atomic and hydrogen bombs, the need for some sort of defense against them became immediately felt.

One of the first efforts to improve on the "burst" devices came in 1957, with a patent from the German Siemens firm – US Patent Number 2,904, 692, by inventor Wilhelm Gscheidlen – for the collimation of gamma rays by means of a series of metal baffles with pin-hole sized holes, arranged sequentially, to achieve a lensing effect that would concentrate high frequency gamma photons into a beam, using a cobalt 60 source.[3]

But as Vassilatos notes, "such systems lost much of their initial energy before passing through the multiple baffles of the collimator itself. Ultimately, these pinhole camera systems failed from inherent problems of fundamental incoherence from the source itself, an intriguing engineering problem requiring the discovery of new phenomena for its solution."[4] That is, the sources of gamma rays in these systems was rather like a light bulb, emitting gamma rays of various frequencies. No matter how efficient the collimator baffle system, the beam would still spread out – like a "gamma ray flashlight" beam – and thereby lose much of its energy. The goal was for gamma ray coherence, a gamma ray laser whose awesome power can only be appreciated by comparison to ordinary optical lasers, which can cut through steel with ordinary light.

The next step was taken in the early 1960s, with so-called Clear Atomic Light" systems, which relied on a system of underground tunnels and a reflecting mirror able to direct the light generated from a nuclear explosion to the surface through a tunnel in a concentrated beam. Such systems, in other words, took the radiation from a nuclear explosion and directed it in a beam. Needless to say, using the weapon also destroyed it, since they could never be more than one shot affairs. Nevertheless,

---

[3] Vassilatos, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI, section 2.5.

[4] Ibid.

> Before the development of far better and more pernicious radiation weapons, this CAL (Clear Atomic Light) beam weapon had no equal. Its declassification in 1973 occurs some 15 years after its testing in coincidence with Project Plowshare, a "peacetime" use of nuclear weaponry. These experimental weapons were part of PROJECT DEFENDER, the original Star Wars Defense Initiative of President Eisenhower. This Project investigated the use of directed hot nuclear plasmas (PROJECT CASABA), high energy particles (PROJECT HOWITZER), and primary experimentation with X and Gamma Ray LASERS.[5]

These CAL or Clear Atomic Light systems quickly moved out of their underground tunnels and bunkers and became more portable, and potentially space-based, weapons platforms.

The well-publicized X-ray laser systems of the early 1980's were based on these early CAL systems, the small nuclear device being housed in a hemispherical or "tanklike" structure surrounded with rods of radioactive material. When the device is detonated, the rods become transmitters of deadly cohered, or lasing, x-rays, incinerating anything in their path almost instantly. Given that a beam of enormous diameter can be constructed with such a device, "one is able to produce" a high frequency, high power x-ray laser beam "for the specific purpose of destroying missiles or cities alike. The length of the rods employed determines the amplification factor."[6] These weapons would have the additional advantage over more indiscriminate hydrogen bombs in that they would leave no residual radioactive fallout in their targets.[7]

Thus, the engineers and scientists in America's black projects were confronted with two unpleasant facts. On the one hand, the older "electrical burst" method of generating such intense beams – the method pursued during the World War, while providing intense rays, also required the construction of enormous installations to generate the rays, thus rendering them impractical as weapons. On the other hand, x-ray lasers were deadly, of sufficient power to be used in an offensive strategic mode, and were far more efficient than the indiscriminate atomic or hydrogen bomb. But they could only be used once, since firing the weapon also destroyed it.

---

[5] Vassilatos, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI, section 2.5.

[6] Ibid.

[7] Ibid.

Yet another problem attended the pursuit of X-ray and gamma ray lasers (gamma ray lasers are often called GRASERS). Since these high frequency radiations (gamma rays are much higher frequency than x-rays and hence pack even more of a punch) were able to permeate almost all forms of matter, creating an optical cavity to achieve coherence (the action that makes an ordinary laser beam) for these frequencies was difficult. Ordinary mirrors and lenses did not effect x-rays or gamma rays.

The quest, in other words, had turned to reusable and "portable" x-ray and gamma ray lasers, for obvious reasons: "Becoming operative at the flick of a switch, these weapons represent potentially more of a threat than a single strike nuclear warhead. Any single electronuclear weapon can be fired repeatedly, the equivalent radiant firepower of several warheads."[8]

One method was quickly found, employing the plasmas created by sudden vaporization of heavy metals with ordinary optical laser light. Once having created a plasma of such material, this in turn was then pulsed with lasers to create an amplification and cascade effect that resulted in X-rays and gamma rays approaching coherent, or lased, nature.[9] "These 'Z-Pinch' plasma devices fire beams easily capable of melting clean holes directly through thick walls of metal and stone."[10]

1. Enter the Mossbauer Effect

It is in the search for reusable X-ray and gamma ray lasers that one encounters a physical effect that might bear directly on the physical and theoretical thinking behind the Bell. The effect is known as the Mossbauer effect, and it concerns the relationship of acoustic and inertial stress and the effects of these on the gamma lasing activity of radioactive materials. It is best to cite Vassilatos extensively:

---

[8] Vassilatos, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI, sections 2.6 and 2.7.

[9] Ibid., sections 2.6 and 2.7.

[10] Ibid., section 2.7.

While yet a graduate student, Dr. Rudolf Mossbauer (1959) discovered that specific radioactive elements could be stimulated into gamma ray resonance. Mossbauer directed an external supply of monochromatic gamma rays into various radioactive isotopes, finding that they produced identical monochromatic outputs. This gamma resonant effect taught that certain radioactive isotopes could be stimulated to release more gamma rays than the amount delivered to them. Mossbauer found that he could stimulate his isotopes into a supersaturated state by continually supplying them with the requisite quanta. Brought to a state of supersaturation, Mossbauer observed the sudden release of gamma ray bursts several orders in magnitude greater than the input. Furthermore, when properly directed, the gamma burst came as a single coherent emission. Mossbauer had found the means for creating a true gamma ray LASER.

After Rudolf Mossbauer discovered the primary aspects of his strange effect, others began discovering its ancillary phenomena…..Some experimenters disovered that the mere proximity of gamma absorbent matter near a gamma isotope source effectively modified the source, an anomaly. The coherent gamma emissions of Mossbauer resonant stimulations were strangely linked to their absorbers, a relationship modified by motion alone.

Special radioisotopes were rotated on special high speed rotors, demonstrating a phase modulation effect… Slotted shields were made to rotate at high speed between isotope sources and absorbers, adding evidence that phase shifts were indeed occurring…. These findings strongly suggested the possibility of directly modulating Gamma Ray streams by movement alone…. (the) mere application of stress on the isotope samples was found to produce successions of powerful gamma ray bursts. Here was an unexpected “piezonuclear” corollary to the Mossbauer Effect. Isotope samples were applied to loudspeaker cones, and physically vibrated in the presence of absorbent materials….Indeed, certain experimenters discovered a strange effect of vibration upon the isotopes themselves. With applications of increasingly high pitch, the loudspeaker-fixed isotopes produced continual bursts of coherent gamma ray energy. Here was evidence that the mere compression of specific isotopic material could produce an intense gamma supersaturation. What had been observed constituted an avalanche process, one capable of organizing coherent gamma emissions.

The application of audio signals (400 cps) caused remarkably intense gamma emission in these isotopes. It was soon found that ultrasonic vibrations produced staggering gamma emissions….A growing wave of gamma photons is thus both stimulated and driven along by compressional waves alone….

> Researchers who studied the compression phenomenon may not have been prepared for the resultant gamma yield when shock impact was applied to the isotopes. Huge coherent gamma ray bursts were produced throughout the small isotope core, a radiance which may have produced the first uncontrolled gamma ray "event": an explosion of pure and penetrating gamma superradiance. The development of gamma burst "explosives" has well remained completely shrouded in secrecy.[11]

What emerges from the Mossbauer Effect is that abrupt shock – acoustic or otherwise – of certain radioactive isotopes or compounds can cause the emission of radiation to cohere, like a laser beam, giving off deadly effects. One can imagine then, in reference to the Bell, that if such radioactive material was spin polarized, and then repeatedly pulsed, what sort of deadly effect would result. One might obtain a kind of "super GRASER."

In any case, Mossbauer's Effect had enormous implications for the development of strategic offensive directed energy weapons, for the effect made reusable gamma ray lasers a possibility. But there were still obstacles to be overcome, and the one who did it was Josef Eerkens.

> Eerkens (1962) discovered that the application of strong axial magnetic fields to rodshaped samples (of specific Lanthanides) could produce a more highly coherent organization of gamma ray emissions. A "superradiant" beam was found to emerge from both ends of such rods. The discovery that gamma ray emissions could be cohered in preferred directions was yet superseded by methods which actually effected the direction of gamma bursts through a single rod end. Eerkens found it possible to cause the coherent gamma burst to emerge from a designated rod end, by pulsing the rod with gigacycle ultrasound. Producing traveling compression waves in the isotope rod, it was found possible to actually direct the mounting gamma cascade from end to end. The powerful coherent gamma blast was thus capable of being directed, a previously unheard potential.
>
> In the Eerkens design we see a true Gamma Ray LASER, or GRASER... Eerkens founds that the same radioactive materials could be forced to discharge their radioactivity in sudden voluminous bursts when properly stimulated. This latter effect violated the concept that radioactive half-life is an immutable constant, for it was found possible > to control the decay rate by a special “enhancement process” involving acoustic energy….(The) frequencies necessary for the control of radioactivity is given as lying between 1 and 10,000 Gigacycles.[12]

---

[11] Gerry Vassilatos, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI, section 3.6

That is, acoustically modifying and pulsing the environment was the method to stimulate gamma photon cascade and lasing action. In other words, radioactivity is a reaction of an element to its environment. Moreover, the fact that this was achieved acoustically suggests that the effect is a scalar one, since acoustic waves are the 3-space analogue of longitudinal waves in the medium.

B. Plasmas, Rotation, Pulses, and Zero Point Energy

1. Plasmas and Transmutation

There are further connections between the Bell and the strange world of alternative and suppressed physics, this time to one of the most famous names in “alternative and suppressed” physics next to Nikola Tesla: T. Henry Moray. Moray, as many know, perfected a device that seemed to draw energy from the active medium. Indeed, Moray spoke often and even wrote a book about the “limitless sea of energy” in which we move. And like Tesla, Moray designed his own devices, machines, and most importantly for our purposes, plasma tubes.

> The later years of Moray’s research were dedicated to investigating a peculiar anomaly that occurred on the electrodes within his plasma tubes: Some of the electrode metal would transmute to another element. It exhibited a nuclear reaction as if the nucleus absorbed a proton or emitted a beta particle. Because Moray was secretive about this research, little is known. A clue might appear in Moray’s patent; there is one paragraph describing how to make a particular lead sulfide mixture to be used as electrode material. Did Moray discover how to transmute lead into gold? The anomaly regarding transmutation of elements is hard to believe, except that it has been observed over the > last decade in the cathodes from cold fusion experiments, and these experiments are quite repeatable today.[13]

---

[12] Gerry Vassilatos, Declassified Patents of the Cold War and SDI, section 3.7

Note here the appearance of nuclear transmutation – via some unknown mechanism – in the context of plasmas, yet another link to Gerlach and the Bell.

But there is yet more. Engineer Ken Shoulders made a significant discovery. Shoulders figured out a way to launch a kind of "coherent plasma" that is simply a "cluster of charges predominantly of one polarity,"[14] that is, Shoulders came upon the same principle of spin coherence, as exhibited in the Bell, since charge is a phenomenon of spin, of vortices. When such a "cohered plasma" strikes an aluminum plate, scanning by electron microscope reveals that the tiny crater made in the metal by the plasma impact results in "transmuted isotopes" that are "unusual and rarely found in nature."[15] Moreover, one may easily see that such processes might be identified – somewhat loosely to be sure – as "photochemical," confirming the possibility that similar processes or phenomena were discovered by the Germans during the war, and giving rise to the baffling "photochemical" statements of isotope enrichment in the Farm Hall Transcripts. Moreover, the Farm Hall Transcripts made it clear – in Wirtz's statement that was quickly hushed up by the other scientists – that the process involved "bombardment by a particular wavelength." If the Bell was in part being used to research isotope enrichment or element transmutation, then its rotating operation clearly implies that one aspect of its conceptualization was precisely resonance, or frequency. Since Gerlach was interested in the subject of transmutation, one may safely assume that the Bell was more than an advanced project in field propulsion. It was also an advanced project in the examination of the basic structure of matter and how to transform it. It was thus a project designed to explore the potentialities of a unified physics. The question remains: what was the basis of that unification?

---

[13] Moray B. King, The Energy machine of T. Henry Moray: Zero-Point Energy and Pulsed Plasma Physics (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2005), p. 27.

[14] Ibid., p. 37.

[15] Ibid.

The uniqueness of the Bell is again manifest, even when compared to these contemporary examples, for the Bell, while clearly involving a plasma, and while clearly involving charge coherence or polarization, as in Shoulder's work, involves clearly one other aspect: counter-rotation, and with that, frequency, and the zeroing of electromagnetic vectors to create a scalar potential.

2. Four Mysteries and Ion Oscillation

According to physicist and engineer Moray B. King, T. Henry Moray himself understood that there were four big mysteries associated with his machine:

> 1) What is the energy source driving the device? 2) How can thin wires conduct "cold currents" that penetrate glass? 3) How can a device pick up normal street conversations from miles away? 4) How can element transmutation occur at low energies? All of these anomalies seem to center around surging or oscillating ions in plasma, a theme that Moray emphasized throughout his book.[16]

In other words, Henry Moray understood that the four anomalies were connected to "oscillating plasma," that is, to regularly pulsed plasma. But there are yet more possible conceptual foundations to the Bell.

3. Paul Brown's Glow Plasma Oscillator

While reading Moray King's The Energy Machine of T. Henry Moray, I came upon this picture of Dr. Paul Brown's "nuclear battery" and was quite stunned at the strong conceptual – and actual physical – resemblance between it and the Bell.

---

[16] Moray B. King, The Energy Machine of T. Henry Moray: Zero-Point Energy and Pulsed Plasma Physics, p. 33.

Glow Plasma Oscillator

The nuclear battery
Capacitor in lid
Inner Transformer Coils to take power to outside Central Coil with Radioactive Outer Coils
Casing

Paul Brown, U.S. Patent 4,835,433 (1989)

Note the principle of interior and exterior coils, with the central coil, as in the Bell, being stimulated by a radioactive material. The coils also imply that rotation was involved in Brown's thinking from the outset.

Moray King notes that

> General Electric, in their due diligence for partnership to manufacture the battery, sent their nuclear physicist to investigate it. Paul Brown said the physicist lost sleep for a week because he could not explain the excessive energy. It was after this investigation that the suppression problems really began for Paul Brown, for it appears he successfully created self-running, zero-point energy device.[17]

If this can be said for Brown's device, it is a small step to state the same of the Bell itself, since it operated on principles that, while certainly not identical, were similar.

---

[17] Moray B. King, The Energy Machine of T. Henry Moray: Zero-Point Energy and Pulsed Plasma Physics, pp. 64-65.

4. Non-Equilibrium Thermodynamics and Self-Organization

In my books on the Weapon Hypothesis as an explanation of the machine-like properties of the Great Pyramid,[18] I touched upon an aspect of the emerging new physics called “non-equilibrium thermodynamics.” The physics emerged from the pioneering work of Ilya Prigogine, who noticed the tendency of systems, driven into extreme states of non-equilibrium, to self-organize. Three requirements had to be present for any system to self-organize:

> 1) It must be nonlinear,
> 2) far from equilibrium, and
> 3) have an energy flux passing through it.
> The theoretical models describing the zero-point energy fulfill these requirements. Merging the theories of the zero-point energy with the theories of system self-organization open the scientific possibility of activating a coherent ZPE interaction, which could become a basis for new technology.[19]

As King observes, these requirements “point the way for inventing a system that could tap the zero-point energy:”

> 1) Work with a highly nonlinear system like a plasma,
> 2) drive it far from equilibrium by an abrupt discharge, and
> 3) work with the appropriate elementary particles which maximize their influence when interacting with the zero-point energy.[20]

Note what is involved here: plasmas which are driven to a far-from-equilibrium state by an abrupt discharge or pulse, and particles, which, on the view of Wheeler and others – as will be seen below – are but vorticular structures in the aether. Two of the elements of the Bell are involved in this – plasmas and rotation – and, if one recalls the “beehive-like” buzzing sound associated with the Bell, a sound characteristic of the rapid opening and closing of high voltage DC switches characteristic of Tesla’s experiments, one may safely conjecture that a third element may have been involved as well, an element that Witkowski, as has been seen, discounts: abrupt and rapidly repeated high voltage DC pulsing. If this additional element was involved in the Bell – which in my opinion is likely – then this would mean that it was not only a sophisticated "plasma trap" but something more: it was a zero-point energy device involving the use of two different types of electrical potential, continuous (AC) and discontinuous (DC).[21] As King observes, any "abrupt motion of matter is a vacuum energy activator,"[22] since, in effect, one is pulsing a vortex in that vacuum.

---

[18] See my The Giza Death Star, The Giza Death Star Deployed, The Giza Death Star Destroyed.

[19] Moray B. King, The Energy Machine of T. Henry Moray: Zero-Point Energy and Pulsed Plasma Physics, p. 89, emphasis added.

[20] Ibid., p. 91, emphasis added.

5. Oscillation of Plasma and ZPE Coherence

Thus one arrives at one possible reason behind the Bell itself:

> If the abrupt motion of a single nucleus can activate the vacuum energy, what if we move a large number together? This is exactly what happens during ion-acoustic resonance of plasma.[23]

That is to say, if the Germans had managed to discover the low-energy transmutation phenomenon – and the Farm Hall Transcripts suggest that they did – and if they coupled this idea to spin-cohered or charge-polarized plasma, as the research of Gerlach would consistently suggest, then it is a very short step to the idea that the way to maximize the phenomenon would be via a large aggregate of matter – in a plasma – and to further stimulate that activity through pulsing of a radioactive substance, as the previous accounts of the Mossbauer effect demonstrate.

All these factors suggest that the Germans were experimenting with the very structure and fabric of matter, energy, gravity and space-time with the Bell, and for various purposes: propulsion, weaponry, and so on.

---

[21] This would seem to corroborate the assertions of William Lyne in his Occult Ether Physics.

[22] Moray B. King, The Energy Machine of T. Henry Moray: Zero-Point Energy and Pulsed Plasma Physics, p. 99. See also p. 103.

[23] Ibid., p. 107.

6. Gray’s Scalar Compression Tube

Yet another device examined in King’s book that bears strong conceptual parallels with the Bell is E. V. Gray’s “Scalar Compression Tube.”

Scalar Compression Tube
3
3
30
56
32
34a
34b
12
50
54
4
4
54
60

E.V. Gray, U.S. Patent 4,661,747 (1987)
U.S. Patent 4,595,975 (1986)

The conceptual resemblance to the Bell may be gleaned from a comparison of King’s comments with the diagram above:

> In 1986 (and again in 1987) Gray patented a circuit and a tube. The tube is the critical element and it exhibits characteristics similar to hollow cathode switches and the tubes of Correa and Moray. The thin anode, down the central axis of the tube, contains a spark gap. The anode is surrounded by a cylindrical, double grid cathode with the two grids electrically shorted together. The double grid behaves like a hollow cathode and contains glow plasma. This is the key component….The cold current pulses originate from the glow plasma within this cathode.[24]

The principle of Gray’s “Scalar Compression Tube” then becomes evident in the following diagram:

---

[24] King, The Energy Machine of T. Henry Moray: Zero-Point Energy and Pulsed Plasma Physics, pp. 134-135.

Symmetric Implosion Discharge
Spark Gap
Glow Plasma Shell
Anode

King states that the surrounding cylindrical double cathode grid

> Supports a radial, inward ion surge. This could manifest a "scalar compression" pulse where a positive polarization wave is symmetrically directed inwardly to surround the anode. The phrase "scalar" means scalar potential, which results when opposite electric field vectors cancel. Because of symmetry, the radial electric field vectors from the ions are in perfect opposition, which creates a spiking, scalar potential transient when they surge inwardly.

The similarities to Witkowski's own reconstruction of the Bell's operating principles is quite obvious, as is the conceptual similarity to Witkowski's own drawing of the Bell, which has a small lead or cable coming from the top of the device, as if it were a very large version of Gray's tube.

7. Counter-Rotating Electromagnetic Fields, ZPE Coherence, and Kontrabary

The physicist Wheeler thought that fluctuations in the zero point energy – or if one prefers the terminology, "oscillations in the aether" – was the "foundation for all matter and energy in our universe."[25] When this "fluctuation in the aether" is spin cohered –

---

[25] Ibid, p. 81.

that is, when a "vortex in the nothingness appears" – then it is detected in normal space as an elementary particle.[26]

In this respect, King offers his own summary on the engineering principles involved not only in cohering the Zero Point Energy, but also in the crucial key area of stimulating a glow plasma, the necessary "ingredient" in the alchemy of aether physics:

> (a) Abrupt motion of glow plasma nuclei is needed; this glow plasma needs to be in the maximum possible state of charge polarization (spin coherence);
> (b) The glow plasma needs to be appropriately shaped and symmetrically compressed;
> (c) The glow plasma should be caught between bucking electromagnetic fields, that is to say, vector-zeroed fields; this is best accomplished by,
> (d) Counter-rotation and "vortical forms."[27]

Of these elements, three in particular are crucial to the stimulation of the glow plasma. First there is the abrupt electrical pulse (which one must assume is rapidly repeated, if the plasma is to be maintained in the necessary state; hence, one has another explanation of the "beehive" buzzing sound Witkowski reports was associated with the Bell, since the sound is typical of rapidly opening and closing DC switches). The second crucial element is the "bucking electromagnetic fields", and the third is the counter-rotating electromagnetic fields, achieving symmetric compression through rotation.[28]

If one considers this list very carefully, it will be readily apparent that the Bell's design and operation, as described by Witkowski, contains all of these elements except that of abrupt and repeated pulsing. Even on Witkowski's description and speculative reconstruction of its operation and design parameters, one is in the presence of an intentionally designed quantum coherence device. If one adds in my own speculation of abrupt and repeated shocks to the vortices – delivered by rapid and repeated DC pulses[29] - then the picture of the device and its operation is very nearly complete.

---

[26] Ibid.

[27] Ibid., p. 154.

[28] Ibid.

C. The Vorticular Mechanics of the Aether: The Theories of O.C. Hilgenberg and Carl F. Krafft

There are three laws of any adequate theory of the mechanics of the aether, or of any genuine "hyper-dimensional" physics based upon it. These are:

1. Rotation;
2. Rotation; and,
3. Rotation.

Perhaps this humorous point is overstated, but nonetheless, if there is any single concept that has run as a consistent theme in the previous chapters, from Witkowski's reconstruction of the Bell in chapter four, to Bearden's weaponized scalar physics and our simple schematic explanation of the non-translational, internal stresses of "scalars" versus "vectors" in chapter five, it is rotation, or, if one prefer the more accurate term: vortex mechanics.

But is there any corroboration of any German wartime focus on such a physics, beyond the work and interests of the great Gerlach himself?

There is indeed, and, as we shall see, this vortex model of nuclear physics is a fully developed theory, though not, certainly, the mainstream theory. And not surprisingly, the Germans are in the thick and center of it. Two scientists – names carefully expunged from physics textbooks along with that of Nikola Tesla – in particular are involved: O.C. Hilgenberg, and Carl Friedrich (or Frederick) Krafft.

The theory may be called "the vortex aether theory".

In essence, a full theory of a vorticular aether was worked out by Dr. Hilgenberg before the war, complete with alternative explanations of phenomena often adduced as support for relativity. Hilgenberg worked these ideas out in a series of booklets published in Berlin: Über Strömungsversuche mit Senken und Quellen, die das Wesen der Schwerkraft grundlegend erklären(1939, “Essay Concerning Flux with Sinks and Sources, clarifying the fundamental substance of the Force of Gravity”), Über Gravitation, Tromben, und Wellen in bewegten Medien(1931, “Concerning Gravity, Pulses, and Waves in Moving Media”), Über den Magnus-Effekt und seine Umkehrung(1933, “Concerning the Magnus Effect and its Reversal”). These were followed by a thorough exposition of the vortex aether model of atomic structure in an important post-war booklet called Quantenzahlen, Wirbelring-Atommodelle und Helium-Sechserring-Aufbauprinzip des Periodensystems der chemischen Elemente (1959, “A Quantum Number Vortex Atom Model and Helium-Hexagonal Construction Principle of the Periodic System of the Chemical Elements”).[30]

---

[29] And these in turn may have been calculated to be in resonance to the ion acoustic resonance of the mysterious "Xerum 525".

Here we shall rely principally on the less technical presentation of Krafft, since in his book Ether and Matter Hilgenberg’s ideas are presented in their main substance.[31]

Included in the vortex theory are some criticisms of relativity theory, as one might expect of a theory under development prior to and during the Nazi period. Like others, Krafft criticizes the dogmatic mathematical formalism of relativity by pointing out its tautological nature:

> Regardless of whether the velocity of light is actually constant, it is rendered constant in the Einsteinian equations by the use of variable units of measurement. It is therefore not surprising that the equations of special relativity have met all the so-called “experimental tests”, because they are in substance nothing more than mathematical trueisms, and any violation of a mathematical trueism is unthinkable.[32]

---

[30] In Reich of the Black Sun I originally reported the date of this last book as being 1939. However, after much searching to obtain copies of Dr. Hilgenberg’s papers I finally managed to obtain a copy of this work, which is dated 1959. Close comparison of this work with Krafft’s books, however, demonstrates that the vortex model was fully developed during the war, up to and including its modeling of quantum mechanics and atomic structure.

[31] Carl Frederick Krafft, Ether and Matter(Richmond, Virginia: The Dietz Printing Company, 1945), p. 26.

[32] Ibid., p. 8.

German physicist Hermann Fricke was even more unsparing of relativity's mathematical formalism and the new dogmas it imposed on physics:

> Instead of the ether we now have formulas and equations according to which some stars are millions of times more dense and others millions of times less dense than the sun, although composed of the same chemical elements. We are now supposed to be able to ascertain (via mathematics) the diameter of the entire world, and also the number of protons and electrons in it. And finally we are supposed to be able to calculate the exact time when the world (including space and time themselves) began with the explosion of a point. As to all this, the 20th century physicist may harangue as much as he pleases. All of this is accepted as well-nigh certain. It is only the mechanics of the ether and the vortex atom theory which he may not write about or take up for serious study – that is anathema.[33]

But perhaps the dogmatism came from the fact that, "as O.C. Hilgenberg explained in detail in his recently published booklets," the oft-touted "proofs of relativity" – Doppler Red Shift, the progression of Mercury's perihelion, and, of course, the failure of the Michelson-Morley experiment to detect the aether wind – "can be accounted for under the hydro-mechanical ether theory as well as, and even better than under Einsteinian relativity."[34]

Pause and consider what this means. At least one scientist in Germany, Hilgenberg – and there were in fact many others – evolved a theory, based on a vortex model of the aether, that was not only a comprehensive explanation of gravity, that not only gave satisfactory explanations of "relativistic phenomena," but, as we shall see, gave satisfactory accounts of atomic structure as well, and in some cases did so more satisfactorily than the "nuclear" theory. This, basically, was the theoretical milieu in which physicists in Nazi Germany worked, a peculiar blend of the avante garde notions of quantum mechanics and vortices, with the older idea of an underlying substrate common to mind, energy, and matter: the aether.[35]

---

[33] Karl Frederick Kraft, Ether and Matter, p. 6, citing an unpublished manuscript by Hermann Fricke.

[34] Ibid., pp. 8-9.

As Krafft points out, one of Hilgenberg's trenchant criticisms was of relativistic interpretations of the Red Shift effect. Positing an aether, Hilgenberg stated a law, in 1931, in opposition to Einstein's emerging "expanding universe" theories that were beginning to emerge,[36] which Krafft summarizes as follows:

> The following is therefore universally true for all media: Whenever a train of waves traverses a medium that has currents flowing across it, an observer who is at rest relative to the source of radiation will observe a diminution of frequency, and a simultaneous refraction of the ray in a direction opposite to the direction of the current it traverses.[37]

The assumption of a vorticular structure in the aether as constituting the basis of observable particles and energy also bridges conveniently to the idea of a flux in the vacuum, or zero point energy, for "if the elementary or subatomic particles are vortices in the ether, then it would be reasonable to assume that such vortices keep the ether in a turbulent and streaming condition."[38]

As Krafft points out, the vortex model also has another powerful explanatory function in accounting for the persistence of the individuality of any given particle.

> The most outstanding characteristic of all elementary particles of matter is their localized persistence of individuality, and it is inconceivable how this can be explained on any other basis than vortex motion, wave motion, or motion into or out of a center functioning as a sink or source.
>
> If the ether is incompressible, then it can have only two forms of motion which are dynamically self-sustaining, namely vortex motion and wave motion. The stability of these two forms of motion is not due

---

[35] It should be obvious that by positing a vorticular structure of the aether underlying matter and energy, these scientists were very far removed from the classic nineteenth century concept of a static, inert, incompressible aether that inspired the Michelson-Morley experiment.

[36] Krafft, Ether and Matter, p. 26.

[37] Ibid., p. 25.

[38] Ibid., p. 29.

> to any unique property of the medium, but is inherent in the form of motion itself.[39]

Moreover, the model assumes another important feature, one pregnant with implications not only for "scalar physics" and the Bell, but also for any true appreciation of the work of Nikola Tesla:

> A vortex atom for example may be assumed to carry an array of standing waves along with it in the form of nodes and loops in the streamlines of the circulating ether, as is evidenced by electron diffraction patterns, but this is something very different from the usual concept of "wave atom."[40]

Again, consider what this means: a basic theory had been worked out connecting vorticular structures in the aether, not only with elementary particles and vacuum flux, but that flux is now connected to structures of standing waves in the medium itself, structures which give rise to "nodes and loops" in the medium, making it resemble a crystal lattice.

Krafft uses the following diagrams to illustrate the basic vorticular structure of electrons and protons.

---

[39] Krafft, Ether and Matter, pp. 45-46, emphasis in the original. For further thoughts on the relationship of system memory, topological descent, and the aether, see my The Giza Death Star Destroyed, pp. 108-110, 222-245, 272-276.

[40] Krafft, op. cit., p. 46, emphasis added.

Proton
Electron

Krafft's Vortex Model of a Neutron(Left) and Hydrogen Atom (Right)

A further consequence results from this conception, one with obvious implications for the Bell:

> The mass of a proton must have its origin in the gyrostatic effect of the circulating or rotating ether, either inside or outside the vortex rings. The greater mass of the proton as compared with the electron may then be attributed either to a greater speed of circulatory movement of the ether, or to a greater volume of circulating ether, or to the difference in geometric structures.[41]

Altering, or cohering the rotation of a particle or aggregate of particles will thus in turn affect the circulation of the ether and consequently affect the mass of that aggregate.

Krafft then makes a stunning series of statements whose similarities to the Bell and the type of physics it implies are obvious:

> If one proton and one electron produces the system of ether current shown in the diagram of the hydrogen atom (above), then many protons and many electrons should produce a similar system of ether currents, but on a larger scale. In order to test for the presence of such ether currents, the arrangement of apparatus shown (below) may be used. An interferometer of approximately square form has hollow metal spheres or cylinders placed over two of the corners. These spheres or cylinders > are then charged electrostatically as shown so that there will be an electrostatic potential gradient along one of the bifurcated beams. If there is a flow of ether along electrostatic lines of force as indicated by the short straight arrows, then there should be a shift of the interference fringes when the electrostatic field is applied, provided the ether flows with sufficient velocity to produce an observable effect.[42]

---

[41] Krafft, Ether and Matter, p. 53, emphasis added.

From there it is a short step to the idea that the two cylinders could be counter-rotated both mechanically and electrically, producing vector cancellation and a "rotational bubble" of localized space around the Bell, to study any mass anomalies.

Krafft's Interferometer

In any case, Hilgenberg, by the time of his "Quantenzahlen" paper, was able to re-model almost the entire periodic table, including the properties of the super-heavy elements not even discovered.

---

[42] Krafft, Ether and Matter, pp. 54-55. It will be noted that Krafft's experimental design partakes of the same conceptual error as that which underwrote the original Michelson-Morley experiment, namely, the configuration of the experiment in neatly rectilinear space, and not a rotating one, as had Georges Sagnac.

Hilgenberg’s Neon Model (Number 10, Mass 22)

Hilgenberg’s Krypton Model (Number 26 , Mass 82)

Hilgenberg’s Xenon Model (Number 54, Mass 132)

Hilgenberg's Model of Element 118, Mass 336

What emerges from this?

Basically, that during the crucial years leading up to and during World War Two, the Nazi Reich possessed the outlines of a theory - some of which had been worked out prior to the Nazi assumption of power - of matter, of gravitation, of the atomic and sub-atomic structure of matter, and of the fluctuations of the vacuum or zero point energy. Moreover, this theory was based on a very different and very simple conceptual foundation from relativity. And notably, one significant prediction of this theory is that local curvature of space is engineerable and that mass displacement effects are achievable by counter-rotation of plasma. In short, the theory is in radical disagreement with relativity which predicts space curvature only in the presence of very large masses.

Additionally, if we assume that the Bell was a pulsed device, then it is reasonable to assume that in the process the Nazis, in their experiments on the Bell, discovered quite deadly field effects resembling the Mossbauer Effect, effects that betoken the scalar physics of Tom Bearden.

D. Back to Mercury Vortex Engines

But there is one last clue that must be examined.

It will be recalled that Witkowski mentioned the mysterious “Xerum 525,” and that it was his opinion that this was a radioactive isotope of mercury, in compound with other elements:

> Before each trial some kind of ceramic, oblong container was placed in the core (it was defined as a “vacuum flask”…), surrounded by a layer of lead approx. 3 cm thick. It was approx. 1-1.5 m long and filled with a strange, metallic substance, with a violet-gold hue and preserving at room temperature the consistency of “slightly coagulated jelly”. From the produced information it followed that this substance was code-named “IRR XERUM-525” or “IRR SERUM-525” and contained among other constituents the thorium oxide and beryllium oxide (beryllia).[43]

And, as was seen, Witkowski also ends his survey of the Bell with the comment that the Nazis might have been guided in their research from a most unusual source:

> (Yet) one more issue remains – how did it happen that scientists from the 1940s understood exactly where they were heading? They had applied after all ideas from XXI century physics. How is it, that they were conscious of bringing about a major turning-point? What arguments did they lay down (before the launch of work) that caused them to win the race for funds with the great nand influential armaments consortiums? And they won decisively.
>
> It seems that the whole issue is something more than just a technical problem. The unusualness of all this is summed up by the fact, that descriptions of mercuric propulsion had appeared as long ago as in ancient times – in alchemy and old Hindu books – one can easily check this. The “Samaranganasutradhara” a book at least 2,000 years old, said for example: “By means of the power latent in the mercury which sets the driving whirlwind in motion, a man sitting inside may travel a great distance in the sky in a most marvelous manner.”[44]

But there is more to it than that.

“Xerum 525” possessed some odd properties, not the least of which was its “violet gold hue.” An ancient Sanskrit text on the ancient vimana aircraft of India contains the following interesting sentence: "On the north side liquefied mixture of loadstone, mica, and serpent slough should be placed. And crystals should be placed at the requisite centers."[45] Whatever "serpent slough" might be, clearly there is more involved in the ancient "mercury vortex engines" than simply ordinary mercury. It is mercury in compound with other elements, for a little way on, the same text indicates that this is a very odd liquid indeed: "Shaktipaniaraka mani should be placed in the mixture of magnet, mercury, mica, and serpent-slough." This suggests that the "violet-gold hue" of Xerum 525 might be the result of the mixture of mercury with quasi-crystalline or crystalline elements, suspended in microscopic flecks in the fluid. The similarity of "Xerum 525" to this ancient Sanskrit text describing precisely an unusual form of propulsion achieved through the use of mercury certainly suggests, that at some very high and hidden level, someone in the Nazi Reich was reading ancient texts with a very practiced physicist's eye. In any case, this additional fact makes Witkowski's suggestion of an esoteric foundation to the Bell more credible.

---

[43] Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 233, emphasis added.

[44] Ibid., p. 284, emphasis Witkowski’s.

But there is one final thing to consider.

The late Bill Clendenon, well-known UFOlogist and "mercury vortex engine" proponent, similarly stumbled on the ancient Sanskrit vimana texts, and drew similar conclusions. At the time, some scoffed at Clendenon's ideas, and of course, at the time he wrote his book, Mercury: UFO Messenger of the Gods, the story of the Bell had not yet become public in the upheaval of post-reunification Germany.

And these facts make Clendenon's quotations and analyses (the italicized portions in the following quotation) of the vimana texts all the more amazing:

> The Sanskrit Samarangana Sureadhara says, "Inside one must place the mercury engine with its iron heating apparatus beneath." Inside the circular air frame, place the mercury engine with its electric/ultrasonic boiler at the bottom center.

---

[45] David Hatcher Childress, Vimana Aircraft of Ancient India and Atlantis (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 1999), p. 251, emphasis added.

> “By means of the power latent in the mercury which sets the driving whirlwind[46] in motion, a man sitting inside may travel to a great distance in the sky in a most marvelous manner.” – The unchained heat energy from the hot mercury vapor sets the air pump/turbine in motion.
>
> “Four strong mercury containers must be built into the interior structure. When these have been heated by controlled fire from iron containers, the Vimana develops thunder-power through the mercury. And at once it becomes like a pearl in the sky.” – One mercury boiler and three mercury flux valve sensor units must be installed in the propulsion system within the center of the circular air frame. When these mercury containers have been heated by electrically controlled fire (hot mercury vapor) from the containers, the aircraft develops ultrasonic power through the mercury. And, at once, the ionized recirculating air flow becomes like a pearl in the sky.[47]

If Bill Clendenon can figure this much out, then it takes little imagination to see how a Walther Gerlach, himself a specialist in gravity, spin polarization, and mercury plasmas, might interpret such a text. Indeed, if one compares Witkowski’s descriptions of the Bell to these ancient texts – without the intermediary of Clendenon’s own speculations – then the resemblance becomes even more palpable.

And if all this sounds incredible, one should recall the article that appeared in the January 3, 1969 issue of Science, where scientists Schubert, Gerald and Whitehead “reported that when a heat source was rotated slowly below a dish of mercury, the mercury began to revolve in the contrary direction and then gathered speed until it was circulating faster than the flame.”[48]

---

[46] Whirlwind: vortex!

[47] Bill Clendenon, Mercury: UFO Messenger of the Gods, reprinted in David Hatcher Childress, Atlantis and the Power System of the Gods: Mercury Vortex Generators and the Power System of Atlantis (Adventures Unlimited Press, 2000), pp. 96-97, italics in the original.

[48] Brooks, Hitler’s Terror Weapons, p. 137. Brooks remarks on the pervasive Oriental and Hermetic influence on Nazism throughout his work, even providing the following little known information about the interrogation of Rudolf Hess: “Rudolf Hess, interrogated in the Tower of London under the effect of a truth serum, stated that National Socialists valued the occult sciences highly and might even be, under Hitler, the puppets of a clandestine Dicrectorate in the Orient.” (pp. 26-27, citing OSS Interrogation Archive document #12678, Nazi Occult Organizations) Brooks also states that Hitler personally received a copy of Bulwer-Lytton’s celebrated novel about the ancient Ayrans and their

It would seem, then, that the Bell, whatever else it may be from a purely scientific standpoint, is, from the standpoint of esoteric history, a deliberate attempt to reconstruct an ancient and lost technology, a technology far in advance of that of the 1930s and 1940s.

E. Speculations: the Bell as a Scalar Physics Device

So, gathering together all the alternative notions of the previous chapters, what do we have?

One may perhaps speculate along the following lines:

1. The basic structure of all elementary particles is that they are vorticular structures in the aether;
2. Mass and "particle" or "system" individuality arise and are preserved by means of this vorticular motion;
3. Since a vortex which is stable in the plane of the medium (i.e., not drifting in any direction) nevertheless still rotates around an axis, any particular vortex, of any size in any system context, may be said to possess a scalar signature. In effect, the "scalar signature" of any system is ultimately vorticular in structure and nature;[49]
4. Thus, the local spacetime "medium" or aether is engineerable and, contrary to relativity, it is not necessary knowledge of the so-called "Vril" force, which may be seen as analogous to the energy of the aether, or vacuum flux(p. 179), provided that one understands this aether to be of a vorticular structure, with a definite scalar signature in particular zero-summed cases, and as also being the common substrate not only of energy and matter, but of mind. (Q.v. my The Giza Death Star Destroyed: The Ancient War for Future Science, pp. 222-245, 272-276, and my Giza Death Star Deployed, ch. 7, where I also discuss the Egyptian Hermetic basis of this type of physics). Brooks notes Schopenhauer's Orientalism and Hermeticism, and its influence on Hitler, and its underlying Egyptian basis, and thus "for the second time….we found ourselves confronted by the spectre of Ancient Egypt in connection with National Socialism." (p. 27). Of course, anyone familiar with the immensely learned work of Revisionist Egyptologist and Hermeticist Rene Schwaller de Lubicz will recall his gravitation during the war towards the Nazis.

---

[49] Consider again the different types of internal stresses represented by the simplistic vorticular structures on page 208.

to be in the presence of large masses to bend or otherwise shape or stress space and the objects in it;[50]

5. Coherence of atomic spin should thus produce not only mass displacement effects that could be utilized for propulsion, but other phenomena that could be weaponized, since vorticular structures can produce standing waves in the medium;
6. This cohering action might be further stimulated by the use of radioactive isotopes subjected to sudden repeated pulses or stresses of an "electro-acoustic" nature, as in the Mossbauer Effect, or a continuous stress by counter-rotation to vector-zero electromagnetic vectors, or some combination of both. I believe that the Bell involved a pulsed aspect of some nature such as this, given Witkowski's testimony of its characteristic sound;
7. Since atoms are aggregates of vortices, it is similarly possible to conceive of transmuting one element into another by reconfiguring its scalar signature – i.e., its "aetheric" longitudinal wave structure. Since vortices are accompanied by such structures, an alteration in the one would seem to imply an alteration in the other, and therefore, in the very structure of matter itself. Altering that wave structure could conceivably transmute any matter impacted by it, accounting for "low energy transmutation" phenomena.

While the Bell demonstrably fulfills, in so many different ways, the paradigms of the alternative physics examined in this and in the previous chapters, there can be no doubt that the Germans working on it, led by Gerlach, whose brilliant student Hilgenberg outlined the emerging vortex theory, were interested not only in the propulsive uses of their new physics and technology, but also in its benign and malign uses as energy suppliers, and ultimately, weapons of horrendous power. It was a prototype "scalar" device for a new and "unified physics," and it cannot be doubted for a moment that the Nazis new the full potential - both for massively creative good and for massively destructive evil – of what they held in their hands. The fact that the Bell and its master – Kammler – disappeared entirely after the war, the fact that Gerlach's diaries - which doubtless contained much information on the subject – remain classified to this day, the fact that it and it alone, beyond even the Third Reich's fuel air bombs, Sarin gas, and atom bombs, was classified "decisive for the war" (Kriegsentscheidend) is testimony enough that they were "working in areas of physics that were monstrous, on a daily basis."

---

[50] That this has profound applications for weaponization and propulsion should be obvious.

7.
"Gerlach's New Alchemy:"
The Mysterious Serum 525

"Although the principal compound is almost completely undocumented, the metallic elements involved (in red mercury) loom large in the history of alchemy and the descriptions of it bear an uncanny resemblance to those of the Philosopher's Stone, right down to its being a form of 'fixed', i.e., thermally stable, mercury which can then be 'projected upon', i.e., amalgamated with, liquid mercury."
S.M.Shires[1]

A. An Article in the Evening Newspaper

On Friday, July 18, 1924, Nobel laureate physicist, Prof. Dr. Walther Gerlach, published an interesting article in the evening edition of the Frankfurter Zeitung newspaper entitled "The Transmutation of Mercury into Gold" (see picture page 274). The article, though brief, opens a Pandora's box of possibilities and speculations dark with abysmal promise. The editorial introduction begins innocently enough:

> To yesterday's telegraphically transmitted note on "Modern Alchemy", we present the following report as a welcome supplement and commentary.

And with that short notice, Gerlach's main text follows in all its significant concision:

> In no. 29 of the weekly magazine "Physical Science," Prof. A. Miethe from the Technical Higher School in Charlottenburg together with Dr. Staumreich apprises us (of the fact) that it might be possible to induce the disintegration of mercury with relatively simple physical methods and to clearly identify gold as one of the chemical and physical products of the disintegration. Until now we have known of two types of atomic bonding: spontaneous decay that occurs through no sort of external influence, and that through such external radioactive > disintegration process such as was first carried out by the English physicist Rutherford, and as was shortly thereafter repeated in the Vienna Radium Institute by disintegrating lighter atoms (for example, lithium, boron, silicon, aluminum and so on) through bombardment with "rays". The general possibility of an "alchemy" is no longer in need of proof, since atomic research has demonstrated that all atoms are constructed from very simple building blocks, from hydrogen and helium, the lightest things…; various chemical elements may hereafter be distinguished by the number of components and perhaps through the types of atoms they (most readily) bind to.

---

[1] S.M. Shires, Mercuric Pyro-Antimonate, <www.geocities.com/smshires.geo/> , p. 1.

>
> The point of origin of Miethe's (investigation) was the observation that mercury lamps ... by means of very powerful and fast bombardment formed a dark incrustation on their interior winding. The research obtained greater amounts of such incrustation in the mercury lamps - it was made certain that such mercury lamps were free of any gold material, in the course of 70 – 200 hours with 70 volts potential and loaded with 400-2000 watts - yielding a measurable quantity of gold!....The amounts are small, but they are always between 1/10 and 1/100 milligrams, but tangibly weighable and analyzable. …A larger scientific exploration is to be hoped for, because there is every indication these authors have made a singular and thoroughgoing breakthrough, especially when one considers the astonishingly low stability of mercury when it is stressed.[2]

On first reading, the article appears like so many other popular science articles of that era when nuclear physics was on the verge of the discovery of fission (by Otto Hahn fourteen years later in 1938): full of promise, yet naively unaware of the complexities of quantum mechanics that lurked just around the corner. A modern day physicist would most likely dismiss it as the type of "wishful thinking" that so often accompanies scientific discovery, before the "reality" of subsequent observation sets in.

But there are problems with that viewpoint too, not the least of which is that the article is by Gerlach, and that it does occur before the discovery of nuclear fission. Simply put, the transmutation being observed by professors Miethe and Straumreich appears to be induced precisely by "electrolytical" methods, since the "bombardment" being referred to is expressed

---

[2] Prof. Dr. Walther Gerlach, "The Transmutation of Mercury into Gold, ," Frankfurter Zeiting, evening edition, Friday, July 18, 1924. My translation from the German. Emphasis added.

68. Jahrgang. Nr. 532 Abendblatt. Freitag, 18. Juli 1924.

Frankfurter Zeitung

und Handelsblatt.

Begründet von Leopold Sonnemann

= [Die Verwandlung von Queckſilber in Gold.] Zu der geſtern uns telegraphiſch aus Berlin übermittelten Notiz „Moderne Alchimie" bringen wir als willkommene Ergänzung die folgenden ſachkundigen Ausführungen: In Nr. 29 der Wochenſchrift „Die Naturwiſſenſchaften" teilt Prof. A. Miethe von der techniſchen Hochſchule in Charlottenburg mit, daß es ihm gemeinſam mit Dr. Stammreich gelungen ſei, den Zerfall des Queckſilbers mit relativ einfachen phyſikaliſchen Mitteln herbeizuführen und als eines der Zerfallprodukte das Gold chemiſch und phyſikaliſch eindeutig zu identifizieren. Bisher kennt man zwei Arten von Atomverwandlungen: die ſpontan verlaufenden und durch keinerlei äußere Einwirkungen beeinflußbaren radioaktiven Zerfallsprozeſſe und die von dem engliſchen Phyſiker Rutherford zuerſt ausgeführt und kürzlich im Wiener Radiuminſtitut wiederholte Zertrümmerung leichter Atome (z. B. Lithium, Bor, Stickſtoff, Silizium, Aluminium u. a.) durch Bombardement mit α-Strahlen. Die generelle Möglichkeit einer „Alchimie" iſt nicht mehr nachzuweiſen, ſeit die Atomforſchung gezeigt hat, daß alle Atome aus ſehr einfachen Bauſteinen aufgebaut ſind, von denen Waſſerſtoff und Helium, die leichteſten Gaſe, ſicher nachgewieſen ſind; die verſchiedenen chemiſchen Elemente unterſcheiden ſich hiernach durch die Anzahl dieſer Beſtandteile, und vielleicht durch die Art, wie ſie zum „Atom" verbunden ſind. Der Ausgangspunkt der Unterſuchungen von Miethe war die Beobachtung, daß Queckſilberlampen beſonderer Konſtruktion (nach Jaenicke) bei ſehr ſtarker Belaſtung ſchnell ſchwarze Beſchläge auf der inneren Wandung bekommen. Die Unterſuchung ſolcher Beſchläge, die in größerer Menge aus dem Lampenqueckſilber gewonnen wurde, ergab einen ſicher nachweisbaren Goldgehalt. Es wurden nun ſolche Queckſilberlampen aus ſicher goldfreiem Material hergeſtellt und während 20—200 Stunden bei 170 Volt Klemmſpannung mit 400—2000 Watt belaſtet. Nach Abſchluß jedes „mit weitgehenden Vorſichtsmaßregeln" ausgeführten Verſuchs wurde Gold im Queckſilber nachgewieſen. Der nach Abdeſtillation des Queckſilbers zurückbleibende wägbare Niederſchlag war goldgelb und kriſtallin oder kruſtenförmig. Der Goldnachweis erfolgte durch chemiſche Analyſe (Unlöslichkeit in Salpeterſäure, löslich in Königswaſſer, Caſſiusprobe, Haberſche Analyſenmethode u. a.), durch den „Goldſtrich", durch die typiſche optiſche Goldreflexion und die Kriſtallform (Würfel und Oktaeder). Die Mengen ſind klein, aber immerhin bei $^{1}/_{10}$—$^{1}/_{100}$ Milligramm durchaus beachtenswert, wägbar und analytiſch faßbar. Eine wirtſchaftliche Bedeutung dürfte die Entdeckung nach Angabe des Verfaſſers kaum haben — (mit einem Strompreis von 10 Pfg. für 1 Kilowatt würde das Gramm auf etwa 100 000 Mark kommen!), deſto größere wiſſenſchaftliche Ausbeute iſt aber zu erhoffen; denn die Angaben des Verfaſſers machen einen durchaus zuverläſſigen Eindruck — wenn auch die Verwunderung über die überaus geringe Stabilität des Queckſilberatoms vorerſt noch ſtört.

Prof. Dr. W. Gerlach.

Gerlach's 1924 Frankfurter Zeitung Newspaper Article on the Transmutation of Mercury into Gold in conventional terms of “volts” and “watts.” Yet, the context also indicates that radioactive bombardment – most likely by electrically generated x- rays – is also in mind.

And there are other peculiarities about the article not to be missed, and that is the name of the professor supposedly who made the discovery: A. Miethe. Readers familiar with the Nazi Legend of the UFO will recognize the name of Miethe as being one of those allegedly involved with Schriever, Habermol, Epp, Schauberger, and Bellonzo in flying saucer research for the Nazis. Could this be the same Miethe, or even a relation?

And finally, does Gerlach’s call for “a larger effort” to investigate the phenomenon represent the factual basis behind Jan Van Helsing’s allegations that actual work in radical field propulsion craft began in the secret societies that swarmed in 1920s Germany long before the Nazis came to power?

Whatever the answer to these questions may turn out to be, one thing is clear from Gerlach’s article, and that is that he is not thinking in terms of the standard models of transmutation via neutron bombardment that would obtain after the discovery of nuclear fission simply because those models do not yet exist, yet, he is thinking in terms of some form of transmutation via radioactive and electromagnetic bombardment, or rather, stress. Indeed, for Gerlach, whose 1921 experiment in magnetic resonance and electron spin won him the Nobel prize in physics, these results must have set his own mind buzzing with the possibilities of what spin and resonance, under extreme conditions, might be able to achieve, given enough funding, interest, and research. This, I believe, is what must have actually been in his mind.

These insights make his final two comments darkly revealing. “A larger scientific exploration is to be hoped for,” Gerlach urges, “because there is every indication these authors have made a singular and thoroughgoing breakthrough, especially when one considers the astonishingly low stability of mercury when it is stressed.” It is the familiar cry of a scientist making a plea for research funding. And given his notoriety and that of the newspaper in which he presents his plea, there can be only one intended target of his remarks: the German government and its many corporate financial backers.

But notice the final remark concerning "the astonishingly low stability of mercury when it is stressed." Gerlach here enunciates in a few words the line of investigation he wishes such research to take: subject a high density, viscuous low stability metal such as mercury to stress. And given the context, we know what kind of stress he intends to subject it to: radioactive and electrical. Gerlach has deduced the obvious: if such simple means can cause minute amounts of mercury to transmute into gold, then this must mean that these conditions induce a kind of instability in mercury. And with that, a whole new world of possibilities opened up before him, a world he himself calls "alchemical."

Viewed in the context of the previous chapters, an intriguing and highly suggestive constellation of relationships now emerges. At the end of the story, we have Gerlach

(1) heading up the most secret weapons project in Nazi Germany (the Bell);
(2) this project by all accounts involved the use of extremely high voltage, given that the device itself had ports for high voltage electrical cabling, given that the Henge pool also had similar ports, and given that Dr. Kurt Debus, an expert in high voltage, was a member of the Bell's scientific research team;
(3) this project apparently utilized some dense and liquid material, the mysterious "Xerum 525", that may very likely have been some isotope of mercury, as plausibly argued by Witkowski;
(4) this liquid was housed in lead lined bottles inside the Bell, which gave off strong radiations, indicating that the serum or liquid may have been mercury highly doped with radioactive materials;
(5) the liquid was rotated at extremely high speeds of mechanical (and possibly electrical) nature;
(6) and then was possibly subjected to sudden high voltage direct current pulses, as I Have argued.

All this is to say that Gerlach headed a project at the end of World War Two that apparently involved some liquid of similar characteristics to mercury which was then stressed, just as his article urged.

But at the beginning of the story, we have Gerlach writing an article outlining very similar possibilities for a popular German newspaper, and making a subtle though clear plea for a large scale scientific effort to investigate precisely radioactive and electrical stressing of mercury.

Consequently, it appears that someone, somewhere inside Weimar Germany read Gerlach's article, and decided to back his project. The Bell, therefore, may have been a project that by 1945 had possibly already been underway for twenty-one years! In other words, "the Bell" represents the culmination of a project begun nine years before the Third Reich even existed.

More importantly, Gerlach's remarks also oddly corroborate the mysterious exchange of the scientists interred at Farm Hall who speak of a "photochemical" process of isotope enrichment unknown to the Allies, a process evocative of "cold fusion,"[3] for here in 1924 Gerlach is thinking in precisely such terms: transmutation of a low stability element by subjecting it to high stress of an electrical and radioactive nature. And lest it be forgotten, of all the scientists interred at Farm Hall, it was Gerlach alone who was singled out for the dubious honor of further interrogation by American authorities long after his Farm Hall colleagues had been released and returned to occupied Germany. It was Gerlach alone, of all the scientists interred at Farm Hall, who appeared to be off in his own world of "magnetic fields separation" and "the gravity of local space," remarks which, I am sure, must have raised not only the eyebrows of his British captors but also his fellow scientists.

But is there anything in the literature that indicates such a "radioactively doped" form of mercury might possess some peculiar physical properties? As I wrote in my previous book on Nazi secret weapons, The Reich of the Black Sun, there would indeed appear to be just such a substance:

---

[3] Q.v. chapter 5.

> But what was the mysterious “Xerum 525”? When I first read of this strange material, I thought it might be some radioactive isotope of mercury, or possibly a more radioactive substance in chemical solution of some sort. It is perhaps worth noting that recently a strange substance known as “red mercury”, or mercury antimonite oxide, has been alleged to have strong neutron emitting properties when subjected to sudden explosive stress, and is alleged to be a non-fissile method of triggering the enormous fusion reactions of hydrogen bombs, as well as being capable, in its own right, of ….explosions in the small kiloton range. Perhaps the Nazis had stumbled onto a similar such substance during the war.[4]

But just what exactly is red mercury? Is it a powerful new type of conventional explosive, capable of triggering fusion reactions in deuterium and tritium without the need for an atomic bomb as the fuse, as some allege, making a “pure fusion” bomb a nightmarish possibility? Or is it, as others maintain, a fanciful post-Cold War hoax?

B. Mercury Pyro-Antimonate, or Red Mercury (Mercury Antimony Oxide)

1. Code-name DOVE

Red mercury, or mercury antimony oxide – chemical symbol $Hg_2Sb_2O_7$ – enjoyed a short, if notorious, career as the nuclear threat of the nineteen nineties. The story broke more or less simultaneously in various parts of the world, as the mysterious substance appeared to be behind a series of murders in the black market arms trade in post-apartheid South Africa, blocked smuggling attempts in the then recently-reunified Germany, and according to some stories, was even being sought by such “nations of concern” as Libya and Iraq as a basis for their own nuclear weapons programs. Then, almost as soon as the mysterious compound appeared, denunciations of the whole substance and subject as a “hoax” were issued by the United States Atomic

---

[4] Joseph P. Farrell, Reich of the Black Sun (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2004), p. 335.

Energy Commission and various other national and international nuclear regulatory agencies.

But one physicist who did not dismiss the story as a pure hoax was the American inventor of the neutron bomb, Dr. Sam Cohen. For Cohen, the possibility of "pure fusion" bombs – that is, hydrogen bombs that do not require an atom bomb as their trigger[5] - was brought home to him while he was on a visit to the Lawrence Livermore Laboratories during a visit he made there in the spring of 1958.[6] During this visit, Cohen was briefed on a pure fusion bomb project.

> This device, code-named DOVE, fascinated me. It contained no fissile material; rather, its explosive power derived from heavy hydrogen – deuterium and tritium. Because of its extremely low nuclear cost and its high yield – comparable to that of a very large conventional bomb – it would in a military application, represent a revolutionary new class of weapons. A device of this nature, having a yield the equivalent of 10 tons of TNT, could kill enemy troops out to hundreds of yards, with no significant urban destruction and contamination.[7]

The interest such a device held for the American military was more than just theoretical, for such devices would cost "roughly one-hundredth that of a battlefield fission weapon, meaning that these things could be turned out by the hundreds."[8]

The theory behind such a device was simple.

---

[5] The reason that an atom bomb is required as a "trigger" in a conventional hydrogen bomb is that, according to standard nuclear and thermonuclear theory, the enormous heat and pressures required to initiate fusion reactions can only be achieved by an atom bomb, which heats the atoms of deuterium and tritium – heavy hydrogen isotopes with one and two extra neutrons in their nuclei respectively – with enough energy to cause enough of them to collide and fuse into helium atoms, with a corresponding tremendous explosive release of energy and burst of neutrons. The neutrons which are not required by the helium atom are "kicked out" to form a deadly, but short-lived radiation. Thus, most of the long-lived radiation in a conventional hydrogen bomb comes not from the fusion reaction, but from the fission reaction of the atomic bomb that triggers the hydrogen bomb.

[6] Sam Cohen, "The Dove of War," National Review(December 17, 1995, 56-58,76), p. 56.

[7] Ibid.

[8] Ibid.

> The most promising approach was to use a large spherical high-explosive charge to concentrate the explosive energy in a very small capsule containing deuterium and tritium. In theory, this would cause the desired thermonuclear reaction. The program proceeded for some years and finally was terminated for lack of progress. Later, the Los Alamos laboratory had a go at it. But to my disappointment, and theirs, the problem remained intractable. The program ultimately was ended.[9]

That is, theoretically, it should be possible to take the implosion detonator for a conventional atomic bomb, and instead of using it to compress a critical mass of plutonium to initiate fission, one could replace the plutonium with deuterium or tritium, compressing it sufficiently to increase the energy and density, and hence the statistical probability of collision (fusion) of heavy hydrogen atoms, and voila! One would have a "small" hydrogen bomb without the need of an atom bomb to detonate it.

But the effort failed, and it should be obvious why: no conventional explosive possessed sufficient brisance[10] to compress the heavy hydrogen to pressures sufficient to initiate fusion reactions. This affords a clue to what Dr. Cohen is not telling in his article: the United States was searching for a conventional explosive of sufficient bursting power that, when used in an implosion detonator, would compress heavy hydrogen to fusion energies and pressures. If such could be found, the atom bomb would become as extinct as the dodo bird, for two obvious reasons. First, if such a conventional explosive could be found, then it could be used as a powerful explosive in its own right, replacing the need for small yield strategic and tactical fission weapons, since it would be far smaller than a fuel air bomb of similar yield, and far less costly than its fission counterparts. Secondly, if such an explosive could be found, then, as Cohen intimates, it could be used as the detonator for a very small, "clean," neutron-emitting hydrogen bomb, or, as Cohen does not intimate, as the detonator for the city-and-county-cracking blockbuster strategic hydrogen bomb. In either case, the cost would be far less than a conventional thermonuclear bomb.

---

[9] Sam Cohen, "The Dove of War," p. 56.,emphasis added.

[10] I.e., the energy of the explosive "shock" or pressure wave.

However, as Cohen relates, there the story ended, until the crack-up of the Soviet Union and the new Russian Republic's willingness to be more open about its nuclear weapons research.

> Several years before Livermore began DOVE, the Soviets had started their own "pure-fusion" development. Unlike the U.S. they were quite open about it, claiming it was directed solely for peaceful applications. In 1957, Soviet nuclear-weapon designer I.A. Artsimovich presented a paper in Geneva describing experiments done in 1952, based on the same high-explosive implosion technology used in DOVE. He claimed progress had been made. Shortly thereafter, however, Soviet researchers stopped all public mention of the project.
>
> On the other hand, the Soviet military had no hesitation in writing about such devices in their open military literature. In 1961, Colonel M. Pavlov, writing in Red Star, discussed almost precisely what I had briefed Paul Nitze on. Pavlov's calculations of weapon effectiveness were almost identical to mine, which were classified. This indicated to me that although the Soviets were not talking about research on DOVE, they were doing it.[11]

Then, in 1992, a Russian nuclear weapons expert revealed details about what the Russians called "third generation nuclear weapons," weapons that could "double the yield" with a "hundredfold reduction of weight compared to existing weapons."[12] Cohen cites another Russian authority on the subject as stating "You can drop a couple of hundred little bombs on foreign territory, the enemy is devastated, but for the aggressor there are no consequences,"[13] for with such weapons there is none of the deadly, long lasting radioactive cloud to drift back over the user's own country in a lethal radioactive fallout. Again, one is reminded of the Nazi's use of fuel-air bombs in their rocket batteries on the eastern front, only in this case, it really is a combination of the phrases "tactical nukes" and "carpet bombing."

As Cohen explains, the "doubling of yield" with a "hundred fold reduction in weight" clearly indicates that the Russians were not talking about standard battlefield tactical nuclear weapons, since even the most pure plutonium still had to be at least a few hundreds of grams simply to have enough material to generate spontaneous fission. Below a certain threshold of weight, fission was impossible, and a one hundredfold reduction would make a fission weapon inconceivable. The Russians therefore had to have been talking about a pure fusion weapon, about "some version of DOVE, based on a detonation technology that doesn't exist in the United States."[14] In other words, there were only two options for interpreting the Russians' remarks: either they were lying, or they had discovered the holy grail of thermonuclear bomb engineering, a conventional explosive with enough brisance to compress heavy hydrogen to fusion pressures and energies.

---

[11] Sam Cohen, "The Dove of War," p. 56.

[12] Ibid.

[13] Ibid.

And with this Cohen comments, albeit only briefly, on a whole new type of conventional explosive, of which red mercury is but one substance:

> In recent years unclassified research has been conducted on a new class of materials (including red mercury), referred to as ballotechnics. These materials use a number of elements in low density powder form. When they are subjected to high-pressure shock compression, chemical reactions take place which under certain conditions can produce energy concentrations considerably in excess of those from high explosives. Ballotechnics therefore offer a significantly greater prospect for success in attaining a very low yield pure-fusion weapon than the high-explosive techniques we and other nations have explored.[15]

Cohen also notes that red mercury was allegedly developed in the former Soviet Union precisely as a detonator for nuclear warheads. Indeed, its efficiency as a detonator was so great that a bomb the size of a hand grenade would be sufficient to blow a large ship out of the ocean.[16] After taking note of the fact that the CIA and various other American agencies dismissed the "red mercury" story as a hoax which they nevertheless were taking seriously – "whatever that means," Cohen quips[17] – he then says nothing more about it.

---

[14] Sam Cohen, "The Dove of War," p. 57, emphasis added.

[15] Ibid., p. 97.

[16] Ibid.

[17] Ibid.

2. The .01 Kiloton Yield Pure Fusion Bomb: The Logic of Fusion Weapons Development

But what has all this to do with red mercury and the Bell? The answer is a complex one, and to see why, one should place Dr. Cohen's remarks in the context of a general history of nuclear weapons developments. The pure fusion device represents the last in the various generations of nuclear weapons. One may summarize these various generations as follows:

a. First Generation Weapons:

> This generation of weapon comes in three distinct phases, ascending from the least to the more complex:
>
> (1) Radiological Weapons ("Dirty Bombs"): this is the simplest type of nuclear weapon, where a conventional explosive is used to disperse a cloud of deadly radioactive fallout over a wide area. The explosion is purely conventional, although it requires rudimentary nuclear technology to produce the required radioactive isotopes in sufficient quantity for such a weapon. This is the type of weapon many erroneously allege was the only nuclear weapon ever actually achieved by the Third Reich;
>
> (2) "The Semi-Fission" or "Atomic Fizzle" Bomb: This type of device actually does generate some nuclear combustion of the nuclear fuel, creating an enormous explosion, though falling short of a full fission reaction. It is a cross between the "dirty" bomb" above and the full fission device below. The explosion, since it does not combust the nuclear material nearly as completely, is also a very dirty bomb. Its yield would be in the fractions of a kiloton, still enormous by conventional standards, but still far short of an actual atom bomb. The atomic "fizzling firecracker" effect of such a bomb looks and has the shock wave of a typical explosion, but it is nonetheless a "fizzle."

(3) The Pure Fission, or Atomic Bomb: This type of device is the first genuinely nuclear bomb, where a critical mass of uranium 235 or plutonium 239 is assembled quickly enough to emit fast neutrons, which then split the atoms of the critical mass in a geometrical growth of fissioning atoms, producing the colossal explosion of an atomic bomb. The crictical mass is typically assembled by an implosion detonator of explosives surrounding a sphere of plutonium, which is crushed to supercritical density. Nonetheless, some of the critical mass remains unconsumed in the explosion no matter how efficient it is, and deadly radioactive fallout is always a by-product of such weapons. These are the types of weapons America first dropped on Japan. Note that to achieve this final stage a basic reactor technology, while not needed, is desirable, since plutonium, the most efficient fuel for such a device, can only be synthesized in a fully functional reactor. This will become an important point as we proceed.

b. Second Generation Weapons:

The next generation of weapons comes in three distinct chronological phases:

(1) Boosted Fission Weapons: As nuclear technology develops and becomes more proficient as isotope separation and enrichment, purer grade of fissile weapons grade material is produced, allowing more efficient combustion of the critical mass in the explosion, and a commensurate drop in deadly radioactive fallout. Additionally, some neutron emitting material such as deuterium or tritium is "salted" into the critical mass, to create an additional burst of high energy neutrons which increase the amount of neutrons in the chain reaction, increasing the yield of the bomb, making smaller bombs of higher yield possible. This is the first step towards miniaturizing an atom bomb, as well as the first step toward a fully fledged hydrogen bomb. Atomic bombs of this sort can also be very large, having yields in the several tens of kilotons. It is this type of weapon that some allege was tested by Nazi Germany in March of 1945 at the Ohrdruf troop parade ground in Thuringia.[18]

(2) Fission-Fusion (-Fission) or Full Hydrogen Bombs: The next step from boosted fission is to make the heavy hydrogen component of the bomb the main explosive punch of the weapon by packing the bomb with enough fusionable material that, when the atom bomb is detonated, the enormous pressures and temperatures created compress this material to such a degree its atoms collide and combine, or "fuse" (rather than split or fission), releasing truly stupendous amounts of energy and free neutrons. The yield of the first exemplars of such weapons were in the tens of megatons (one million tons of TNT equals a megaton, whereas an atom bomb is measured merely in kilotons, or one thousand tons of TNT). While the fusion reaction produces enormous radiation, this is in the form of gamma and x-rays and free neutrons, which, while deadly, dissipate rather quickly after the explosion when compared to the radiation caused by the atom bomb used to detonate it, which lingers for years. Theoretically, there is no limit to the size of a hydrogen bomb.[19] This type of bomb may have a second atom bomb added to increase the yield and radioactive fallout. It implies the existence of a highly developed nuclear technology both to miniaturize the atom bomb, and to create sufficient amounts of fusionable material – the heavy hydrogen isotopes deuterium and tritium - for a thermonuclear explosion.

---

[18] Q.v. my Reich of the Black Sun, chapter 4.

[19] The largest hydrogen bomb ever tested was done by the Soviet Union, which tested a deliverable weapon with a yield of 67 megatons in 1962!

(3) The Neutron Bomb: In this type of bomb the atom bomb detonator is made as small and efficient as possible, as is the heavy hydrogen component. The goal is to make the atomic explosion and radioactivity from the fission reaction as small as possible, while making the radioactivity from the neutrons of the heavy hydrogen as large as possible. The blast damage from such a weapon is thus comparatively small, while its radioactive effects are quite large. The aim is to minimize physical damage to buildings, while killing enemy troops. In effect, the neutron bomb is the opposite of the boosted fission bomb. In the latter, the heavy hydrogen is used to "boost" the yield of the atomic explosion itself, but in the neutron bomb, the atomic explosion is used to "boost" the neutron yield of the heavy hydrogen. The goal of the boosted fission bomb is to increase the explosion; the goal of the neutron bomb to decrease long-life radioactivity and atomic explosion, while increasing short-life deadly neutron radiation. This type of bomb requires the most advanced nuclear technology both in the production of high purity fissile material, the conventional explosives used to assemble it, the science and geometry of assembling the critical mass, and the technology to produce heavy hydrogen or other fusionable materials in high quantity.

(4) The "Salted" or "Doomsday" Bomb: While not strictly speaking a type of bomb in its own right, mention must be made of this type of nuclear warhead. A "salted" bomb is simply a fully fledged atomic or hydrogen bomb to which a "doping" or "salting" of highly radioactive material such as cobalt 60 or strontium 90 has been added. The aim is not only to produce a high explosive yield of maximum physical effect, but also to create a cloud of very deadly and very long-lived radiation to drift over an entire province or region in an enemy's territory. As such, any fully fission or fusion warhead may be "salted," although normally hydrogen bombs were thought to be the best for such purposes, since the mushroom cloud from their explosions reach high into the stratosphere, enabling the fallout to be carried over a wide area. These types of doomsday devices obviously had as much repercussion for the nation using them as for the nation being targeted by them. These were the doomsday weapons of the late 1950s and early 1960s. This type of weapon, while monstrous, constitutes an important step for the creation of the third generation of weapon, since to "salt" a bomb with exotic isotopes implies the existence of a sufficiently large and advanced nuclear technology to create such isotopes in the needed large quantities. This requires a sophisticated reactor technology.

c. Third Generation Weapons: The Pure Fusion, or Pure Hydrogen, Bomb: This is the type of weapon envisioned by project DOVE, and alluded to by the Russian military experts cited by Cohen. As has already been seen, it dispenses entirely with the need for an atomic bomb to set off the thermonuclear explosion. Thus, very "small" nuclear explosions can be created whose sole goal is to create deadly, though very short lived, bursts of neutrons over an area several hundreds of yards in diameter, killing all life within it, but causing a minimum of physical damage. This type of thermonuclear weapon requires not only the ability to manufacture heavy hydrogen in sufficient weapons quantity, but also a breakthrough in conventional explosive to achieve the pressures and energies necessary for atoms to fuse, without the necessity of an atom bomb for the "trigger."

What Dr. Cohen mentioned, as has been seen, is a small device with the equivalent explosive yield of ten tons of TNT, what by nuclear terms is a "small" explosion. But the idea that such an explosion would cause no physical damage is nonsense. Only imagine what setting off ten tons of TNT in a normal city block would do, and one gets the idea. In any case, if such a weapon were feasible, then it poses the nuclear nightmare in no uncertain terms, for one would no longer have to worry about acquiring an atomic bomb, a much more efficient device would be feasible at much less cost. Moreover, with no atom bomb needed, any radioactive effects are very short lived, since the neutrons released by the weapon eventually (and very quickly) run "out of steam" and lose their lethality. In short, there are relatively no radioactive fallout consequences to a nuclear exchange.

And there is one final, even more unthinkable, danger. It will be recalled that thermonuclear weapons can be made to be very large in terms of their yield, to the tens if not hundreds of megatons. Thus, within the – as yet unknown - limits of the ability of any such breakthrough in ballotechnic explosives, such fusion bombs could conceivably be made quite large. One is confronted with the dreadful prospect of a truly city- (or region-) busting thermonuclear bomb that is not only cheap to produce, light, and comparatively small, but also one with almost no radioactive consequences to the nation or group using it, and almost no radioactive signature that would allow such a device to be detected..

3. The Red Mercury Legend, Recipe, and "Xerum 525"

We now enter the dark and murky world of late twentieth century nuclear weapons research, a world with its own highly suggestive connection to the Bell, for precisely such a breakthrough in conventional explosives is alleged for the mysterious compound "red mercury." It is therefore worth recounting its legend, the "recipe" for its confection, and their possible relationship to the Bell's mysterious "Xerum 525".

a. The Red Mercury Legend

The Red Mercury Legend began in the immediate aftermath of the "collapse" of Communist Russia. With the collapse, several Russian nuclear scientists found themselves out of work, and out of money, and began to sell Russian nuclear secrets on the black market. One of the secrets was Red Mercury. Not much would have been known about it had not the story surfaced in connection with a series of bizarre murders in the Republic of South Africa, murders that raised the prospect that South Africa's own progress in nuclear armaments had proceeded much farther along under its apartheid governments than previously imagined.[20] The story also surfaced, appropriately enough, in Germany, when the German government successfully closed down a number of nuclear smuggling operations, including some allegedly trying to smuggle Red Mercury.[21]

The Red Mercury Legend, however, does not have directly to do with the number of deaths that seem to mysteriously occur in connection with it, but with its properties itself, for it is allegedly one of the prized "ballotechnical explosives," i.e., a "conventional" explosive capable of initiating thermonuclear fusion without an atom bomb.

Authors Peter Hounam and Steve McQuillan, who researched and published what may be the only book-length investigation of the subject, The Mini-Nuke Conspiracy: Mandela's Nuclear Nightmare, traced the origin of the substance to secret Russian nuclear installations around the city of Sverdlovsk.[22] Contacting a Russian named "George", they were quickly apprised of its various properties:

---

[20] For this story, see Peter Hounam and Steve McQuillan's The Mini-Nuke Conspiracy: Mandela's Nuclear Nightmare (Viking: 1995), ISBN 0-670-86925-2.

[21] Hournam and McQuillan note that Russian spy satellite kept a busy eye on (West) Germany's version of Area 51, a secret preserve in Zaire, central Africa, run by the German firm OTRAG (Orbital Transport and Rockets, AG, a (West) German company involved in cruise missile research. According to Hounam and McQuillan, the Russians also knew a great deal about the extent of South Africa's nuclear bomb program. "This may," they observe, "be connected with a spy swap that took place in 1969 between Moscow and Bonn. According to Chinese (!) intelligence sources, several West Germans held in the Soviet Union were swapped with Soviet spy Victor Loginov. The puzzling aspect of this is that Loginov had been caught spying in South Africa and had been secretly handed over to the West Germans."(p. 141). Consequently, once again, the finger points back to West Germany, and not Israel, as the real technological broker for South Africa's nuclear bomb development. The implication is clear: West Germany was using South Africa as a proxy state to develop its own nuclear arsenal, maintaining a strict adherence to the letter, while simultaneously circumventing the spirit of its NATO treaty obligations. This is not to cast aspersions on the West German government for doing so, for no power in its position would rationally rely on the good graces of its former enemies, France, Great Britain, the United States, or the Soviet Union, in the threat of a war or nuclear exchange between East and West.

> "When it is first made, it is a powder which is dark red in colour. But we irradiate it in a nuclear reactor which turns it into a very heavy liquid, the colour of wine. It is very, very expensive, because it is so difficult to make….."
>
> Then George lowered his voice: "You know, my friend, that one of the uses of red mercury is for nuclear weapons. You can make them in a different sort of way – nothing like the ones you have in the West – and they can be used by underdeveloped countries. That is why our mafia are in the black market."[23]

The plot thickens, because, of course, Sverdlovsk or Ekaterinburg is where U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers was shot down in May, 1960, trying to photograph the very same nuclear installations. And lest one forget, many allege that Lee Harvey Oswald, during his "defection" to the Soviet Union, betrayed the necessary radar secrets and operational parameters of the U-2 that allowed the Soviets to shoot Powers down.

In any case, "George" also related that the uses of Red Mercury could be used in atom bombs in an implosion detonator to compress a plutonium core, while at the same time generating a powerful burst of neutrons to make "the fissioning more efficient."[24] "George" also revealed the fact that many nations were trying quietly to obtain their own supply from the Russian mafia for use in their own nuclear programs, including, predictably enough, Saddam Hussein's Iraq, and much more importantly, Japan.[25]

Wierdly enough, the story of Red Mercury first surfaced publicly in post-Communist Russia, where Presidential Order number 29, signed by Boris Yeltsin, authorized a company called Promecology, headed by one Oleg Sadykov, to sell up to ten tons of the substance annually, an amount with an estimated value of 3.5 billion dollars![26] As if this were not enough, Sadykov claimed other unusual properties for the substance, among them "faster semiconductors" and newer, "cheaper methods of energy production."[27]

---

[22] Sverdlovsk has been re-named to its pre-revolutionary name of Ekaterinburg. This is the same city where Tsar Nicholas, Tsaritsa Alexandra and their family were murdered by the Bolsheviks.

[23] Peter Hounam and Steve McQuillan, The Mini-Nuke Conspiracy: Mandela's Nuclear Nightmare (Viking: 1995), p. 37.

[24] Peter Hounam and Steve McQuillan, The Mini-Nuke Conspiracy: Mandela's Nuclear Nightmare (Viking: 1995), p. 58.

[25] Ibid., p. 59.

At this point, "George"

> Was getting into his stride, disclosing that red mercury, in the form that was leaking on to the black market, perished after several months and became useless – unless buyers had the facility to refresh it. When it was delivered from the production plant, it was in the form of a dark-red honey-like liquid, but as it deteriorated it turned into a powdery sludge.[28]

Presumably "refreshing" means to re-insert the substance into a reactor core, and this may explain the reason that the Soviet military developed a series of small, portable reactors capable of being transported, presumably for battlefield use.

All of the claims put forward by the Russians in the immediate post-Communist era about "doubling yields" with a "hundredfold reduction in weight," about "red mercury" and new semiconductors and cheaper energy, led British nuclear physicist Frank Barnaby to come independently to the same conclusions as did Dr. Sam Cohen; all these claims "must mean that Russia is using a new technology unreported in Western scientific literature," since "such a tiny type of nuclear warhead would be impossible to construct using fissile materials such as plutonium-239 and uranium-235."[29]

---

[26] Ibid., p. 60. This amount of material seems excessively large for such an allegedly rare and costly substance to produce, and is one reason many official atomic energy agencies in the West dismissed the Red Mercury Legend as a hoax or as deliberate Russian disinformation.

[27] Ibid.

[28] Ibid.

[29] Peter Hounam and Steve McQuillan, The Mini-Nuke Conspiracy: Mandela's Nuclear Nightmare (Viking: 1995), p.62.

b. The Recipe and "Xerum 525"

Then, even more strangely, as stories about the strange substance began to appear in the western press, the Russians themselves appeared to be mystified about its properties, for according to a top secret KGB report obtained by British journalist Gwynne Roberts – a report prepared by the KGB's First Chief Directorate, Technical Branch for Boris Yeltsin himself – a few Western companies were also conducting their own very secret research into the substance, including Rockwell, General Dynamics, British Aerospace, and – perhaps with its own dark significance – the German armaments and aerospace firm Messerschmidt-Bölkow-Blohm, and the giant German electrical company, Siemens.[30] The same memorandum also noted that the compound was "a mercury salt of antimony with the formula $Hg_2Sb_2O_7$"[31] and that it was first produced in the Soviet Union near the high energy physics research institute in Dubna in 1968,[32] which possessed a reactor "suited to implanting the material with strontium, caesium and other isotopes."[33] The reactor was suitable, in other words, for "salting" or "doping" the Red Mercury with other highly radioactive material. At this point, the resemblance of the substance – heavy liquid, high radioactivity, deep wine colour – to the Bell's mysterious "Xerum 525" should be obvious.[34]

---

[30] Ibid., p. 64.

[31] Hounam and McQuillan also report that a substance reported to be Red Mercury was analyzed by the Bulgarians and found to be an amalgam of mercury and tellurium.(p. 112)

[32] The year 1968 is significant, since this is the first mention in western literature of the same compound, being investigated by explosives manufacturer DuPont.

[33] Peter Hounam and Steve McQuillan, The Mini-Nuke Conspiracy: Mandela's Nuclear Nightmare (Viking: 1995), p.. 64, emphasis added.

[34] Another form of "salting" appeared to be a compound of mercury antimony oxide "which came with a stick of uranium down the middle." (Ibid., p. 120) In regard to the topic of "salting", one South African researcher, in response to all the claims being made for the substance, concluded that without the presence of some radioactive isotope, "if (red mercury) is used in nuclear weapons at all, it may only be as a carrier for radioactive isotopes….Without enriched uranium or plutonium, red mercury remains only a toxic hazard." (Ibid., p. 126).

Whatever "Red Mercury" may be chemically, certain conclusions about its confection, about it "recipe", may now be drawn:

(1) Mercury itself was most likely involved in whatever compound was actually made – whether that compound was mercury antimony oxide or not – since as a high density liquid metal which can exist in its own radioactive isotope forms, it is an ideal vehicle for "salting" or "doping" with other more radioactive materials;
(2) Mercury also has its own peculiar stability properties which manifest themselves when it is highly stressed, as pointed out by Gerlach's article, and as claimed in ancient texts relating to "mercury vortex engines";
(3) With such a highly "salted" compound, as "Xerum 525" appears to have been, utilized in a device such as the Bell, any number of strange properties may have been discovered by the Germans; and finally and most importantly,
(4) It appears that the essential step in its confection is to subject whatever compound "Red Mercury" represents to exposure in a reactor core. More about this crucial point in a moment.

British physicist Frank Barnaby, on the basis of classified reports recovered from Russia, learned that the chemical composition of the substance prior to its immersion in a reactor core was also important, for the compound mercury antimony oxide was purportedly then "dissolved in ordinary mercury metal, the type used in thermometers. It was then put in containers which were placed in the heart of a nuclear reactor for about twenty days. Under intense neutron bombardment, and perhaps with the addition of catalysts, the material was transformed and became a very thick and heavy cherry-red liquid."[35] Authors Hounam and McQuillan add an interesting comment:

---

[35] Peter Hounam and Steve McQuillan, The Mini-Nuke Conspiracy: Mandela's Nuclear Nightmare (Viking: 1995), p. 127.

> Apparently the procedure was quite complicated and entailed mixing the powder with ordinary mercury in roughly equal molar weights, then adding other chemicals whose recipe was a closely guarded secret. After irradiation, the mixture was heated to evaporate the remaining mercury metal, leaving behind the gel.[36]

One may guess that perhaps the "secret ingredients" were hafnium or tantalum isomers, for reasons that will be apparent in a moment.

Note again the crucial requirement of immersion in a reactor for the precise purpose of subjecting the compound to high intensity neutron bombardment. We are now in a position to speculate why the material has such a high alleged density, and why it seems to "decay" after a few months, requiring "refreshing" by re-immersion in a reactor, for the chemical composition may be such that it allows the compound to absorb an excessively high and abnormal number of neutrons, which then slowly decays again. This would explain its extreme density. Likewise readers of my previous book on Nazi secret weapons, Reich of the Black Sun, will also recall mention of the Japanese intercept detailing German research in extremely high density materials such as obtained in certain types of stars, an allusion, perhaps, to precisely such German work with high density radioactive compounds immersed in nuclear reactors.

Finally, if the "recipe" for the confection of Red Mercury sounds a bit familiar, it should, for after all, it was Gerlach who hinted at what the possible inspiration may have been: alchemy.

c. Nuclear Isomers, Spin, GRASERS, and Gerlach

But why isotopes of hafnium and tantalum as the "secret ingredient(s)"? These substances are a strange form of radioactive isotope known as nuclear isomers, and isomers have some very strange properties indeed. Discovered in 1921, isomers are simply metastable or "extremely stable" forms of atoms that are brought about by a state of excitation of protons or neutrons in their nucleus, such that they require a change in their spin before they can release their pent-up energy. We are now a step closer to understanding the Bell, since it now appears that the device, due to the presence of "Xerum 525" was much more than a high-voltage, counter-rotating plasma trap as conjectured by Witkowski. It certainly was that, but it was also a kind of reactor as well, designed to release nuclear energy by extremely high stresses brought about by high speed rotation and, in my own speculative reconstruction, by abrupt high voltage direct current pulsations.

---

[36] Ibid., note 1, p. 127.

Most isomers have unusually short half-lives, but in the case of tantalum-180m, its half life is an extremely long 10^{15} years, or ten quadrillion years. And oddly enough, tantalum-180m is thought to have some connection to exploding stars, to supernovas.

Hafnium-178-2m is yet another metastable isomer, with a half life of a modest 31 years, but also apparently the isomer with the highest excitation energy, giving for one kilogram approximately a quarter megaton of yield of energy, mostly in the form of gamma rays. As such, it is one substance being investigated by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) as a possible ballotechnic explosive, capable not only for use in "pure fusion" bombs but also as a means for pumping a gamma-ray laser, or GRASER, recalling the Mossbauer Effect outlined in the previous chapter.

Note now what we have:

(1) Isomers release their energy through changes in their spin;
(2) Nuclear magnetic spin resonance and gravity are the specialized fields of Prof. Dr. Walther Gerlach, project head of the Bell;
(3) The Bell employed a heavy liquid substance called "Xerum 525", probably a "salted" compound based in part on mercury;
(4) This compound, since it was "salted", depended for its creation on immersion over a period of time in a reactor core to subject the material to neutron bombardment, creating a substance of abnormally high density;
(5) World War Two Japanese intercepts refer to Nazi research in extremely high density materials for fusion research;
(6) Descriptions of Red Mercury are eerily similar to "Xerum 525, and Red Mercury is purportedly a "ballotechnic" chemical explosive capable of generating fusion bombs without the need for an atom bomb;

(7) "Xerum 525" was subjected to high velocity counter-rotation or stress inside the Bell;

(8) "Xerum 525" may also have been subjected to repeated abrupt extremely high voltage direct current pulses inside the Bell;

(9) Gerlach wrote, nine years before the Nazis took power, of the need for a large scale project to investigate the phenomenon of mercury transmutation when mercury was subjected to precisely such stressing;

(10) Other "occult" and "esoteric" sources have long alleged that some similar such project was conducted in secret, by various secret societies in Germany prior to the Nazi era.

All these things combined tend to corroborate the notion that not only does the Bell represent a project most likely carried out over a long period of time, a project that the Nazis inherited from Weimar Germany and not one that they initiated, but it also corroborates the notion that at least some of this technology, probably in rudimentary form, made its way into the Soviet Union after the war, where it became the basis for the Russians' own research into ballotechnics and their peculiar properties.

C. Back to the Nazi Atom Bomb: The Implications of the Ohrdruf Test Reconsidered

But all these things not only suggest but require the use of a reactor in the confection of the compound, and this is problematic, since, after all, the Nazis were not supposed to have been successful in building a reactor. After all, even on the most radical reconstruction of their nuclear program, one that would allow them the achievement of a uranium fueled atom bomb, they never had a plutonium bomb because they were unable to synthesize that element in a reactor. No reactor, no plutonium bomb. No reactor, no "ballotechnic", no ability to "salt" a compound like "Xerum 525" by neutron bombardment – and neutron bombardment and absorption is the only conceivably effective way to achieve anomalously high density materials, highly speculative though these thoughts may be.

All these considerations lead inevitably back to the alleged German test of a small critical mass, high yield atom bomb at or near the Ohrdruf troop parade ground on March 4, 1945.[37]

1. The Claims for the Ohrdruf Test

In order to appreciate the significance of the Ohrdruf atomic bomb test for the story of the Bell being developed here, it is necessary to reprise some of the remarks I made in my previous book on Nazi secret weapons, Reich of the Black Sun, for readers who may not have read that book, or who may not be familiar with the Ohrdruf story. The test was first brought to the attention of the German researchers Edgar Meyer and Thomas Mehner by an elderly German expatriate in Argentina by the name of Adolf Bernd Freier, who shortly before his death, told of the test of an atom bomb on the troop parade ground near the village of Ohrdruf on March 4, 1945. At this point, it is necessary to cite my remarks from Reich of the Black Sun rather extensively, in order to highlight the problems it poses:

> In any case, the most problematical aspect of the alleged test of an atom bomb by the Nazis in the Orhdruf-Three Corners region of Thuringia comes from a rather specific, and rather startling, assertion. According to Freier, the test took place on March 4, 1945 at the old troop parade ground at Ohrdruf. There, a small scaffold about 6 meters high had been erected, at the top of which a small "atomic weapon"[38] was placed. The weapon, according to Freier, was "100 g", a mere one hundred grams!
>
> This is one of the most significant, and highly problematical, allegations regarding the real nature of the Nazi atom bomb project, made by someone supposedly involved in it, for as will be immediately obvious, 100 grams is far short of the 50 or so *kilo*grams of critical mass needed for a uranium-based atom bomb, as has been seen, and it is still well below the amount needed for the critical mass for a typical plutonium bomb. Yet, Freier is insistent upon this point, and moreover alleges that all the "slaves", the luckless concentration camp victims that were forced to take part in the test, within a circle of 500-600 meters from ground zero were killed.[39] This would give an area of approximately 1 to 1.2 kilometers of blast damage, roughly the effect of a modern tactical nuclear bomb. Such a blast radius would require an enormous amount of the then available conventional explosives, and that amount would far exceed the mere 100 grams Freier alleges for the device. These points indicate that the "A-Waffe: or "atomic weapon" was in fact a fully fledged atom bomb. So how does one explain the extraordinarily small critical mass, especially since the Manhattan Project was aiming for a uranium critical mass of around 50 kilograms?

---

[37] See my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 80-86.

[38] "A-Waffe", the wording again is not "Atombombe" but only A-waffe, or "A-weapon".

The question deserves serious consideration, for it affords yet another possible clue – if the allegation is to be credited with accuracy – into the real nature of the Nazi atom bomb project. We have seen already that the project was developed under several different and discreet groups for reasons partly due to security, and for reasons partly due to the practical nature of the German program…..The real atom bomb development occurred far from the prying eyes of Allied intelligence, under the auspices of the Reichspost and more importantly, under the direct auspices of the SS.

The second fact of the German atom bomb project we have likewise previously encountered: its emphasis on what was practically achievable during the war. Hence, while the Germans knew of the possibilities of plutonium and a plutonium-based atom bomb, and therefore knew that a functioning reactor used to produce plutonium for bombs would thereby enable Germany to develop more bombs for the same investment of fissile material, they also knew that a major technical hurdle lay across the path: the development of a successful reactor in the first place. Thus, as has been previously argued, they opted to develop a uranium-based bomb only, since uranium could be enriched to weapons grade purity without the necessity of the development of a reactor, and since they already possessed the technologies to do so, if employed en masse. Like its American Manhattan Project counterpart, the SS-run program relied on massive numbers of enrichment units to separate and purify isotope.

Now let us extend this line of reasoning further. Germany was also seeking to be able to deploy such bombs as warheads on its rockets. And that meant, given their limited lift capabilities, that the weight of the warheads had somehow to be reduced by several orders of magnitude for their rockets to be able to carry them. And there is an economic factor. Knowing that their industrial capacity would be strained by the effort, even with the help of tens of thousands of slave > laborers from the camps, another problem may have presented itself to the Germans, a problem illumined for them by their own knowledge of the possibilities offered by plutonium-based bombs: How does one get more bang for the Reichsmark without the use of plutonium? Is there a way to rely on less uranium in a critical mass assembly than is conventionally thought?[40]

---

[39] Citing Meyer and Mehner, Das Geheimnis der deutschen Atombombe, p. 83.

And at this point, the reader will recall the history of nuclear weapons generations given earlier in this chapter, for there is such a way, via "boosted fission," i.e., through the addition of some high neutron emitting source to the atomic fuel to spit extra fast neutrons into the chain reaction than would be caused by the critical mass itself. In short, the Germans were already thinking in terms of second generation nuclear weaponry.[41] And one such neutron emitting source is precisely deuterium and tritium;

> Thus, "boosted fission" would have afforded the German bomb program a practical way to increase the number of bombs available to them, and a reliable method for achieving an uncontrolled nuclear fission reaction with lower purity of enriched material. It is perhaps quite significant, then, that Freier's testimony concerning the Three Corners underground weapons factories also mentions the existence of an underground heavy water plant in the facilities, for heavy water, of course, contains atoms of deuterium and tritium (heavy hydrogen atoms with one and two extra neutrons in the nucleus respectively).[42]

And there I let matters lie, without going into further comment on the scientific and historical implications of Freier's allegations. That some sort of atomic test did take place in Ohrdruf seems apparent from the physical evidence of the region: old tree stumps are flattened in a radial pattern from a common center, as if blasted away in a huge explosion. And the region also has the highest background radiation of any area of modern Germany, a background radiation that is anomalous.

But let us consider, for a moment, the implication of that 100 grams. If that 100 grams represented plutonium, then it is just barely conceivable that the weapon tested at Ohrdruf was a fully functional "boosted fission" atom bomb, for that is just about the minimum possible amount of plutonium for a conventional modern boosted fission tactical nuclear bomb.

---

[40] Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 83-85, emphasis in the original.

[41] Q.v. Reich of the Black Sun, p. 85.

[42] Reich of the Black Sun, p. 85

But therein, too, lies the problem, for that very small amount of plutonium would require by the nature of the case a very high purity of plutonium. It would require not only a reactor technology, but a rather well-advanced one, and of course, German failures in building a conventional graphite moderated reactor are well-known, as are Heisenberg's own clumsy attempts at construction of a heavy-water moderated reactor towards the end of the war.[43] What all this leads up to is that a third generation nuclear weapon, not a neutron bomb as alleged by William Lyne, nor a "boosted fission" bomb as I implied in Reich of the Black Sun, but a pure fusion device, a pure hydrogen bomb, may in fact been the type of device tested at Ohrdruf, one relying, not on fission, but on the fusion of heavy hydrogen, to achieve its yield. Only such a device is in keeping with the very small weight and very high yield recorded for it. That the Germans had the technology to produce the heavy water for such a device is known. But to produce a conventional explosive to achieve the extremely high density and fusion energies necessary is another matter,

---

[43] The characterization of Heisenberg's notorious "Leipzig" experimental reactors as "failures" is another legacy and component of the Allied Legend. The fact that the reactors caught fire and were barely able to be put out, in a kind of proto-Chernobyl meltdown, is based on the assumption that Heisenberg was attempting to construct a conventional reactor. But as a close examination of the experiments and aims he was trying to achieve will demonstrate, Heisenberg, like his Manhattan Project counterparts, was "tickling the dragon's tail" and attempting to measure neutron cross-sections, all for the probable purpose of obtaining "the next best thing", namely, an atomic "fizzle" bomb, or "semi-fission" bomb. In that respect, Heisenberg's experiments were very successful, and doubtless pointed the way to quick achievement of such a bomb. Such a bomb, moreover, placed in the warhead of a V-2, would not require the heavy mechanism of a cannon shooting the critical mass together, since it could be assembled by the sheer kinetic energy of the impact of the warhead on the ground, thus creating the "fizzle" explosion, one much larger than the largest conventional bombs, but one still short of the Hiroshima or Nagasaki atom bombs. Precisely just such a concept is behind German atom bomb designs from that period. The following diagram, in fact, is reproduced in Samuel Goudsmit's book as a demonstration of the "failure" of German atom bomb physics during the war, since such a device is unlikely to have fissioned completely:

It will be noted that the bomb contained alternating layers of U^{235} and paraffin, which is used as a moderator to stop thermal neutrons from initiating fission in the uranium until the bomb smashed against the ground, assembling the critical mass. Note also the small sphere in the center of the device. This, like its Manhattan Bomb "Fat Man" counterpart, is an "urchin" of neutron emitting material that is smashed by the plunger, spitting out more thermal neutrons into the chain reaction. In short, this bomb is designed to "semi-fission" or "fizzle" with a colossal explosion and, more importantly, being a ground impact device, to churn up a massive cloud of deadly radioactivity. Additionally, there is the extremely slight chance that the critical mass assembly in this device, even though assymetrical, may have been fast enough to achieve full fission, though still well below the levels of efficiency as those achieved in the Little Boy bomb.

unless, of course, one recalls the Bell and its mysterious "Xerum 525" and its eerily peculiar resemblance to the alleged ballotechnical explosive compound Red Mercury.

But we are still not off the hook yet, for every mention of ballotechnics, from the alleged "Red Mercury" to exotic nuclear isomers, require at some point in the recipe a process of synthesis of the compound by neutron bombardment and absorption in a reactor. In short, one still requires a reactor. So both the Ohrdruf test, and the Bell's "Xerum 525" point unmistakably to the existence of a well-developed, though still quite hidden and unknown reactor technology inside Nazi Germany. And since their graphite moderated reactors were known to be failures, and since Heisenberg's heavy water moderated reactors and their "failures" are also well-known proto-Chernobyl "disasters", what other options were there?

2. The Implied Existence of a Reactor Technology: Hartek and Houtermann's "Cold" Reactors and the "Recipe"

Oddly enough, it is the physicist Fritz Houtermanns and the nuclear chemist Paul Hartek who point clearly and unequivocally to the existence within Nazi Germany of some very unusual, and even very refined, ideas for reactors with unusual, and very available moderators.

Hartek had early on hit upon the simple expedient of using tons of dry ice as a moderator in a reactor, a solution that avoided the cooling and energy problems of a conventional graphite reactor and moreover served his purposes well: the creation of large amounts of nuclear waste to be dusted over enemy cities.[44]

More significantly, as outlined in chapter nine of Reich of the Black Sun, Houtermanns pointed the way to a methane cooled and moderated reactor. In any case, in both concepts one sees the same principles and aims at work: the creation of a relatively "cool" reactor that avoided the problems associated with graphite, and the creation of a reactor for the express purpose of creating large quantities of isotopes. Both concepts, in any case, would have leant themselves rather more easily to the insertion of materials for "salting" via neutron bombardment. In other words, both types of reactor, and especially some version of Houtermanns' methane reactor, would have been ideal designs for creating a "doped" compound such as Red Mercury or Xerum 525.

---

[44] Q.v.. Geoffrey Brooks, Hitler's Vengeance Weapons: From V1 to Vimana, pp. 45-49.

The question of whether or not the Nazis would have actually constructed and operated some version of either reactor is a moot one, since the SS-run black projects would have concealed their existence quite successfully, as it did with the uranium enrichment facilities at Auschwitz. Given the nature of this program it is extremely unlikely that the SS would not have attempted from the earliest date feasible to construct and operate a reactor. The existence of the Ohdruf test and the Bell's mysterious "Xerum 525" point clearly, if not entirely conclusively, to the existence of just such a hidden and operational reactor technology inside the Third Reich, a technology that, as the existence of "Xerum 525" indicates, was used in some very exotic materials engineering. The Bell itself may thus be not only related to such technology, but it is also conceivable that it might, to coin a pun, be at its nucleus. Not only may the Germans have discovered some prototypical ballotechnic in "Xerum 525" but they may also have discovered some effect similar to the Mossbauer Effect.

D. Briefly Back to Roswell and MAJIC-12: General Nathan Twining's "White Hot Intelligence Estimate" Reconsidered

Readers of my previous book Reich of the Black Sun will doubtless be thinking that all this discussion about radioactively "doped" materials such as Red Mercury and "Xerum 525," as well as all the discussion on high electrical discharges and spin, sounds vaguely familiar. But for those for whom it does not, the following MAJIC-12 document, the "White Hot Intelligence Estimate," prepared as a technical overview of the craft and technologies recovered at Roswell, is cited just as it was cited in Reich of the Black Sun:

> 18. The following elements were analyzed and found to exist in the small neutronic power plant that was found inside ULAT-1:[45]
> a. UF6 in metallic form;[46]
> b. Hydrogen-fluoride gas;
> c. Water and uranium tetrafluoride;
> d. Powdered magnesium and potassium chlorate;
> e. Metal similar to lead with a chocolate brown color;
> f. U-235 in metallic form;
> g. Plastic-like material similar to NE 102;
> h. Beryllium;
> i. Pure aluminum;
> h.(sic) Thorium isotope material;
> j. (sic) plutonium powder.[47]

As I point out in Reich of the Black Sun, this list of materials, while exotic, was not beyond the technological capabilities of 1940s manufacture, either for Germany or for America. But what is unusual is that these materials are all components of what the document itself specifies is a "neutronic engine." Moreover, as other MAJIC-12 documents make clear, some of the scientists consulted by the early Roswell investigators were precisely the Paperclip expatriates Von Braun, Steinhof, and others.

As is likewise observed in Reich of the Black Sun, this exotic mixture of materials, like much else in the documents' technical descriptions of the Roswell wreckage, points to technologies clearly associated with the Bell, technologiues similar to "Xerum 525", and thus clearly point to Nazi Germany.[48]

E. A Summary and Conclusions

So, looking back over part two, what does one have?

---

[45] ULAT-1 is the name the document gives to the recovered vehicle.

[46] UF6: uranium hexafluoride.

[47] White Hot Intelligence Estimate, cited in Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 294-295. The out-of-alphabetical-sequence itemization is original to the document itself.

[48] Reich of the Black Sun, p. 301.

1. The Bell represented the culmination of a project possibly begun in the mid-1920s, under the instigation and inspiration of Walther Gerlach;
2. The Bell was intentionally designed, if one combines the insightful views of Witkowski with my own speculations, as “a plasma trap” and oscillator designed to subject highly doped radioactive elements in compound with mercury to extremes of mechanical rotation and electrical stress;
3. The purpose of this device may have been, in part, to test the gravitational, vorticular, and “scalar” physics implications of Gerlach’s and his student Hilgenberg’s views of the vorticular structure of matter and of the aether itself, the ultimate ingredients in any planet-busting doomsday weapon;
4. Thus, the project may have been inspired in part by a paleophysical “reconstruction” of ancient esoteric and classical texts regarding the properties of mercury and its “transmutability”, as Gerlach’s references to “alchemy” suggest;
5. Thus, the project may have also been intended to study not only the uses of this theory and technology for energy production and propulsion, but, as the existence of “Xerum 525” and its similarities to the alleged “ballotechnic” Red Mercury suggest, it may also have been intended to create and or investigate the areas of extremely high density matter states and their use as potential weapons in their own right, as distinct from any “scalar” weapons potential as may have existed under point 3 above.

Thus stated it is small wonder that the SS went to such extreme lengths to protect and preserve the secrets of the Bell. After all, what little is known of it is known only from one war crimes trial affidavit of an SS general being tried in post-war Poland for crimes against his own SS, and from the handful of surviving concentration camp victims who worked on the project or in its immediate environs, and who witnessed its effects. And of course, one of its original team members, Dr. Kurt Debus, was subsequently employed by NASA in a very critical position: as a director of the Kennedy Space Flight Center in Florida. Interestingly enough, Debus never once mentioned any connection, or gave any inkling, of the existence of a project as secret and as advanced as the Bell. Were it not for the action of the Polish government declassifying SS General Sporrenberg's – the general who was actually tasked with murdering the Bell's research technicians for the SS - war crimes trial affidavit, were it not for the stories of the few remaining eyewitnesses, and for the efforts of Igor Witkowski, nothing whatsoever would be known of it to this day.

But what they do tell is enough, if one follows the technical and theoretical clues through to their modern physics analogues, for they tell of a physics, a technology, a propulsion and a weaponry so advanced and so potentially destructive, that their conceptual basis remains hidden and cloaked behind the "public consumption physics" of relativity and an equally if not more severely flawed nineteenth century electrodynamics. Something else altogether occurred in Nazi Germany; some other paradigm was adopted early on and pursued with all the economic and scientific resources and intellectual brilliance that a modern and technologically sophisticated great power could muster. A whole new paradigm of physics – a combination of vortex aether, scalar, quantum-electrodynamic and nuclear physics – appears not only to have been outlined, but conceptually and experimentally developed. And if the speculation introduced here is correct, the Bell may represent a project begun approximately nine years before the Nazis even took power.

And the SS murdered its own to keep it a secret.

It stands to reason, then, that no personage, no matter how lofty, would be secure from a similar fate, if he threatened to expose the existence of such a technology or to expose the groups continuing to develop it in the utmost occulted secrecy.

Igor Witkowski's Sketch of the Bell
(Courtesy Igor Witkowski's The Truth About the Wunderwaffe)

"Myron's" Sketch of the Kecksburg Acorn,
Allegedly Taken to Wright Patterson Air Force Base where he glimpsed it.

Part Three:
"The Brotherhood":
NASA's Nazis, JFK, and MAJIC-12

"BARNEY
(He takes care to be extremely precise.)
There was a row of windows. A huge row of windows. Only divided by struts – or structures that prevented it from being one solid window. Or then – it would have been one solid window. And the evil face on the –
(He starts to say "leader.")
He looks like a German Nazi. He's a Nazi…"
(There is a questioning tone in his voice.)
DOCTOR
"He's a Nazi. Did he have a uniform?"
BARNEY
"Yes."
DOCTOR
"What kind of uniform?"
BARNEY
"He had a black scarf around his neck, dangling over his left shoulder."
Barney Hill to psychiatrist Benjamin Simon, M.D., under hypnosis,
From John G. Fuller's The Interrupted Journey, p. 116.

"The old war lords are going to come back. (South America) is full of these Nazis!...They will know that is only one kind of people that would do such a thing… that would have to be the Nazis and that is who is in power."
Jack Ruby on the JFK assassins,
In Kenn Thomas and Lincoln Lawrence, Mind Control Oswald, and JFK: Were we Controlled?, p. 102.

8.

"The Day After Corso:"

More MAJIC 12 Documents in the Light of Nazi Technology

"My boss, General Trudeau, asked me to use the army's ongoing weapons development and research program as a way to filter the Roswell technology into the mainstream of industrial development through the military defense contracting program."[1]

"The fact that this craft and other flying saucers... seemed to evidence a technology we'd seen evidenced by the Nazis caused the military to assume these flying saucers had hostile intentions and might have even interfered in human events during the war."[2]
Col. Philip J. Corso

The old adage has it that a picture is worth a thousand words. So, in this chapter of extensive documentary analysis and comparison of their contents with known Nazi technology, perhaps two pictures will be an adequate backdrop for our discussion. I am not the first to notice this comparison, nor, I imagine, will I be the last. Nonetheless, it is worth mentioning again that fact which most UFOlogists know: that the "modern era" of the UFO began with pilot Kenneth Arnold sighting several silvery metal objects skipping across the skies of Washington state while he was flying his private plane. Arnold's sighting, just a few days before the celebrated Roswell incident, inaugurated the modern era of the UFO.

---

[1] Col. Philip J. Corso (US Army, Ret.), with William J. Birnes, The Day After Roswell, p. 4.

[2] Ibid.

Kenneth Arnold and his Sketch of His UFO, 1947

But few are aware of the peculiar resemblance of Arnold’s “UFO” to a piece of very real, and very German, hardware already flying in 1939. the Flying Wing of the Horten Brothers.

The Horten Brothers' Flying Wing over Göttingen in 1939

And a close comparison of Arnold's sketch with the Horten brothers' designs for a jet-powered flying wing will exhibit even stronger parallels.

RLM

Flugzeugtypenblatt

Baumuster: „Horten IX“
Bauausführg.: V1, V2.
Baureihe:

Bildskizze
Maßstab 1:100
Maße in mm

150 l
150 l
600 l
360 l
Draufsicht
Vorderansicht
Schnitt A-B
Schnitt C-D
Schnitt E-F

The Hortens’ Design for a Jet Powered Flying Wing

So, with this pictorial backdrop, let us now review some of the more notorious MAJIC-12 documents.

A. MAJIC-12 Documentary Analysis

Many UFOlogists took their cue from Frank Edwards' bestselling Flying Saucers, Serious Business, maintaining that the early post-war UFO activity was reconnaissance of our military bases, and particularly, of our atomic testing:

> To this growing list of such "coincidences" we should by all means add the following cases:
>
> The explosions of the first manmade atomic bombs in 1945 were followed by the appearance of UFO's in numbers in 1949….
>
> The 1947 mass appearance of UFO's over the United States included numerous sightings around our atomic installations at Hanford and Oak Ridge, as well as the great scarred area near Alamagordo, New Mexico, where we had fired our first atomic device.[3]

This idea was picked up by Stanton Friedmann and others, who maintained the very plausible scenario that E.T. was monitoring our burgeoning nuclear and soon to be thermonuclear military capabilities, as any prudent intelligent society would monitor the military activities of a potential threat.

So far, so good.

But then Friedmann and others failed to notice the significance of the parenthetical statements Edwards himself makes in the above quotation at the ellipsis, statements I deliberately omitted from the above quotation:

> [The two bombs were exploded over Japan: the 1946 UFO's were over Scandinavia and Russia. If they were looking for the source of those atomic flashes, they had the right latitude but the wrong longitude.][4]

But, given the speculative history recounted in my previous book on Nazi secret weapons, Reich of the Black Sun, and the circumstantial case presented in it for German tests of nuclear devices in 1944 and early 1945 in the Baltic and in Thuringia, then the logic takes on a whole new context and sinister significance. If "E.T." was indeed monitoring atomic tests and human intentions, then the 1946 "fly-bys" over the Baltic and Scandinavia were indeed at the right place.

---

[3] Frank Edwards, Flying Saucers, Serious Business (London: Mayflower-Dell, 1967), pp. 136-137.

[4] Frank Edwards, Flying Saucers, Serious Business, p. 137.

And if one presses the logic a bit more, then it would appear that where the Nazis and their advanced technology went, E.T. and his reconnoitering UFOs were not far behind.

Which brings us at last to Roswell, to MAJIC-12, to Col. Philip J. Corso's well-known version of events and his explanation of the "real origin" of certain technologies, and of course, to the New Mexico Nazis.

While more will be said about Col. Corso's "Roswell-ET" thesis of the origin of some technologies typical of the mid-to-late 20th century, it is worth citing his own words here, since they bear directly on the alleged MAJIC-12 documents examined below:

> My boss, General Trudeau, asked me to use the army's ongoing weapons development and research program as a way to filter the Roswell technology into the mainstream of industrial development through the military defense contracting program. Today, items such as lasers, integrated circuitry, fiber-optics networks, accelerated particle-beam devices, and even the Kevlar material in bulletproof vests are all commonplace. Yet the seeds for all of them were found in the crash of the alien craft at Roswell and turned up in my files fourteen years later.[5]

The thesis is quite clear, an extraterrestrial craft crashed and was recovered near Roswell, New Mexico, and the recovered extra-terrestrial technology was back-engineered, leading directly to the integrated circuit via the transistor, to fiber optics, to the laser, and a host of other devices and technologies. This thesis must be born in mind as the following MAJIC-12 documents are analyzed, for we shall return to it at the end of this chapter.

Drs. Robert and Ryan Wood are well-known for their document authentication efforts concerning the MAJIC-12 "Cooper-Cantwheel" documents. Some of these documents they published in a book, which, according to the statements on their own website, argue conclusively for the existence of "ET" and the exotic "ET" origin of the crashed and recovered craft.

---

[5] Col. Philip J. Corso (US Army, ret), The Day After Roswell, p. 4.

However, some alleged MAJIC-12 documents that are not included in Robert and Ryan Wood's MAJESTIC-12 book, strongly if not conclusively indicate the continuation of an independent Nazi development of advanced aerodynes and propulsions systems begun during the war. These documents furthermore imply a clear connection between MJ-12 and the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and the subsequent mysterious death of former CIA Director William Colby.

These documents, analyzed individually in this chapter, are:

1. A Memorandum of the Air Materials Command, Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, classified SECRET and dated in September of 1947, to Brigadier General George Schulgen at the Offices of the Commanding General of the U.S. Army Air Forces;
2. A Memorandum of a "Research and Development Laboratory" Concerning Flying Saucers submitted to the Commanding General, Air Materials Command, Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and also to the Attention of Brigadier C. P. Cabell as USAAF Headquarters in Washington, dated 2 September (1947), with no classification indicated;
3. An apparent NSA Intercept between a American agent Code-named "Joshua" to a Soviet counterpart, mentioning "33 investors" as possible independent sources of funding for Soviet SDI research and development;
4. A Memo from "Thomas Cantwheel" Concerning Recovery, Building, and Test-Flight of so-called "S" Craft based on Recovery of Crashed Vehicle in Louisiana in 1942;
5. A Letter from "Source 1" to Timothy Cooper connecting MJ-12 to the Assassination of President Kennedy, dated June 23, 1999;
6. A Second Letter from "Source 1" to Timothy Cooper outlining significant Details of MJ-12 Operations, including its alleged privatization by President Nixon in 1969, dated July 7, 1999;

7. Dr. Edward Teller’s Pitch to President Reagan for SDI, no date and no classification;
8. Annex C Fragment indicating MJ-12 involvement in assassination of Secretary of War James Forrestal;
9. Double Top Secret Letter from President Franklin D. Roosevelt to General Marshal, concerning recovered Cape Girardeau Craft in 1941, dated February 22/24, 1944;
10. Top Secret Letter from President Franklin D. Roosevelt to General Marshall concerning recovery of crashed vehicle, dated February 27, 1942;
11. The “Bowen UFO Encyclopedia.”

In analyzing these documents, I have retyped them word for word as they appear on the Wood’s website, preserving the various font style changes, and noting page breaks in the original documents as follows: “===END===” or “====END PUBLICLY RECEIVED DOCUMENT====” or some similar notation. All italicized portions are emphases added to the documents by me to highlight those aspects discussed in the analysis sections which immediately follow each document. Such italicized portions do not occur in the documents themselves unless otherwise noted. I have also indicated blacked out text by strings of questions marks - ?????? – and attempted to preserve all capitalization.

Finally, for purposes of this chapter, authenticity issues are not discussed, since this would make an already lengthy book grow to enormous proportions. Instead, the documents are presumed to exist in the fuzzy area between “plain straight legitimate” and “cleverly concocted disinformation,” i.e., as even in the latter case containing some legitimate information. I do not believe that the documents are hoaxes outright. That being said, on to the documents themselves.

1. Document 1: Air Materials Command Secret Memo to Brig. Gen. George Schulgen, Sept 1947:

The text of the document is as follows, all emphasis has been added:

~~SECRET~~

HEADQUARTERS
AIR MATERIAL COMMAND

1. REPLY ADDRESS BOTH
COMMUNICATION AND ENVELOPE TO COMMANDING
GENERAL, AIR MATERIAL
COMMAND, ATTENTION
FOLLOWING OFFICE SYMBOL
TSDIN____________________

TSDIN/HMM/ig/6-4100
WRIGHT FIELD, DAYTON, OHIO

SUBJECT: AMC Opinion Concerning “Flying Discs”

TO: Commanding General
Army Air Forces
Washington 25, D. C.
ATTENTION: Brig. General George Schulgen
AC/AS-2

1. As requested by AC/AS-2 there is presented below the considered opinion of this Command concerning the so-called “Flying Discs.” This opinion is based on interrogation report data furnished by AC/AS-2 and preliminary studies by personnel of T-2 and Aircraft Laboratory, Engineering Division T-3. This opinion was arrived at in a conference between personnel form the Air Institute of Technology, Intelligence T-2, Office, Chief of Engineering Division, and the Aircraft, Power Plant and Propeller Laboratories of Engineering Division T-3.

2. It is the opinion that:

a. The phenomenon reported is something real and not visionary or fictitious.

b. There are objects probably approximating the shape of a disc, of such appreciable size as to appear to be as large as man-made aircraft.

c. There is a possibility that some of the incidents may be caused by natural phenomena, such as meteors.

d. The reported operating characteristics such as extreme rates of climb, maneuverability (particularly in roll), and action which must be considered evasive when sighted or contacted by friendly aircraft and radar, lend belief to the possibility that some of the objects are controlled either manually, automatically or remotely.

e. The apparent common description of the objects is as follows: -

(1) Metallic or light reflecting surface.

U-39552

~~SECRET~~

=========[PAGE BREAK]=======

~~SECRET~~

Basic Ltr for CG, AMC, WF to CO, AAF, Wash. D. C. subj “AMC Opinion Concerning “Flying Discs”.

(2) Absence of trail, except in a few instances when the object apparently was operating under high performance conditions.

(3) Circular or elliptical in shape, flat on bottom and domed on top.

(4) Several reports of well kept formation flights varying from three to nine objects.

(5) Normally no associated sound, except in three instances a substantial rumbling roar was noted.

(6) Level flight speeds normally above 300 knots are estimated.

f. It is possible within the present U. S. knowledge – provided extensive detailed development is undertaken – to construct a piloted aircraft which has the general description of the object in sub-paragraph (a) above which would be capable of an approximate range of 7000 miles at subsonic speeds.

g. Any developments in this country along the lines indicated would be extremely expensive, time consuming and at the considerable expense of current projects and therefore, if directed, should be set up independently of existing projects.

h. Due consideration must be given the following:-

(1) The possibility that these objects are of domestic origin – the product of some high security project not known to AC/AS-2 or this Command.

(2) The lack of physical evidence in the shape of crash recovered vehicles which would undeniably prove the existence of these objects.

(3) The possibility that some foreign nation has a form of propulsion possibly nuclear, which is outside of our domestic knowledge.

3. It is recommended that:-

a. Headquarters, Army Air Forces issue a directive assigning a priority, security classification and Code Name for a Detailed study of this matter to include the preparation of complete sets of all available and pertinent data which will then be made available to the Army, Navy, Atomic Energy Commission, JRDS, the Air Force Scientific Advisory Group, NACA, and the RAND and NEPA projects for comments and recommendations, with a preliminary report to be forwarded within 15 days of receipt of the data and a detailed report thereafter every 30 days as the investi-

~~SECRET~~

-2- U-39552

==========[END]========

ANALYSIS:

1. Note that no mention is made of the ET Hypothesis for the origin of recovered vehicular technology. This is extremely odd, for this fact places the memo in the same class as General Twining's "Air Accident Report" as reviewed in my Reich of the Black Sun.[6] Odder still is the fact that this date is also in the same approximate time frame as the "White Hot Intelligence Estimate", which, according to the analysis in Reich of the Black Sun,[7] contains two contradictory data-sets – the technological arguing for terrestrial origins and the biological arguing for ET origins – that are obfuscated in favor of the ET Hypothesis of its origin. The curious omission of the mention of any ET Hypothesis as an explanation of the craft's origins can be explained in one of two ways:

---

[6] See my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 303-308.

[7] Ibid., pp. 287-302.

   a. As the document itself avers, the origins of the craft are terrestrial, even though its technology is exotic; or,
   b. The absence of mention of the ET Hypothesis may be a reflection of a lower level of involvement, i.e., it is not mentioned except in the upper echelons of the organization that is beginning to emerge as "MJ-12". A lower level of involvement, however, is itself odd, since by some accounts the recovered craft was shipped to Wright Field directly from Texas, where it had been flown from Roswell AAFB. Thus, in terms of the internal contents of the document, the stronger of the two interpretations is that no "ET Hypothesis" deep cover story is needed. The recovered craft and its technology are therefore terrestrial, though exotic, in origin and nature.

2. Certain statements in the memo, considered individually and collectively, point to a terrestrial origin for the craft, and given the exotic nature of the recovered technology, these can only come from Nazi Germany:
   a. The craft is "of such appreciable size as to appear to be as large as man-made aircraft;" that is, nothing about the craft suggests to Air Materials Command (AMC) an extra-terrestrial origin; its size is consistent with the size and scale of human physiology;
   b. "The reported operating characteristics such as extreme rates of climb, maneuverability (particularly in roll), and action which must be considered evasive when sighted or contacted by friendly aircraft and radar, lend belief to the possibility that some of the objects are controlled either manually, automatically or remotely." This statement can be explained by references to known, though exotic, technologies of Nazi secret weapons and their alleged performance characteristics (extreme rates of climb), as well as German progress in remote control of aircraft;[8]

c. The "Absence of trail, except in a few instances when the object apparently was operating under high performance conditions" finds an analogue in the assertions of Vesco and Childress in Operation Intercept and Man-Made UFOs that the so-called Mark I saucers were but exotic but standard suction (jet) aircraft, which left the telltail contrails.[9] The statement "Normally no associated sound, except in three instances a substantial rumbling roar was noted," may also point to German development under Prof. Dr. Lippisch and others of high performance, high altitude ramjet engines; and finally,
d. The statement "Level flight speeds normally above 300 knots are estimated" once again indicates much too low a performance for any interplanetary craft, but point much more directly to something terrestrial. It should be noted that this speed is far below the 1200mph reported in the White Hot Intelligence Estimate of the same time period.[10] We are therefore dealing with two different craft, or the same craft has been observed under different circumstances. This very low performance figure may likewise indicate the nature of the document itself as being deliberately concocted disinformation, since such a speed would hardly call

---

[8] Recall the examples of the Triebflugel or Professor Lippisch's P-13 ramjet fighter from chapter one.

[9] Renato Vesco and David Hatcher Childress, Man-Made UFO's: Fifty Years of Suppression (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press), pp. 177-205.

[10] More will be said on the fact that the figure of 1,200 mph repeatedly appears in UFO articles of the period.

forth a secret memorandum. In my opinion, however, it may simply be due to a observation under low performance conditions.

3. The document concludes with three breathtaking statements that shatter the ET Hypothesis:

   “Due consideration must be given the following:-

   (1) The possibility that these objects are of domestic origin – the product of some high security project not known to AC/AS-2 or this Command.

   (2) The lack of physical evidence in the shape of crash recovered vehicles which would undeniably prove the existence of these objects.

   (3) The possibility that some foreign nation has a form of propulsion possibly nuclear, which is outside of our domestic knowledge.”

   Note that Air Materials Command, by statements (1) and (3), is not even thinking in terms of a recovered ET vehicle, i.e., nothing about the observed technology is so exotic as to compel the ET explanation. Note also, however, the extraordinarily curious statement in item (2), which suggests either that nothing was recovered at Roswell – a conclusion this author rejects – or that AMC has not actually seen what was recovered, or that what was recovered was not actually a UFO. Statement (3) would tend to mitigate against the interpretation that AMC has not actually seen what was recovered in the formulation of this memo, since any number of propulsion mechanisms could have suggested themselves to AMC in the absence of any actual craft to examine. That is AMC could just as easily have proposed magnetic, electromagnetic, or other forms of field propulsion if its conclusions were only based on the reports of the flight performance characteristics of UFOs. Therefore, it is most plausible that AMC had actually seen the craft and based its summary on an actual analysis of its propulsion unit. In this context, statement (3) becomes much more significant, since the only other country with a known interest in nuclear means of aircraft propulsion at that time period was Nazi Germany.[11] It is to be recalled that one specific area of research of the Kammlerstab was precisely in nuclear aircraft propulsion.

Which leaves the statement "Due consideration must be given the following: - The possibility that these objects are of domestic origin – the product of some high security project not known to AC/AS-2 or this Command" to be explained. First it is to be noted that no mention is made of the possibility of the technology being Soviet. Secondly, it is clear from the statement itself that AMC considers the possibility that it represents a project so black and secret that it is simply unknown to it. This would also allow the possibility that the technology is the product of a wholly independent project. In short, it allows the idea of a continued and independent Nazi continuation of its wartime projects.

4. These conclusions indicate that AMC is at a loss to explain the actual origin of the craft, though it is clear that it thinks of its origins as strictly terrestrial. Therefore the combined weight of the statements (1) and (3) at the end of the document point to the existence of a program of exotic aerodyne research and development wholly unknown to the USAAF and its premier air technology analysis unit, the AMC at Wright Field. Given that the document nowhere mentions the alleged recovery of ET biology, this tends to support the conclusions reached in Reich of the Black Sun that nothing about the recovered technology or its observed performance characteristics compelled to the conclusion that the craft was ET in origin. Indeed, the document implies the existence of a program, possibly completely independent of the US government, about which AMC knows nothing.

---

[11] See the statements of Tom Agoston referenced in my Reich of the Black Sun, p. 105. Additionally, since the Bell incorporated radioactive material in a device clearly intended in part to research exotic propulsion, it may loosely be described as a form of nuclear propulsion.

2. Document 2: Analytical Report of Research and Develop Laboratory of 2 September (1947)

Research and Development Laboratory

Analytical Report
IJKAD-2B/AO

2 September

SUBJECT Flying Saucers

TO: Commanding General
Air Material Command
Wright Field
Dayton, Ohio
ATTN: AC/A2-g
Brig. Gen. C. P. Cabell
Headquarters, Army Air Force
Washington 25, D. C.

1. As requested by your letter of 16 July 1947 this office has produced its conclusions on the manufacture, function and possible origin of the above referenced subject. On-site preliminary study data provided by personnel of T-2 and T-3, search and recovery team of the AFSWP, *'Paper Clip' personne*l, select personnel of the Army Air Forces Scientific Advisory Group and personnel of the Atomic Energy Commission Advisory Committee was utilized in the construction of our analysis.

2. The analyses of the Office of Research and Development are:

a. Aerodynamics and design evaluation studies performed by the Aircraft, Power Pant and Propeller Laboratories of Engineering Division T-2 personnel, has concluded that some nation has reached a stage of flight development in which the present ideas are entirely obsolete.

b. A notable advance in reducing drag and high-lifts, wing load is evident in the "cleaned up" refinement in the extreme. The absence of riveting and surface over-lapping indicates a "simplistic" concept that confronts our technology to match the "careful and well-considered compromises in respect to weight, aerodynamic refinement, and design."

c. The designers have managed to offset Bernouilli's theorem that allows the "total pressure in a flow" to be less at all points; we can liken this to the concept of 'conservation of energy' and their negating friction losses, which would dissipate heat.

d. The airfoil design of the circular wing is similar to the NACA 230 series with the exception to the wing plan form and thickness range requirements. The parasite drag appears to be controlled by the refinement of the design and elimination of protuberances. The induced drag lessens with the circular span inversely with the low aspect-ratio of the wing.

e. The fuselage/hull appears to fall into the seaplane type in concept by manifesting excellent hydrodynamic characteristics of low

-1-

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

"porpoising" tendencies. Conventional surface controls are absent in the wing and cabin portions of the recovered sections though what appears to be tabs or flaps are identified. Because there are no vertical or horizontal stabilizers on the craft, there are no fore-and-aft positions of the wing relative to the fuselage/hull. Wing incidence seems to be pre-selected via an in-flight trim computer to reduce drag attitude when the wing is at the angle of attack required at high speed and provide stability to lift the weight of the craft.

Basic ltr fr R&D, to CG, AMC, ATTN HQ, AAF, WASH. D. C., AC/AS-Z, MAJIC EYES,
Subj "Flying Saucer".

f. A general description of the craft is presented:

(1) Metallic skin of high polished finish. A comparison of AI3I H1112 steels indicates that the metals used to construct the craft exceed structure, chemical composition and mechanical properties currently under development. Metal specimens were subjected to AI3I S620, AI3I 3140, AI3I

4140, AI3I E4340, AI3I 5149m AU3U 5640, AI3I E 52100, and AI3I 430, 410 and 347 machining tests with negative results.

(2) Craft designed for high altitude flight. Automatic exhaust orifices were identified. A gyro-controlled wing stabilizer apparently maintains craft in a hover mode.

(3) Power plant may consist of a spherical reactor (hydrogen isotope type) connected to propulsion motors.

(4) 100 ft. in diameter with central section approximately 20 ft. Central cabin may have three flight decks: top level for flight control; central section for equipment and lower section for power plant and landing gear. Circular wing may have rotating section and adjustable leading edge.

(5) Top (Dome) may have the ability to recede into central section for high performance operations. Observation blisters are retract (sic) to provide observation top and bottom of wing.

(6) Construction is based on a 6:1 ratio.

(7) Flight instruments and controls are activated by optical wave guide fibers similar to glass rods except they are flexible and have a plastic cladding wrap. All functions may be operated by touch sensitive of texture sending stimuli. Instruments are covered by a plastic plate and seem to be color coded.

(8) Craft may have all weather navigation capability to allow ‘blind flying’. Possible television viewing used.

-2-

===========[END]==========

ANALYSIS:

1. Again, nothing in the document mentions the ET Hypothesis as an explanation for the origin of the recovered vehicle, even though, as indicated by the opening statement, the question of its origin is the very purpose originating the memo in the first place: "As requested by your letter of 16 July 1947 this office has produced its conclusions on the manufacture, function and possible origin of the above referenced subject." Indeed, the document is quite clear in its conclusions that "some nation has reached a stage of flight development in which the present ideas are entirely obsolete." If the ET Hypothesis were in view as an explanation of origins, this sentence would have been worded appropriately. And again, it is significant that something about the technology suggested to the Air Force that German Paperclip personnel could shed some light on the subject. The Germans, as has been seen from the chapters in part one, had made great strides in high altitude high performance aircraft. Thus, something about the technology looked "German."
2. Thus, this tends in turn to corroborate the notion that at some higher level of the MJ-12 group a deliberate deep cover story of ET origins is being put out in the documents themselves to conceal what is now becoming obvious: such high-altitude high performance craft were the exotic purview and provenance of the highly classified experimental research being done by Nazi Germany, since it is the only nation on earth at that time to have possessed, developed, and tested such technology. Thus, the implicit implication of this statement is that these projects were being carried forward after the war, independently or quasi-independently, by some unknown entity and in some unknown location(s).
3. The exact methods of this achievement are then clearly specified: "The designers have managed to offset Bernouilli's theorem that allows the "total pressure in a flow" to be less at all points; we can like this to the concept of 'conservation of energy' and their negating friction losses, which would dissipate heat." The mention of Bernouilli's theorem suggests that the aircraft was designed for high performance in the atmosphere, most likely in high altitude. Moreover, the brief and suggestive mention of the conservation of energy and negation of friction losses also strongly suggests German research into suctioning the boundary layer mentioned by Vesco and Childress in Man-Made UFOS, and even more suggestively, to experiments in non-equilibrium thermodynamics, a revolutionary physics concept for that time. These theoretical indicators again point clearly to developments in Nazi Germany, as it was again the only country to have undertaken such research. In this regard, it is once again perhaps significant that the recovered craft was brought to Air Materials Command at Wright Field, where a number of Paperclip scientists and technicians are known to have been employed at the time. This fact suggests once again that something about the craft immediately suggested a German provenance to the American personnel involved in its recovery and analysis.

4. The statement that "Wing incidence seems to be pre-selected via an in-flight trim computer to reduce drag attitude when the wing is at the angle of attack required at high speed and provide stability to lift the weight of the craft" mentions specifically an in flight computer. This fact may tend to contraindicate our thesis of continued independent Nazi development of such technologies. While it is true that both the Allies and Germans did develop early digital computers during the war, these were of such bulk and size that the complex calculations needed to perform trim computations would have been impractical on an aircraft, even an unconventional one, unless the Germans had also incorporated their semi-conductor technology in the development of much smaller computers for such purposes. While no evidence exists that this was ever done, the fact that both computing and prototypical transistor technology were possessed by them during the war means that it merely remained to combine the two. As has been argued in Reich of the Black Sun, this combining of highly advanced technologies is a signature and favored method of the Kammlerstab. And as was seen in chapter two, the Nazis had made great strides during the war of miniaturizing television cameras for use in guided missiles. Nonetheless, this would have remained a bulky device, and accordingly, this piece of information argues more persuasively for an E.T. or other exotic origin.

5. As noted, the "Craft (was) designed for high altitude flight. Automatic exhaust orifices were identified. A gyro-controlled wing stabilizer apparently maintains craft in a hover mode." The high altitude was again a characteristic of developments by Dr. Lippisch, Dr. Sanger, and others during the war, and the mention of "exhaust orifices" tends to support the conclusion that this is a suction or ramjet based craft of some sort. Note, however, that apparently the craft is capable of stationary hovering, a fact that would seem to preclude any conventional ramjet craft.
6. The description of a spherical power plant based apparently on hydrogen fusion fits similar descriptions given in the "White Hot Intelligence Estimate" and General Twining's "Air Accident Report" as discussed in Reich of the Black Sun.[12]
7. Note that "the circular wing may have (a) rotating section" or turbine of some sort. Again, this points to the researches of Bellonzo (as reported by Vesco/Childress in Man-Made UFOs), Schauberger, Fleissner and others in the Third Reich.
8. The "construction is based on a 6:1 ratio", which is the same ratio as reported in the MJ-12 documents examined in Reich of the Black Sun. This would tend to argue quite strongly for the fact that we are dealing with one and the same craft.
9. Note that flight control appears to be based on "optical wave guide fibers similar to glass rods except they are flexible and have a plastic cladding wrap," i.e., on fiber optics. Recall that Col. Corso also mentions this piece of technology as being deliberately ET in origin, and recovered from Roswell.
10. The same cannot be said, however, for the final statement: "Possible television viewing used." As has been seen, the Germans were greatly successful, largely due to their semiconductor achievements and ability to miniaturize klystron tubes, in miniaturizing television cameras to sufficiently small size and weight to be used as guidance systems on their lighter rockets such as the Tonne anti-aircraft missile.

---

[12] See Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 274-330.

11. Finally and most significantly, it must be noted that this memorandum is addressed to Brigadier General C. P. (Charles Peare) Cabell, who later became Deputy Director of Central Intelligence under Allen Dulles, and who was fired by President Kennedy ostensibly for his part in the Bay of Pigs fiasco. It is also to be noted, as some JFK assassination researchers have pointed out, that Cabell's brother was mayor of Dallas during the assassination, and was instrumental in the last minute change of the motorcade route to divert towards the Texas School Book Depository. We have then, with this document, a clear link from the UFO problem with all its "Nazi implications" as exhibited in the documents thus far examined, via Cabell, to the Kennedy assassination. Given that the origin of the craft in no wise is considered to be extra-terrestrial by the document, but rather to have originated with "some nation," we may safely speculate that there is a "Nazi" aspect not only lurking in the background of the 1947 UFO flap, but in that of the JFK assassination as well.

This UFO-JFK assassination connection is "corroborated" in a letter from Timothy Cooper's anonymous source almost immediately.

3. Document 3: Letter of Source 1 to Timothy Cooper:

Received 6/30/99
/s/ Timothy J Cooper

COPY
FILE

June 23, 1999

Mr. Timothy Cooper
P. O. Box 1206
Big Bear Lake, CA 92315

Mr. Cooper:

I am a retired CIA counterintelligence officer who worked for Jim Angleton from ?? ??????????????? secret files ???????????????????? sensitive files that would connect MJ-12 to JFK's murder. This document did not exist officially and has never been disclosed within the agency. AWD was very fearful of disclosure to unauthorized channels and leaks in the White House. I literally snatched the "Directives" from the fire and have kept them safe from review. To allow a review would compromise future directors and put the agency in a difficult position.

I feel the time is fast approaching when the files of the Majestic/Jehovah project will be pried loose and the public's right to know should begin. We in CI[13] have monitored civilian UFO research for a long time and have played a major role in keeping the UFO community busy. ?????????????????? that the MJ-12 Directives be sent to you and hopefully, be disseminated in a responsible manner.

I think your decision to work with Dr. Wood was a good one. He has credibility and good science skills. I hope you have read the BLUE BOOK/MAJIC report with an open mind and a critical eye for detail. This, you might say, is the missing BLUE BOOK files (don't confuse these with Project BLUE BOOK). You need proof and here it is. I don't think you realize it but you and Dr. Wood have started a shit storm. Nixon's SCEO ordered all MJ-12 documentation purged and destroyed. This one was not. This carbon copy is the only link to MJ-12 and don't expect any more in the future. Everything is now on computers and there is no existing paper trail to my knowledge. If you play your cards right, you should make progress with what you have. I caution you to be careful about who you talk to and trust with this information.

FILE

P.S, Not everyone has good intentions watch your ass

==========[END]==========

ANALYSIS:

What concerns us here is the brief statement toward the beginning of the document: "secret files ???????????????????? sensitive files that would connect MJ-12 to JFK's murder." We have seen in the analysis of the previous document that a clear connection exists between the UFO recovery program and the JFK assassination, via the memo to Brigadier General C. A. Cabell. This is corroborated by Cooper's anonymous source, who goes a step further by implying the existence of files connecting MJ-12 itself to the assassination. The implication is that, at its highest level, the MAJIC – 12 operation is its ultimate motivation, behind and higher than, but not in contradiction with, the other lesser motives advanced in JFK assassination literature, e.g., Mafia revenge, CIA revenge, and so on. This is further corroborated and expanded upon by Cooper's "source" in a second letter a few days later:

---

[13] CI: Counter-intelligence.

4. Document 4: Letter of Anonymous Source to Timothy Cooper Concerning Privatization of MJ-12:

Received 7/9/99 IMPORTANT July 7, 1999
Timothy J Cooper

Please read everything I am about to tell you as the truth. I am not a prankster or a wacko. My reason for typing this letter is to give you the facts as I know them. I am what is called in spy jargon a "walk in." I became such in 1982 when I learned about Bill Moore and his "aviary" sources who were really OSI agents. Unlike yourself and others, Moore was taken in by the deception about Majestic Twelve and EBE's. He was promised "inside" information regarding the Roswell case. From what I know about Moore and his desire to be on the "inside" led him to hoax some documents based on material supplied to him by OSI. I think he was so taken in by the material that he believed it himself and went off the deep end. You seemed by what I have been told and what I have read about you on the internet to be a level-headed guy with some real backing and good information on the UFO issue. You may not know now, but you have some really important stuff that is creating a lot of tension in the UFO community. If you don't, you have better appreciate it. You have been given information that no one has. To make my point a little more clearer, remember a few years back when you got the JFK memo William Colby got fingered in it and someone decided to shut him up before he was questioned about it. Coincidence? No way! He was not the first to be eliminated and won't be the last I assure you. You have been left alone for the most part I think because you are a nobody in the UFO community and have no credibility with them and that is good. I think "they" wanted it this way. Being a high profile personality is not always a good thing. Look how STF[14] got put on the "watch list" by the OSI.

---

[14] "STF": most likely well-known UFOlogist Stanton T. Friedman.

Too high of a profile and too vocal with national identity. Linda Howe is another example.

IMPORTANT

=======[PAGE BREAK]========

-2-IMPORTANT

When high profile individuals begin making waves with allegations and hard proof they put themselves in very difficult situations in which they have to defend constantly. The demise of several key personalities in just the last five years should tell you something.

Now, I want to fill you in on some things regarding the specific studies and conclusions by the defunct MJ-12 group.

a. MJ-12 does not exist as a government intelligence entity. It ceased to exist in 1969 and became a private concern financed by big money and big science.
b. The group has been called by many names. The most recent one was used in 1992 and was identified by the name JEHOVAH. At one time it was called ZODIAC and may have changed in 1995.
c. The UFO/EBE Working Group is an international consortium financed and supported by some of the biggest money institutions and private industrialists in the world.
d. MJ-12 was a consolidation of two Pentagon projects MAJESTIC and JEHOVAH overseen by a group of twelve high level military, intelligence, and scientific institutions within the defense establishment hence MJ-12. Each code name had classification above TOP SECRET and fell into a classification called MOST SECRET.
e. JEHOVAH was a DoD project to back engineer the hardware research the physics. Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer was appointed by Dr. Bush to head this project. The project name was coined by Albert Einstein in 1949. Oppenheimer held this job until 1953 until the AEC no longer considered him reliable and had his security clearance taken away and lost his government job in 1954.
f. Einstein became unreliable in 1955 and died of "cancer".
g. Oppenheimer continued as a MJ-12 player until his death from "cancer."
h. In 1960 MJ-12 concluded that UFOs were a possible threat to U.S. defenses and could instigate mass paranoia. They also concluded that the EBEs could gain control of U.S. defenses during a nuclear crisis by interfering with the guidance and targeting computers of the Atlas ICBMs based in Turkey.

IMPORTANT

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

-3-IMPORTANT

j. In 1960, President Eisenhower approved a joint defense plan written by MJ-12 that in the event the U.S. came under a nuclear attack by the USSR through EBE deception the U.S. would not retaliate with proposed USAF SIOP[15] and only after confirmation of UFO misidentification launch surgical strikes on the USSR. The purpose of the strikes was to take out USSR command and control infrastructure preventing an all out nuclear war.

k. During the Cuban Missile Crisis President Kennedy was briefed by MJ-12 and was told that the EBE deception was the reason the Soviets wanted to place first strike nuclear weapons in Cuba and he therefore restricted U.S. nuclear forces from initiating the GRAND TOUR to bomber strikes. General Lemay was so furious with JFK that he secretly gave orders to SAC to go ahead with SIOP in the event the U.S. perceived a first strike warning from Russia.

l. In 1963, JFK sought to ease the uneasy tension by extending cooperation with the USSR in outer space investigation of UFOs through a joint moon project. MJ-12 was opposed to this because they felt the militarization of the moon would place the U.S. in a dangerous situation with the EBEs who control the dark side of the moon.

m. In 1964, President Johnson was briefed by MJ-12 on the dangerous relationship with EBEs' and how they influenced the doctrines and policies of U.S. foreign relations. MJ-12 successfully prevented NICAP representatives from issuing their conclusions on UFOs to government leaders and blocked attempts by NICAP to brief Johnson on the UFO threat. MJ-12 was responsible for this coup.

n. In 1969, President Nixon was briefed by MJ-12 on all aspects of UFO activity and the EBE problem since 1947. Fearing possible leaks within his NSC and national security advisor Kissinger, Nixon approved a Special Classified Executive Order that required the U.S. intelligence community to purge all references to MJ-12 in their UFO files and to destroy documents that could connect him to JFK's assassination by MJ-12. As Vice President, Nixon approved ZR RIFLE written by the 40 Committee (MJ-1 issued new directives that sanctioned JFK's murder) for political assassination operations.

o. After the press learned of the Watergate break in and theft of documents that could link MJ-12 to the 40 Committee, MJ-12 arranged for Nixon's exposure to ZR RIFLE and blackmailed him which led to his resignation.

---

[15] SIOP was the US Air Force's targeting timetable for the nuclear and thermonuclear destruction of strategic targets in the Soviet Union.

p. MJ-12 arranged for the removal of FBI DIRECTOR J. Edgar Hoover in 1972 through "natural causes" because he "knew too much" and had used his contract killers to eliminate unrealiable individuals who could expose MJ-12's existence and activities

IMPORTANT

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

IMPORTANT

Mr. Cooper, I could go on and on but I think you get the gist of it. I cannot verify everything I have written here but with a little reading and research I think you can judge for yourself whether all this is true or not. Consider the JFK murder for example. Everyone believes he was a victim of a "lone nut" assassin as the Warren Commission Report said (which by the way was pure fiction). It was not the Cuban problem or the Cubans. Cuba was a screen to keep civilian researchers and the Congress away from the true motive for his death. Simply put, Kennedy would have interfered with MJ-12's effort to come up with a defense and a plausible explanation to the UFO/EBE problem and was too sensitive an issue for interruption even by a president. Everyone believes that a president is in charge of his own office. That is simply NOT TRUE! Presidents can be and are compromised about issues they don't need to know of. The reason is a simple one. It gives them plausible deniability just like CIA directors who are often asked this question: 'What do we know about UFOs?' Once exposed to the data they are changed and are stuck with this problem: 'What do I tell the President?' You can't tell the President without telling others. There is no such thing as a secret in the White House. Just look at the China espionage case. Until he really needs to know nothing will be told him and that is that. This is the real dilemma for those in "the know" because the EMEs (extraterrestrial materialized entities) have complete control over UFOs (not to be confused with man-made UAVs often mistaken for UFOs for they have been around since the 1950s and are operated and controlled by the USAF, CIA and NRO) and can appear anywhere as anything at any time. Do you understand now? The intelligence behind true UFO sighting cases can materialize and ????????

IMPORTANT

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

-5-IMPORTANT

appear at will to anyone at anytime any place. Why do you think the Air Force wanted Project Blue Book terminated? Because they could not explain them in conventional terms without being laughed at by scientists. After 12,000 cases they had all the evidence they needed and handed it over to the CIA and NSA. Was it mere coincidence that Blue Book was terminated after Apollo 11 landed on the moon? And, do you think it was mere coincidence that the Dead Sea Scrolls appeared about the same time the UFOs were found in New Mexico? Everything associated with UFOs has a purpose and so far, no one has figured it out yet. The appearance of UFOs in our century is no accident. Why do you think the other project was called JEHOVAH? Put the two together and see for yourself. It is SPIRITUAL! MJ-12 did and it scared the shit out of them. The 12 Apostles and the 12 created in 1947. One is an antitypical reflection of the other except the antitypical 12 are not spiritual men and couldn't grasp the significance and import of what was happening on the world scene. I know this sounds crazy and unbelievable but it is true, believe me. I have it from reliable sources that the CIA used Jacques Vallee's books as a guide for interpreting the human response to the UFO contact problem and I suggest you do the same. He is studied at the CIA and NSA and is quoted in their literature. One thing that you should concern yourself with and that is the possible undercurrent of image and character assassination that may be used against you if you are taken too seriously by the media and the press. Unless you have strong backing by the responsible members of the UFO

IMPORTANT

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

-6- IMPORTANT

and the media you could end up like some others who have tried to use this knowledge for their own personal gain. I also caution you about the severe psychological and spiritual affects from UFO investigations. Some well known researchers have suffered personal identity questions and loss of close family ties and even faith itself. Don't let this happen to you. You have to maintain a balance and perspective when investigating this phenomenon. Some have lost all sense of reality and have suffered insanity as a result. I wouldn't recommend getting involved in remote viewing for a solution. The EMEs are not to be believed and are quite deceptive. I'll let you in on one secret that MJ-12 found early on. The earth's environment has undergone significant changes and are part of the ENVIRONMENT! The redacted portion of the librarys (??) book found in New Mexico predicts a world wide invasion of EMEs in the year 2030 according to the lunar calendar which commences sometime after 1999. The CIA has undertaken a survey project called ENVIRONMENT through a joint CIA-civilian project called MEDEA to look at what damage has been caused by EME controlled UFO activity especially around nuclear power plants and industrial waste production. From what I know the earth's population is being contaminated and our DNA is being altered through pollution or our air, food supply, and water. The digital Trojan Horse is going to wreck havoc soon and we have the EMEs to blame (not really, the army is responsible for that one). To reduce it in a few words, WE ARE CATTLE AND SUBJECT TO SLAUGHTER BY EMEs. That is the GAME PLAN. The "insiders" know this and are taking advantage of the situation. Our only hope may come from extraterrestrial intervention. The world leaders see no viable solution except population control through biological warfare and regional conflicts. If UFOs trigger a nuclear exchange lets say between India and Pakistan, or between China and Japan, or North and South Korea, or between Israel and Iraq, the NATO countries will surely take advantage and try to finish them off. Keep an eye on Russia and China. They may start something along these lines and try to draw the U.S. into it. In order to justify this kind of population control they may invent a crisis from outer space. They may try to convince the world that extraterrestrials may invade our planet and eliminate the human race and therefore they need to deploy their space defenses and kill a number of people in the process. Already there are events taking place all over the U. S. and in other countries that are UFO related that bear this out. We are being inoculated for possible biological warfare and at the same time being conditioned (programmed) for extraterrestrial contact. This was and still is the agenda of secret government preparations. They know it is coming but don't know when and how.

IMPORTANT

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

IMPORTANT -7-

I hope you don't take all this as the rantings of a raging lunatic. What I have written is based on what I have learned over the years and my association with the intelligence community who is equally in the dark as to the ultimate conclusion. I have included some goodies for you which you might find helpful. Lot's of luck to you and keep plugging away. The answer may be a simple one.

IMPORTANT

============[END]==========

ANALYSIS:

This document contains a number of unsubstantiated assertions regarding MJ-12 and the nature of its ongoing operations, not the least of which is again its willingness to commit murder to maintain its deep secrecy and covert development of "recovered technology":

1. Former CIA director William Colby is allegedly murdered because of his implication by name in MJ-12 documents linked to the JFK assassination("y*ou may not know now, but you have some really important stuff that is creating a lot of tension in the UFO community. If you don't, you have better appreciate it. You have been given information that no one has. To make my point a little more clearer, remember a few years back when you got the JFK memo William Colby got fingered in it and someone decided to shut him up before he was questioned about it. Coincidence? No way! He was not the first to be eliminated and won't be the last I assure you.")*
2. MJ-12 appears to have been privatized by President Nixon, in part as a measure to insulate him from being implicated in involvement with the assassination, but, reading between the lines, also in part as a wider attempt to provide completely black cover to MJ-12 and independent sources of funding. Put differently, Cooper's anonymous source alleges a fantastic thing: MJ-12 has grown so powerful it no longer falls under the control of the American government, but has become a private and international concern in its own right, with deep corporate pockets. This is elaborated in three discrete statements by the source:
   a. "MJ-12 does not exist as a government intelligence entity. It ceased to exist in 1969 and became a private concern financed by big money and big science."
   b. "The UFO/EBE Working Group is an international consortium financed and supported by some of the biggest money institutions and private industrialists in the world."

c. "In 1969, President Nixon was briefed by MJ-12 on all aspects of UFO activity and the EBE problem since 1947. Fearing possible leaks within his NSC and national security advisor Kissinger, Nixon approved a Special Classified Executive Order that required the U.S. intelligence community to purge all references to MJ-12 in their UFO files and to destroy documents that could connect him to JFK's assassination by MJ-12. As Vice President, Nixon approved ZR RIFLE written by the 40 Committee (MJ-1 issued new directives that sanctioned JFK's murder) for political assassination operations."

d. These points suggest an independent and very secret development of advanced technologies. Notably the date was 1969, the same year as the first Apollo moon landings. One might therefore speculate on the following scenario: Gehlen, Von Braun, and scores of Nazi scientists and intelligence agents struck their famous "bargain" with the American military-industrial-national security complex, and in return, continued not only to pursue their projects, but to penetrate sensitive areas of the very government that presumed to control them, giving them a measure of "semi-independence." In 1969 their influence had grown so powerful, perhaps, that the relationship was severed, and MAJIC-12 became totally independent, perhaps merged into some "Nazi International" with deep corporate pockets.

3. Einstein and Oppenheimer were allegedly murdered by MJ-12 by being "given cancer" when they became "unreliable", presumably meaning no longer in sympathy with the goals or methods of the MJ-12 group. It is significant perhaps that Jack Ruby, the assassin of the alleged assassin of JFK, claimed that he was being "murdered by cancer" injections to silence him.
4. The Apollo Moon program apparently has some connection with a plan not only to militarize the moon jointly with the Russians,[16] but also is a program specifically designed at its heart – though the purpose remains secret – to investigate UFOs: “In 1963, JFK sought to ease the uneasy tension by extending cooperation with the USSR in outer space investigation of UFOs through a joint moon project. MJ-12 was opposed to this because they felt the militarization of the moon would place the U.S. in a dangerous situation with the EBEs who control the dark side of the moon.” In other words, the document gives its own version of the Two Space Programs hypothesis.

5. Kennedy was assassinated for attempted interference with the plans and goals of the MJ-12 group: “Simply put, Kennedy would have interfered with MJ-12's effort to come up with a defense and a plausible explanation to the UFO/EBE problem and was too sensitive an issue for interruption even by a president.”
6. The crash and recovery of a craft in Roswell in 1947 and the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls is not coincidental, implying that there is a spiritual dimension to the problem. Moreover, the cancellation of Blue Book after Apollo 11 landed is connected: “Was it mere coincidence that Blue Book was terminated after Apollo 11 landed on the moon? And, do you think it was mere coincidence that the Dead Sea Scrolls appeared about the same time the UFOs were found in New Mexico?” The implication is similar to my analysis in Reich of the Black Sun that the Byrd Highjump Expedition to Antarctica and the subsequent allegations he made in the Chilean press are connected to the events at Roswell and to the murder of Secretary of War James Forrestal. Cooper's source is, moreover, suggesting a

---

[16] See Corso, The Day After Roswell, pp. 276-332, which reproduces the Top Secret military study of a Lunar base called “Project Horizon.” It is to be noted that no program of cooperation with the Soviet Union is entertained in the document. Also interesting is the name of the rocket booster in the document that will be designed to reach and help construct the lunar military base: the Saturn II.

"spiritual" dimension by connecting the Dead Sea Scrolls to all of this.[17]

7. Cooper's source alleges that the portion of the recovered "leaf book" that is blacked out in the publicly received version of the "White Hot Intelligence Estimate"[18] contains information concerning the planned invasion and slaughter of humanity by EBEs in 2030: "I'll let you in on one secret that MJ-12 found early on. The earth's environment has undergone significant changes and are part of the ENVIRONMENT! The redacted portion of the librarys[19] (??) book found in New Mexico predicts a world wide invasion of EMEs in the year 2030 according to the lunar calendar which commences sometime after 1999."
8. Of interest is the coincidence of this genocidal agenda with Hitler's own genocidal plans for the world had he succeeded in conquering it: "To reduce it in a few words, WE ARE CATTLE AND SUBJECT TO SLAUGHTER BY EMEs. That is the GAME PLAN." Thus, even ideologically there appears to be a connection to Nazism, and likewise, to the "spiritual" aspect alleged by Cooper's source. This "globalcidal" agenda appears, however, to be the result of a planned deception of humanity: "In order to justify this kind of population control they may invent a crisis from outer space. They may try to convince the world that extraterrestrials may invade our planet and eliminate the human race and therefore they need to deploy their space defenses and kill a number of people in the process." This squares exactly with Von Braun's warning to Dr. Carol Rosin, as recorded in her affidavit and cited in Reich of the Black Sun.[20] In other words, the source's remarks may point to the survival and "internationalization and privatization" of the Nazi death cult via the privatization and internationalization of MJ-12 itself.

---

[17] This is not the place to comment on such problems, which I hope to do in a future book.

[18] See my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 293-303.

[19] This spelling occurs in the original document.

[20] For the Rosin affidavit see Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 318-319.

5. Document 5: Top Secret/Jehovah NSA Intercept:

I cite the following document in its entirety though only one small portion is of extreme interest:

?????????????

RY
Copy

TOP SECRET ~~JEHOVAH~~

CATEGORY = 12

MESSAGE = 12697232

DL #3421 1211123

??????????
YNYN EEI LAN ANL EXC OPC UTY OCS MDI SHP XP
FM ????
TO MAJSEC
REM
TOP SECRET MAJESTIC-12/33. CITE 227882. WARNING NOTICE-SENSITIVE INTELLIGENCE SOURCES AND METHODS INVOLVED THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION HAS BEEN RECEIEVED FROM A CONTROLLED CLANDESTINE INTERCEPT AND IS FORWARDED AS AN EVAULATIED REPORT NO. 112-98 DATE OF INFORMATION: AS INDICATED RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT SCIENTIST IN CHARGE OF PROJECT ‘KOHTPOA’ EQUIVALENT TO SDI WAS ASSASSINATED AFTER UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE OF PROJECT TO US COUNTERPART
TTCC

1. IN MOSCOW-S4 SS OF NOV 96, CODE NAME “MAJ” MOSCOW STATE UNIVERSITY SPOKE WITH US COUNTERPART CODE NAME ‘JOSHUA’. 2. “MAJ.” “WE HAVE EXPERIENCED PARETO IN KOHTOPA AND CANNOT GO ANY FURTHER WITH TEST. WHAT ARE YOUR RESULTS? OUR GROUP REQUIRES YOUR DATA FOR COMPARISON. CAN YOU ARRANGE IT? OUR RESULTS WHERE LESS SPECTACULAR WITH VERONEZ SITE AND DENERATED DISCLOUSE TO MOD AND KGB OFFICIALS. WE HAD HOPED FOR POSITIVE CONTACT BUT WAS NOT TO BE. WE COULD’T KEEP PRESS OUT OF IT. DID YOU EXPERIENCE THE SAME AT DREAMLAND?’ 3. ‘JOSHUA’: ‘WE MET WITH

> SIMILAR RESULTS SOMEWHAT ON THE POSITIVE SIDE BUT CONTACT PROVED ELUSIVE AND WE'RE NOT SURE OUR EFFORTS ARE PAYING OFF AS WE HAD HOPED. AS YOU KNOW, AREA 54 AND 17 ARE NOT SEALED OFF FROM PUBLIC SNOOPING AND MEDIA COVERAGE IS GROWING OVER 95 LEAKS BY TELLER. SAGAN TRIED TO SWAY QUALITY CONTROL TO RELOCATE BUT WERE NOT CONVINCED IT WOULD MATTER IN LIGHT OF OUR RECENT DOWN SIZING. I'M SORRY TO HEAR THE BAD NEWS BUT THERE IS LITTLE I CAN DO ON MY END. CONTROL IS ABSOLUTE AND MJ GROUP IS SEEKING NEW FUNDING BEFORE THE CHINA PROBLEM SURFACES. I SUGGEST YOU TRY CONTACTING '33' INVESTORS AS THEY ARE OPEN TO NEW VENTURES OF OUR TYPE. IMF WOULD MAKE THE LOAN IF YELTSIN COOPERATES AND STAYS OUT OF YUGOLAVIA.' CLASSIFIED BY RECORDED REPORTING OFFICER. EXEMPT FROM GENERAL DECLASSIFICATION SCHEDULE OF E.O. 11652, CATEGORY E2. IMPOSSIBLE TO DETERMINE DATE OF AUTOMATIC DECLASSIFICATION. #3421

TOP SECRET ~~JEHOVAH~~

==========[END DOCUMENT]==========

ANALYSIS:

Note the statement "I SUGGEST YOU TRY CONTACTING '33' INVESTORS AS THEY ARE OPEN TO NEW VENTURES OF OUR TYPE. IMF WOULD MAKE THE LOAN IF YELTSIN COOPERATES AND STAYS OUT OF YUGOLAVIA." The "33" investors may indicate a possible Masonic involvement as a private source of funding for ongoing, but privatized, MJ-12 type research and development. In this respect, it should be noted that not only were Presidents Roosevelt and Truman both Masons, but that their chief scientific advisor, who played such a crucial role both in the Manhattan Project and in MJ-12, Dr. Vannevar Bush, was also apparently a Mason, according to the following Canadian Masonic site (sponsored by the Grand Lodge of British Columbia).[21]

Note also that the first statement "WE HAVE EXPERIENCED PARETO IN KOHTOPA AND CANNOT GO ANY FURTHER WITH TEST. WHAT ARE YOUR RESULTS? OUR GROUP

---

[21] The site is <http:// freemasonry.bcy.ca/biography/bush_v/bush_v.html>

REQUIRES YOUR DATA FOR COMPARISON. CAN YOU ARRANGE IT? OUR RESULTS WHERE LESS SPECTACULAR WITH VERONEZ SITE AND DENERATED DISCLOUSE TO MOD AND KGB OFFICIALS. WE HAD HOPED FOR POSITIVE CONTACT BUT WAS NOT TO BE. WE COULD'T KEEP PRESS OUT OF IT. DID YOU EXPERIENCE THE SAME AT DREAMLAND?" also suggests some sort of Two Space Program Hypothesis, and a very secret one at that.

6. Document 6: Annex C Fragment:

ANNEX C (Cont'd)

9.??

10. Maintaining the MAJESTIC security has been successful in part because of compartmental function of classified activities of the level achieved by the security system of the Manhattan Project, and new legislation protecting nuclear weapons development.

11. In protecting the security operations of MAJESTIC, it has been necessary to ??????????????????? individuals who would compromise the intelligence efforts. While distasteful ??????????????????????t times, the use of ??????????????????? measures have been executed. The untimely death of Secretary Forrestal, was deemed necessary and inevitable.

12. General Statement: If such a crisis in government failure [unreadable] and assure the public's trust against an invasion from another planet, ???????????????????????????? ?? that the following would occur: "The pattern is familiar – employment of subversive agents; infiltration tactics, incitement of disorder and chaos to disrupt normal economy and thereby to undermine popular confidence in government and leaders; seizure of authority without reference to the will of the people."

13. Referenced REPORT TO THE PRESIDENT ????????? 47, BARRS 1-7, dated 19 September 1947, mentions: "in compliance with your directive . . . of 9 July 1947, the attached "REPORT ON FLYING SAUCERS" is respectfully submitted. In consonance with your instructions, advisors from > State, Treasury, War and Navy Departments [unreadable] on a tour and fact finding mission concerning the reality of other-world [unreadable]. [Unreadable] principle (sic) areas were visited. Successful efforts were [unreadable] all levels of scientists [unreadable] work in classified [unreadable] held with ?????????????????????????????????????? [unreadable] 1,200 memoranda and reports from intelligence and security individuals were received and considered. The report presents against a global background my estimates of the situation, current and projected, in U.S., and U.K., and recommendations deemed to be sound courses of action for formulating plans and policies concerning defenses of allied countries of the United States."

14. As a result of the Twining Report, the President was compelled to sign into law the National Security Act of 1947 which came into effect in 19 September. This did not help the DCI in carrying out the directives of the NSC in matters of intelligence collection concerning the flying saucer problem. The Intelligence Advisory Board was not allowing the new CIA to function as the primary collector of critical flying saucer data, ??

-5-

==========[END DOCUMENT]==========

ANALYSIS:

Note that the clear implication is that MJ-12 was involved in the death of Secretary of War James Forrestal, a death many have long considered suspicious: "In protecting the security operations of MAJESTIC, it has been necessary to ?????????????????? individuals who would compromise the intelligence efforts. While distasteful ??????????????????????t times, the use of ??????????????????? measures have been executed. The untimely death of Secretary Forrestal, was deemed necessary and inevitable." This calls for some speculation. Assuming that the relationship between Operation Highjump, possible (though improbable) Nazi survival in the Antarctic, and the Roswell crash and recovery are all related, might Forrestal have been privy to the deep cover "ET hypothesis" disinformation plans of MJ-12 and objected to them? Might he therefore have been considered "unreliable" or a risk to the long term, and apparently "globalcidal" goals of the group, as alleged by Cooper's source? If so, he would have been eliminated. Equally, if some rapprochement was struck between MJ-12 on behalf of the US Government and any independently surviving group of Nazis, and had Forrestal known of it, he most likely would have registered severe objections, and again been eliminated. We will most likely never know for certain, but the possibilities bear mentioning.

7. Document 7: Top Secret Memo of President Roosevelt to General Marshall 27 February 1942: and Document 8: Double Top Secret Letter of FDR to General Marshall Feb 22/24, 1944:

TOP SECRET

Top Secret
gm 25

February 27, 1942

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

February 27, 1942

MEMORANDUM FOR

CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE ARMY

I have considered the disposition of the material in possession of the Army that may be of great significance toward the development of a super weapon of war. I disagree with the argument that such information should be shared with our ally the Soviet Union. Consultation with Dr. Bush and other scientists on the issue of finding practical uses for the atomic secrets learned from study of celestial devices precludes any further discussion and I therefore authorize Dr. Bush to proceed with the project without further delay. This information is vital to the nation's superiority and must remain within the confines of state secrets. Any further discussion on the matter will be restricted to General Donovan, Dr. Bush, the Secretary of War and yourself. The challenge our nation faces is daunting and perilous in this undertaking and I have committed the resources of the government towards that end. You have my assurance that when circumstances are favorable and we are victorious, the Army will have the fruits of research in exploring further applications of this new wonder.

You may speak to me about this if the above is not wholly clear.

F. D. R.

TOP SECRET

==========[END DOCUMENT]==========

DOUBLE TOP SECRET

February 22, 1944

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

February 24, 1944

MEMORANDUM FOR

THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON NON-TERRESTRIAL SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

I agree with the OSRD[22] proposal of the recommendation put forward by Dr. Bush and Professor Einstein that a separate program be initiated at the earliest possible time. I also agree that application of non-terrestrial know how in atomic energy must be used in perfecting super weapons of war to affect the complete defeat of Germany and Japan. In view of the cost already incurred in the atomic bomb program, it would, at this time, be difficult to approve without further support of the Treasury Department and the military. I therefore have decided to forego such a enterprise. From the point of view of the informed members of the United States, our principle object is not to engage in exploratory research of this kind but to win the war as soon as possible.

Various points have been raised about the difficulties such an endeavor would pose to the already hardened research for advanced weapons programs and support groups in our war effort and I agree that now is not the time. It is my personal judgement that, when the war is won, and peace is once again restored, there will come a time when surplus funds may be available to pursue a program devoted to understanding non-terrestrial science and its technology which is still greatly undiscovered. I have had private discussions with Dr. Bush on this subject and the advice of several eminent scientists who believe the United States should take every advantage of such wonders that have come to us. I have heard the arguments of General Marshall and other members of the military that the United States must assume its destiny in this matter for the sake of the Nation's security in the post-war world and I have given assurances that such will be the case.

---

[22] OSRD: Office of Scientific Research and Development.

I appreciate the effort and time spent in producing valuable insights into the proposal to find ways of advancing our technology and national progress and in coming to grips with the reality that our planet is not the only one harboring intelligent life in the universe. I also commend the committee for the organization and planning that is evident in Dr. Bush's proposal and the delicate way in which it was presented. I trust the committee will appreciate the situation on which this office must render its decision.

FranklinDRoosevelt

DOUBLE TOP SECRET

DOUBLE TOP SECRET

==========[END DOCUMENT]==========

ANALYSIS:

From the foregoing alleged letters to Secretary of War General Marshall from President Franklin Roosevelt, we are in a position to draw some tentative conclusions:

1. The US retrieved craft with extraordinary technology earlier than Roswell, ca. 1941-42, most likely the alleged Cape Girardeau and Louisiana crashes noted previously. Given that the Nazi projects are at this time nowhere near the degree of progress they would be by the end of the war and after, we may reasonably assume that these recovered aircraft do not originate there.
2. Two conclusions follow from this:
   a. Given allegations of similar crashes in Fascist Italy ca 1933 and Nazi Germany ca 1936 as recounted in Reich of the Black Sun and elsewhere, it is possible that the US, Italy and Germany were all in the possession of extraterrestrial technology which each nation began to back-engineer. This would square with some interpretations of the off-the-record remarks made by Von Braun and Von Karmann to Twining as recorded by Col. Corso and mentioned later in this chapter and in Reich of the Black Sun.[23] An important question thus ensues: Why were these nations in possession of recovered craft? It is peculiar that it appears that these three major combatants alone were in possession of this technology. It should be noted that the alleged Italian and German crashes occurred prior to the announcement of nuclear fission's discovery by Otto Hahn in 1938, thus making it possible that this research itself was part of the process of back engineering. Given also that it appears from the data presented in Reich of the Black Sun that Germany was enriching uranium on a massive scale ca. as early as 1940, this may be a possible explanation.

---

[23] See my Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 302-306.

b. The alternative explanation is that the crash and recovered vehicle themselves are not extra-terrestrial, but stem from some independent terrestrially based group pursuing its own technological developments and that these vehicles crashed and were recovered by the Germans, Italians, and Americans. They may represent therefore a continuation of the 1890s "Air Ship Mystery".[24] In support of this contention the following MJ-12 document should be noted:

8. Document 9: Recovered, Reconstructed, and Test-Flown "S" Aircraft and Paper Clip Assistance:

4-15

THE "LOANED" AIRCRAFT WAS ACQUIRED IN 1945 FROM THE AIR TECHNICAL SERVICES COMMAND (ATSC, NOW AEDC, AIR FORCE SYSTEMS COMMAND). THE "S" AIRCRAFT WAS WAS(SIC.) DESIGNED FROM A AERODYNE RECOVERED IN 1942 IN LOUSIANA. RE-CONSTRUCTION COMMENCED IN 1945 WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF GERMAN SCIENTISTS AT WRIGHT FIELD. PROPULSION PROGRAMS TRIED TO DUPLICATE THE ATOMIC POWER PLANT FOUND ON THE AERODYNE CAPTURED IN LOUSIANA AND INTEGRATED THE

---

[24] It is to be noted that the German artist Dellschau, who was intimately connected to the 1890s airship mystery, constantly maintained this continued independent development was in fact the case. In support of this contention these memos should be read in the context of the AMC memos cited earlier, since the Roswell recovery does not evidence a technological basis sufficient to indicate extra-terrestrial origin for the vehicle.

MAGNETIC DRIVE SYSTEM DEVELOPED BY TESLA. THE AAF HOPED TO INTRODUCE THIS CRAFT IN WAR, BUT RESOURCES AND MONEY WAS NOT AVAILABLE. FUNDING WAS NOT AVAILABLE TO R&D UNTIL 1946, WHEN LEMAY TOOK OVER THE PROJECT. THE S CRAFT COULD TAKE OFF VERTCALLY (SIC) AND REACH ALTITUDES AS HIGH AS 90,000 FEET AT SUPERSONIC SPEEDS. THE CONTROLS WERE ELECTRONIC FLY BY WIRE AND THE PILOT LOOKED AT PROJECTION OF SYMBOLS ON A TRANSARENT SCREEN. THE CRAFT WAS SO COMPLICATED THAT TEST PILOTS HAD GREAT DIFFICULTY IN HIGH PERFORMANCE AT VERY HIGH ALTITUDES. SEVERAL TEST PILOTS WERE KILLED AS A RESULT OF DECOMPRESSION AND EJECTION. CAPSULE OR ESCAPE CYLINDERS WERE NOT DESIGNED FOR HIGH ALTITUDE EJECTIONS. AS A RESULT, ONE “S” CRAFT WAS LOST. THE MATERIALS USED IN THE CONSTRUCTION BY HUGHES AIRCRAFT COMPANY FAILED TO PROTECT THE TEST PILOTS IN MAXIMUM THROTTLE SETTINGS AND EXPOSED THEM TO HIGH DOSE OF RADIATION WHICH RESULTED IN SERIOUS ILLNESS AND DEATH. TEST FLIGHTS CONTINUED OVER THE WSPG IN EARLY 1947 AT KIRTLAND AAF, AND AT ALAMOGORDO AAF TULAROSA RANGE WITH BETTER RESULTS TO FLIGHT PERFORMANCE. BUT EXPOSURE TO THE RADIATION FROM THE ATOMIC ENGINE CONTINUED. IN 1947, THE “S” CRAFT WAS MODIFIED TO CARRY ATOMIC WEAPONS OVER LONG DISTANCES. BUT HIGH ALTITUDE FLIGHT SIMULATIONS AND PILOT SURVIBAILITY WAS STILL A PROBLEM. BELL AIRCRAFT WAS GIVEN THE CONTRACT FOR A ROCKET-POWERED AIRCRAFT TEST BED TO RECORD FLIGHT DATA AT SUPERSONIC SPEEDS AS A PROBLEM SOLVING LABORATORY. DATA COLLECTED FROM X-1 AIRCRAFT WAS UTILIZED FOR DESIGN MODIFICATION OF “S” CRAFT AERODYNAMIC TESTS AND LANGELY. RADIATION PROBLEMS PROMPTED A CHANGE IN THINKING IN THE TEST PILOT PROGRAM PROMPTED A NEW PILOT “MODEL” EXPERIMENT USING ALTERNATE CHOICE OF SUBJECTS AND SERVICES, AND WAS GIVEN SPECIAL STATUS EQUAL TO THE SECURITY OF THE ATOMIC BOMB PROGRAM. AT LEAST A DOZEN “S” CRAFT WERE BUILT AND TEST FLOWN. THREE WERE LOST DUE TO MECHANICAL FAILURE AND PILOT ERROR. TWO MORE “S” CRAFT WERE LOST ALONG WITH FIVE FATALITIES, THAT CAUSED THE AAF TO CANCEL THE PROJECT INDEFINITELY. ALL SIMILAR “WING” AIRCRAFT PROJECTED FOR SERVICE IN AAF WERE LIKEWISE CANCELLED IN 1949 AT THE RECOMMENDATION OF GENERAL LEMAY. FUTURE ATOMIC-POWERED AIRCRAFT WERE “PILOTLESS” AND WOULD BE CONTROLLED REMOTELY. THE AF WOULD NOT RESUME TESTING OF “LOANED” AERODYNES UNTIL PILOT SAFETY ISSUES WERE SATISFIED AND A MORE SECURE TEST RANGE COULD BE USED FOR AEROSPACE R&D PROGRAMS. AREA 51 IS BUT ONE SUCH RANGE AMONG THE SECRET TEST SITES NOW IN OPERATION. A SPECIAL

RECOVERY AND SECURITY UNIT CALLED S.T.U.D.S., WAS CREATED IN THE LATE 1980'S TO FACILITATE THE SERVICING OF NEWER "S" CRAFT FLIGHT TEST OPERATIONS. EFFORTS TO CONCEAL THE TRUE NATURE OF FLIGHT OPERATIONS WERE-SUCCESSFUL IN THAT THE AF DEVISED A COVER INTELLIGENCE PROJECT CALLED BLUE BOOK. PROJECT BLUE BOOK, AS A COVER PROHECT, WAS CONTROLLED BY THE CIA TO PROTECT AF TEST FLIGHT OPERATIONS FROM SPECULATION BY THE PUBLIC, AND CONVINCE THE SOVIETS THAT USAF HAD NO AIRCRAFT CAPABLE OF FLIGHT CHARACTERISTICS AND MANEUVERS AS OBSERVED AND REPORTED TO BLUE BOOK AND THE USAF UFO PROGRAM. IN 1958, PROJECT UFO AND MOON DUST WERE ACTIVATED WHEN USA INTERPLANETARY PHENOMENON UNIT OPERATIONS CEASED AND CIC RESPONSIBILITY FOR UFO SECURITY WAS TRANSFERRED TO USAFOSI.

=========[PAGE BREAK]========

RECONSTRUCTED DRAWING OF A UNIDENTIFIED (SIC) AERODYNE FOUND ON JULY 5, 1947, SOUTH OF SOCORRO, NEW MEXICO, BY MILITARY AND CIVILIAN MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES SPECIAL WEAPONS PROJECT.

(A drawing follows here roughly resembling Testor's model kit of the Roswell UFO)

APPROXIMATELY 100 FEET IN LENGTH
WIDTH OF CHIME IN AFT PORTION WAS APPROXIMATELY 60 FEET
CIME RAN THE LENTH OF AERODYNE
SKIN WAS SMOOTH. NO RIVETS, BOLTS, SEAMS, OR WELDS. LIKE PLASTIC.
NO CANOPY, WINDOWS. NO DOORS, INTAKES, EXHAUST.
MATERIAL WAS NOT INERT.
PROPULSION BELIEVED TO BE ATOMIC.
SILVER-GRAY IN COLOR WITH DARK CHIME SURFACES.
SADDLE SHAPE IN AFT SECTION AND SPEAR SHAPED NOSE.
NO LANDING GEAR WAS OBSERVED. EMBEDDED IN DESERT SAND. NOT DAMAGED.
TRANSPORTED TO ALAMOGORDO ARMY AIR FIELD

DRAWING APPROVED BY THOMAS CANTWHEEL
1-30-96

/s/Thomas Cantwheel

==========[END DOCUMENT]==========

ANALYSIS:

1. Note that the "S" craft was allegedly a design based on the wartime Louisiana recovery, done with the assistance of the Paper Clip scientists, implying that their special expertise was needed in order to bring the project to completion ("The 'loaned aircraft' was acquired in 1945 from the Air Technical Services Command (ATSC, now AEDC, Air Force Systems Command). The "S" aircraft was was (sic) designed from a aerodyne (sic) recovered in 1942 in Lousiana(sic). Reconstruction commenced in 1945 with the assistance of German scientists at Wright Field."
2. Note also that the propulsion unit is both atomic and magnetic – like the Bell - and has some connection to Tesla, implying a kind of field propulsion. ("Propulsion programs tried to duplicate the atomic power plant found on the aerodyne captured in Lousiana (sic) and integrated the magnetic drive system developed by Tesla.") These statements corroborate William Lyne's version of the Two Space Programs Hypothesis, with his peculiar reliance on Tesla's ideas.
3. Note that the "S" aircraft lacks an adequate ejection mechanism for ejection at high altitudes and/or high performance, a problem specifically solved by wartime Nazi research in conjunction with their own research into high altitude high performance ramjet aircraft. The report mentions the building of 12 "S" aircraft.
4. The craft were developed to carry and deploy atomic weapons remotely.
5. Finally and most importantly, the Air Force apparently developed Blue Book as a deep cover story to cloak the development of these craft and conceal their extraordinary flight characteristics behind the ET Myth as a disinformation operation designed to persuade the Soviets that the US had no such technological capability. This suggests that the nature of the recovered craft in Missouri in 1941 and Louisiana in 1942 were of extraordinary, though terrestrial and unknown, origin.

9: Document 10: Edward Teller's Pitch to president Reason for SDI:

RECEIVED
1 2 TJC
3-1

Edward Teller's pitch to President Reagan for SDI

I wish to bring to your attention of a very real(sic) and dangerous situation that threatens not only us, the world, but our very existence as a race. For over forty years I have been involved in developing advanced technologies in the defense of this country which would insure our security, freedom, and our form of government from surprise attack. As you must be aware, the Defense Department has initiated several space defense programs of vast proportions and at great expense. But there is a new and alarming development of which I am compelled to inform you of(sic). A menace greater that the nuclear arms race exists. It does not originate here on earth but comes from space itself. The agent of mass destruction has no reasoning psychology other than the ultimate destruction of our civilization and our way of life as we know it.

Obtaining critical information of this menace has been hard and time consuming and the facts seem to be tangled among dark threats of ultimate destruction; our innate fear of the unknown has interfered with our ability to comprehend it. A space attack could be real in the near future bringing with it the truth that by our inaction global war could be immensely accelerated. No longer can the United States be in the position which it found itself in 1947. This was realized and in January 1950 President Truman made the decision to go ahead with a defense program exceeding in scope and cost of the Manhattan Project. Late in president Eisenhower's office, several attempts was (sic) made to limit further development by prohibiting the testing of space defense weapons. A moratorium was entered into, a "gentlemen's agreement" whereby Russia and the United States concurred that testing be halted until further notice.

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

-2-

Unfortunately, secrecy and denial has prevented further work of which I now propose. A more detailed proposal is difficult to address in my brief, especially since I want it to be realistic and acceptable. Yet such a proposal is made here, both to give warning of what could happen and to begin a concrete discussion on the Space Defense Initiative program. The Defense Department could continue "classification" of critically key information of knowledge collected in 1947 and, therefore, its secrecy in its present form. Only a small number of documents might need to be kept secret for a longer period, but in those cases a few highly responsible persons would have to certify, year by year, that continued secrecy be maintained. What I wish to impress upon you is the need for absolute secrecy for the real reasons for a space defense. The real danger is the existence of secrecy can not be kept secret for ever. Our scientists will not turn to national defense unless they perceive an actual danger to the United States. A danger was perceived in 1939, only two years before Pearl Harbor. It is vital to the program that scientists should perceive the danger now, before it is too late. What is at stake is not only the prevention of defeat, but the prevention of cosmic war. Nevertheless, convincing the American people that military research is necessary is a difficult thing.

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

-3-

I am not speaking of another arms race, but rather a race of technology. One individual familiar with military technology and engineering of special intelligence, Dr. John S. Foster, Jr., estimates that in 1960 the United States and the USSR spent equal percentages of their military budgets on space defense and research and development, while in 1974 that percentage was three times as high in Russia as in the United States. The quality of future space defense weapons depends more on research and development than on any other factor; the obvious recommendation is that we should spend more on it. Today we spend approximately 10 percent, so this recommendation does not seem too difficult to implement.

Space defense plays important roles in military affairs, particularly in communications and intelligence gathering. Both of these functions apt to become increasingly important in the future. An extension of our information gathering, including continuous surveillance of deep space, should have high priority. This could be done in two ways. One is to increase our ability to launch satellites of all needed varieties within a short time. The other is to provide decoys in space, thereby multiplying the number of targets the enemy would have to knock out. A combination of these two procedures could, indeed, avert the enemy from taking out all our space vehicles. A third possibility is to prepare retaliation against the enemy by destroying their space vehicles. But, at least in regard to the important item of information gathering, the enemy relies on stealth more than their spacecraft than we do; therefore emphasis on the first two two (sic) approaches is recommended. In preparing decoys for space vehicles, the main objective would be for decoys to look like space vehicles that function like real ones. One the whole, this is not too difficult. Usually the main problem with a decoy is its mass. In order for a decoy to be inexpensive it must be light, but usually the light weight gives it away – for instance, in meeting air resistance, a lighter vehicle is more easily slowed down. Exceedingly little air resistance is encountered by space vehicles. Therefore, lightweight decoys for space vehicles are more feasible than decoys for almost any other application.

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

-4-

Remotely piloted vehicles (RPVs) have been developed and tested with marginal success. The possibility of RPVs exist for the enemy as well for us. The use of RPVs was first explored by the U.S. Air Force. It can also be applied to small space objects. An ingenious new circular airfoil design is now in experimental stage. A single wing is used in this design. Another design is also under development. This one uses a single wing as well, pivoting at its center at the fuselage. The wing is at right angles to the plane at takeoff and landing, but as the right wing points forward while the left wing points backward. A third design is the triangle-shaped wing and is the focus of intense development of which I have personal knowledge of.

There is the possibility that chemical and biological warfare may be used by the enemy. The fact that these forms of warfare may be inflicted upon us from space only fires my persistence in having the President consider my proposal seriously for a broad and comprehensive Space Defense Initiative.

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

-5-

There are several fronts which must be considered in my proposal to the president. We must boost spending in new, more powerful radar. We must encourage more research programs for lasers. And, we must investigate the use of microwave and pulse energy devices along with directed energy weapons in space systems. Particle beams are effective over vast distances and could aid in space defense against intruding enemy spacecraft.

Progress toward such an objective, since the end of World War II, has occurred in discouragingly small steps. Even so, we cannot afford to give up hope; we cannot afford to stop taking small steps. By the same token, we cannot afford not thinking of taking big ones. What I suggest is a big gamble but what if the gamble pays off through a major breakthrough in technology? We have the talent. We have the means. All that is lacking is the political will and determination to succeed. We must not hesitate nor falter. I believe all that I propose is possible and can be done. I ask that you weigh the risks and the benefits and consider what the alternative offers if we fail.

Presidential Approval [ ] Yes [ ] No

==========[END DOCUMENT]==========

ANALYSIS:

1. In Teller's private letter that the SDI program is called rather the Space Defense Initiative, rather than the Strategic Defense Initiative.
2. While it is clear from the opening paragraph that Teller's remarks throughout the letter could be construed as referring to (a) an extra-terrestrially based and originated threat, it is also true that his remarks could be construed (b) in the standard terrestrial sense as referring to the Soviet Union, or (c) in a non-standard terrestrial sense as referring to some unknown terrestrially originated and based threat that nonetheless possesses an advanced outer space traveling capability.
3. With regard to point 2(c) above, observe that the genocidal and "cosmic war" implications Teller alludes to could clearly indicate the presence, within whatever unknown threat constitutes the concern of his letter, of an ideology that is fundamentally a "globalcidal" death cult. It goes without saying that this ideology is consonant to deeply held Nazi beliefs. This may indicate an extra-terrestrial spiritual influence on the development of the ideology of Nazism.
4. Finally it is to be noted that Teller outlines a program of development of an exotic array of directed energy weapons, presumably for offensive as well as defensive purposes against this unknown threat.

PRELIMINARY SCENARIO ASSESSMENT

From the foregoing documentary considerations, a broad scenario emerges.

1. From 1933-1942, the US and the two Axis powers, Germany and Italy, recover and begin the process of back-engineering exotic technology discovered in crashed craft of unknown origin. Alternately, Nazi ideology formed the basis and environment for the development of a whole new physics and technology.

2. From the memos of President Roosevelt to General Marshall, it is clear that the US has concentrated its scientific efforts on the immediate defeat of Germany and Japan through the development and deployment of the atomic bomb via the Manhattan Project, and thus does not undertake immediate wartime development of the recovered technology.
3. From The Reich of the Black Sun is it clear that Nazi Germany, conversely, placed the highest priority on the development of the same sort of technology represented in the alleged crashes. It may be reasonably speculated that since the Kammlerstab had one such back-engineering component in its departmental organization that it may have been involved in the reverse engineering of such a craft. Alternatively, as was seen in Part Two, there was sufficient ideological and scientific ferment in Nazi Germany to pursue the development of the exotic physics represented by the Bell entirely independently of any need for an "ET Crash" to provide the motivation or impulse.
4. It is not germane to the case whether the pre-war and wartime recoveries were of extra-terrestrial origins or not. However, the quickness with which the USA was apparently able to redesign the recovered craft in its own "S" craft after the war indicates that the technology is not so exotic as to compel an ET interpretation of its origins. It is, however, as the MAJIC-12 Cooper-Cantwheel documents repeatedly note, exotic enough to require the assistance of the Nazi Paperclip personnel. In short, home-grown American talent is too unfamiliar with the type of physics and engineering that the recovered vehicles, whatever their origin may be, imply.
5. It also appears from the analysis of documents in the previous section that MJ-12 was involved, and may form the ultimate motivation behind, the murders of JFK and Secretary James Forrestal. The subsequent spin-off and privatization and internationalization of the group – as alleged by Cooper's Source 1 – would seem to indicate that some internal influence, with such international and financial connections, within the MJ-12 group was successful in gaining control of the group and wresting it from the control of the US government. Only two such groups are alluded to in the documents examined thus far: (a) the Masons, in the form of “the 33 investors” of Document 5 (implying the participation and involvement of fraternal groups in the financing and research of these Black projects); and (b) the Paperclip scientists, implying a connection to, and the continued existence of, post-war international Nazi organizations such as O.D.E.S.S.A. and others.

6. In such documents as have been examined, no specific technological or performance characteristic of the recovered craft is of sufficient performance characteristics to indicate an interstellar origin much less and interplanetary one, since the stated speeds for the vehicles are far below what they would need to be to make such travel possible. Moreover, it is apparent that the performance characteristics in most respects is consonant more with very high altitude high performance craft flying within the terrestrial atmosphere. Other than the allusions to atomic and magnetic drives, which would be consonant with exo-atmospheric flight, the speeds are still far too slow for practical interplanetary travel within our own solar system.
7. This in turn suggests that at the highest levels of MJ-12 a “deep cover” disinformation operation is being waged, to make people think in terms of (friendly) extra-terrestrial visitation as an explanation, while it is apparent from the examined documents that there is an even deeper level of concern that the craft are indeed hostile and have “globalcidal” intentions. Such an ideology is consonant with deeply held Nazi beliefs and is thus another subtle indicator of the nature of the US government’s concern and the reason for the high security operation that is MJ-12.
8. In respect to point 7, it is to be noted that Robert and Ryan Wood seem unable to concentrate on internal technical details of any MJ-12 document without obfuscating them in favor of the ET Hypothesis.
9. A possible means of explaining MJ-12 motivations behind the murder or sanction of the murder of JFK should be noted. If, as one of the documents suggested, JFK planned a joint expedition with the USSR to militarize the moon as a means of defense against the threat posed by UFOs, then this would seem, in light of the pattern emerging of US-USSR cooperation regarding Antarctica, that Kennedy posed a threat to MJ-12 and thereby to the secret Paperclip influence over MJ-12 and over the monopoly on the research and technology and weapons developed under its aegis.

10. The year 1969 is the year MJ-12 is privatized and internationalized. Thus, this might represent, on one point of view, a step in the reassembly of the broken and scattered parts of Nazi secret weapons black projects. If so, then corroboration is rather easy to find: it should be a relatively easy thing to look for details of corporate actions, mergers, and maneuvers and technological developments from that time forward to see if a pattern – if any – emerges that would corroborate or deny this hypothesis. Alternatively, one might look for strange corporate actions immediately prior to and during the period of the JFK assassination that have a German connection or flavor.

With these thoughts in hand, it is time to turn to the most sensational MAJIC-12 document in the Cooper-Cantwheel collection on the Woods' website. This is

10. Document 12: The MJ-12 "Bowen Encyclopedia on Flying Saucers": The Kammlerstab and Nazi Saucers

The Bowen "Encyclopedia on Flying Saucers", dated by Robert and Ryan Wood on their website to sometime in 1959, is the most crucial piece of MJ-12 documentary evidence that one can adduce in support of the above scenario and the thesis advanced in Reich of the Black Sun that what crashes in Roswell was a Nazi "saucer." In their website dedicated to the Cooper-Cantwheel and other MJ-12 documents, a website dedicated also to defending the ET Hypothesis as the primary explanation for 1940s UFO observations and crash retrievals and whose header motto is “Evidence That We Are Not Alone”,[25] the following introductory summary is given to the Bowen “Encyclopedia of UFOs”:

> Perhaps the most stunning physical evidence for the existence of the TOP SECRET/MAJIC program is this original 339 page manuscript about flying saucers. Written by Vernon Bowen, the original is on watermarked paper with red TOP SECRET/MAJIC stampings on some of the chapters. Most of the rest of the document is marked CONFIDENTIAL. Original handwritten marginalia shows linkages to Project White Hot, Twining, Vannevar Bush, Moon Dust, and Donald Menzel. A well written snapshot of the public history of flying saucers from 1947 to 1954. Bowen was personally well-connected to many top people.

A perusal of the document itself, which includes a brief biography of Bowen apparently written by himself which I include just as the document appears on the Woods’ website, indicates that the entire 339 page manuscript was his own private assembly of UFO reports, with his own stunning conclusions. This report must have apparently caused quite a flap of its own in MJ-12 corridors, since it was immediately classified “TOP SECRET/MAJIC” and foreign distribution was prohibited. A glance at its contents will show why. (See the bold italicized portions of the document which have been added for emphasis):

---

[25] (q.v. http://www.majesticdocuments.com/documents/ 1948-1959.php)

Vernon Bowen
51 Knofferam Road 1947—1955
Old Grennwich, Conn

12o Woodside Drive
Milbrook 1955-1959
Greenwich, Conn

25 Shoreacre Drive 1950-
Old Greenwich, Conn. Present

AN ENCYCLOPEDIA OF FLYING SAUCERS

By

VERNON BOWEN

THE HIGHEST CLASSIFICATION FOR THIS DOCUMENT IS TOP SECRET/MAJIC NO FORN DISSEM. FOR US “EYES ONLY”. EXEMPT FROM DECLASSIFICATION ORADA. “SPECIAL HANDLING REQUIRED – NOT RELEASABLE TO FOREIGN NATIONALS.”

Other writings by
Vernon Bowen

Children’s Books

THE LAZY BEAVER
THE WONDERFUL ADVENTURES OF TING LING
SNOW FOR CHRISTMAS
THE EMPEROR’S WHITE HORSES
(All published by David McKay Co.)
Records (Collaborations)

THE LITTLE TUNE THAT RAN AWAY (DECCA)
LITTLE TOMMY TINKLE (SIMON AND SCHUSTER GIANT GOLDEN RECORD)

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

(FOR THE INFORMATION OF USAF, NOT A BOOK JACKET)

Vernon Bowen is an advertising copywriter and supervisor. At present writing, he is copy supervisor on Frigidaire, Division of General Motors, for Dancer-Fitzgerald Sample, 547 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Formerly, for ten years, he was with the Geyer Agency, now Geyer, Morey, Hansen and Ballard. While there, he wrote and supervised copy on Kelvinator, Division of American Motors Corporation. And while there, he originated and wrote the Rambler cartoon campaign which has been credited, in part, with taking Rambler from a poor fourth into a strong position of contender with the "Big Three" - and in helping to raise American Motors stock from a low of 5 ¾ to a high of 99 ½.

In his spare time, Vernon Bowen has also written free-lance material. All of his published writings are in books or phonograph records for children.

One of his children's books was a Junior Literary Guild selection. Three of them are now used to some extent for remedial reading in certain public schools.

His last book, The Emperor's White Horses, the story of what happened to the famous Lipiszaners of the Spanish Riding School, Vienna, was double-checked by those who participated in the saving of the horses: Colonel Alois Podhejsky, Director, the Spanish Riding School, Hoffburg, Vienna; Mr.

=========[PAGE BREAK]==========

Charles R. Codman, Col. Ret., (deceased), who was the aide of the late General George S. Patton, Jr., U.S. Army, and who was present at the special performance given for General Patton and his spear-head armored division at Rostau; Mr. R. F. Perry, Col., ret., Alexandria, Va., who visited with members of the Spanish Riding School in Czechoslovakia; and Mr. Charles H. Reed, Col., ret., Richmond Virginian, who really spearheaded the saving of the Spanish Riding School and its horses while on his mission of persuading the head of German Intelligence to turn over to the U.S. the many truckloads of documents buried on the Czech-Austrian border – documents which are still secret today.

Vernon Bowen is about as American as the Ohio dirt he came from. One of his ancesstresses, by family tradition, was Pocahontas. Another ancestor, of this same strain, was John Perrot, later Parrot, who rode into Harrodsburg with Daniel Boone to colonize Kentucky. His paternal grandfather served with Fremont in Missouri.

Bowen when to the public schools in his native village of Newtown, Ohio, to Eastern High School in Cincinnati, Ohio, and Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio. He was graduated from Marietta in 1927, Cum Laude, Phi Beta Kappa. He is a member of Alpha Sigma Phi college fraternity, as is his son, who is in Marietta now. He is also a member of his fraternity's honorary fraternity, Delta Beta Zi, the original name of the fraternity when it was founded at Yale.

At present, Vernon Bowen is a deacon in First Congregational Church of Greenwich, Old Greenwich, Connecticut, Chairman of the church's Public Relations Committee, originator of the church's monthly illustrated news letter, writer of the church's special book on fund-raising, and writer of Marietta College's bluebook for fund-raising, which has been credited with the raising of a substantial number of dollars over the years.

Long interested in education, in Boy Scouting, and in modern methods of teaching, Vernon Bowen lives with his wife in a house that looks out over Greenwich Cove and the striper grounds where he hopes to be out this summer, fishing.

==========[PAGE BREAK AND APPARENT SKIP]==========

other oddities reported here. I wasn't present at any of them. I do not know whether they happened or not. I can only report on what public record stated that people claimed they saw.

==========[DOCUMENT EXCERPTED FROM CHAPTER XIV THE OTHER SIDE OF THE COIN]=============

Now, what evidence is there to show that, incredible though it may be, that saucers are actually none of these things – but new, secret, and utterly fantastic guided or piloted missiles or craft that are made right here on earth?

There is considerable evidence to support this belief.

And perhaps this is really the one and the only secret explanation of flying saucers. Perhaps Henry J. Taylor, Billy Ross, and some other commentators were right when they said, quite early in the game, that flying saucers are secret weapons. The only trouble was, they said they were U. S. weapons. Such may not have been the case at all. But certainly, the Taylor "expose" was the one thing that drew instant, emphatic and universal denial by every branch of the armed services, with even a spokesman for the President considering it important enough to issue a White House denial. There has been no such overwhelming denial of the extraterrestrial theory – there has even been semi-encouragement of this theory all along by the Air Force – although on one occasion a press conference was held following Major Keyhoe's article in TRUE that claimed saucers were from outer space, and there was another denial when President Eisenhower said, in late 1954, that he had been told that saucers were not from outer space.

But, when it was said that saucers were U. S. secret warcraft, there was instant, overwhelming denial.

Yet there is evidence that saucers may be a new and different type of earth craft.

This evidence is not secret. It has been published to millions of people in newspapers and magazines. This writer has had no access to classified information of any kind. There is absolutely nothing here that does not come from publications. The {Major thing?} here that the Intelligence Headquarters of Russia, England, Italy, Spain, Sweden, Yugoslavia and every other country of any consequence of the face of the globe does not know – or could easily acquire by the most amateurish of efforts.

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

There are no secrets here in this phase of the questioning of the nature of saucers. If there were secrets, they have long since been revealed and given away.

But no writer, to this author's knowledge, has ever brought together the bits of this part of the jig-saw puzzle. Yet they are very significant bits and merit the consideration of anyone trying to understand the mystery of the saucers.

Let's try to put some of the bits together:

Practically all writers on the subject of saucers have discounted the possibility that the saucers have their home basis right here on earth for three or four reasons – and, at first sight, these are very good reasons indeed. Among them are:

1. The extremely high speed.
2. The seemingly impossible maneuvering and the matter of G-pull – the pull of the earth's gravity – on any occupant or occupants.
3. The lack of sound in objects flying faster than sound. The motors of conventional planes roar, or their jets sound like giant blowtorches in the sky. And when a plan of conventional design passes through the sound barrier, it causes a noise like a clap of thunder. Many saucers observed were not [unreadable] a stationary position or a slow speed into speeds that would take them through the sound barrier.
==========[PAGE BREAK]==========
4. Glow. Many reporters of saucers described them as glowing, either with a greenish-blue glare on the inside, or with completely glowing exterior – reddish, orange, yellow, or other shades of the spectrum.

Now, how about these points? Do they absolutely eliminate the possibility that saucers may be earth craft, after all? Most writers, citing these points, have dismissed the possibilities. But let's take the points, one by one, and analyze them.

1. Speed. Conventional craft, using a principle of "boring through" air, or being forced through air, can get red hot, have metals creep, can fall apart or burn to a crisp from friction. However, by utilizing the principle of "Coanda's Effect," with the object flying in a partial vacuum of its own making, this problem could be overcome. In the opinion of Professor Henri Coanda, discoverer of the effect, as given to Art Buchwald, it would be overcome. In many observations of extremely high speeds in saucers, the most extreme speeds were not observed in the dense, lower layers of our atmosphere, but at higher altitudes, far, far above the earth. And a great many observations of saucers have indicated that they rise in a series of "stairsteps," and achieve greatest velocity only after gaining the upper reaches of the atmosphere where density, air resistance and friction would be much less.

And on this subject of speed it is well to remember that speeds seemingly impossible to earth craft in 1947, when the first when the first saucers were widely reported, seem terribly old-fashioned today. In 1947, men were trying to break the speed of sound – and secretly had succeeded. But this speed of something over 700 mph became old hat in just six years, when Maj. Charles E. Yeager, in December, 1955, flew a plane of conventional [unreadable] at more than 1,600 mph, or something more than two and one-half times the speed of sound.

============[PAGE BREAK]==========

And by May, 1955, scientists at Langley Field, Virginia, were reporting that they were doing research on guided missiles that might reach the speed of 15,000 mph. The scientists pointed out that then (1955) they were flying missiles at speeds of 3,000 mph from Wallops Island, Virginia.

Speed, and speed alone – even the fantastic higher speeds reported in saucers – would not seem to rule out completely the possibility that saucers are earth-made.

2. Maneuverability and G-pull on occupant. A great deal of nonsense has been written about the impossibility of having anything human survive the mad maneuvers observed in saucers: acute-angled turns with no slackening in speed; high-speed circling of two discs in the air, as if they were "charging their batteries;" tremendous acceleration from practically zero to thousands of miles an hour; abrupt reverses in direction.

But do all those things rule out the possibility that saucers might be man-made?

Not at all. First, they might be unmanned missiles – especially the tiny saucers that have been reported. Next, now things are coming to light about G-pull and the amount a human can survive, about "weightlessness", about other factors that may enter into the picture.

For instance, in the magazine Flying, March, 1951, p, 34, First Lieutenant Hugh F. McLaurin, USAF, answered the following questions: "What would happen [unreadable] plane and suddenly catapulted into the sky at 13,000 mph? Would you sweat blood? Would you be killed by acceleration or by pressure change? The answers are all no. Lt. McLaurin knew. He went through such a speed in a simulated test and survived.

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

Again, on G-pull, Major Donald E. Keyhoe, writing in TRUE, December, 1952, wrote: "By applying thrust in an opposite direction, abruptly reversing thrust, an object can be halted in seconds. Tests made with a G-sled by the Air Force has shown that, for a fraction of a second, human beings can take a force of 45 G's and survive."

Maybe Major Keyhoe was a little premature in his announcement of this fact, but as proof of it, USAF, on December 27, 1954, announced that one of its officers, Lt. Col. John P. Stapp, had gone from a record land speed of 652 mph to a dead stop in 1 ½ seconds without ill effects.

This quick stop was made at Holloman Air Development Center at Alamogordo, New Mexico. In the test, Col. Stapp was strapped to a 2,000-pound rocket sled. The only ill effects he suffered were a few blood blisters from dust particles in the air and two black eyes, caused by his eyeballs being thrown forward against his eyelids during the deceleration period.

In stopping, Col. Stapp withstood a pressure equal to 35 G's. His "weight" was more than three tons.

On the evening of December 28, 1954, there appeared in The New York World Telegram and Sun a writeup of an interview with Col. Stapp, made on the 27th, in which the colonel said that he expected to travel at 1,200 mph on the sled. This would be nearly twice as fast, with proportionate step-up in G-pressure, with a violent stop.

Can man withstand the violent maneuvers and sudden decelerations observed in flying saucers?

What do you think?

TOP SECRET/MAJIC

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

TOP SECRET/MAJIC

Another factor sometimes overlooked by writers on flying saucers is the phenomenon of weightlessness. If you don't weigh anything, ie., if you have a condition of zero gravity, you can't very well be slammed around by violent maneuvers in the air. Some writers have, however, pointed out that extraterrestrial craft, using some form of magnetic propulsion, might create their own gravitational fields and thus be free of gravitational pull from the earth. Maybe it is not as complicated as all that. In TRUE for July, 1954, writer Don Dwiggins described weightlessness as experienced in a two-seater plane flown by Maj. Edward J. Rackham, USAF acceptance pilot at Lockheed's Van Nuys, California, plant. They went up to only 20,000 feet and then went into a ballistic curve. The result was weightlessness. Mr. Dwiggins photographed a pack of cigarettes floating free in the cabin of the plane.

If weightlessness can be achieved with a ballistic curve, perhaps it can be achieved in some other, but fairly easy way. And such weightlessness might permit violent maneuvering, such as has been (reported?) in flying saucers.

But, if you will read further on the subject of weightlessness, you will find that this phenomenon presents grave hazards to the airman. LIFE Magazine, in an article in its December 6, 1954, issue, pointed out that weightlessness is a highly unpleasant sensation. Mr. airman has been able to stand it for more than 45 seconds. It produces severe disorientation. It dislocates all sense of direction. It produces nausea, nervous distress, loss of ability to co-ordinate, inability to guide the complex machinery of today's flying craft.

So one argument negates the other here.

TOP SECRET/MAJIC

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

TOP SECRET/MAJIC

3. The [unreadable] faster than sound.

Here, again, let us refer to the new principle of flight, the "Coanda Effect." If a craft is flying in a partial vacuum, not pushing and compressing the air in front of it, or "boring through" it, (it is) conceivable it might be possible to glide through the atmosphere and [unreadable] through the sound barrier without the "clap of thunder" made by conventional planes. As for the lack of sound issuing from the vehicle itself – motor, engine, turbine, jet – if there exists some new and little publicized principle of flight, plus some new and unpublished method of propulsion – magnetic, anti-gravitational, atomic - it might be possible to achieve soundlessness or near soundlessness.

4. Glow. This is one to really stump the experts, in trying to explain saucers as completely terrestrial craft. But certain atomic, radioactive materials glow with the same kind of blue-green glaze noted in some saucer interiors. But how a crew could be protected from gamma rays emanating from such materials poses an unanswerable question. As to glowing exteriors – Major Keyhoe had written at some length, theorizing that the glow of extraterrestrial space craft could come from varying degrees of heat caused by friction – from preactically white-hot to red-hot, to orange-hot, to yellow-hot, going from highest speeds to the lowest. Perhaps this same principle would hold true of earth-made craft, as well as extraterrestrial vehicles. As to the question of materials which could withstand these heats – present rocket speeds, as published in newspapers – are above 4,000 mph. Such speeds must cause temperatures that make rockets glow – like saucers.

All this may be very thin evidence that saucers could be earth craft. But [unreadable] a lot of evidence used to support [unreadable] thought. And there is a great deal of other evidence that is factual, not based upon pure supposition and theory.

TOP SECRET/MAJIC

==========[PAGE BREAK]==========

TOP SECRET/MAJIC

For instance, Professor Coanda discovered his new principle of flight back in 1937. This principle, described previously, in essence is that if you curve a jet of air, or many jets of air, you also create an artificial cyclone, with the tremendous lift of a cyclone, and can lift and maneuver a many-tonned object because you create a vacuum above the whirling blasts of the jets.

Here is a note that may fit:

In The Washington Daily News for May 14, 1949, was a copyrighted story that the flying discs were of Spanish-Nazi origin. The author held the view that the discs were very real, and that they were of a new "gyroscopic" design.

Here is another note that also fits somewhere into the picture: On May 22, 1952, there died in Rome, Italy, Giuseppe Belluzo, seventy-six, Italian scientists and former cabinet member. To quote from an article about him in The New York Herald Tribune:

"Mr. Belluzo, who was Minister of National Economy and Minister of Public Instruction during the Fascist regime of Benito Mussolini, was also an authority on cannon and projectiles and a firm believer in flying discs.

"In a newspaper article in 1950, he said that models for flying discs had been drawn in Germany and Italy at about the same time in 1942, and were shown to both Mussolini and Hitler.

"'There is nothing supernatural or Martian about flying discs,' Mr. [unreadable] simply national

TOP SECRET/MAJIC

==========[END]==========

ANALYSIS:

And here, just when it was getting good, the excerpt on the Woods' website ends. Nonetheless, enough detail is in it that readers of Reich of the Black Sun and of this book will have noted some stunning things.

1. First, it is evident that Bowen's personal contacts brought him into contact with the head of General Patton's intelligence as the following two statements attest:
   a. "Charles R. Codman, Col. Ret., (deceased), who was the aide of the late General George S. Patton, Jr., U.S. Army, and who was present at the special performance given for General Patton and his spear-head armored division at Rostau;"
   b. "Mr. Charles H. Reed, Col., ret., Richmond Virginian, who really spearheaded the saving of the Spanish Riding School and its horses while on his mission of persuading the head of German Intelligence to turn over to the U.S. the many truckloads of documents > buried on the Czech-Austrian border – documents which are still secret today."

Thus, General Patton's Third Army operations in the late war were connected not only with gathering in the treasure trove of the Kammlerstab's top secret research, but also German military intelligence's archives that had been secreted along the Czech-German border. These "archives" could in turn refer to one of three things:

   a. The archives of German Intelligence, particularly of General Reinhard Gehlen's Fremde Heere Ost;
   b. The actual German War Archives, which as recounted in Reich of the Black Sun had been transferred to Thuringia, which is along the German-Czech border;
   c. The secreted cache of reports, patents, and so on that the Kammlerstab moved to this area probably under the direct auspices and oversight of Kammler himself. The information at the end of Bowen's "Encyclopedia" tends to corroborate that this third alternative was the actual case, and tends also to support the thesis, argued in Reich of the Black Sun, that General Patton was somehow involved in a highly classified operation designed to secure Kammler and the Kammlerstab archives.

3. The bulk of the Bowen UFO Encyclopedia that is extant at the Woods' website is from Chapter XIV of Bowen's book, and it appears that Bowen most favors the terrestrial hypothesis as the explanation for the origin of the saucer phenomenon, and moreover that he believes them to be the product of secret black projects weapons development.
4. He then cites the newspaper article that clearly reveals what he thinks the origin of saucers to be. The secret projects of Nazi Germany (and Fascist Italy!).
   a. It is to be pointed out that Bowen's conclusions, coming as they do through personal acquaintance with Patton's intelligence aide, most likely set off alarm Bells – pun intended - within MJ-12, and that they also appear before the first publication of Renato Vesco's Intercept But Don't Shoot which likewise attributes the origin of the post-war UFO phenomenon to the wartime development of Nazi flying saucers and to Belluzo. Bowen has thus arrived at his conclusions independently and a full decade before Vesco's book was first published.

b. Bowen additionally provides the background that Belluzzo/Bellonzo was a highly placed official in Mussolini's government, and in addition to his expertise in steam turbines alleged in other sources, is also an expert in projectile ballistics. This would make Belluzzo/Bellonzo a leading candidate for membership in Mussolini's Top Secret UFO study group RS33 led by Marconi.
c. The strong implication of Bowen's remarks is that someone somewhere is continuing the secret development of this technology, and the context of the excerpt of his Encyclopedia also points to the people doing it: Nazis.

5. The last point raises the problem of the reasons for MJ-12's classification of his work. After all, as his preface makes clear that the work is drawn entirely from public accounts and sources. One may therefore conclude that the reasons for the classification lie precisely in the conclusions he draws from these of a terrestrial origin and a connection to Nazism and secret black project development of these technologies, a conclusion at odds with the "ET cover story" being adopted at the highest and deepest levels of the US military. Bowen himself makes this clear over and over in the chapter cited. But beyond this, what deeper motivation might lie behind the classification? I can see only three:
    a. The classification was extended because MJ-12 itself knew of the ultimate origins of at least the Roswell saucer, and suspected an independent entity was continuing the Nazi research, a hypothesis advanced in Reich of the Black Sun;
    b. The classification was extended because MJ-12, by this date, was already heavily infiltrated by the very Nazis and Paperclip personnel who were beginning to exercise great influence over the direction of the project and beginning to wrest it from control of the US government.

c. The membership of MJ-12 was divided into two camps at its top decision making level between groups with (1) no Nazi connections or sympathies, and who are ignorant of the extent of Nazi influence and R&D being conducted independently. This group suspects an independent entity is continuing the Nazi weapons development, and that this independent group is Nazi, and classifies the Encyclopedia for that reason; (2) a second group with Nazi ties and sympathies and perhaps ongoing contact with whatever entity continued, under a new name, which for convenience I have called the "SS Brotherhood of the Bell". This group, for entirely different reasons, would want to deflect attention away not only from Nazi survival, but from Nazi continuance of advance technologies and weapons projects, and from the fact that this continuance was independent of any sovereign state. Classification by either group would also be unavoidable since the document also hints that Patton's strange end-war operations can only be satisfactorily explained in connection to German military intelligence and/or to the Kammlerstab, its archives and personnel, to American Black projects and nominal American "jurisdiction".

6. The essence of these conclusions tends to corroborate as well the basic thesis behind William Harbison's novel Genesis that such independent development was indeed the ultimate controlling power behind the more well-known UFO crash-retrieval cases and that this power was specifically tied to Nazism.

B. The Day After Corso:
An Examination of Corso's The Day After Roswell In the Light of the Cooper-Cantwheel Documents And German Wartime Technology

Corso's thesis bears repeating once again:

> My boss, General Trudeau, asked me to use the army's ongoing weapons development and research program as a way to filter the Roswell technology into the mainstream of industrial development through the military defense contracting program. Today, items such as lasers, integrated circuitry, fiber-optics networks, accelerated particle-beam devices, and even the Kevlar material in bulletproof vests are all commonplace. Yet the seeds for all of them were found in the crash of the alien craft at Roswell and turned up in my files fourteen years later.[26]

The elements of this thesis may be broken down into the following list:

1. Something crashed in New Mexico;
2. It was recovered by the US Army Air Force;
3. It contained exotic technology of such a nature as to compel the interpretation that what crashed was extra-terrestrial in origin;
4. The recovery of this technology from the crash was back-engineered and led to the ET-derived technologies of
   a. the integrated circuit (and by implication, its forerunner, the transistor);
   b. the laser;
   c. fiber-optics;
   d. particle beams and particle accelerators.

Points 1 and 2 are disputed by no one, so we pass immediately to point 3.

Corso himself, while wishing to maintain that the technology pointed conclusively to something extra-terrestrial in origin, also paradoxically and repeatedly indicates that something about this exotic extra-terrestrial technology looked peculiarly familiar, and he does so often in the very next breath, as in the following example:

---

[26] Col. Philip J. Corso (US Army, ret), The Day After Roswell, p. 4.

> In those confusing hours after the discovery of the crashed Roswell alien craft, the army determined that in the absence of any other information it had to be an extraterrestrial. Worse, the fact that this craft and other flying saucers had been surveilling our defensive installations and even seemed to evidence a technology we'd seen evidenced by the Nazis caused the military to assume these flying saucers had hostile intentions and might have even interfered in human events during the war.[27]

On the previous page Corso indicates the technology he has in mind, because the military feared that at first "the craft might have been an experimental Soviet weapon because it bore a resemblance to some of the German-designed aircraft that had made their appearances near the end of the war, especially the crescent-shaped Horton (sic.) flying wing."[28]

Horten Flying Wing in Flight Before World War Two

---

[27] Corso, The Day After Roswell, p. 4 emphasis added.

[28] Ibid., p. 3, emphasis added.

On the face of it this is an odd statement to make, since Corso, who was himself involved in Operation Paperclip, most likely knew that the Horten Flying Wings were brought to this country, not the Soviet Union. But there is more.

> As early as 1947, scientists who had gone to the Air Material Commnd at Wright Field to see the debris were speculating that the electronic potential of the Roswell craft reminded them of the German and British antigravity experiments of the 1920s and 1930s. General Twining was reported to have said more than once that the name of the Serbian electrical engineer and inventor of alternating current, Nikola Tesla, kept bubbling up in the conversation because the scientists examining the damaged craft described the way it must have converted an electromagnetic field into an antigravity field. And, of course, the craft itself reminded them of the German experimental fighter aircraft that made their appearance near the end of the war but that had been in development ever since the 1930s.[29]

Well might the name of Tesla have come up repeatedly, since Tesla toward the end of his life made a rather astonishing series of statements concerning his "dynamic theory of gravity":

> During the succeeding two years (1893 and 1894) of intense concentration I was fortunate enough to make two far reaching discoveries. The first was a dynamic theory of gravity, which I have worked out in all details and hope to give to the world very soon. It explains the causes of this force and the motions of heavenly bodies under its influence so satisfactorily that it will put an end to the idle speculation and false conceptions, as that of curved space….
>
> Only the existence of a field of force can account for the motions of the bodies as observed, and its assumption dispenses with space curvature. All literature on this subject is futile and destined to oblivion. So are all attempts to explain the working of the universe without recognizing the existence of the ether and the indispensable function it plays in the phenomena.
>
> ….I consider myself the original discoverer of this truth, which can be expressed by the statement: There is no energy in matter other than that received from the environment.
>
> ....It applies rigorously to molecules and atoms as well as to the largest heavenly bodies, and to all matter in the universe in any phase

---

[29] Corso, The Day After Roswell, p. 110, emphasis added.

> of its existence from its very first formation to its ultimate disintegration.[30]

I believe that what Tesla had derived in his "dynamic theory of gravity" was precisely a vorticular model of the aether.

In any case, it is significant that his name kept surfacing in the scientific discussions concerning the Roswell debris at Wright Field, according to Corso, and that it did so also in the context of "British and German" 1930s antigravity experiments. Once again, something about the technology looked very familiar:

> At the very least, Twining had suggested, the crescent-shaped craft looked so uncomfortably like the German Horten wings our flyers had seen at the end of the war that he had to suspect the Germans had bumped into something we didn't know about. And his conversations with Wernher von Braun and Willy Ley at Alamogordo in the days after the crash confirmed this. They didn't want to be thought of as verrükt (crazy) but intimated that there was a deeper story about what the Germans had engineered.[31]

The answer of course is that which Corso implies: there was a "German Roswell" before the war.[32] The development by the Germans of Tesla's ideas or of a vortex aether atom model are never even mentioned as a possibility by Corso.

So what of Corso's allegations about fiber optics, lasers, and integrated circuits, three of the "ET technologies" that jump-started America's post-war technological surge according to the his thesis?

1. Corso on the Integrated Circuit and Transistor

Regarding the integrated circuit, Corso himself notes that one requirement for space exploration was not lost on his superior, General Trudeau: "the development of an integrated-circuit technology so that the electronic components of spacecraft could be miniaturized to fit the size requirements of rocket-propelled vehicles."[33]

---

[30] John J. O'Neill, Prodigal Genius: The Llife of Nikola Tesla (Las Vegas: Brotherhood of Life, 1994), p. 250, emphasis added.

[31] Corso, The Day After Roswell, p. 73.

[32] See Corso, op. cit., p. 133.

The transistor is a crucial step on the technology tree from the vacuum tube to the development of the integrated circuit. Corso has this to say about it:

> The entire development arc of the radio tube, from Edison's first experiments with filament for his incandescent lightbulb to the vacuum tubes that formed the switching mechanisms of ENIAC, lasted about fifty years. The development of the silicon transistor seemed to come upon us in a matter of months. And, had I not seen the silicon wafers from the Roswell crash with my own eyes, held them in my own hands talked about them with Hermann Oberth, Wernher von Braun, or Hans Kohler, and heard the reports from these now dead scientists of the meetings between Nathan Twining, Vannevar Bush, and researchers at Bell Labs, I would have thought the invention of the transistor was a miracle. I now know how it came about. [34]

According to Corso's thesis, the answer is, of course that it was all due to exotic recovered ET technology recovered at Roswell. Note especially the "miraculous silicon wafers," the marvelous semi-conducting miracle that would make the integrated circuit possible.

But now Corso's thesis begins to collapse, at least in this matter, for if it was true that miniaturization of electronic components was an essential feature for America's space program, then it was much more so a necessity for the Nazis and their rockets, if they were ever to be turned into viable weapons for hurling heavy atomic bombs at anyone.

As for the transistor, whose "discovery history pedigree" is admitted to be obscure at best by many researchers, it did indeed appear to burst on the world in the late 1940s from nowhere….

….unless one recalls a very similar looking device, already in use by the Germans, in 1940:

---

[33] Corso, The Day After Roswel., p. 169.

[34] Ibid., p. 168, emphasis added.

Telefunken

One can only wonder then, how far this work was pressed from this little tube's appearance and use in Nazi Germany in 1940 to the "discovery" of the transistor in 1947. Something was seeded into American industry, something "alien," but alien in the sense of "foreign" both scientifically, ethnically and politically.

And as for the miraculous silicon semiconductor chips, a picture suffices to dispense with Corso's thesis on this point as well:

German Semi-Conductor Wafers Manufactured During the War for Use in Infrared Sights, from a Combined Intelligence Objectives Committee Report

In other words, the miraculous “E.T. technology” that Corso refers to already existed in its prototypical stages of development in Nazi Germany.

Thus, as far as the transistor goes, the historical and verifiable record points, not to “E.T.” as the origin of the Roswell debris and recovered technology, but to Nazi Germany.

2. Lasers

But what of lasers themselves, which Corso also maintains was one of the many devices stemming from the recovered “ET” technology from the Roswell crash?

As my previous book Reich of the Black Sun and as chapter 5 of this book showed,[35] lasers too were one aspect of “quantum coherence” being researched by the Germans. Igor Witkowski is even more specific in his account of just what the Germans were after, for they were not, it seems, after an ordinary optical laser:

> After all it is common knowledge that among other things work was also carried out on some kind of “X-ray laser” – a source of coherent X-ray or gamma radiation, which is well-known to be lethal to living organisms at high intensity. Thanks to searches carried out in German archives it has been possible to establish that in 1944 a special Luftwaffe research establishment received the task to develop such a weapon, situated at the town of Gross Ostheim. Materials relating to this work are currently located in a civilian establishment – the Karlsruhe research centre and were disclosed several years ago…. One can make out that three different lethal radiation emitters were worked on and that the construction of such a device, effective as an anti-aircraft weapon lay within the Third Reich’s range of possibilities and its military use was possible in a relatively short time – that is to say still before the end of the war. The third and most mature version of the weapon assumed the irradiation of a target 5 kilometers away at a rate of 7 rads a second for 30 seconds which, as affirmed in the report, was completely sufficient to totally paralyze the aircraft’s crew. [36] [35] Reich of the Black Sun, pp. 104-105, and chapter 5 here, specifically the remarks of Horst Korsching, pp. 186-187.

---

[36] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, p. 92.

While the description of the weapon Witkowski describes does not sound like a genuine cohered X-ray was achieved (noting its limited operational range and relatively low dosage of radiation), it nonetheless is also possible that the idea of coherence of X-rays and gamma rays was the goal. Again, this means that the concept of coherence predated Roswell as did the first experimental steps towards its realization. There is nothing necessarily extra-terrestrial whatsoever about it.

3. Fiber Optics

Then what of fiber optics? Surely this, at least, was so exotic that no terrestrially-based proto-typical technology existed in 1947? "Members of the retrieval team who foraged around inside the spacecraft on the morning of the discovery," Corso states,

> Told Colonel Blancard back at the 509th (Bomb group) that they were amazed they couldn't find any conventional wiring. Where were the electrical connections? They didn't understand the function of the printed circuit wafers they found, but, even more important, they were completely mystified by the single glass filaments that ran through the panels of the ship.[37]

So once again off Colonel Corso went to consult with a German Paperclip scientist, Hans Kohler:[38]

> The technology was still very new, Hans Kohler told me during a private briefing in early 1962, but the promise of using light as a carrier of all kinds of signals through single-filament glass strands was holding great promise. He explained that the premise of optical fibers was to have a filament of glass so fine and free of any impurities that nothing would impede the light beam moving along the center of the shaft.[39]

But unfortunately, at this point here there exists an indicator – a very slight one – that some work along these lines was also underway in Nazi Germany.

---

[37] Corso, The Day After Roswell, p. 209.

[38] And inevitably, the question occurs, is this the same Hans Kohler, or Coler, that invented the Coler coil?

[39] Corso, op. cit., p. 210.

There exists a list of special German research projects in radar, homing devices, and so on that describes a project headed a Professor Karolus, based in Leipzig, whose purpose was to investigate the modulation of mercury lighting for the purposes of “light telephony” that would have operated in the infrared band. Nothing more is known about it, but the connection of the project to telephony does raise questions, one that Igor Witkowski himself asks very bluntly: “Could this have referred to some kind of precursor to present day optical fibre telephony?”[40]

What are we to conclude from all this?

As regards the MAJIC-12 documents examined here, one has indications of a definite pattern of exotic though entirely terrestrial technology, and one that might be under independent or quasi-independent development. And during the period from the end of the war to the early 1960s, only one entity really would have an interest in doing so, a “Nazi International.”

As regards the Corso thesis of Roswell, it is clear that, in two out of the three cases mentioned here - the transistor and the laser – that he adduces were the results of ET seeded technology, there are wartime German antecedents in the technology tree. In the last case – fiber optics – there is a vague reference to “light telephony” that might represent a prototypical technology leading eventually to the modern fiber optic technology.

However, when Corso’s thesis is viewed in conjunction with the MAJIC-12 documents reviewed here, and in conjunction with what is known of wartime German research achievements, his thesis shows itself to be rather weak. Indeed, more documentary substantiation exists for a terrestrial and German origin for some of the technology he cites in support of his thesis, than there exists evidence for its extra-terrestrial origin, for which Corso adduces not a shred of evidence other than his stories. Indeed, in these anecdotal stories Corso every now and then includes statements to the effect that our military saw the “German resemblance” in the “ET” technology recovered at Roswell! Unless one is to believe the Nazis’ own Thule Society-inspired belief that the white Aryan race is ultimately of extra-terrestrial origin, the indicators seem preponderantly to point to terrestrial, and most probably German origins for the technology.

---

[40] Igor Witkowski, The Truth About the Wunderwaffe, pp. 157, 158.

Finally, the MAJIC-12 documents examined in this chapter either allude indirectly to, or openly assert, the involvement of the shadowy UFO group in the assassination of President Kennedy.

But before leaving the subjects of MAJIC-12, Nazi Paperclip personnel, Roswell, and Colonel Corso, a final word shows how weirdly, and how intimately, they are all connected:

> Col. Philip Corso, info source for last year's book The Day After Roswell, and temporary darling of Ufology, has brought attention to himself with the revelation of a history in spin control and association with right wing extremist elements in the military as well as his former ties to a semi-secret society called the "Shickshinny Knights of Malta"
>
> Before The Day After Roswell was a gleam in the eye of someone at Simon and Schuster, Peter Dale Scott wrote about Corso in Deep Politics and the Death of JFK. In the light of the fact that he is working on another book with Roswell co-author William Birnes (to be entitled The Day After Dallas) it is worth noting that Corso was an investigator involved with the Warren Commission who according to Scott, "built on … anti CIA paranoia by telling his friend and fellow Senate staffer [for segregationist Strom Thurmond] Julien Sourwine, who made sure it was relayed to the FBI, that Oswald was tied to a communist ring inside the CIA, and was doubling as an informant for the FBI."
>
> ….The Shickshinny Knights of Malta was apparently founded by old-guard White Russians who emigrated to the US after the revolution, eventually settling in Shickshinny, Pennsylvania. By the end of the Second World War, the organization had evolved into a haven for mothballed right wing military intelligence personnel. When Corso became involved with the Knights, (circa 1963-64) the organization seemed to operate as an underground think tank and spin factory…. Corso disavows any association with the group.
>
> Perhaps this has little to do with Corso's present activities, however a few people in the UFO community have expressed the feeling that his claims in Roswell may be the result of a few verifyable (sic) facts diluted with much more mis- or disinformation. If this is true, Corso himself may not be aware of it. In light of the man's history, this may not be far off the mark, and there is reason to suspect that he may have been called out of retirement to play the role of publicist one last time.[41]

---

[41] Gregory Bishop, ed., Wake Up Down There! The Excluded Middle Collection (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2000), Issue # 8 –

That Corso was an investigator for the Warren Commission is a direct connection to the JFK assassination, but more important are the allegations of associations with a "White Russian émigré community" that after the war became a "haven for mothballed right wing military intelligence personnel."

Just whose "mothballed right wing military intelligence personnel" we already know: General Reinhard Gehlen's Fremde Heere Ost with its myriad of "émigré" front organizations. Just what all this has to do with the assassination of President Kennedy was already briefly touched upon in chapter three, "From Russia with Love," but now, it is time to go into the detailed connections of German military intelligence, Nazi technology, German money, and the tragic events in Dallas in November of 1963.

Summer 1998, "Philip Corso's Background, Motivations Questioned," pp. 219-220, emphasis added.

9.

"Mae Brussellsprouts:" Nazi Survival and JFK

"The old war lords are going to come back. (South America) is full of these Nazis!....They will know that is only one kind of people that would do such a thing… that would have to be the Nazis and that is who is in power."
Jack Ruby[1]

"In this connection it is interesting to note that in May, 1924, when the 700th anniversary of the University of Naples, a University founded by Emperor Frederick II, was celebrated, a crown was found near the sarcophagus of the Emperor in the Cathedral of Palermo with the following inscription:
'Seinem Kaiser und Helden
Das geheime Deutschland.'
('To Their Emperor and Hero, from Secret Germany')"
Paul Winkler[2]

After World War Two had ended, the Nazis seemed to have developed a considerable skill and talent for appearing in some very unlikely places doing very unlikely things with some very unlikely people.

Consider, for example, the statement made by famous UFO abductee Barney Hill under hypnosis to his psychiatrist Benjamin Simon:

> "BARNEY
> (He takes care to be extremely precise.)
> There was a row of windows. A huge row of windows. Only divided by struts – or structures that prevented it from being one solid window. Or then – it would have been one solid window. And the evil face on the –
> (He starts to say "leader.")
> He looks like a German Nazi. He's a Nazi…"
> (There is a questioning tone in his voice.)
> DOCTOR
> "He's a Nazi. Did he have a uniform?"

---

[1] Lincoln Lawrence, Mind Control, Oswald, and JFK: Were We Controlled? With an introduction by Kenn Thomas (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press: 1997), p. 102.

[2] Paul Winkler, The Thousand Year Conspiracy: Secret Germany Behind the Mask (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1943), p. 237.

> BARNEY
> “Yes.”
> DOCTOR
> “What kind of uniform?”
> BARNEY
> “He had a black scarf around his neck, dangling over his left shoulder.”[3]

Then there was Jack Ruby’s odd statement on who was behind the Kennedy assassination, also allegedly made under hypnosis:

> The old war lords are going to come back. (South America) is full of these Nazis!...They will know that is only one kind of people that would do such a thing… that would have to be the Nazis and that is who is in power.[4]

Strangely enough, Ruby, by fingering both South America and Nazis, had his finger on an aspect of the Kennedy assassination that few suspected: surviving Nazi communities in South America and their ongoing quasi-independent existence.

A. J.F.K’s Policies

Regardless of whether one agreed or disagreed with his politics, President John F. Kennedy managed during his short term in office to outline policies that clearly threatened a number of well-entrenched and very powerful interests, interests that many believe to comprise elements of America’s “Establishment” or “secret government”. Kennedy had, for example, circulated a national security memorandum after the Bay of Pigs fiasco that effectively turned all paramilitary and covert operations over to the Pentagon, wresting it from the CIA. He had vowed to “smash the CIA into a thousand pieces.” For those people like Allen Dulles or General Charles Peare Cabell – whose appearance in the MAJIC-12 documents we noted in the previous chapter – Kennedy was taking a direct aim at the fiefdoms of bureaucratic power that they had nurtured since the end of World War Two. And with the memorandum, he had scored a direct hit.

---

[3] John G. Fuller, The Interrupted Journey (London: Corgi Books, 1966), p. 116.

[4] Kenn Thomas and Lincoln Lawrence, Mind Control Oswald, and JFK: Were we Controlled? (Kempton, Illinois: Adevntures Unlimited Press) p. 102, emphasis in the original.

And, after one of the America's most closely contested elections, Kennedy had won by a narrow margin over Republican incumbent Vice President Richard Nixon. Many maintain that Kennedy won because key counties across the country, like Chicago's notoriously corrupt Cook county in Illinois, were "delivered" to the Kennedy column by then Mayor Richard Daly and various Mafia contacts. It was a story that was claimed for other hotly contested counties. After assuming office, President Kennedy appointed his brother Robert to be Attorney General, and the Kennedy Administration began to go after organized crime. And with brother Robert heading the Justice Department, yet another powerful enemy was gained besides the intelligence community and organized crime. That enemy was J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the FBI, a man who in the quiet circles of party-going power in Washington, D.C., made no secret of his hatred of the Kennedy administration.

At this point, it is worth pausing to note that of these three potential enemies, two of them would exercise extraordinary influence over the post-assassination Warren Commission, for Allen Dulles, former head of the CIA and dismissed by Kennedy after the Bay of Pigs, would of course become a prominent member of the Commission, doubtless thereby insuring that any CIA connections were buried or at the very minimum, obfuscated in a word-spin of confusion. The other enemy that figured prominently in the outcome of the Commission was, of course, J. Edgar Hoover's FBI, which exercised inordinate influence over the flow of information and data to the Commission.

As was seen in the previous chapter, however, there are MAJIC-12 documents which – if one accepts their genuineness for the sake of argument – also indicate that Kennedy wanted to internationalize space jointly with the Soviet Union. If one assumes the existence of some covert aspect to either or both of the two countries' space programs, then this too, would have threatened a good many hidden agendas and entrenched power interests. And in this connection, long before any of the MAJIC-12 documents – whether genuine or not – ever surfaced to see the light of day, the Torbitt document drew its own conclusions about to the space program and a network of highly placed Nazis within NASA. For the Torbitt document, Von Braun's control of the Defense Industrial Security Command (D.I.S.C.) becomes a symbol of this network of Paperclip scientists, connected in turn to other World War Two Fascists such as Ference Nagy, representing the émigré community that had collaborated with the Nazis, and that subsequently fled Eastern Europe and Communist reprisal after the war, and, via the Gehlen Organization, that set up a network of front organizations in Western Europe and the United States. These two groups – the Paperclip scientists and the Fascist émigré fronts – in turn were connected to a veritable "Murder Incorporated," the so-called "Permindex" corporation, a company with many of these prominent Fascists, as well as Clay Shaw, on its board of directors. The Torbitt document – long before the Cooper-Cantwheel MAJIC-12 documents were ever released to, or planted in, the UFOlogy community – makes very clear a connection to the Kennedy assassination quickly brushed aside by most assassination researchers: The Nazis.

But there is a final potential Kennedy enemy to consider. In June of 1963, the same year as his assassination, Kennedy took aim at one of the most powerful of the "entrenched interests" of the Establishment: international mercantile banking. President Kennedy authorized the printing of approximately four billion dollars of United States Notes and their release for circulation, thereby entirely bypassing the privately-owned Federal Reserve Bank, established by subterfuge and calculated political manipulation after the notorious secret Jekyll Island meeting. Kennedy's move clearly portended an end to the bankers' monopolistic hold over the nation's money supply and a return to "constitutional money," money entirely free of interest to private banks. This aspect of the assassination conspiracy is even less well-known than the Nazi connection, and remains so.

Careful consideration of the disparate groups connected with the assassination – the military-industrial complex, the "national security 'community'" represented by the CIA, FBI and other agencies, the space program, the Mafia, the military, right-wing émigré groups represented by various anti-Castro Cuban fronts as well as the Eastern Europeans, and international corporate finance and banking - will indicate many connections between all these elements, as many assassination researchers have pointed out. But there is one group with connections to all of these organized interests, and that, of course, is the Nazis.

B. Mae Brussell on Nazis and JFK

1. Her Thesis

The late Mae Brussell, well-known conspiriologist and radio talk-show host, was never one to leave a stone unturned. Once having learned of the Torbitt document and its contents, Brussell did what she normally did when confronted by the allegation of deep conspiracy: she began putting the pieces together and carefully documenting her sources.

Her statement of Nazi involvement in the assassination at some high level takes account of these “other players” in the overall scheme:

> This is a story of how key Nazis, even as the Wehrmacht was still on the offensive, anticipated military disaster and laid plans to transplant Nazism, intact but disguised, in havens in the West. It is the story of how honorable men, and some not so honorable, were so blinded by the Red menace that they fell into lockstep with Nazi designs. It is the story of the Odd Couple Plus One: the mob, the CIA, and fanatical exiles, each with its own reason for gunning for Kennedy. It is a story that climaxes in Dallas on November 22, 1963, when John Kennedy was struck down. And it is a story with an aftermath – America’s slide to the brink of fascism.[5]

Kennedy was gunned down, in other words, by the well-known “coalescence of interests,” which, on Brussell’s view, included the Nazis as very secretive players. But Brussell’s statement hints at something more: a coup d’etat with an increasingly fascist face. This “fascist face” will become more and more visible as one considers the details of Brussell's research, which in turn, exposes a possible motivation for Nazi involvement in a conspiracy of "coalescing interests."

---

[5] Mae Brussell, “The Nazi Connection to the John F. Kennedy Assassination,” The Rebel, Nov 22, 1983, p. 1.

2. Germans and Atsugi AFB, Japan: An Oswald Nazi Link

Lee Harvey Oswald.

Say the name and most people think immediately of the assassin, or at least, of the fallguy, in the Kennedy murder.

Fewer people will think of an apparently ordinary American man, with an ordinary background, who became a Marine, and then began to exhibit bizarre if not extraordinary political beliefs for a soldier, much less a Marine.

Even fewer people still will think of those bizarre behaviors and political beliefs in connection with Oswald's known connections to the FBI, and conclude (in my opinion correctly) that Oswald's bizarre display of pro-Marxist political beliefs while a Marine at the secret Atsugi Air Force Base in Japan were part of a pattern of sheep-dipping him. Oswald, in spite of these openly professed beliefs, had certain security clearances at the secret radar base at the airfield, and was learning Russian as well.

And there is one more thing, also well-known to most assassination researchers: Atsugi Air Base was where the CIA's U-2 flights over the Soviet Union originated.

As is well-known to many people, Oswald subsequently concocted a "family emergency" to tend to his sick mother, Marguerite Oswald, in order to be discharged from the Marines. After leaving the Marines, however, Oswald then traveled to the Soviet Union, where he then defected. He was placed in Minsk, Byelorussia (White Russia), in a television factory, and was given, by Soviet standards, a spacious apartment. He met and eventually married Marina Oswald, the daughter of a Soviet military intelligence colonel.

Many assassination researchers believe that Oswald fed the Soviets radar and other technical data which led to the shooting down of Francis Gary Powers' U-2 later the same year. Of course, the U-2 was flown out of Atsugi AFB in Japan. Since the U-2 flights were CIA operations and not Air Force operations, this means that the CIA had a secret base at the Atsugi compound. More about this in a moment.

Then, unbelievably, Oswald was allowed to re-defect to the USA, along with his Russian wife – no mean feat in those days – where his subsequent movements and connections are more or less well-known.

But what many people do not know is that Oswald, in addition to his connections to extremist left-wing beliefs and organizations, also had some very peculiar connections to extremist right wing people and organizations. One of them, unbelievably, is to the émigré-and-spy networks of none other than former Wehrmacht general Reinhard Gehlen.

> When (Allen) Dulles spoke, Gehlen listened. The CIA chief ws convinced, along with his brother, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, that the "captive nations" of the Soviet bloc would rise up if given sufficient encouragement. At his behest, Gehlen recruited and trained an exile mercenary force ready to rush in without involving American units. Also at Dulles' direction, Gehlen tapped the ranks of his wartime Russian collaborators for a cadre of spies to be parachuted into the Soviet Union. Some of these spies were schooled at the CIA's clandestine base at Atsugi, Japan, where, in 1957, a young Marine named Lee Harvey Oswald was posted to the U-2 spy plane operation there.[6]

While not establishing a direct connection to the Nazis, this is but one bit of information in a pattern of associations surrounding the assassination that Brussell uncovers.

3. Gehlen and the Russian Orthodox Diaspora

Yet another piece in the assassination puzzle was the connection of Gehlen's "Organization" with the émigré communities of Eastern Europeans in this country:

> Gehlen pioneered the setting up of dummy fronts and cover companies to support his farflung covert operations. A major project was to form Eastern European émigré groups in the U.S. that could be used against > the Soviets. Both the Tolstoy Foundation and the Union of Bishops of the Orthodox Church Outside Russia were funded by the CIA. Lee and Marina Oswald arrived from the Soviet Union in June, 1962. They were befriended by some three dozen White Russians in the Dallas-Ft. Worth area. Many had identifiable Nazi links; others were in the oil and defense industries. It was an improbable social set for a defector to the U.S.S.R. and his wife from Minsk.[7]

---

[6] Mae Brussell, "The Nazi Connection to the John F. Kennedy Assassination," p. 2.

In any case, it is clear that, via Oswald and similar people, Dulles' CIA was playing a very dangerous game with two very dangerous elements – the Soviets and Gehlen's own organization of "former" Nazis – that were implacable enemies of each other and, in turn, at root enemies of America as well. The intention of using the BND is clear: if the operation of training émigrés at Atsugi and elsewhere was exposed, American involvement could be "plausibly denied." Gehlen's Organization is thus the cut-out for the operation. As will be seen subsequently in this chapter, however, "cutouts" can quickly become semi- or even completely independent of their ostensible "controllers" and become, in effect, Trojan Horses.

a. Implication: The Infiltration of US Intelligence and Defense

It is worth pausing to consider again the implication of Operation Paperclip and the similar operation that led to the establishment of the Gehlen Organization with its numerous East European émigré front organizations. From one point of view, that of the U.S. military-industrial-intelligence complex itself, the U.S. was still in the driver's seat, controlling these two groups and directing their activities. Even in the case of the Nazi rocket scientists in the space program and their counterparts in the defense industries, these men can be considered "cutouts," fall guys to take the blame in case something goes wrong, and to insulate the bureaucracies of the Establishment from blame in case they did fail.

---

[7] Brussell, "The Nazi Connection to the John F. Kennedy Assassination," p. 3. The assertion of CIA involvement with one of the many jurisdictions of the Eastern Orthodox Church in North America may seem odd or completely out of place. In point of fact, however, Brussell is merely repeating information from the Torbitt document and the assassination investigation of New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison. The author himself personally knows of the intelligence and military backgrounds of two Orthodox bishops from yet another jurisdiction, and was made aware of a yet a third. The role of the CIA, the West German Bundesnachrichtendienst and other intelligence agencies in establishing and/or using churches for intelligence purposes is therefore a story in and of itself, and would require a book of its own.

But from the point of view of the "cutouts" themselves, they are infiltrators, "users" of the host country's protection and economic power. Such a view, however, can only be reasonably sustained if one detects patterns of behavior on the part of the cut-outs that would indicate independence from their "controllers," for such independence would indicate a measure of underlying, though hidden, organization on their part. As will be seen, there are indicators that this is the case, and from within the space program itself.

b. Nazis and "the Rogue Element" In US Intelligence

Various conspiracy researchers[8] have pointed out that there seems to be some "rogue" element within the American (and to a lesser extent, other nations') intelligence services, acting on its own and often counter to its host nation's national interest, and following its own more-often-than-not murky agenda. Others have pointed out that the recent spate of terrorism has to have, at some point, major financial backing and the backing of some major world power. Still others have even hinted of the historical connection of Nazism to militant Islam and to the roots of other terrorist groups.[9] In any case, a surviving and organized network of international Fascism would certainly fit the requirements for all these, though, of course, beyond the historically known connections, the case is speculative.

---

[8] See, for example, Rodney Stritch's Defrauding America.

[9] See, for example, the connection between the Nazis and the rise of militant Islam in Egypt under the notorious Banna.

4. Schacht-Onassis

But while the case for a “Nazi International” being the oft-dicussed “rogue element” within intelligence is only tenuous and speculative, the case for its deeply hidden and high-level connections to the JFK assassination becomes stronger the closer one looks. Consider only the fact that Hitler’s financial wizard, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, former President of the Reichsbank, and father-in-law to SS Commando Otto Skorzeny, was subsequently “on the payroll of Aristotle Onassis.”[10]

We all know who subsequently married Aristotle Onassis, and who strictly refused to talk about what she knew about the murder of her husband. We all know she died relatively recently, still as poised and beautiful as ever, and gave strict instructions that her private diaries were not to be released until long in the future:

Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis.

What we never knew, is that by marrying Onassis, Jackie had married into a family of organized crime with its own set of very strange, very Nazi, connections dating from World War Two.

And what of Otto Skorzeny?

Skorzeny survived the war, helped direct the notorious O.D.E.S.S.A. organization (Organization der Ehemalige SS Angehörige, or “Organization of Former SS Members), and established the “Internationale Fascista” in Madrid, Spain, in the same building as was occupied by Spanish Intelligence, and by the Madrid section of the CIA!

5. Dulles and McCloy on the Warren Commission

Weirder still were some of the people chosen to be on the Warren Commission, two of whom can only be viewed with extreme suspicion.

One of them, former CIA director Allen Dulles, has already been mentioned. Dulles, of course, was OSS station chief in Zurich, Switzerland, during the war, and helped negotiate the secret deal with General Reinhard Gehlen, and one can only assume, other secret "deals" with Nazi bigwigs, perhaps including Martin Bormann and SS Obergruppenführer Hans Kammler themselves. Dulles will be encountered again later in this chapter, for we have yet to consider what he was up to before World War Two. Dulles as a member of the Warren Commission is perhaps the best example of the post-assassination spin network's ability to undo the "damage" caused by the Kennedy Administration, for Dulles was of course fired by Kennedy for his role in the Bay of Pigs fiasco.

---

[10] Mae Brussell, “The Nazi Connection to the John F. Kennedy Assassination,” p. 6.

We do know what another prominent member of the Warren Commission was up to before the war: John J. McCloy. For those who may have forgotten, John J. McCloy was the post-war American High Commissioner for (West) Germany, and was responsible for pardoning many Nazis from their war crimes sentences in order to expedite their extradition to the U.S.A. and their use in Operation Paperclip and similar projects.

But before the war John J. McCloy was so highly placed, so "in" on the "inside track," that he managed to share a box with Adolf Hitler at the 1936 Berlin Olympics in what may have been his first television appearance. But why such high honors for an American lawyer? This is in part because he was an attorney for the German chemical cartel I.G. Farben before the war.

6. A Review

Just in case it was missed, a review is in order:

One Warren Commission member was post-war U.S. High Commissioner for Germany, pardoned numerous Nazis, had personally met Adolf Hitler, and legally represented German chemical-industrial giant I.G. Farben before the war: John J. McCloy.

One Warren Commission member had been fired by President Kennedy for his role in the Bay of Pigs, had been Director of the CIA, was OSS station chief in Zurich during the war, and had negotiated the secret deal between German military intelligence guru General Reinhard Gehlen, as was as possible other secret deals between "surrendering" Nazis and the U.S.A.: Allen Dulles.

But during the period that Dulles was still well-ensconced in the CIA, U.S. Marine Lee Oswald was stationed at Atsugi Air Force Base in Japan, where, in spite of his openly professed Marxism and "admiration" for the Soviet Union, he was given security clearances to relatively sensitive radar data connected with the CIA's U-2 flights over Russia. Additionally, since Atsugi AFB was home to the secret U-2 flights over the Soviet Union, it therefore had to have a secret CIA base hidden within the Air Force Base. General Reinhard Gehlen's West German Bundesnachrichtendienst (Federal Security Service) was apparently training foreign émigrés as a paramilitary force to be dropped into the Soviet Union. Part of this training would doubtless have been in Russian, and part would have included knowledge of Communist doctrine, party organization, and how to "pass oneself off" as a committed Communist. This means that Oswald, if in fact he was being "sheep dipped" for an intelligence assignment in the Soviet Union, as Garrison himself believed, was likely being trained for the role by Gehlen's Organization and by former Nazis! In other words, all the elements converge at Atsugi, and in the person of Lee Harvey Oswald.

In this connection it will be shown later that Oswald's "address book" contained more than just the addresses of FBI agents….

7. South American Death Squads: The "Kinder, Gentler Gestapo" for Hire

Having reviewed the Nazi situation, we are now in a better position to consider other details presented by Brussell, details that begin to hint of what the Nazi motivation and role may have been, in addition to all the other groups and their individual reasons for playing a role in the assassination might have been.

When Brussell wrote her assassination piece for Larry Flint's The Rebel magazine on the twentieth anniversary of the assassination in 1983, she referred to a Senate Foreign Relations Committee report entitled "Latin America: Murder Inc.," a report that she noted was "still classified" at the time of her article.[11]

---

[11] Mae Brussell, "The Nazi Connection to the John F Kennedy Assassination," p. 11.

Brussell indicated that the report stated that the U.S.A.'s intelligence community had "joint operations" with Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay," known as "Operation Condor." Brussell then explains the possible significance of the code name by citing a paragraph from a Jack Anderson column:

> Jack Anderson gave a few details in his column "Operation Condor, An Unholy Alliance," August 3, 1979:
>
> "Assassination teams are centered in Chile. This international consortium is located in Colonia Dignidad, Chile. Founded by Nazis from Hitler's SS, headed by Franz Pfeiffer Richter, Adolf Hitler's 1000-year Reich may not have perished."

Brussell then explains the historical connection of Operation Condor to these Nazi-trained and based South American Death squads:

> Otto Skorzeny code-named his assault on American soldiers in the Battle of the Bulge Operation Greif, the "Condor." He continued Condor with his post-war special teams that imposed "sanctions," meaning the assassination of enemies.

And lest one forget, Brussell reminds her readers of the serpents' nest of connections Skorzeny unlocks:

> Skorzeny's father-in-law was Hjalmar Schacht, president of Hitler's Reichsbank. Schacht guided Onassis' shipyards in rebuilding the German and Japanese war fleets. In 1950 Onassis signed on Lars Anderson for his whaling ships on the hunt of Antarctica and Argentina. Anderson had belonged to Vidkum Quisling's Nazi collaborationist group in Norway during the war. Clay Shaw, who was charged by New Orleans D.A. Jim Garrison with complicity in the JFK assassination, was a close friend of Hjalmar Schacht.[12]

This presents a very interesting, very nasty, picture.

One can assume, once again, that the U.S. intelligence community's involvement with such groups as Colonia Dignidad was to use them as "cut-outs", accomplishing the necessary political assassination when necessary, and achieving “plausible deniability” when something went wrong. After all, who would believe that such an extensive network of Nazis still existed so long after the war? And who would believe that the American intelligence community was in cahoots with it? That was, after all, 1983, almost forty years after the end of the war. Who would believe that there were still Nazis well-enough organized and well-enough financed to run such South American continent-spanning covert operations? Who would believe that they were still even ideologically committed to Nazism after such a long period?

---

[12] Brussell, "The Nazi Connection to the John F. Kennedy Assassination," p. 11.

But again, Jack Anderson’s and Mae Brussell’s picture presents yet another disturbing picture: one not only of such continued Nazi existence, but of its continued semi- or complete independence from the control of the U.S. or any Latin American government. Indeed, it would have been relatively easy for such professionally trained assassins to keep their own records and proofs of connections with these countries’ intelligence services and governments to organized crime and murder and Latin America. In short, it would be a very easy thing for such independent Nazi colonies to blackmail their so-called masters with the threat of exposure.

8. George De Mohrenschildt

When “Marxist” and Soviet defector Lee Harvey Oswald returned to the United States with Russian wife Marina in tow, he began to associate with some very un-Marxist and un-Communist characters, like East European emigrant and Texas oil geology businessman George DeMohrenschildt. DeMohrenschildt was unusual company for the supposedly poor Oswald to be running with, and he soon introduced Lee Harvey to Dallas’ White Russian and “tsarist” community, where he and Marina were befriended by Ruth and Michael Paine.

The Paines assisted Lee Harvey in obtaining his job at the Texas School Book Depository and he and Marina stayed with the Paines in their home.

This is all highly unusual, for of course, as has already been mentioned, Lee’s wife Marina was the daughter of a colonel in the Soviet Union's military intelligence, the GRU, while Lee Harvey was, of course, supposedly a pro-Marxist defector to the Soviet Union who had achieved the impossible and "defected back" to the U.S.A. with a Russian wife!

9. The Paines, The Oswalds, and General Dornberger

Michael Paine took an extraordinary risk with this behavior towards the Oswalds, for he worked for Bell Aircraft in connection to the Defense Department, in a position that required him to have a top security clearance.[13] Or perhaps it was not really a risk. Perhaps the Paines were being used to shepherd an already comprised Oswald into his final position.

As for DeMohrenschildt, who was accused of being a Nazi spy, he perished of a fatal gunshot wound, allegedly a suicide, the day that the House Select Committee on Assassinations came looking for him.[14]

10. Martin Bormann and JFK

Many assassination researchers have pointed out that when he was arrested, Lee Harvey Oswald's notebook contained the addresses of some very strange people for a "lone nut assassin" to be carrying around, people that included FBI agents among others. Other assassination researchers have pointed out that Oswald's "Marxist" connections have all the signatures of someone being prepared for a role, in this case, role of "defector."

However, with so many strange Nazi connections lurking in the background, surely somewhere along the long line of murder and "coincidental deaths" that followed the assassination the media would have uncovered something about it and published it. Yet, of the Nazi connection there has been next to nothing, and of the Nazi Connection in Oswald's notebook, absolutely nothing was said by the major American media.

---

[13] Mae Brussell, "The Nazi Connection to the John F. Kennedy Assassination, p. 22. Yes, I know what you're thinking, dear reader, and it is the very same Bell Aircraft that employed Dr. Werner Von Braun's former (German) Army boss, General Walter Dornberger. And yes, that's the same Dornberger who was pardoned by John J. McCloy, who was IG Farben's lawyer in America, who was a post-war High Commissioner for Germany, and who was a member of the Warren Commission.

[14] Mae Brussell, "The Nazi Connection to the John F. Kennedy Assassination," p. 22.

Yet, in 1976, a relatively popular book was published by then well-known investigative journalist Sybil Leek and Bert Sugar called The Assassination Chain, which had a foreward by none the less than famous syndicated columnist Jack Anderson. The book contained the following bit of information in a chapter called "the Right-Wing Extremist Scenario:"

> When Oswald was arrested, the FBI found his address book, and in it were the addresses of Major General Walker and George Lincoln Rockwell. These improbable names only add to the confusion of other addresses such as that of FBI Agent Hosty, whose conncection with Oswald has never been cleared up.[15]

Oswald was, of course, accused of trying to assassinate Major General Edwin Walker. But this would hardly explain Agent Hosty's presence in the address book, unless Oswald was either planning to assassinate him, or if General Walker's true role was something other than we have been told.

But in any case, the real figure of interest is of course George Lincoln Rockwell, the leader of the American Nazi Party. This seems so incongruously out of place as to be ridiculous, unless one recalls Brussell's allegations concerning the CIA's secret U-2 base at Atsugi Air Force Base in Japan, where Oswald was stationed, and where, according to Brussell, Reinhard Gehlen's "Organization" was recruiting and training paramilitary agents for covert operations inside the Soviet Union.

But why not say something about it? Surely the address of the leader of the American Nazi Party would have cinched the case that Oswald was a "lone nut"! But one would not say something about it if in fact the connection was real, and revealed something about Oswald and the conspiracy to assassinate the president.

---

[15] Sybil Leek and Bert R. Sugar, The Assassination Chain(New York: Corwin Books, 1976), p. 171.

If, in other words, Oswald was being sheep-dipped for precisely this sort of operation – which his "defection" to the Soviet Union has every appearance of being – then it was a group of former Nazis that were doing it, ostensibly for the CIA, but possibly for their own purposes as well.

In this regard, there does exist evidence that Oswald was exposed to precisely some sort of German connection while in Japan. In one of the most bizarre assassination theory books to appear, author Lincoln Lawrence's Were We Controlled? makes the following point from the testimony of one of Oswald's Marine buddies to the Warren Commission, one Nelson Delgado, while they were both stationed in California.

> In his testimony, Nelson Delgado offers these startling thoughts for us to ponder on… Delgado: "Well, like I say, he tried to teach me Russian, but then another time, I had some thought that what he was speaking to me was German." And then later in the same testimony… Liebeler: "It seemed to you like it was German?" Delgado: "Like German, yes." Still later, "I could only assume it was Jewish, or German and later on when I was in Germany, I think… I am pretty sure… it was German that he was speaking." At another point in the questioning, Delgado (by his own testimony, Oswald's closest friend in the Marine Corps) was askied if he had met Oswald at any time when he (Delgado) was in Germany. Delgado: "No, I wanted to… I knew that he was over there and going to school…"[16]

What the alleged assassin of President Kennedy was doing with the address of the American Nazi Party Leader George Lincoln Rockwell in his notebook no one ever seems to want to discuss. Nor does anyone in the American media seem to want to inquire as to where Lee Harvey Oswald might have learned German along the way to his defection to the Soviet Union and his stay in the capital of Byelorussia: Minsk. Mae Brussell alone, in all the American media since the assassination, has intimated where: the Gehlenorg's operation at Atsugi AFB in Japan, preparing, at the behest of Allen Dulles, for covert operations inside the USSR.

---

[16] Lincoln Lawrence and Kenn Thomas, Mind Control, Oswald, and JFK: Were We Controlled? (Kempton, Illinois: Adventures Unlimited Press, 1997, p. 71.

Some sort of German connection is there, and in the Warren Commission’s own testimony to boot.

But if the American media was silent about this aspect of the assassination, the European media was not. As Brussell indicates,

> In August 1971, a French paper headlined a news story, “Martin Bormann behind the Kennedy murders.” It listed an international band of killers that was located in Texas. They carried out the two assassinations at the German command.
>
> Six years later, June 8, 1977, the London Guardian reported, “Bormann Linked with Kennedy Murder.” This story was based on a new book titled Treason for My Daily Bread by Mikhail Lebedev.
>
> Lebedev detailed how Martin Bormann left Europe, established his current life in Paraguay, and how the fatal head shot to Kennedy was delivered by an agent paid by Bormann, alias of Zed.[17]

As Brussell points out, these allegations of Nazi connections – known since the Torbitt document was discretely circulated in 1971 – and publicly known since Lebedev’s book, and for that matter, Leek and Sugar’s The Assassination Chain, both appeared while the House Select Committee on Assassinations was conducting its investigations to “find the truth.” Yet, the Nazi aspect of the story was the one subject that the Committee’s Chief Consul, G. Robert Blakey, would never countenance, refusing “to admit any research or documents on these subjects.”[18]

In other words, one may speak of possible CIA involvement, of possible Mafia involvement, of the possible involvement of a disgruntled group of anti-Castro Cuban exiles, even of the possible involvement of disenchanted elements within the CIA and the American military, in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. But of the possible involvement of Nazis, one may never speak.

---

[17] Mae Brussell, “The Nazi Connection to the John F Kennedy Assassination,” p. 26.

[18] Mae Brussell, “The Nazi Connection to the John F Kennedy Assassination,” p. 27.

11. The "Octopus" Before the "Octopus": the Bunge Corporation Beats Danny Casolaro by Two Decades

But assuming that there was Nazi involvement in the Kennedy assassination, what was its motivation? That international bankers would have had motivations, in the retrospective of Kennedy's intention to bypass the Federal Reserve and authorize the printing and circulation of United States notes, seems clear enough. That the Mafia had its own motivations is also equally clear. After all, the Mafia had helped elect the Kennedy Administration, and suddenly it found itself confronted by a hostile Justice Department under Attorney General Robert Kennedy. The Anti-Castro Cubans had motivation, since Kennedy clearly had undertaken private commitments with the Soviet Union not to invade nor to sponsor covert operations designed to overthrow Castro. One may even see in the Anti-Castro forces a motivation for the similar involvement of at least the crypto-Nazi Eastern European émigré groups, such as the White Russian community in Dallas, to which Oswald was introduced by DeMohrenschildt. Such groups would have been low-level players, helping in the detail work to position the major players and cut-outs – people like Oswald himself – in their respective positions. Their motivation would have been clear: after the Bay of Pigs and Kennedy's "betrayal" of the Cuban émigré community, he had signaled clearly his opposition to the CIA's and military's "rollback" policy towards Communism, a policy that depended on these émigré fronts to fight proxy "wars of liberation" from their Communist masters.

Every one of the major alleged players in the assassination conspiracy has a clear and plausible motive for being there.

Except for the Nazis.

Their motivations seem obscure at best, since they seem cloaked behind all the other groups, at the very highest level, like the international bankers themselves, who would clearly have felt threatened by Kennedy's purpose to by-pass the Federal Reserve and create debt-free money. But even here, one can sense the high mystery. That there are strange, if not downright bizarre, connections to Nazis in the assassination should now be clear, yet, unlike even international banking, the Nazis seem to have no interest whatsoever for involvement. Once again, one is back to the question of motivations.

But therein also lies, perhaps, the key to their involvement, and their motivations. For if they lie hidden behind all these other groups, if in fact they – intended as a final deep cover “cut-out” layer – became the ultimate controllers who gave the final “go” order, as the European newspaper reports suggest by naming Bormann himself as the decision-maker, then one may speculate on their motivations.

Clearly, to undertake such drastic action, one of two things, or a combination of both, would have had to be present: (1) Some policy or policies of President Kennedy was perceived as a threat to their interests; and/or (2) some advantage had to be gained by his elimination. As I shall argue below, if there is Nazi involvement, then I believe some combination of both is behind it.

